Nine, 3-Bedroom Townhouses On Wren Terrace OK'd

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Planning Board approved the proposal of Ryder Development Corp. for the construction of nine, three-bedroom townhouses with garages and surface parking at 37-45 Wren Terrace at their meeting last Wednesday.

"I think the neighbors will be satisfied with the end results," said Attorney Robert Harnais, who is representing Ryder Development.

Three of the units will front Wren Terrace; the remaining six will be located towards the back of the 46,000-square-foot, undeveloped property.

The nine, two-story townhouses will each be assigned two parking spots in a lot located in the middle of the property which will be accessible through a 24-foot-wide driveway.

The site will be serviced by public sewer and water utility lines.

Developers will provide storm water and sheet flow mitigation to collect water which currently flows to a paper street called Eagle Terrace.

Most excess water will be collected on-site and delivered underground and though Eagle Terrace to the Forest Avenue water collection system.

Any additional water runoff which may be created by the new buildings will be mitigated as will currently existing water sheet flow.

Maintenance of a retention pond on-site which will drain through a pipe to Eagle Terrace will fall to the condo association according to Harnais.

A peer review conducted by consulting and engineering firm Beals + Thomas determined that the storm water management plan in place was adequate, said President of Beals + Thomas George Preble.

"Those drainage issues have been handled and planned to the satisfaction of the Planning Department," said Chairman William Geary.

In the case of excessive storms, snow will be trucked off-site said Preble.

Neighbors who spoke at the public hearing voiced concerns regarding the possibility of increased traffic in the area and excessive water runoff.

"Wren Terrace is a very narrow street," said Kathy Deady of 40 Forest Ave. "There should be no parking on Wren Terrace for the extra cars if there are any extra cars. You can't get by there if you're trying to pass even just one car."

Harnais said there would be minimal traffic impact and additional visitor parking on site would eliminate the possibility of cars parking on the street, possibly slowing down or impeding traffic.

"[The developer] has excess parking on site — both covered parking and surface parking — and has a parking ratio higher than the ordinance requires," said Planning Department Director Dennis Harrington, who added that sight lines would not be impacted.

Noel Gannon of Grove Street said he was concerned for the safety and well-being of his five children.

"We know there's nine units going in, they're two-bedroom units; you can be guaranteed there will be 16 to 20 extra cars," he said. "Right now, the way the traffic is there, it's very difficult for cars coming down the hill to go slowly and right now I would guarantee that 80 percent of the people that drive down that hill, they're speeding."

"I am very concerned for the safety of my kids and other kids that are in the neighborhood," he said.

He added that his property had been flooded several times over the past few years during excessive rain storms and said he remains concerned that the new units will create additional runoff.

"The existing drainage issues are going to be mitigated substantially," said Geary. "This proposal should be an improvement over the existing situation."

A dust and rodent control plan will be carried out as a condition of the permit.

Construction and deliveries will take place Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., and no construction or deliveries will take place Sunday.

Harnais noted that since the proposal is a a build-by-right project, the applicant would not be seeking any variances.

a gate and then be directed to a security guard who will check to make sure those in the vehicle have the proper documentation to enter the facility.

Security cameras will be on-site.

Patients will be provided with 11 parking spaces including two handicap spots. Employees and service people will be provided with 28 spaces.

Clients will not need to make an appointment to enter the building.

Shuttle service will be provided from the Quincy Adams T station — which will run as needed — for those who may have difficulty accessing the site due to physical disabilities.

The DPH will have their own patient database which will be shared with the facility. "It's not like anyone can walk in," said Hudson.

Because the neighboring auto auction happens on Mondays, the dispensary will be closed from 9 a.m. to about 2 p.m. to mitigate traffic.

Hudson said this will be his only dispensary and he has no plans to expand his business into other counties.

Strict guidelines exist over the packaging of edibles infused with marijuana by the DPH. "They're very boring, opaque packages sealed with the required information on it," said Hudson.

Hudson said that he has been talking to a doctor and several pharmacists who are interested in working for the facility but stressed that his employees do not not have the authority to prescribe marijuana to patients.

"I do want someone of a medical background there," he said.

Ward 4 City Councillor Brian Palmucci spoke in favor of the dispensary. "I'm incredibly proud of the process we've employed as a city thus far in dealing with this medical marijuana issue. Obviously, this was an issue that was pressed upon us by the ballot initiative. The voters took a vote and a majority of voters in Quincy and a majority of voters in the state by ballot initiative said they want patients, sick people, to have access to marijuana as a medicine."

Quincy was the first city to propose zoning changes to accommodate dispensaries.

"We don't want these to interrupt the integrity of any of our neighborhoods," Palmucci said.

He added that Quincy was the first city to suggest entering a host agreement with a dispensary operator.

"Through the host agreement between the city and Ermont," he said "we've secured a more beneficial deal than any other community in the Commonwealth when it comes to what we expect them to give back to the community."

The terms of the agreement call for Ermont to give the city three percent of their annual revenue, up to $500,000 per year.

That money will go to the Mayor's drug task force to be used for substance abuse education, substance abuse awareness campaigns, and drug enforcement by Quincy Police.

"I don't believe any community has that beneficial of a deal, and that's a direct result of the community input we received from residents," said Palmucci. "Medical marijuana is here in the Commonwealth; that's a reality, and this is as good of a proposal as we could have hoped for."

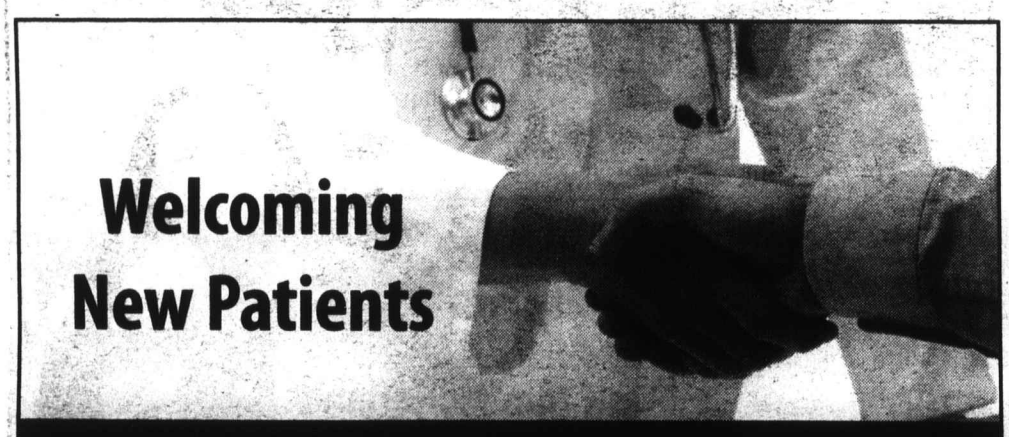

Any negative impacts brought to the city would be negated by the host agreement terms he said.

"This is the best option that there is. It's the law," said Quincy resident Kathy Deady. "We knew we were going to have one in the City of Quincy the day they passed the law because of where we are and how many people live here."

"I'm pretty cool with what's going on," she said.

The issue will not go before any other local boards for approval.

"I'm very comfortable with the proposal and the team that's here," said committee member Charles O'Brien.

By KRIS KALABOKAS

On Monday, at the Flags for Veterans Island at the intersections of School Street and Pleasant Street, 338 American flags were placed, representing those in the armed forces who have served, are currently serving, or who have made the ultimate sacrifice for their country

The Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 294, Cyril P. Morrisette Post placed the flags in preparation for their annual Veterans Day Observance which will be held Sunday, Nov. 9.

The public is invited to attend the ceremony which will begin at 1 p.m.

An American flag will be raised and a memorial wreath placed at the flagpole.

The names of those deceased represented by the flags will also be read aloud.

Members of the Quincy Fire and Police departments will be in attendance as will members of the North Quincy High School ROTC.

For a one-time fee of $30, a flag in remembrance of a loved one can be added to the steadily growing collection.

An additional 38 flags were placed on the island this year, said SAL Commander Paul Moody.

All fees collected go towards maintaining the island, as well as towards the Post's summer cook-out and their various charitable efforts.

Last year, a donation of $1,500 to the American Legion Child Welfare Foundation was made possible through the money raised through flag sales.

All money raised by the purchase of flags go to benefit the veterans, Moody said.

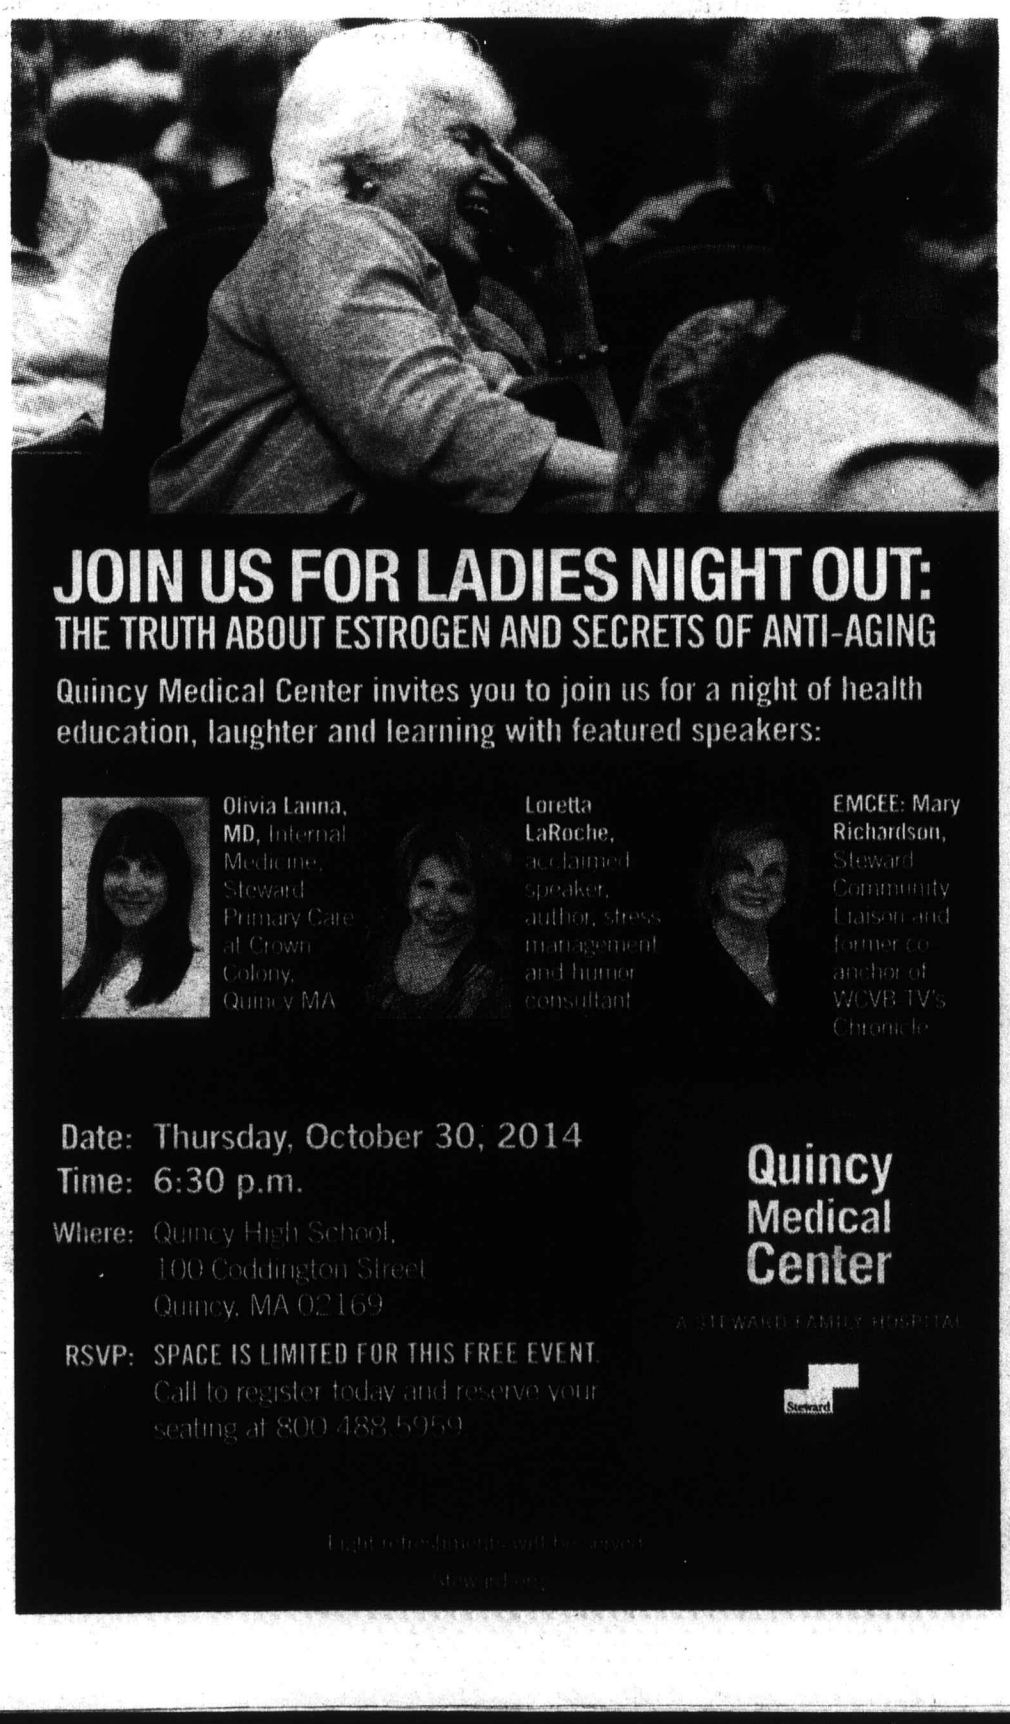

Mayor Thomas Koch will address the crowd as will Ward 5 City Councillor Kirsten Hughes.

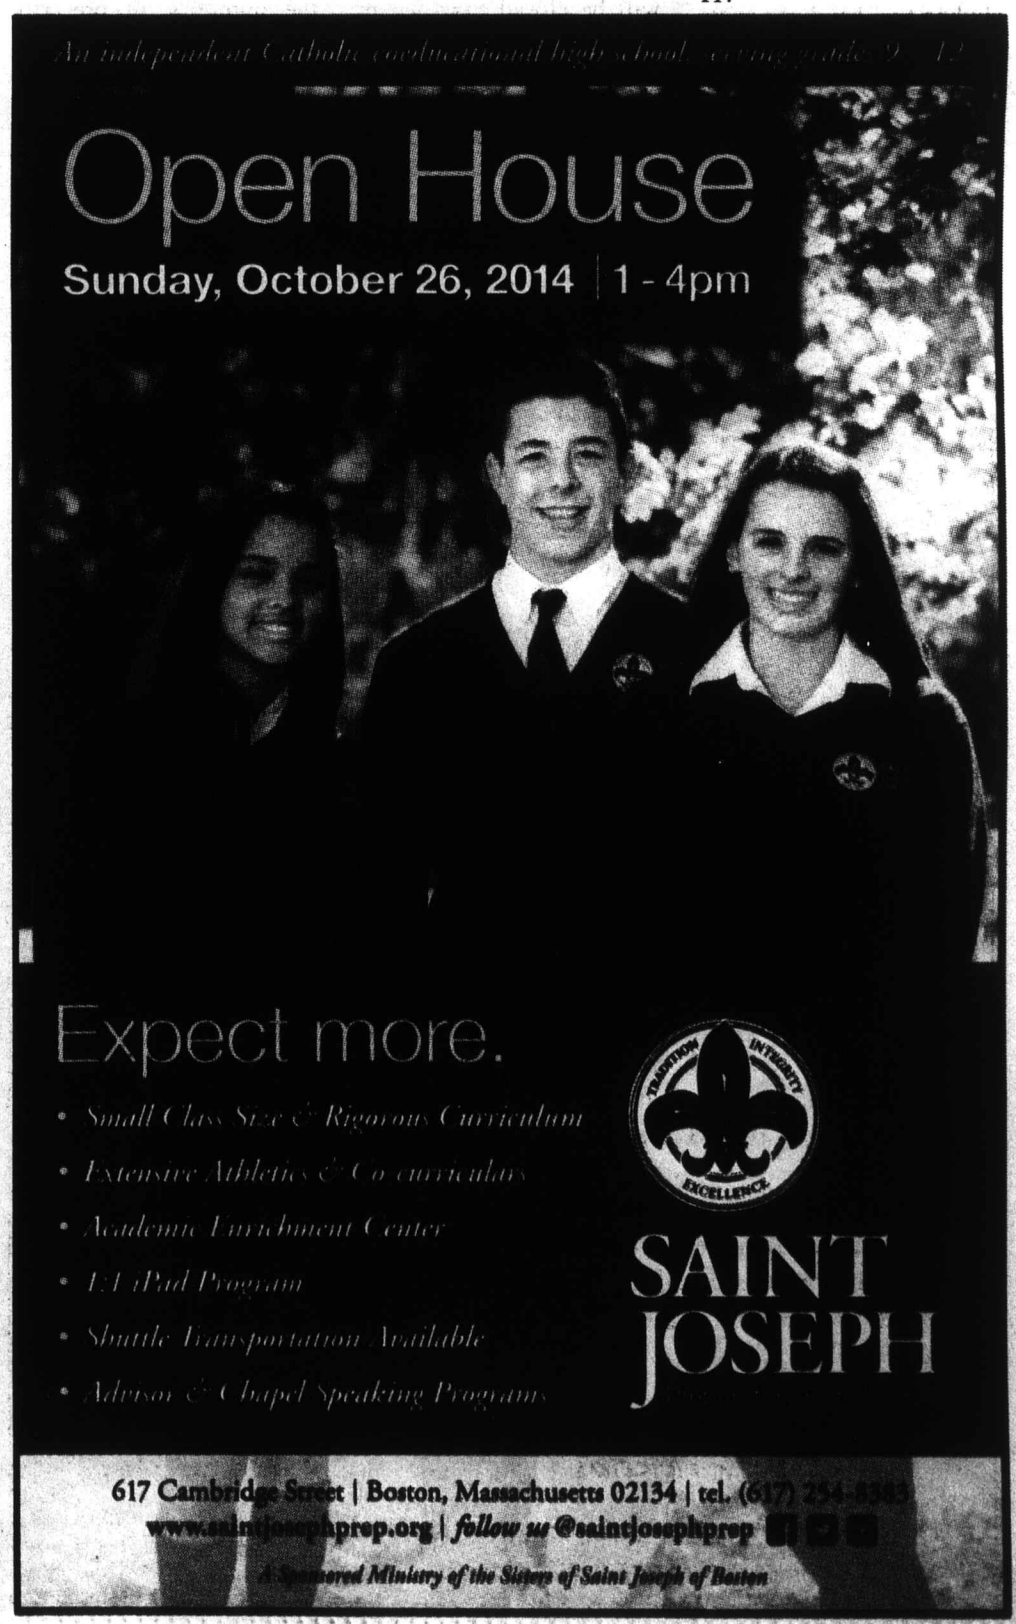

The first Veterans Day observance at the island was held in 2010, said Moody. The flags will remain on the island until Nov. 15.

Quincy's annual Veterans Day observance and parade will be held Tuesday, Nov. 11.

Red Raiders Stop Rush, Foiled By Passing Game

Fall To Hanover; Host Middleboro Friday

By BILL GRIFFIN

North Quincy faced two challenges against Hanover's powerful offense in last Friday's night's Patriot League Fisher Division matchup at Veterans Stadium.

The Red Raiders needed to handle Hanover's deep, explosive running attack which keynoted a 47-point outburst against Scituate. North also needed to control the deep passes of junior quarterback Joe Byrne.

North was brilliant against the run, shutting off the Indians on 49 yards rushing which was Hanover's lowest output of the season. The passing game was the problem.

Byrne threw three touchdown passes and went 10-18 through the air for 183 yards to lift the Indians to a 27-0 decision over the Red Raiders on Breast Cancer Awareness Night at the stadium.

"We shut them off on the ground which is not easy because they are a tough team," said coach Mark Nutley after his team went to 2-3 overall and 1-2 in the league. "We got good penetration and our kids played tough up front against the run. Byrne throws a nice ball and when we made a mistake in coverage, he hurt us."

Byrne threw TD passes of 15, 45, and 10 yards for Hanover, who is 4-1 on the season. He kept a scoring drive alive with a 33-yard completion on third-and-21 in the third period. Seamus Boutin scored on a one-yard run for Hanover's final touchdown, but it was Byrne who found the openings against North, particularly on play-action passes off ball fakes in the backfield.

"The play-action really hurt us," said Nutley. "We worked against it in practice all week, and we looked good, but we couldn't stop them tonight. He drew us up and then found the deep openings over the middle."

The defensive line and the linebackers were the bright spots for North with a stout performance against the run. The line stood up and occupied Hanover's blocking, and linebackers Zack Dangora, Jacob Grady, Dayvon Jones and Marcello Toscanini made the plays. Toscanini was outstanding, plugging the inside holes, roaming from sideline to sideline to make tackles, and forcing losses in the backfield.

"Marcello played a great game. He made plays all over the field," said Nutley. "He's a senior, and he's not going to be easy to replace."

The defensive line of Alex Chen, Nick Manning, Seamus Broughton, Conor Pound and Derek Huynh gave nothing. Chen had a particularly active game at defensive end, both pressuring Byrne and penetrating into the backfield on running plays.

"We liked the way our defensive line matched up against them," said Nutley. "We thought we had a size advantage and we used it well against the run. We have to go back, look at film and work on our pass defense."

North Quincy did force three interceptions. Jones had a 35-yard return off one interception just before the half. Senior safety Solomon Umoren had a pair of picks. Umoren, an exceptional athlete, patrolled the deep zone and stepped in with excellent timing for interceptions which stopped a pair of Hanover scoring drives.

"This was Solomon's first game at safety," said Nutley. "We just told him to read the play, follow the ball, and go up and get it. He has a good eye for the ball."

Senior quarterback Andrew Kiley was North's best offensive weapon, running for 52 yards and completing four passes for 23 yards. Jones had 33 yards in 14 carries, but the Red Raiders had difficulty mounting a consistent offensive threat.

"That is an excellent defense. They have tough kids and they did a good job against what we wanted to do," said Nutley. "We also hurt ourselves with penalties. We had a long run called back for holding, and the penalties kept us from building any momentum. But give them credit. Hanover is a good football team."

It doesn't get an easier for North this week. The Red Raiders host first-place Middleboro Friday night at the stadium at 7:00.

Ms. Mathias was diagnosed with Stage 2 breast cancer in August 2013. She underwent two surgeries and an eight-week radiation program, completing it in February 2014. Recently she has been declared cancer free. She was an honorary captain for the game in an effort by North Quincy and Hanover High Schools to raise awareness about breast cancer during the month of October. Donations were collected and will be sent in Ms. Mathias' name to the Dana-Farber/Brigham and Women's Cancer Research Center at the South Shore Hospital. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

Brysons Pace North Quincy Girls Cross Country Past Plymouth South

North Quincy girls took one more step closer to another Patriot League Fisher crown with a 22-37 win over Plymouth South.

Emily and Julia Bryson cruised to sub 20 minute performances over the three-mile Plymouth South course. Marguerite Belcher and Devin Hiltunen finished 4-5 and Grace Anderson was 10th to clinch the victory.

North's boys duo of Mike Mullaney and Jimmy Cannon again went 1-2 but could not close the deal in a 25-36 loss to the Panthers. Aidan Golden, Romel Malimban and Victor Chu were the other scorers for NQ. On the girls side, a 18-41 loss. LaQueen Arias was the top finisher with Katy Deng, Alyssa Camara, Michelle Chen and Kelly Zeng, the other scorers for the Presidents. The boys lost 15-50 with Peter Saccoach, Kyle Cabezas, Max Hurley, Mark Hajjar and Shawn Daly the other scores for the Presidents. The team participated in the Smegs Legs road race Oct. 11 and traveled to Scituate Tuesday for their final dual meet of the season, then participate in their first major invitational, the Twilight Invitational at Falmouth Fair grounds on Saturday, Oct. 18.

Defense Leads Presidents Over Blue Eagles, 12-6

Quincy Visits Hingham Friday - Kick-Off 5:30 P.M.

By JOE REARDON

Quincy head coach Bill Reardon quickly gathered his club near the 50-yard line of Mario J. Romano Field following the Presidents' tough 12-6 win over a determined Plymouth North squad last Friday night and let his players know without the hint of doubt in his voice they were on the right path to the playoffs. And it needs to stay that way.

"I don't quite have the words to tell you how proud of you I am right now," said Reardon. "We're a team and we understand what we need to do to win as a team. We all did our roles and we made plays when we needed to."

The 1-4 Blue Eagles scored a huge moral victory by holding the Quincy scoring machine to just 12 points, but moral victories don't show up on the scoreboard as the Presidents improved to 5-0 with the Patriot League win.

Although the offense struggled putting balls in the end zone, Quincy's defense was tremendous in holding the Blue Eagles to just one score.

Turnovers killed any chance Plymouth North had of putting up some much-needed points against Quincy. The Blue Eagles sustained a drive to the Presidents' 37-yard line, but running back Myles Uva had the ball stripped and Quincy linebacker Jake Bergonzi pounced on it to end the threat.

"It seems like week after week we're able to put game plans together and hold teams to only one or two touchdowns," said Reardon. "The defense is playing really well for us."

It was the next turnover that led directly to Quincy's first score. Defensive back Ryan Turpin was in perfect position to intercept a Cam Drew pass down the right sideline to give the Presidents prime field position at Plymouth North's 36-yard line. Eight plays later quarterback James Lam was in the end zone on a 1-yard keep to put Quincy up 6-0 with 6:30 left in the half.

The Blue Eagles had their best drive on their very next possession, marching 47 yards to the Quincy 9-yard line. The Presidents came up with another huge play on defense to keep Plymouth North from scoring as defensive back Reda Laftih got a hand on Drew's pass and knocked it down at the goal line.

Quincy continued its aggressive play on defense in the second half, forcing Plymouth North turnovers on its first two possessions. Lineman Isaiah Uzamere recovered an Uva fumble on the Blue Eagles' first play from scrimmage in the third quarter. The Blue Eagles were able to put together another drive on their next

Mustangs Stampede Past Elks, Storm Win Desmond Division

Panthers Remain Undefeated At 6-0

By SEAN HALPIN

Week Six of the Quincy Youth Football season kicked off with the latest installment of the 64-year rivalry between the Quincy Point Panthers and North Quincy Apaches. The Point Panthers entered the ball game unbeaten having already clinched the Myers Division title.

Apaches CB Eric Hellmuth intercepted the Panther QB on the opening series. The Apaches failed to convert and a bad snap on the punt gave the Panthers the ball on the 21 yard line. The Panthers capitalized as FB Nick Cedrone scored on a 14-yard TD run. QB Mike Lomanno passed to Mark McKenna for the conversion as the Panthers took a 7-0 lead at the end of the first quarter.

The Apaches answered with a 9-yard TD run by RB Nate Sleiman. The conversion attempt failed as the Apaches trailed the Panthers, 7-6. On the ensuing series, the Panthers drove the ball deep into Apaches' territory and Lomanno capped of the drive with a 10-yard TD run. The conversion attempt failed but, the Panthers led 13-6 at halftime.

Both defenses played strong throughout the second half. The Apaches were led by the play on Sleiman, Ryan Cefalo, Win Tran, Ryan Kelson, Bobby Stevenson, Hellmuth and Tom McCormack. Early in the fourth quarter, Lomanno scored again on a 7-yard TD run as the Panthers defeated the Apaches 19-6.

Coach Noel DiBona's Panther squad remain undefeated at 6-0. They were sparked by the play of Lomanno, Cedrone, Andy Ryan, McKenna, Cameron MacNeil, Aiden O'Connell, Thaddeus Ortiz and Andrew Grant.

Game 2 of the afternoon featured a battle for the Desmond Division crown between the Houghs Neck Manets (4-1) and the Squantum Storm (4-1). The game was a defensive battle through most of the game. Manets DB Nate Steinberg and Storm DT Josh Dangora both had fumble recoveries in the first quarter.

Early in the second quarter, facing a 4th and long situation, the Manets punter fumbled the snap. The Storm took the ball 1st and 10 on the 15 yard line. The Storm capitalized as RB Andrew Airosus scored on a 5-yard TD run. PK Mike Adamson kicked the extra points as the Storm took an 8-0 lead at halftime.

It was all defense throughout the second half. Late in the fourth quarter, with 4:12 left to go, the Storm had the ball 4th and Goal on the 7-yard line. The Storm lined up to attempt a field goal. The holder faked the FG, pitched the ball to Adamson, who rolled out and threw a 7-yard TD pass to Tim Layden. Adamson kicked the extra points as the Storm defeated the Manets 16-0 to capture the 2014 Desmond Division Title.

The Manets were led by the play of Pat Nazzaro, John Early, Zac Carson, James Dutcher, Robbie Hill, Kendrick Peeples, Steinberg, James Keenan and Jake Zisk. Squantum Head Coach, Mike Killilea got some fine performances from Layden, Adamson, Airosus, Anthony Gatturna, Dangora, Josh Jackson, Samantha Smith, Nelson Walinjom and Austin Currie.

The final game of the afternoon was a shoot out between the West Quincy Elks and the Milton Mustangs. The Mustangs got on the scoreboard early when Punter Smith Charles faked the punt on their own 3-yard line and raced down the sideline, 97 yards for a TD. The Elks immediately answered when RB J.J. Camara ran for a 57 yard TD. PK Eoin Gormley kicked the extra points to take an 8-6 lead.

On the ensuing kickoff, Brendan Keaveney raced down and recovered the Mustang fumble and the Elks took the ball 1st down and 10 on the Mustang 22. Two plays later, Mark Farrenkopf ran for 19 yard TD. Eoin Gormley kicked the extra points and the Elks took a 16-6 Lead at the end of the first quarter.

The Mustangs answered with a drive deep into Elk territory. Mustang RB, Charles ran for a 27 yard TD run. Charles rushed for the conversion and the Mustangs closed in on the Elks lead, 16-13. The Elks added another score as RB J.J. Camara scored on a 5 yard TD run and the Elks took a 22-13 lead at halftime.

The Mustangs took the ball to start the second half. Mustangs RB, Charles sprinted through the line for a 52 yard TD. QB Liam Regan passed to Stephen Joyce for the conversion and cut the Elks lead to 22-20. On the ensuing drive, The Elks extended their lead to 28-20 as RB Sean Dolan scored on an 18 yard run. The Mustangs took the ball and drove deep into Elks territory. QB Reagan ran the ball in for a 10 yard TD. The conversion attempt failed and the Mustangs still trailed the Elks 28-26.

Late in the fourth quarter, trailing by 2 points with only 2:36 left, The Mustangs kicked an onside kick and it was recovered by Smith Charles. The Mustangs took possession on the 48 yard line. Penalties backed the Mustangs into a 3rd and long situation. Mustangs RB Charles managed to break thru the Elks line and score on a 57-yard TD run. The Mustangs defeated the Elks 32-28 in this offensive battle.

Next Sunday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium, the West Quincy Elks host the North Quincy Apaches for the Myers Division #2 seed in the playoffs. The Milton Mustangs will battle the Squantum Storm (5-1) and the Houghs Neck Manets (4-2) will face the Quincy Point Panthers (6-0).

NQ Girls Soccer Down Fontbonne, In Postseason Hunt

By BILL GRIFFIN

It wasn't quite perfect, but it did reduce their magic number to seven.

Before Saturday's 3-1 non-league win over Fontbonne, coach Paul Bregoli and his North Quincy girls soccer team discussed the last eight games on their schedule. They made made a decision. They wanted to win them. All of them.

"We want to run the table, win our last eight. And I think we're capable of doing it," said Bregoli.

The Red Raiders took the first step on their stretch run behind two goals from Haley Houlihan, two picture-perfect passes from Courtney Campo and Marissa McGue, and a solid second half of soccer from end line to end line which saw North's entire roster play and contribute to the win.

"I wasn't happy with the first half," said Bregoli. "We didn't pass the ball the way we should and Fontbonne out-hustled us. The girls knew it. The second half was much better."

The win lifted North to 5-6-2 on the season, and the Red Raiders needed eight points in their final seven matches to make the tourney for the 15th time in the last 18 years.

"We played a great game against Scituate (a 2-1 loss to the Patriot League power on Thursday), and if we play the kind of soccer we're capable of, we have a good chance to win our remaining games," said Bregoli.

The first two scoring plays should be preserved on a DVD. Less than 10 minutes into the match, McGue controlled the ball in the air near midfield. She never settled it on the ground, but in midair volleyed a pinpoint through pass to Campo. Campo flew past the defense on a clean break and finished with a low drive into the far corner for a 1-0 lead.

Seconds before intermission, Campo controlled deep along the right wing and sent Houlihan away with a low pass at just the right pace in just the right crease through the halfback line. Houlihan won a one-on-one battle for possession in the middle of the field at the 20-yard line, and connected with a low drive which found the corner for a 2-0 lead.

One could watch a lot of soccer and not see two better passes.

"Both were great passes. Marissa has a beautiful touch on her passes and Courtney does a good job finding the open player," said Bregoli.

Houlihan upped it to 3-0 just over 10 minutes into the second half. Mandy Hazelton and Ciara Forde disrupted a Fontbonne breakout. Houlihan gathered and settled the ball at the 25-yard line and fired another low hard strike for the score. The Ducks' Jacqueline Lima scored less than five minutes later to make the final 3-1.

"It's important that Haley score for us. When she does, she takes the pressure off the other forwards and makes us a better offensive team," said Bregoli.

North played a complete soccer match especially in the second half. Campo, Houlihan, Annie Doherty and promising freshman winger Cora Cluett kept the attack humming. McGue was dominant at center halfback and controlled the middle of the field with Forde and Hazelton.

Molly Kate Cannon once again marked the opposition's top scorer, and Julia O'Donnell cleaned up any problems at center fullback. Keeper Shannan Kennedy was steady and sure. She almost notched her third shutout of the season, barely missing on a diving save on Fontbonne's goal.

"Cora Cluett has all kinds of offensive potential. Molly Kate and Julia have been outstanding defensively for us all season," said Bregoli.

Bregoli was able to use his all roster, a practice which has served him well in a season which has seen North hit hard by injuries.

"We play our whole roster in every game. It's worked for us this year because it's helped us develop depth which we've needed with all our injuries," he said.

In other action last week, Campo had two goals and two assists and Molly Donahue added a pair of goals to lift North to a 5-1 win over Hanover. Emily Anglehart also scored for North while Cluett, Houlihan and Forde added assists. Kara Carchedi played well in the victory for North.

McGue scored for North in the tough loss to Scituate. Kennedy played a fine game in goal while Houlihan and Donahue also had strong efforts.

In other recent action, Kennedy earned her second shutout in a 0-0 tie with Silver Lake. Cannon, Alyx Patey and Cara Viscione had strong matches for the Red Raiders.

Pembroke defeated North, 3-2. Forde had two goals while Houlihan added a pair of assists. Campo had a drive which rang off both the crossbar and post which would have tied the match.

Hingham stopped North, 4-0. Cannon and Carchedi had solid matches for the Red Raiders.

BENTLY UNIVERSITY JUNIOR Sarah Brennan of Quincy, in her first competition of the fall, posted the fastest 5,000-meter time of her career during the Greater Louisville Cross Country Classic at Tom Sawyer State Park. Brennan, a North Quincy High School graduate, covered the distance in 19:15.46 to place 91st in a field of 351 runners. At the New England Championships Saturday at Franklin Park, Brennan was also the first member of the Bentley University women's cross country team to cross the finish line. She was 117th overall, and eighth among Division II athletes, with a time of 19:04.66 over the 5,000-meter course. She improved on her 2013 time by 80 seconds and moved up in the standings by 91 places.

possession until defensive back Jahvae Handsom-Fields, who rushed for 106 yards on 24 carries on the offensive side of the ball, pounced on a fumble to give the Presidents a first down at the 50-yard line.

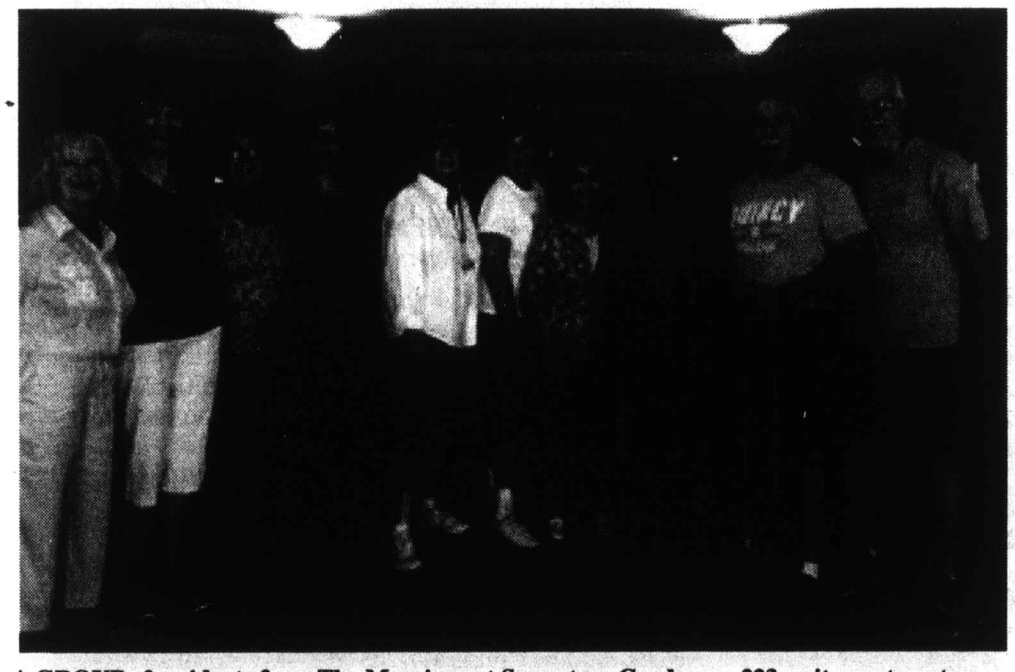

Fields proceeded to pick up 40 yards on the Quincy surge and capped the 10-play, 50-yard drive by easily taking it in from the 3 for a 12-0 lead with 9:33 left to play.

Plymouth North did manage to get on the board with 44 seconds left and put the finishing touches on an 83-yard march down the field when Drew connected with wide receiver Ryan Boudreau on a 30-yard scoring pass to make it a 12-6 contest. Quincy recovered the onsides kick and wrapped up win No. 5 on the season.

Reardon reiterated the fact that Quincy needed to keep the pressure on its opponents or else there were other Patriot League teams that could beat them.

"We can't be complacent," said Reardon. "We have a big game next week against Hingham. I know record-wise they're down, but they're tough, proud kids. They're going to come to play next week. We have to make sure we keep our level of intensity up. They're (Plymouth North) a good football team and without a doubt the toughtest physical team we've played all year. We were definitely better than last week from the penalties standpoint. We had to play that way tonight. If we had a lot of penalties this team would have beat us."

Quincy takes on a struggling, but very tough Hingham team on Friday night on the road at 5:30 p.m. Reardon is determined to have his squad play with sense of urgency despite its undefeated record so far. "They're having their troubles record-wise," said Reardon, "but they're a tough, proud team."

A GROUP of residents from The Moorings at Squantum Gardens, a 223-unit apartment community in Quincy managed by Braintree-based real estate firm Peabody Properties, Inc., recently participated in a strength training exercise study led by graduates of the Quincy College Exercise Science Program. Quincy Pee Wee B's Upend Milton, 5-1

The QYH PW B team travelled to the fabled Max Ulin Rink deep in the Blue Hills Reservation Oct. 4th to face-off against first place and undefeated Milton Wildcats.

In front of boisterous home crowd, the Milton PW B team had the early offensive momentum. However, goalie Dan Freeman nullified several early Wildcat chances and was again stellar between the Quincy pipes.

Shorthanded early in the second period, QYH blue liners John Bell, Rhys Foster, and Ryan Hester buckled down inside the Quincy blue line. As the high scoring Wildcats fell back on their heels, the QYH PW B offense turned it up another notch. In a span of four minutes and courtesy of Aiden White's seamless passing, Derek Little [2] and Michael Collins [1] combined to give Quincy a 3-0 lead at the end of two hard fought periods.

Though Milton had several power plays in the third period, QYH's center men Brian Silcox and Riley O'Connor were instrumental in winning pivotal face-offs, which enabled QYH defenseman John Bell to convert a slapshot for a commanding 4-0 lead in the third period.

In the final minutes of the game and on a power play, the Wildcats were able to avoid the shutout, as they capitalized on a loose rebound in the Quincy crease. QYH defenseman Anthony Viera responded with an empty net goal to secure the 5-1 victory.

"When we play unselfish hockey, our PW B team can compete with any team," said QYH Coach Bob Bell.

Playing in the legendary South Shore Conference [SSC], which was founded by Burt Herman in 1975 and now includes 26 youth hockey programs, the QYH PW B team finds itself near the top of the "RE" Division after the first month of league play.

In spite of a courageous effort by winger Chase Quigley, who was awarded a penalty shot following a breakaway interference collision, the QYH PW B suffered its first 3-2 loss of the season against the Norwood Nuggets last Saturday at the Canton SportsPlex. With an assist from Liam Foster, Paul Martin and Collins accounted for both Quincy goals.

The QYH PW B team hopes to rebound next Saturday 4:20 p.m. when it hosts Pembroke at QYHA.

BITTER PILL TO SWALLOW

Chiropractic treatment for acute low-back pain stands in stark contrast to traditional medical treatments by virtue of the fact that it is drugless. Some pain sufferers may choose to use painkilling drugs such as acetaminophen, however, because they believe that it will afford them fast relief despite the side effects (potential liver and kidney damage) that over-the-counter acetaminophen can cause. However, recent research involving 1,643 patients from 235 health centers casts doubt on acetaminophen's effectiveness in treating low-back pain. In fact, the large, randomized trial found that using acetaminophen for acute low-back pain was no more effective than using a placebo. This finding may lead users of acetaminophen to question whether the supposed benefits outweigh the risks.

We not only offer great pain relief services, but we also provide valuable information and education to help prevent future problems. We focus on physical rehabilitation and customized treatments that eliminate the source of your pain. Patient comfort is essential. A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, Oct. 6, 2014, at approximately 1:15 a.m., Officers Dwayne Goldman, Chris McDermott, A.J. Sweeney and Ken Wood were dispatched to 195 Taffrail Road on a report of an armed robbery. Communications stated that a food delivery driver had been robbed by a male suspect armed with a gun.

Upon arrival, the Officers met with the victim who said he was a delivery driver for a Quincy restaurant. He gave the Officers the address and telephone information for the delivery, along with the name of "Bill", who placed the order. The driver stated that he could not locate the address so he called the number that the order came from. A male answered and told him that he was out front. The driver saw a male on a cell phone standing on the front steps of 193 Taffrail Road and approached him. The male said he was the customer but could not find his credit card and did not have any cash on him. The driver then returned to his car and got in the driver's seat. The bag of food was on the passenger's seat. The male approached the driver's window and asked if he could have the food. Immediately after the driver said no, the male leaned into the driver's window and hit the driver in the head with both his forearms. The male then said, "I have a gun. I'll shoot you if you don't give me the food." The driver grabbed the bag of food and handed it to the male, who then ran behind 193 Taffrail Road. The driver tried to watch where the male went but lost sight of him as he called the Police.

The driver provided a description of the suspect, which was given out to responding Officers. Communications tried to make contact with the cell phone number while Officer McDermott attempted a track with his K-9 partner. The trail led toward the area of 177 Taffrail but did not lead to a specific residence. Officers on scene started knocking on doors to locate the suspect, but no one matched the description or had any helpful information. Communications determined the owner of the cell phone as a male from Quincy but were unable to make contact with the suspect as the phone went to voicemail when it was called. The actual address could not be found for the owner of the cell phone.

A thorough check of the surrounding area failed to turn up a suspect. A short time later, Communications advised Officer Goldman that the phone owner returned the phone call to the Police and wanted to meet with the Officers. He stated he was at 30 Empire Street. Officer responded there and discovered there was no such address. Communications called the number again but there was no answer. As Officer Goldman returned to the area of Taffrail Road, he observed a male walking and talking on his cell phone. The Officer asked him what his name was and the male gave the name of the owner of the cell phone. He then asked the Officer what was going on and he was told about the incident.

When asked what he was doing earlier, the phone owner said he was hanging out at his friend's house and pointed to a building on Taffrail Road. He denied ordering Chinese food and when asked if anyone else used his cell phone to place an order, he said he wasn't sure. He added that he left his phone unattended while it charged so someone could have used it. He continued to deny any involvement in the incident, so the driver/victim was asked to respond to the scene. Since it would take the victim 30 minutes to respond, the Officers asked the phone owner to bring them to the house he claimed to be in earlier.

LT. DAN MINTON

The resident of the apartment was awakened and she claimed there was nobody else in the house. She stated that she did have a couple of friends over the house earlier but no one ordered any Chinese food. She was adamant that there was never any Chinese food in her house tonight. When asked if the Officers could check the house, she offered, "You can come in and check the kitchen but that's it."

This statement alerted the Officers that the tenant could be hiding someone in the house. There was no sign of any Chinese food in the house. She also denied there were any males in the house at all. She said that her friends were just hanging out and not doing anything wrong, however, there was a strong odor of burnt marijuana coming from inside of her house. This made it difficult to smell any remnants of Chinese food if it had been there. She admitted that she and her friends had smoked marijuana earlier but stated she didn't have any more.

Officer Goldman then went back outside and advised the phone owner that the victim was responding for a show-up identification. The Officer realized that the phone owner wanted to speak but he was hesitant because there were other people around. Sergeant Flaherty asked him if he wanted to wait in a cruiser as it was getting cold outside and he said, "Sure, but I'm not getting cuffed am I?" He was told that he was not under arrest and therefore would not be handcuffed.

As they walked to the cruiser, the phone owner blurted out, "I want to tell you something. I didn't do anything, but there was a guy there who said he wanted to rob a delivery guy." He continued by stating that he just met the guy yesterday and didn't know his name but they had mutual friends. He said that the suspect borrowed his phone and placed the order using the name "Bill." He didn't believe that the suspect would actually go through with it, especially since everybody at the house had plenty of money. He stated that he went upstairs for a while and when he came down the suspect was gone. He learned that the suspect went outside, so he looked out and saw the suspect leaning into the driver's window of a small white car (vehicle victim was operating). In less than a minute, the suspect came running into the house with a bag of Chinese food.

According to phone owner, the suspect didn't even eat any of the food, although others did. The phone owner said that he believed that the tenant of the apartment knew that the suspect robbed the delivery driver, and that she was eating the food with some other friends. The phone owner then said that the suspect was still in her apartment, which the Officers believed once they met the tenant. He was hiding in one of the upstairs bedrooms.

Officer McDermott and Sergeant Flaherty returned to the house and spoke with the tenant again, this time advising her that they knew that the suspect was upstairs in one of the bedrooms and asked if they could go look for him. Sergeant Flaherty further advised her that there was enough information and evidence to apply for a search warrant if necessary. She gave Sergeant Flaherty and Officer McDermott permission to go upstairs and look for the suspect.

Officer McDermott located the suspect lying on the floor next to a bed in a room that was in darkness. The suspect matched the description given by the victim. He denied any involvement in the robbery, however, the phone owner confirmed that it was the same person who robbed the victim. The phone owner said that the suspect told him to call the Police and meet at 30 Empire Street so the suspect could escape. The suspect, a 22 year old Malden resident, was placed under arrest and charged with, "Armed Robbery and Assault & Battery." Nice Work!

Abe Cohen Memorial Service At United Methodist Church

A memorial service "Remembering Abe Cohen" will be held Saturday, Oct. 18 at 2 p.m. at Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

ABE COHEN

The service is sponsored by the South Shore Coalition for Human Rights.

Mr. Cohen, a Massachusetts human rights activist, died June 22 in Greenfield. He was 97 years old.

A longtime Quincy resident, he had recently moved to Greenfield to live with his son David and daughter-in-law Judy Atkins.

Mr. Cohen was born in Malden on Sept. 22, 1916, the eldest son of the late Hyman and Fannie Cohen and later brother to William. Like his parents, he was a lifelong socialist and a fighter for peace, justice and equality for all people. One of his first political actions as a young boy was passing out leaflets in protest of the coming execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Mr. Cohen graduated from Quincy High School and then attended and graduated from the Massachusetts College of Optometry in 1937. He served in the U.S. Army as a medic from 1942 to 1946, reaching the rank of captain. He was wounded once and captured twice, but talked his way out of capture both times.

On returning from the war, he married Madeline Sivachek, whom he met as a teen when they both worked at Camp Nitgedeiget. Mr. Cohen then began a new career as a maker of monuments, starting the United Granite Co., in Quincy, with friends.

During the 1950s, Mr. and Mrs. Cohen suffered constant harassment from the FBI because of their progressive political beliefs. In 1956, he was called before the Massachusetts Commission on Un-American Activity with which he refused to cooperate. Years later, he received a citation from the city of Quincy honoring his commitment to justice and his refusal to bow to political pressure.

In the 1980s, Mr. and Mrs. Cohen and many others worked to overcome racial discrimination in housing in the city of Quincy. Their suit against the city helped pave the way to open public housing in Quincy to minorities. During his life, he was also president of the Jewish Community Center and was active with the Community Action Program in Quincy and was a founder with his wife of the South Shore Coalition for Human Rights.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Caution dominates the Sheep's monetary aspect this week. Rams and Ewes might want to shear their big spending plans until a more favorable financial picture begins to emerge by week's end.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Thrift counts both at home and at work. So you might want to rethink major purchases or investments. Also, be wary of a so-called revelation about a previous decision.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Both household budgets and workplace accounts might benefit from some judicious trimming of unnecessary expenses. A partnership could lead to an unexpected challenge.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A previously overlooked opportunity could re-emerge with a new travel-related matter. Check this out carefully to see if it's what you really want before you decide one way or another.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) This could be the start of a new career-changing phase, so start marking down your many accomplishments for those who need to know how much you have to offer. Good luck.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's not too early for the sometimes procrastinating Virgo to start making those long-distance travel plans. The sooner you decide where to go, when to go and how to go, the better.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Financial matters once again figure in any major action you might take regarding career, travel or other endeavors. You'll want a ready reserve to help you back up those moves.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Trying to resolve a problem in a personal relationship could be more difficult than you'd expected. Look into the possibility that someone might be interfering for his or her own reasons.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A project you once rejected might be more attractive because of changes that you feel you can now work with. The weekend is especially favorable to family matters.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This is a good week for the gregarious Goat to enjoy being with people you care for. You might even want to show off those creative kitchen skills you're so adept at.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A colleague might think your attitude is patronizing or even outright insulting. True. That might be his or her problem. But you might want to take some reassuring steps anyway.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It's a good time to jettison those old concepts about a family matter you might have been holding on to. This will help make room for a new and more enlightened way of dealing with it.
BORN THIS WEEK: You like to analyze a puzzling situation before you try to resolve it. This makes you excel at getting things done the right way.

Tony's Clam Shop: A Quincy Institution Marks 50 Years

Three Generations Of The Kandalaft Family Have Worked At Iconic Wollaston Beach Establishment

By SCOTT JACKSON

Tony's Clam Shop, which has been serving seafood and other favorites for a half century, was lauded by city councillors as one of Quincy's iconic businesses.

Antoine "Tony" Kandalaft and his wife, Matilda "Tillie," opened the restaurant in 1964 as the Wollaston Clam Shop; it got its current name several years later. Three generations of the Kandalaft family – Tony and Tillie's children and grandchildren – have worked at the restaurant, located at 861 Quincy Shore Drive by Wollaston Beach, over the past 50 years.

Tony's menu includes the usual fare –seafood, burgers and hot dogs, for example – as well as Middle Eastern dishes including tabouli, falafel, and hummus, a nod to Tony's Lebanese heritage. The Kandalafts also own and operate Matilda's, which re-opened two years ago and is located right next door to Tony's. Matilda's sells ice cream – both hard and soft serve – and slush.

The Kandalafts received a commendation from the City Council Oct. 6. Councillor Doug Gutro, who presented the commendation, said Tony's has become an iconic destination.

"Few institutions stay in business anywhere for 50 years, especially these days. Fewer still are iconic destinations in that community. Places where first dates happen, where relationships blossom, where anniversaries are celebrated, where youth sports teams assemble, where politicians and celebrities frequent, where food writers visit and rave about. Places that teem with activity deep into that night that draw long lines and earn rave reviews year after year after year. Tony's Clam Shop is that place," Gutro said.

"It's as much a part of our identity here in the city of Quincy, I would argue, as the Granite Trust or Remick's or Clifford's Flowers – all places that have really put us on the map commercially. People flock here, to the city of Quincy, for our history, our coastline, and yes, our clams. And they've done so for 50 years."

The Kandalafts, Gutro added, have contributed greatly to the community and have advocated for improving Wollaston Beach.

"They're terrific people too and very charitable and have given graciously and generously over the years to many civic events and activities and have been a tenacious advocate – probably no better advocate – for a clean, safe, accessible, Wollaston Beach," Gutro said.

"They deserve credit in large part for some of those DCR improvements that we've seen over the last 10 years. Oftentimes, the politicians get the credit. But they've been the voice because it's their front door and they see it every day and they care about it."

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes recounted going there as child and taking her own son there now.

"It truly is just an absolute institution here in Quincy. We were always excited to see those cardboard boxes with the grease stains on the bottom – we knew we were getting a treat," Hughes said. "It's just a wonderful place to celebrate – wonderful food, wonderful atmosphere, but a great group of people working behind the counter."

The Kandalafts son, Gary, said it has been a pleasure to have been open so many years.

"It's been a pleasure for us to be here all these years. The city of Quincy means so much to us. We love it here and we're happy to have been a big part of this whole city," he said.

"We really appreciate this recognition and we're so happy to be here. I don't know if we can make another 50 but we'll give it a shot."

The Kandalafts daughter, Karen Djerf, noted after the meeting that Tony's has had many long terms employees. In particular, she recognized Shawn Bulman, who manages the front end and has worked at Tony's for 30 years; kitchen manager Hakim Gherbi, a 19-year employee; Sajmir Dedeaj, a cook who has been there four years; Ed Guinto, a five-year employee who cleans the restaurant; Steven Salhaney, a cook who has worked there nine years; and John Salhaney, who takes care of prep work in the kitchen and has worked there eight years.

"They sacrifice their summers. They've been with us every season," Djerf said. "They're responsible and reliable."

She also noted that many people who grew up nearby worked at Tony's, including in some cases several generations of the same family. Many of those workers have gone to great success later in life, including police officers, attorneys, and accountants.

"That to me is a really nice thing when they work their way through college and we see them go on to be successful," Djerf said.

Junior Bonnie Lassies Celebrate 65 Years Of Friendship

Students Of Former Houghs Neck Congregational Church Sunday School Teacher Muriel Bonney

JUNIOR BONNEY LASSIES, a group of women who were students of Houghs Neck Congregational Church Sunday school teacher Muriel Bonney in the late 1940s and '50s, recently celebrated 65 years of friendship. Bonney would frequently host Christmas and other holiday gatherings for "her girls" that included dinner and drinks served on her best bone china. The Junior Bonney Lassies have already made plans for their next gathering in December. Back row (from left) are Martha Chase, Joan Matthews, Gloria Brummitt, Carol Johnston, Florence McNeilly. By KRIS KALABOKAS

A group of women who were at one time students of Muriel Bonney, who was a Sunday school teacher at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, are celebrating 65 years of friendship.

Bonney, who was born in March of 1898, taught grade 10-12 Sunday school students, both boys and girls, but formed a special bond with "her girls."

In 1949, a group of her students unanimously decided to form a club called the Jr. Bonney Lassies. Over the years, the group grew to include roughly 23 members.

Bonney extended her caring and dedication beyond the classroom and invited the Jr. Bonney Lassies to her home for Christmas parties and other festive occasions. Along with her sister, Dot Hubbell, she set up the get-togethers and provided delicious food and treats for her girls.

One of Bonney's girls, Gloria Brummitt, recalled how amazed she was at the set-up that greeted her for gatherings at Bonney's home. "At that time as young girls, it was so impressive to us, while sitting around her large dining room table, to be served hot chocolate and tea in bone china cups and our food on very beautiful dinnerware. And we didn't use napkins; we used serviettes," she said.

Napkins are sometimes referred to as serviettes in the United Kingdom, Ireland, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and some parts of Canada.

Another one of the girls, Margie McAllister, noted how special Christmas time was as a member of the Jr. Bonney Lassies. "[Bonney] would reach into her china cabinet to bring out her very best bone chinaware," she recalled.

McAllister remembered how comfortable the girls felt talking to Bonney about anything, no mater how outlandish it may have seemed at the time.

Despite her declining health, she kept meeting with her girls at their homes and for special Mother-Daughter Dinner events, where the Jr. Bonney Lassies would proudly present their mothers to Bonney.

Sometimes the meetings would occur at the church. Other times, the group would gather at a restaurant.

The first Mother-Daughter Dinner took place on May 23, 1949.

"A lot of our meetings usually included singing around the piano. One night, at a Mother-Daughter Dinner at the church, Margie McAllister — our piano player — was late, but when she finally arrived she was all dressed up in formal attire including a [top hat] and tails and with a lot of glitz and glamour. She strutted directly to the piano, plunked down a candelabra and, much to our surprise, proceeded to impersonate Liberace. It was a priceless performance," recalled Joan Kirby.

Kirby also fondly remembered that Bonney gave her students bible markers and a framed copy of J.P. McEvoy's poem "'If' for Girls."

Carol Schuerch Johnston recalled that Bonney always sent out birthday and Christmas cards to her girls as well as on many other special occasions. The cards, without fail, would be signed "fondly, Muriel Bonney."

Florence (Kneeland) McNelly remembered Bonney as "my Sunday school teacher and how lovely she always was."

Bonney had a "wonderful spirit" and always encouraged her girls to attend church regularly said Anne (MacKinlay) Baxendale.

Madelyn (Leggat) MacDonald said that Bonney held a genuine interest in her girls' lives and was always concerned for them.

At Christmas time, MacDonald would continue her family's tradition of door-to-door caroling. With her four children in tow, she would always make a stop at Bonney's home where the children would present her with little gifts.

At the group's Christmas parties, everyone would engage in a spirited form of "Yankee Swap" where participants, who were assigned a number, would bring a gift, place it into a pile on the floor, and pick one when their number was called.

For years, a box of garters would always return to the party.

Brummitt remembered one of Bonney's simple dishes she would serve on her special dinnerware that she called "Rin-tum-toodley-do." While everyone laughed at the silly name, it turned out to be cheesy tomato sauce over a cracker which turned out to be a group favorite.

Brummitt became a Sunday school teacher herself due to the example set by Bonney.

On the Jr. Bonney Lassies' 50th anniversary, the girls celebrated by taking a commuter boat into Boston and enjoying a meal on the waterfront.

Their conversation had naturally, at that point, shifted from chitchat about boys and first dates to discussion of their families, babies, children, and grandchildren.

For their 65th anniversary, the girls met for dinner at the 99 Restaurant.

They plan to meet again for a Christmas gathering in December.

A scholarship fund, which was set up in Bonney's memory, benefits college-bound young people who are members of the Houghs Neck Congregational Church. The Jr. Bonney Lassies, to this day, contribute generously to the scholarship fund.

Bonney passed away on Nov. 22, 1991 at the age of 93.

Prior to the creation of the Jr. Bonney Lassies, there existed a group of young women who called themselves the "Bonney Lassies." Much like the Jr. Bonney Lassies, the Bonney Lassies regularly met with Bonney for parties and gatherings.

One of the last living members of the Bonney Lassies is 95-year-old Louise Josselyn Smullen. She is the daughter of Roland K. Josselyn, one of the workers who built the Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

"Back in the 1930s, my friends and I attended Sunday school until graduation from high school. During our teen years, Muriel Bonney was our teacher. We loved her. She was interested in what we were doing with our lives and was non judgemental," Smullen recalled.

As graduation drew closer and closer, one of the girls in her class suggested they form a club called the Bonney Lassies.

"We all thought it was a great idea and thus, the Bonney Lassies were born!"

She can't remember all of the names of the girls in the club but she remembers Marion Kirby, Kathleen Grant, Charlotte Neill, Ruth Kent, Edna Blanchette, Lillian Harvey, Esther Harvey, and Norma Gendreau.

The group began meeting monthly. Soon after, engagement parties, weddings, and baby showers followed. As their families grew and moved to different places it became more difficult to meet.

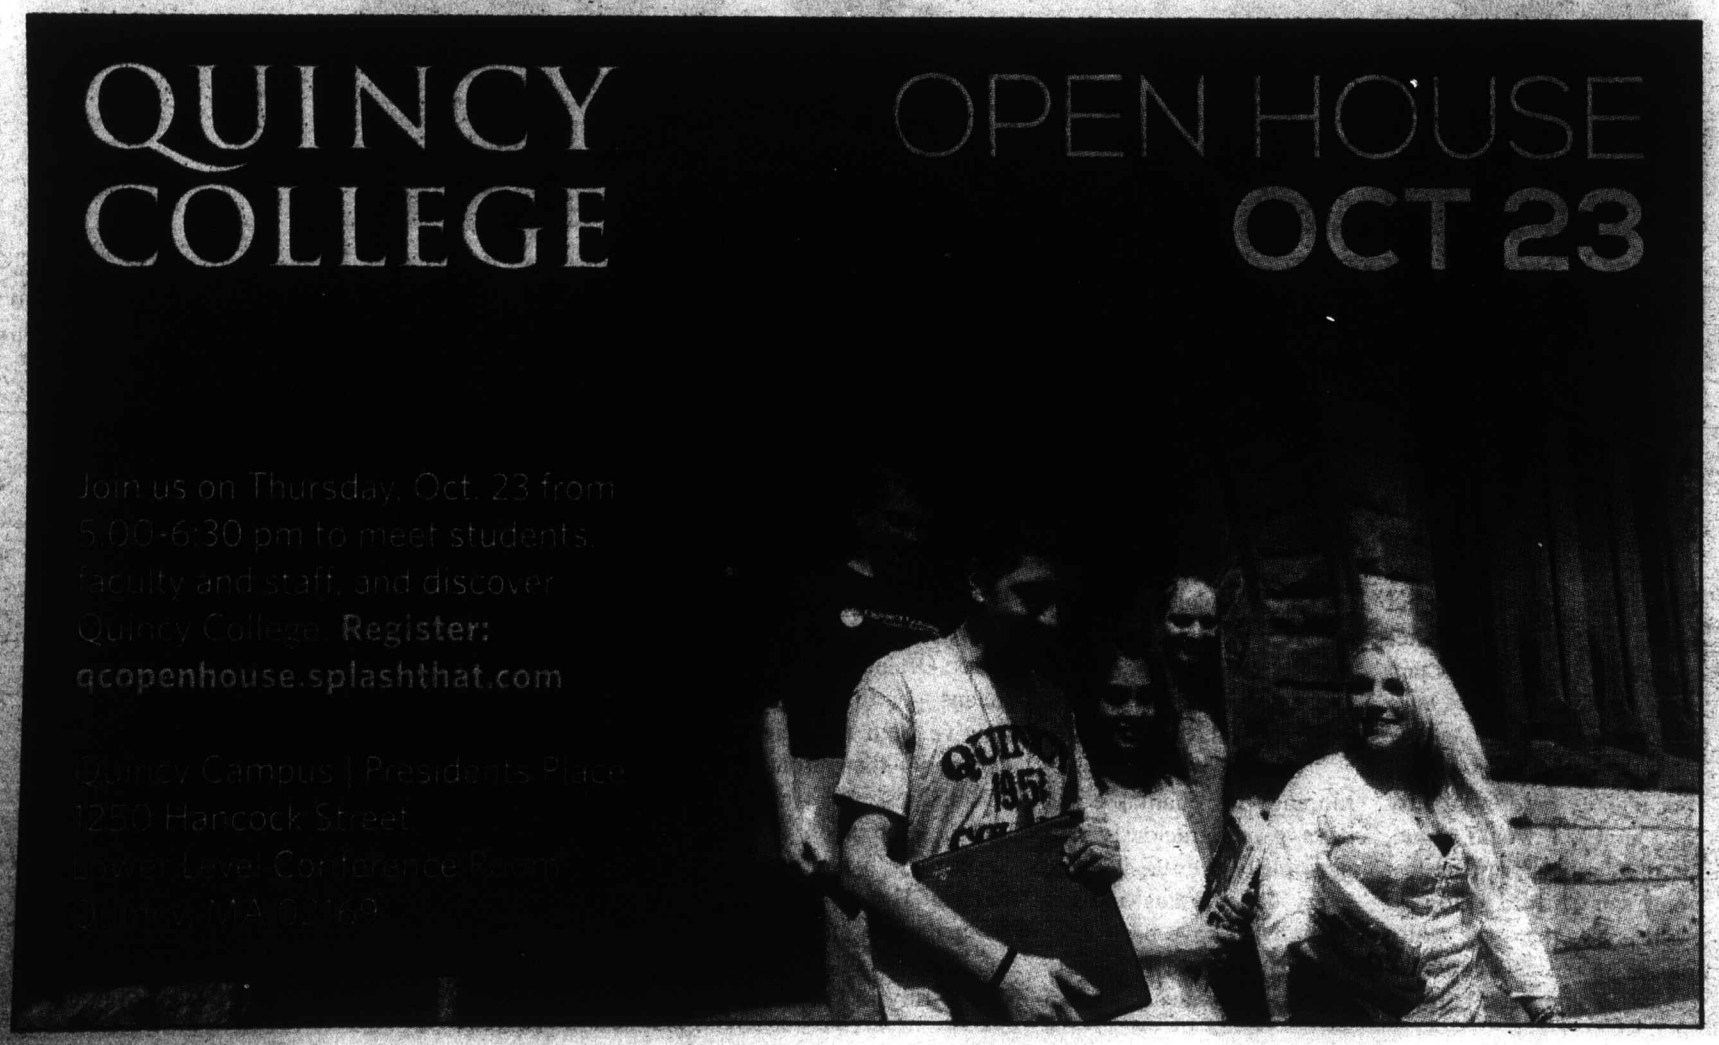

After disbanding, Smullen received an invite from Bonney's daughter Betty for a reunion to celebrate her mother's birthday. "Several of us were able to attend and had one last get-together. FAITH LUTHERAN CHURCH member Jack Mayo holds an incandescent lightbulb from the early 1890s that was found in a crawlspace behind the church cornerstone that was removed last Saturday. Inside the cornerstone was a time capsule that was opened as part of the church's 125th anniversary celebration this past weekend. The capsule - a copper box - was placed in the cornerstone in 1892. Unfortunately, the box was not properly sealed and much of the contents was spoiled by moisture and mold. Some Swedish coins (seen below) were among the artifacts that were recovered and still in good shape after the capsule was opened. Story, other photos on Page 26. Flood Map Appeal Decision Next Spring

800 Properties Could Be Removed From Zone

By SCOTT JACKSON

Federal officials are expected to make their decision on Quincy's appeal of new flood maps sometime next spring, according to the engineer retained by the city to file the appeal. He anticipates up to 800 properties being removed from flood plains as a result of the appeal.

Joseph D. Shea, senior vice president for Woodard & Curran, updated the City Council on the appeals process Monday night. His firm has worked with Quincy officials to appeal the new Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) flood maps that went into effect June 9, adding 1,400 new parcels to flood plains. An additional 2,700 parcels previously in flood plains were remapped into higher risk zones while 500 others in flood plains previously saw no changes.

The day after FEMA's new maps became effective, Woodard & Curran filed a letter of map revision (LOMR) to appeal them. In its appeal of the maps, Woodard & Curran noted that FEMA failed to take into account the city's flood control infrastructure – including tide gates and sea walls. The appeal also claimed FEMA's high water mark of 14.3 feet, recorded

Housing Authority May Hire More Inspectors

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Quincy Housing Authority is looking to add a new member or members to their maintenance department who will be responsible for conducting annual inspections of all of Quincy's public housing units.

"We'd like to have the board consider allowing us to hire an inspector or some inspectors," said Housing Authority Executive Director James Lydon during the authority's monthly meeting last Wednesday. "We want to begin to do all of our inspections ourselves. I feel like we've been so let down by the consultant we had."

Inspections were previously handled by Tennessee-based McCright & Associates. Lydon described their operations as "poor" and said they were not communicating to the authority all of the safety and health issues later discovered by the Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) and the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

A report following the inspection of ten percent of Quincy's state-aided public housing units and common areas conducted on March 31, April 1, and April 3 of 2014 by DHCD revealed subpar living conditions in

City Optimistic On Teel Field Permitting

By SCOTT JACKSON

City officials are optimistic they will be able to work with the state's environmental agency to receive the proper permitting for a $12 million project to renovate Teel Field and create a new parking lot for North Quincy High School.

The Quincy Conservation Commission had given its approval to the project, but the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (MassDEP) issued a superseding order denying the permit. MassDEP did so because the city did not submit the signatures of affected homeowners on Hunt Street and Newbury Avenue. The letter also identified other issues the city should correct in its next application.

Following MassDEP's decision, Chris Walker, a spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch, said the city would be able to work with MassDEP on the permitting process.

"These are almost all fairly routine issues raised by the DEP when you're permitting a major drainage improvement project like this, and it's nothing that cannot be addressed. It's sort of the

Rachel's Challenge: A Message Of Tolerance, Kindness

150 Students Attend Presentation Focusing On Writings By Victim Of Columbine School Tragedy

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A group of roughly 150 Atlantic and Central middle school students gathered in the North Quincy High School gymnasium last Wednesday to watch a presentation by Rachel's Challenge, a non-profit, national organization created to spread a message of tolerance and kindness across the United Sates and Canada.

The organization is named after 17-year-old Rachel Joy Scott, the first person to lose her life in the Columbine High School shooting on April 20, 1999.

Scott was fatally shot as she ate her lunch outside the school library with a friend by Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold, two senior students who would go on to kill 12 students, one teacher, and injure over 20 others in a rampage that lasted seven and a half minutes.

Both committed suicide inside the school following the attack.

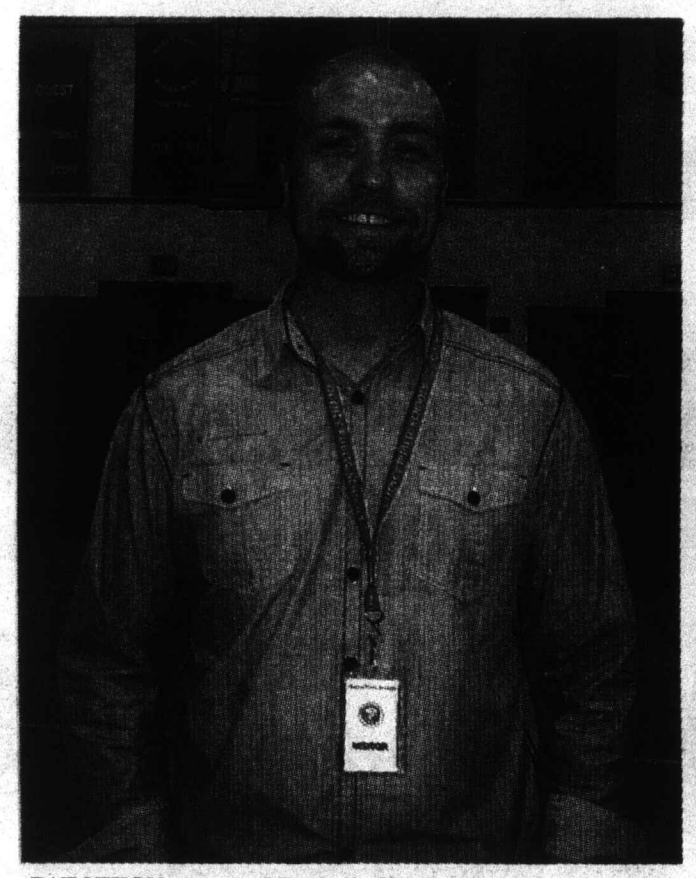

The presentation focused heavily on the essay and diary writings of Scott.

"I have this theory that if one person can go out of their way to show compassion, then it will start a chain reaction of the same. People will never know how far a little kindness can go," she wrote in a school essay titled "My Ethics, My Codes of Life."

In it, she challenged her reader to start their own chain reaction of kindness and compassion.

She handed in that essay just months before she was killed.

Students were shown news clips of the chaos following the shooting and heard frantic 911 calls made by teachers and staff as they hid in classrooms, closets, and underneath tables.

PAT NIXON presented Rachel's Challenge to over 150 middle school students in the North Quincy High School gymnasium last Wednesday. The organization uses the writings of 17-year-old Rachel Joy Scott, the first person to lose her life in the Columbine High School shooting April 20, 1999. Her writings have inspired a message of tolerance and urge students to start their own chain reaction of kindkness. Nixon said that following many of his presentations, students tell him how much Rachel's story has impacted them.

RACHEL'S CHALLENGE — a non-profit, national organization created to spread a message of tolerance and kindness across the United Sates and Canada — was sponsored by the North Quincy High School chapter of Students Against Destructive Decisions (SADD). Over 150 middle school students heard Rachel's story last Wednesday in the North Quincy High School gymnasium. Members of SADD at North Quincy High School include, from left, junior Molly Donahue, sophomore Abbie Koch and senior Courtney Campo. The three opened up the presentation by welcoming speaker Patrick Nixon. SADD is a peer-to-peer educational program designed to educate students on underage drinking, drug use, impaired driving, violence, and suicide. Rachel's Challenge takes its name after 17-year-old Rachel Joy Scott, the first person to lose her life in the Columbine High School shooting on April 20, 1999.

Speaker and presenter Patrick Nixon asked how many people in the gymnasium had lost a friend or relative over the last two years and dedicated the presentation not only to the memory of Scott, but to the loved ones those in the audience had lost.

Nixon began working for Rachel's Challenge three years ago and has experience with non-profit and children's programs. He was born in Kansa City but moved to Denver, CO around the age of 10.

He said he never met Rachel but remembered the day of the shooting vividly as he was a sophomore in high school at a school not half an hour away from Columbine.

Following that tragic day, he went to visit a makeshift memorial built upon Scott's small red Acura near the school.

"It was covered with all these gifts and flowers and notes as a way to honor her and remember her life," he told students. "That image has always stuck with me."

He has since met her family who weren't even aware of all of her quiet acts of kindness until they discovered her diaries and writings following her death.

The motivational and educational program uses the "Awaken the Learner Five-step School Improvement Process" which challenges students to spread positive energy through acts of compassion and kindness.

The first of five challenges given to students was to eliminate prejudice by looking for the best in others by giving people three chances before reaching a final judgement on their character. "When you look for the worst, you're going to find it," said Nixon. "When you look for the best you're going to find that, too."

People tend to respond to our expectations of them, he added.

The second challenge was to dream big and to not limit yourself. Those dreams, he said, should be turned into life goals.

"The only thing that matters is one thing: the ability to believe in yourself," said Nixon.

The third challenge was to choose positive influences and to be a positive influence on others.

Scott, who wrote six diaries filled with poetry, illustrations, and observations, chose Anne Frank as one of her role models along with Martin Luther King, Jr.

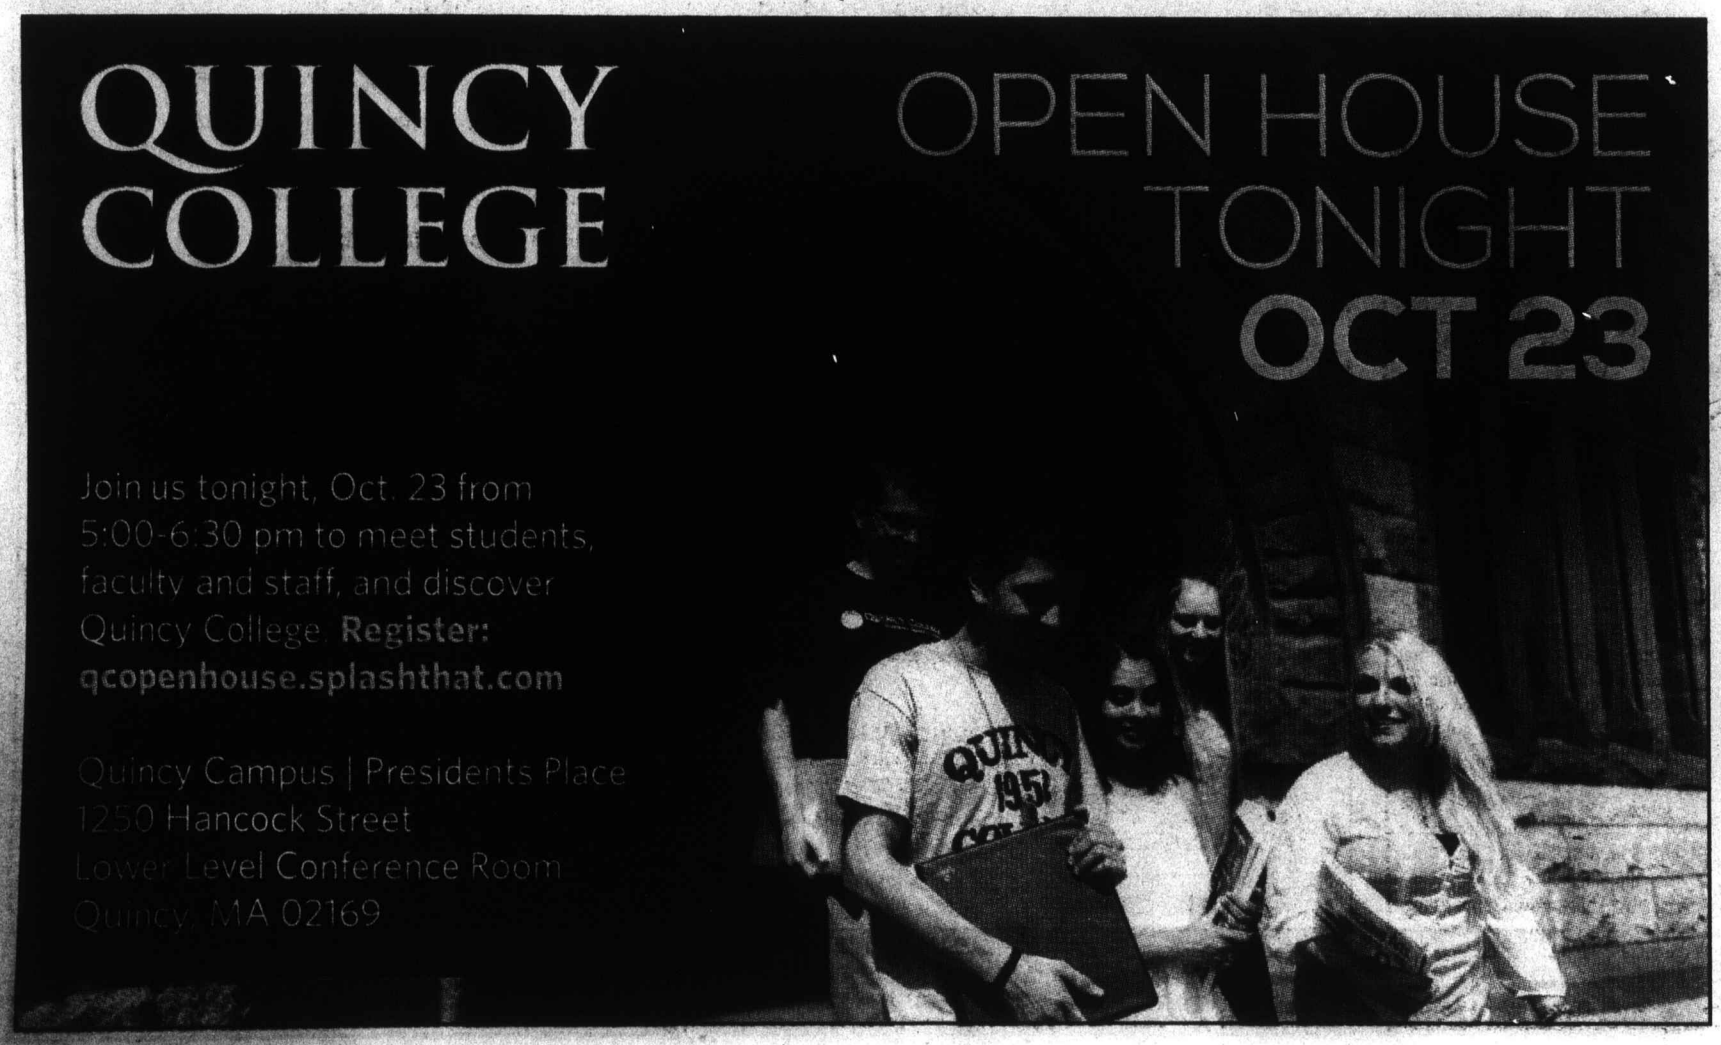

Nixon likened Frank's need to jot down her feelings in her personal journal to the writings left behind by Scott.

Frank's death in a concentration camp and Scott's death at Columbine were both a result of extreme hatred he said, noting that Klebold and Harris carried out the shooting on Adolph Hitler's birthday.

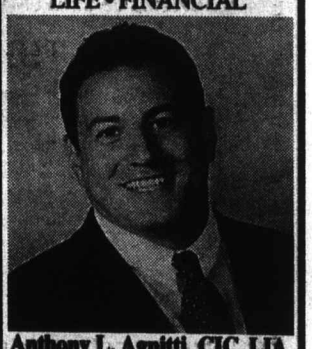

"Anne's life encouraged Rachel to follow her dreams and Anne's writing encouraged Rachel to record her own thoughts and dreams in her own diary," said Nixon.

The diary Scott had in her backpack on the day of

Provide Ferry Service To Long Island In Interim

Lynch Backs New Bridge

By SCOTT JACKSON

U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch believes Boston should build a new bridge to Long Island and provide ferry service to access the island in the interim.

Boston Mayor Martin J. Walsh closed the bridge, which connects Moon Island to Long Island, Oct. 8, citing safety concerns. The bridge has been a point of contention between Quincy and Boston for years; it can only be accessed via Squantum.

During a recent interview, Lynch (D-South Boston) said Boston should work with the MBTA to begin ferry service to the island, which is used for a homeless shelter and other non-profit facilities operated by the Boston Public Health Commission (BPHC), so people can receive services there while the bridge is closed. There is a pier on the island that could be used as a berth for a ferry.

"I think that you could probably service all the facilities out there by ferry if we reached out to the MBTA. I'm not sure what the docking facility there looks like, but I think it would be a hell of a lot cheaper in the short term if we serviced it by ferry and then did a whole analysis of the cost and reuse of that bridge," Lynch said.

"People are concerned about losing the facilities over there in terms of substance abuse and services that are being provided over there. That's why we're looking at using a ferry to move people back in forth for the time being."

Lynch, however, does not feel ferry service is a viable long-term option.

"No, I don't think it would," the congressman responded when asked if he felt ferry would be preferable in the long run.

"Obviously, if you're going to have any volume of people going there the ferry is very cumbersome and it's slow. During winter months, it's a rough, rough road. Ideally, if you're talking transportation, the bridge is the best way to go. But I think Mayor Walsh is talking about a five-year construction process. You can't just shut everything down for five years. That's why I'm suggesting a ferry in the short term."

The BPHC has reported the bridge would take five years to design, permit, and construct. Building the new bridge, the agency estimated, would cost $80 million. Boston and the state's transportation department, MassDOT, are splitting the $9 million cost to design a replacement bridge.

Long Island has remained closed to the public for years. If a new bridge is built, Lynch believes Boston officials should consider allowing the public to use the island.

"I think that's something they should consider," he said. "It's a beautiful area. I think we have to take a good, hard look about reprogramming uses out in that area. I would want to get the mayor of Quincy and the mayor of Boston together and find out what their needs and what their ideas are."

FOR THE SPORT OF IT

Essentially, the highly proficient watch known as a "chronograph" occupies the same place on wearers' wrists that sport utility vehicles inhabit in many garages. That is, although they may not often be called upon to carry out the stop-watch function at which they are adept, they certainly stand at the ready to perform. And, they look mighty attractive doing it. A chronograph's three dials measure the seconds, minutes, and hours from the instant that the "start" button is pushed, while the crown sets the time and date. Once designed solely for men, chronographs are currently all the rage with women who like to make it known that they could take it "off road" should they decide to do so.

This type of watch became popular with scientists, sportsmen and members of the military. By the 20th century it became a staple of racecar drivers and astronauts. Wearing a multifunctional chronograph watch does not mean you must compromise on style. John Paul - AAA's Car Doctor Is In

John Paul gets around.
In cars, that is.

The public affairs manager for AAA Southern New England, John is commonly known as the Car Doctor. He's worked for AAA for the past 30 years, including the last two decades as the Car Doctor.

His job includes test-driving about 50 or 60 vehicles a year. He knows he has a dream job that car enthusiasts would drool over. After all, how many of us get to drive a $71,000 spanking new Corvette Stingray convertible one week and climb behind the wheel of a $135,700 BMW i8 gull-wing hybrid the next?

Or hit the gas on a 707-horsepower Dodge Hellcat on a private race track? While your wife is saying "forget it," that experience is just another day at the office for John.

Of course, all this experience has a purpose.

John writes new car reviews, feature articles and a question and answer column in the monthly publication, AAA Horizons. If you haven't seen his name in print, then you've probably heard his voice on radio offering expert advice on the automobile industry.

John is 59 years old and lives in Abington with his wife, JoAnn.

In his familiar question and answer format, we recently sat down with John and asked him questions about his job, new cars and advice for car enthusiasts.

Question: What kind of experience do you have in the automotive industry?

Answer: "I attended a private trade school after high school to become an auto mechanic. I then went to work at a couple of different garages and ended up being a service manager. I've always believed in good communications with customers. I always thought you didn't just fix the car, you talked to the customer about what was wrong with the car and why they brought it in.

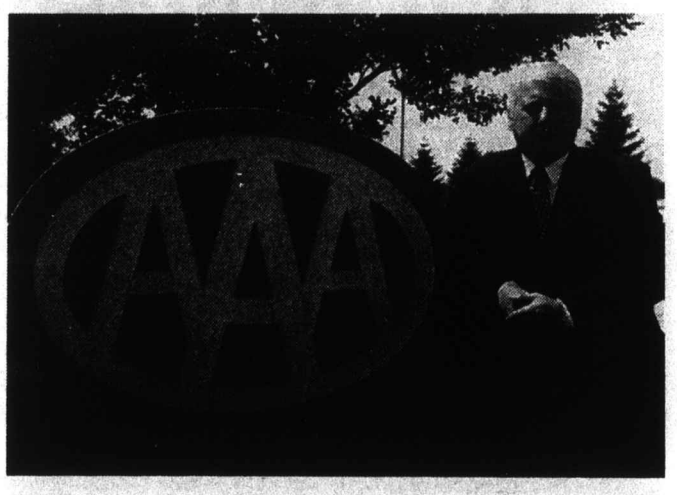

"In 1985, I applied for a job with a AAA auto diagnostics center. I turned the position down and I joked with the person that if you ever have an opening in management, give me a call. I liked the idea of explaining to people what's wrong with their car. Three or four months later, they called me back and I accepted the job. I've been there for 30 years.

"Even to this day, I still maintain my ASE master technician certification which you have to renew every five years so I try to stay up-to-date on everything automotive whether it's the nuts and bolts side of it or it's new cars. I try to stay current.

Q: What are your responsibilities as the Car Doctor?

A: "I try to give everybody as unbiased an answer as I can as to what's wrong with their car. I like to consider my job as half Consumer Reports, half consumer advocate, half next-door-neighbor that you'd ask for advice. I'm not going to tell anybody how to rebuild an engine, but I am going to tell them if it needs to be rebuilt. I like to think of myself with readers and AAA members as I'm the second opinion you should seek. When somebody tells you what's wrong with your car, give me a call and let me give you my opinion as to what I think could be wrong. Your repair shop knows a lot more about your car than I do, but maybe I can help you make the decision on what to do with your car.

"When it comes to being AAA's Car Doctor, that's what I try to be. I try to help people with their decision whether it's keep the car they have, buy a new car, repair the car they have, buy the car for their kid but try to have that discussion with them: why do you want to do this? And give them an idea of what it's going to cost. I'm just trying to give them the right information based on certain things that should be done at a certain time."

JOHN PAUL, AAA of Southern New England's Car Doctor, is s certified automobile mechanic with more than 30 years experience in the auto industry.

Q: What information do you use to offer guidance?

A: "I use a couple of third-party technical data bases. One is called Mitchell and the other is All-Data. They typically replicate the factories' service information. It's still my opinion – probably nobody knows more about your car than the factory because they built it after all – so when it comes to how a repair should be done, I'll use that. And then I'll supplement it with my own experience but also there are some other databases that are useful. I still use a thought-process to go through what could be wrong with a car and then look at that –90 percent of the time it could be one thing, but 10 percent of the time it isn't that. Let's look at what it could be. Here are some options. When it comes to repairing a car or buying a new one, my line is always "it's cheaper to fix an old car than it is to buy a new one" but sometimes you have to think you've gone as far as you can go. It's still going to be cheaper but you have to look at dependability. If you have a $6,000 car and it needs a $4,000 transmission, there has to be some really good reasons to keep that car to put that kind repair into it.

Q: What cars do you own?

A: "My wife has a PT Cruiser convertible and I drive a Hyundai Sante Fe. My wife likes convertibles – she owned a Volkswagen Cabriolet before that and really liked that car. We wanted a four-seater convertible that was front-wheel drive that had a trunk big enough to fit a beach chair. And the PT Cruiser was about the only thing that fit. I drive the Sante Fe because it's all-wheel drive and has good cargo space."

Q: Do you test drive a lot of vehicles annually?

A: "I drive between 50 and 60 cars a year. These are all press cars. They belong to the vehicle manufacturers – not dealers. They are distributed in New England from one company. They know what my audience is – they know the type of readers I have. There are times when I reach out to them. For example, GM is releasing a mid-size pick-up truck – the Colorado and Canyon – I really want to drive those trucks because they are about the only mid-size truck left. I really want to see what they did with it. One of the things is they put a diesel engine in it.

"With today's cars, there's not really any bad car anymore. It used to be cars hesitated and stalled - you don't see that anymore. Today, there are other issues with cars such as technology advancements that are so cumbersome that it's a distraction. When you have to do four things to change a radio from FM to AM, just give me a knob and a button. Some of the manufacturers are starting to listen to that.

"I get frustrated with some of the technology sometimes going to voice technology where you press a button and say one thing but it repeats another, that's aggravating. For a while everybody was paying too much attention to cup holders and 12-volt outlets. I

Scenes From Yesterday

'Old Fashioned Christmas' Parade Theme

"An Old Fashioned Christmas" submitted by Thomas O'Connor of Quincy has been chosen as the theme for the 62nd annual Quincy Christmas Parade.

O'Connor's theme was one of 30 entries submitted to the Quincy Christmas Parade Committee in the annual contest to give the traditional event a theme. The theme is central to the groups and organizations that make floats and to the school children who take part in poster contest. Both the float winner and the poster winners receive the opportunity to ride the parade route in antique automobiles on the day of the parade.

This year's parade will be held Sunday, Nov. 30th.

O'Connor is a member of the Braintree Moose Lodge that has built floats for the parade for a number of years. A retired veteran of the United States Coast Guard, he will also receive a commemorative plaque at the events annual award ceremony.

The parade committee is accepting applications from groups, schools, and organizations who would like to participate in the parade by building a float. Floats are judged and cash prizes are awarded in several categories at the conclusion of the parade.

Commercial floats my also be entered in the parade, however they are not considered for the cash awards and an entry fee is charged.

For information on group or commercial applications or to request an entry package, contact the parade committee at 617-376-1394. The number of floats accepted is limited and early entry is encouraged.

Beechwood Knoll Fall Festival A Success

On Saturday, Oct. 4th, people flocked from all over the city to come to the Beechwood Knoll's 17th Annual Fall Festival.

"People come from years' past that haven't had any students at BKS for ages to come and help out. It's like a big family reunion," said Robin Franceschini, event coordinator.

The event is organized with the intentions of all monies going back into the school to help with the aid of field trips, classroom necessities and technology that is needed for the students to learn.

"We had so many local companies help us out like the Fours of Quincy, Balducci's House of Pizza, Wollaston Ice Co., JP Fuji Group, and many others. Not to mention that DJ Neil McCole rocked it out for us during the day," Franceschini said. "I love this day seeing the families come together and having so much fun. Whether you painted a pumpkin or ate cotton candy, everyone knows when the BKS Fall Festival is in October.

The BKS PTO Board would like to thank the following sponsors:

Petition Drive Launched To Save Wollaston Golf Club

A citywide petition drive is underway to have the City Council amend the zoning ordinances to keep the Wollaston Golf Course as "open space."

The effort is spearheaded by the Montclair Men's Club and Quincy citizens who have proposed the golf club be taken over by the Metropolitan District Commission as an MDC Golf Club in order to retain the "open space."

Rep. Joseph E. Brett has already filed a new bill in the legislature asking that the MDC take over the golf course.

Quincy's drug problem has now reached the "very serious" stage according to Norfolk County District Attorney George G. Burke.

A "tremendous amount" of heroin is present in the city and is being used by teenagers. "We have a very serious problem here in Quincy," Burke declared. "Our office has been receiving numerous reports from concerned mothers and fathers and youths, too."

Burke said that he hoped that proponents of Survival, Inc. will work together with other interested parties.

WHAT'S COOKING
Marie & Suzie
By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

No Cook Fresh Tomato Sauce

By MARIE

When we were growing up, we had a garden and ate organic and didn't even know it.

One of the vegetables that was grown was the great fresh tomato, which is so versatile.

My mother would make a fresh tomato sauce so simple with fresh basil, garlic and olive oil and one that I make to this day.

This summer, I found a no cook fresh tomato sauce that was wonderful to make especially with the abundance of a garden tomato.

NO-COOK TOMATO SAUCE

2-3 large tomatoes
3 cloves of garlic
3 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons of capers (rinsed)
1 cup baby arugula
8 ounces of spaghetti
salt and pepper

Core and slightly chop the tomatoes. Set aside.

In a bowl, place the olive oil, the salt and pepper, the capers and the chopped garlic. Let marinate for about 20 minutes. Now add the tomatoes.

Cook the pasta according to the directions. Add to the marinated sauce topping it with the arugula. Toss and serve with grated cheese.

Bean & Spinach; Lentil Vegetable Soups

By SUZIE

So, it is certainly time for making some soup, since the chilly weather has started to make its way into our days!

Here is an easy, delicious, and healthy soup that you can make in no time. It's always nice to keep beans and broth in your pantry so you can make a quick soup when the days are getting cooler (and shorter!)

Beans and broths can even be found in aseptic packaging rather than cans, if you prefer. Inexpensive and important staples to have in your kitchen.

BEAN AND SPINACH SOUP

*I like Eden brand beans because they are easier to digest and the cans do not have the BPA lining that is linked to health problems.

2 cups white kidney beans (canellini), canned (or home-cooked)

2 tablespoons olive oil

1-2 cups kidney or red beans, canned (or home-cooked)

1 cup garbanzo beans (chickpeas), canned (or home-cooked)

About 3-4 cups fresh spinach, kale or escarole, washed, drained and chopped or 10-oz.frozen chopped spinach

4 cups vegetable or chicken broth

1 cup tomato sauce

1 medium onion, chopped

3 large cloves garlic, minced

2 tsp. dried basil

Sea salt and Pepper to taste

Saute onion in saucepan with olive oil until fragrant. Add garlic and basil and stir for a minute or two but do not let garlic brown.

Simply toss in everything else and combine. Let come to a boil then cover and simmer about 45 minutes. Serve hot with some parmesan cheese. Even better the next day!

LENTIL VEGETABLE SOUP

Here is a delicious and unique soup that has a lot of healthy additions to it. Loads of vegetables, lentils, and even pumpkin which makes the soup thick and delicious. Lentils are high in protein, loaded with fiber, and a great source of iron and folate. Pumpkin also is loaded with fiber as well as vitamins and minerals, including a good amount of iron, vitamin A and vitamin E. Then you add your greens in and all the other vegetables and you have a powerhouse of a soup. ENJOY!

1 onion, chopped

¼ cup olive oil

1 cup pureed organic canned pumpkin

2 carrots chopped

2 stalks celery chopped

1 red pepper, chopped

1 zucchini, chopped

3 cloves garlic minced

1 bay leaf

1 teaspoon each dried oregano and basil

2 cups dry lentils

8 cups of broth (veggie, chicken, or mushroom) organic. Imagine is a great brand

1 cup spinach or baby kale

2 tablespoons vinegar REDMONDS REAL SALT and pepper to taste

Heat oil over medium heat in large soup pot. Add veggies EXCEPT FOR SPINACH OR KALE and cook until tender. Now add garlic and herbs. Cook until fragrant but do not let garlic get browned. Now add everything else except for vinegar and greens. Bring to a boil, then cover and simmer for at least an hour. Uncover and stir in vinegar and greens and cook until they wilt. Check for seasonings and serve.

This recipe is great and freezes well also. Make enough so you can have it in a pinch. Makes a great filling soup, especially when eaten with a salad, and a serving of protein.

Lamb Meatloaf With Rosemary

By MARIE

I hope that Suzie doesn't mind me using her recipe for my column, but she gave me "permission" to do so. She had called and told me about a lamb meat loaf that she had made the night before, and it sounded so delicious.

Ground lamb is quite popular these days, and most of the supermarkets carry it. And of course with just the right seasoning as in her recipe makes all the difference.

LAMB MEAT LOAF WITH ROSEMARY

1 pound of ground lamb
1 egg
2 slices of crumbled bread
1 tablespoon Rosemary
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 cup tomato sauce
1/4 cup fresh chopped parsley
salt and pepper to taste

Mix the egg, bread, Rosemary, garlic powder, salt and pepper, the tomato sauce and parsley.

Add the lamb and mix thoroughly. Form the mixture in a roll, and place it on a slightly greased cookie sheet or parchment paper. Bake in a 350-degree oven for one hour.

Flood Map Appeal Decision Next Spring

during the Blizzard of 1978, was off by nearly five feet because FEMA used a mark recorded outside of Boston's harbor islands and not a tide gauge closer to shore. Additionally, the appeal identified areas where FEMA's reported ground elevation did not match the actual elevation.

FEMA responded to the city's appeal Aug. 26, asking three highly technical questions. Woodward & Curran responded to those questions Oct. 14. Shea was optimistic about the appeal given the nature of the FEMA's response.

"I'm quite happy to say they were very, very detailed, specific questions about detailed, specific things," Shea said. "They weren't global questions, which is always a good sign that FEMA is reviewing this appeal at a very detailed level looking at very specific pieces."

Shea said FEMA now has six months to decide on the appeal and expects an answer from the federal agency next spring. It could take up to 120 days after the decision before revised maps take effect.

Councillor Doug Gutro, who has been critical of the administration's handling of the flood maps, asked Shea how many properties would be removed from flood plains as a result of the letter of map revision. Shea anticipates somewhere between 700 and 800 properties being removed from the flood plains outright. Others would be placed into lower risk zones, meaning property owners would get a break on their flood insurance.

"I would look for 700 to 800 to be removed from the flood zone. I would also – as important if not more important – look for the level of risk for those in the flood zone to come down, meaning the flood waters are not going to be as high as FEMA is predicting them to be," Shea said. "That does impact the amount of money you pay for your insurance."

Councillor Michael McFarland asked Shea if homeowners who are removed from flood plains as a result of the appeal, or are placed in lower risk zones, would receive reimbursement for flood insurance they paid for. Shea explained that federal legislation that passed earlier provides for such reimbursement. Where that money will come from, however, is unknown.

McFarland also requested an update on how much Quincy has paid Woodard & Curran and other firms to file the appeal. Auditor Susan O'Connor indicated that she would provide that answer to McFarland at a later time.

In addition to filing a letter of map revision, Woodard & Curran partnered with Quincy's Engineering Department to obtain elevation certificates for individual property owners. As of Oct. 1, the owners of 1,584 parcels requested an elevation certificate, 1,264 of which had been processed.

Of those processed, 198 were deemed to be clearly outside of flood zones. An additional 192 parcel owners were recommended to file an individual letter of map appeal (LOMA) with FEMA to have their properties removed from the flood plain. For the remainder of those processed – 874 parcels – it was recommended that they not file a LOMA and wait for Quincy's appeal to go through, though they could still use the elevation certificate to obtain a lower flood insurance rate.

FEMA, Shea noted, also revalidated 80 previously filed letters of map appeal the day after the new maps took effect, meaning those parcels remain outside of flood plains. The owners of 67 parcels, who had been in flood plains under previous FEMA maps but had not requested an elevation certificate, were removed from flood plains when the new maps took effect.

Shea is also helping to increase Quincy's community rating, which provides a discount on flood insurance to property owners. The ratings take into account city projects to control flooding, such as sea walls and other infrastructure work.

Quincy has a rank of eight on the community rating system, meaning property owners receive a 10 percent discount on flood insurance premiums. The city is one of five communities in Massachusetts with that rating, joining Braintree, Chatham, Hull, and Scituate. Shea hopes the city will be given a rank of seven when FEMA evaluates communities next fall, based on flood control projects included in Quincy's most recent capital improvement project (CIP) bond. That would translate to a 15 percent discount on flood insurance premiums for property owners. No community in Massachusetts has a rating of seven or better.

nature of the beast, and you just work through it with the DEP and any other of the myriad of regulators that get involved in a project of this scope," Walker said.

"None of the DEP's comments change the end result of a first-class and much-needed playing field for our young people and a drainage system that will help alleviate long-standing neighborhood flooding problems that had been ignored for far too long."

Rachel Freed, the acting deputy regional director for MassDEP's Bureau of Resource Protection, said the city should seek a new notice of intent (NOI) from the Conservation Commission after the resolving ownership issues for the properties in question.

"After discussions with the applicant's consultant, who confirmed that written permission from the landowners had not been submitted with the NOI, and further, that negotiations with some of the property owners were ongoing, MassDEP has determined that a Superseding Order of Conditions denying the project should be issued," Freed wrote in a letter dated Oct. 7.

"MassDEP recommends that the applicant file a new Notice of Intent with the Quincy Conservation Commission after all land ownership issues have been resolved."

Freed's letter to the city also cited technical problems with the original notice of intent that should be addressed in a new filing. The city, she said, should seek a review from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to determine if a water quality certificate is needed from the state and provide additional details on the proposed stormwater design, among other reasons.

Koch unveiled his plans for the $12 million project, which includes renovations to Teel Field, the creation of a new 157-parking lot, and new retaining ponds to address flooding problems, during a public meeting last winter at North Quincy High. The City Council approved the project in an 8-0 vote in June; Councillor Doug Gutro was not present at that meeting.

Since then, the city has finalized the purchase of six of the nine Hunt Street and Newbury Avenue homes it plans to raze to make way for the project. Quincy has paid a combined $2.945 million for those properties, according to the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds' database.

Former Mayor William Phelan, an attorney representing Lawrence and Vicki Tasney at 30 Hunt St., told The Sun Oct. 6 that the family never intended to sell their house and just wants to stay in their home.

Koch has said he would not use eminent domain to force the Tasneys out of that home, and would build the project around the site if needed. Joseph Ferson, a spokesman for MassDEP, would not say Oct. 13 whether or not the project could go forward without the Tasneys' approval if the project were redesigned around their property. He said that was only a hypothetical question at this point.

BJ's Gas Station To Open At 30 Liberty St. By Year End

By KRIS KALABOKAS

BJ's Wholesale Club will be opening a 12-pump gas station at 30 Liberty St. by the end of the year, according to project managers despite members of the public voicing concerns that the project would result in an increase in traffic in the area.

"We are very cognizant of the fact that we have residents in the surrounding area," said Josh Swerling, a senior project manager with Bohler Engineering during a recent meeting of the Board of License Commissioners.

Six fuel dispensers will allow 12 vehicles to gas up at once at the station located off of Burgin Parkway.

BJ's Wholesale Club's retail store is located at 200 Crown Colony Dr., about a three-minute-drive from the site.

Attendants will direct cars to fuel dispensers, preventing them from blocking or idling in the entrance he said. The station will be completely self-serve and one to three attendants will be available to assist patrons during operating hours.

One-way traffic flow to and from pumps will also be maintained by attendants.

"We are sensitive towards the neighbors as it relates to site lighting as well," added Swerling. "We have LED site light fixtures proposed which allows us to provide direction to the illumination that we're providing so that it's all downward directed and out into the site, not allowing spillage along the perimeter and off the property."

John Dzwonczyk, an engineer with JGD Associates, said that the site could hold about 25 cars at once without causing vehicle spillover onto the street.

Vapor recovery systems will ensure no smell of gasoline leaves the area, he added.

Above ground diesel will be stored for use by a backup generator.

"This gas station will be able to run during a total power outage. The backup generator will be able to run the entire station," said rep-

Songs On Letters Of John, Abigail Adams Saturday At Adams Park

Performance At 3 P.M. At The Carriage House

The prestigious, Boston-based Lydian Quartet, acclaimed mezzo soprano Clara Osowski, and celebrated baritone Paul Tipton will perform the world premiere of James Kallembach's Songs on Letters of John and Abigail Adams at Adams National Historical Park at 3 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 25 as part of the weekend-long 250th Wedding Celebration of John and Abigail Adams.

The operatic work draws on letters between John and Abigail to create seven songs for mezzo-soprano, baritone, and string quartet.

The Lydian Quartet has commissioned and championed many new works, such as their "American Originals" project, in which they performed or recorded over 60 new American works in a five-year period. They have won ensemble prizes at many international competitions, including the prestigious Naumburg Award for Chamber Music.

James Kallembach has written extensively for the voice, with a substantial catalogue of choral pieces, song cycles, and his St. John Passion. Many recent projects explore the emotional content of American history and identity, especially in marginalized populations, as in his 2011 settings of Puritan Anne Bradstreet's poetry, Eleven Songs On Poems Of Anne Bradstreet, which, since its premiere, has been performed more than 25 times in 16 cities (including Boston) in seven US states and Canada (Banff), demonstrating the impact of these historic narratives combined with Kallembach's mesmerizing music.

A tireless advocate for composers, Kallembach is an accomplished conductor, bringing new music to audiences as both organizer and performer, commissioning and conducting the premiere of works by William Bolcom, James MacMillan, Shulamit Ran, and Sven-David Sandström, alongside emerging composers.

Patricia Bridgman portrays the redoubtable Abigail Adams at Adams National Historical Park and at venues throughout New England. Bridgman, as the incomparable Mrs. Adams, will engage the audience by providing compelling original narrative throughout the performance that further illuminates this timeless correspondence.

'Story Of Jessie Ewing Glasgow, Jr' At Historical Society Oct. 30

University of Massachusetts Boston history professor Julie Winch will discuss her research into the life of Jesse Ewing Glasgow, Jr., at a Quincy Historical Society program, Thursday, Oct. 30 at 7 p.m. at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center.

Glasgow's story is one of living in two very different societies and of maintaining purpose and integrity while facing death. Born in Philadelphia in 1838, Glasgow grew up a free African American in a nation that accepted African slavery. As a young man in the 1850s, he moved to Scotland and attended the University of Edinburgh. On a return visit to Philadelphia in 1859, he was in demand as a speaker for anti-slavery groups.

In 1860, knowing he was fatally ill, he returned to Scotland and wrote the first full account and explanation of John Brown's recent raid, trial, and execution to be intended for a British audience.

Drawing on Glasgow's writings, Professor Winch will examine Glasgow's experiences, his complex relationships with both America and Scotland, and the talent and potential that was cut short by his death.

This program is co-sponsored with the St. Andrew's Society of Massachusetts and the Scots Charitable Society of Boston.

Everyone is welcome to attend. There is no admission charge.

the shooting had a single bullet hole in it. The bullet that passed through that diary ultimately passed through her body.

On the back of the diary, Scott had written in large letters "I won't be labeled as average."

The fourth challenge was to speak to others with kindness and not cruelty.

"Your words have the power to hurt and your words have the power to heal," he said.

Nixon asked students to reflect on a time when someone criticized or made fun of them and to remember how they felt in that moment.

Clips were shown of Scott's brother Craig who was in the library during the shooting and narrowly escaped harm himself.

His friend, 16-year-old Isaiah Shoels, was one of the few African-American students at the school. Craig, who was crouching underneath a table with Shoels, said that the shooters hurled racial slurs at him before shooting and killing him.

"[Craig] watched as his friend Isaiah was accosted with racial slurs in the last few seconds of his life," said Nixon.

"They took my sister who had a lot of potential and she had a lot of dreams and a lot of passion," said Craig as he tried to hold back tears. "She made a difference in a lot of people's lives, and they killed her."

Nixon closed the presentation by asking students to start their own chain reaction by thinking of those they care about and, in the following three days, telling them that they were loved and appreciated.

This was their final challenge.

Students were then urged to sign a Rachel's Challenge banner available at their school, to make a pledge to promote kindness, and to eliminate their own prejudices.

The program was created by Scott's father and stepmother, Darrell and Sandy Scott not long after the shooting in 1999.

Over 21 million people have heard their daughter's message so far and an additional two million people are touched by her compassion each year.

In the last three years, over 500 emails have been sent to Rachel's Challenge from students who saw the presentation and sought help for themselves due to suicidal or violent thoughts said Nixon.

George and Laura Bush, Bill and Hillary Clinton, Elton John, and Glenn Close have all endorsed Rachel's Challenge and Bill Cosby helped jump-start Rachel's Challenge in the state of Georgia.

Chuck Norris — a supporter of the program — dedicated his autobiography in Rachel's memory and he and his wife Gena have become good friends with the Scott family.

Rachel's Challenge has also partnered with the Cal Ripken, Sr. Foundation, an organization dedicated to serving disadvantaged young people by teaching them respect, leadership skills, and teamwork through sports and physical activity.

The presentation was sponsored by the North Quincy High School chapter of Students Against Destructive Decisions (SADD) and held with monetary assistance from the Rural Lodge of Masons and the Quincy Rotary Club.

Nixon said people have approached him with tears streaming down their face following the presentation.

"Every time, there are students who come up to me afterwards who tell me just how much Rachel has impacted them," he said.

A picture was shown during the presentation of an outline of Scott's hand that she had drawn on the back of her dresser at the age of 13. Inside the outline she wrote "these hands belong to Rachel Joy Scott and will someday touch millions of people's hearts."

It was true said Nixon. Through her positive writings and kindness towards others, Scott had managed to do just that.

need of immediate repair. Another report issued on April 30 following a reinspection outlined operational issues such as poor communication between the maintenance department and the authority as well as physical condition concerns such as exposed electrical wiring, holes in walls, improperly stored combustibles, mold and mildew, and in one case raw sewage from a unit's bathroom leaking through the floor and onto a tenant's stove in the unit below.

Officials from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) stepped in to inspect federally-owned housing authority properties and units in July.

The person, who will be titled the Director of Inspections, will be working for the newly created Division of Inspections.

"We're not exactly sure how many people we're going to need because in addition to the regular job responsibilities of a property manager, now we'll be asking them to do inspections," said Lydon.

He added that anyone considered for the position would need "heavy-duty housing authority experience."

The authority, he said, began drafting an employment listing two weeks ago but he didn't know when it would be completed nor did he know when it would be made publicly available to applicants.

He clarified that property managers do inspections when issues are brought to their attention, however the Director of Inspections will be tasked with inspecting 100 percent of all units on an annual basis.

Lydon is hopeful to have the position filled in the next 30 days. "I've got to go to DHCD and talk to DHCD and get their approval as well," he said. "We're currently working on a job description."

"I think historically we have suffered from the fact that modernization and maintenance were on the same level with no one above that and it allowed a lot of discretion by employees who are no longer here," said Lydon, alluding to former maintenance manager David Ferris, who was put on paid administrative leave July 9 and ultimately handed in his resignation on Sept. 12.

It was revealed earlier this year that incompetent maintenance management led to unsafe and unsanitary living conditions for housing authority tenants.

Orders sent to the maintenance department dating back to 2008 were found that were either ignored or flagged as low priority by Ferris.

He also knowingly signed off on work orders that were never completed, said Lydon.

Ferris held the $75,000 per year position for over 10 years and managed roughly 50 maintenance workers.

"My concern is that all the problems we've had have come from poor rules, poor communication, and no accountability," said Commissioner Thomas Lynn.

Lydon said that historically, from an organizational perspective the authority was set up to fail.

The appointment of the Director of Operations must be approved by the board he said.

resenting attorney Christopher Harrington.

Over 125 plantings are proposed by developer D.J. McKinnon, which will provide a buffer zone between residential neighborhoods along both Penn and Quincy Street and the fueling station.

The lot entrance will remain at its current location on Liberty Street.

Members and non-members will be able to purchase gas. Non-members will pay a few cents extra per gallon.

No food, lottery, or tobacco will be sold on-site, however customers will be able to purchase BJ's memberships before or after they fill their tanks.

"You're going to have a traffic problem there anyways no matter what you do," said Rosemarie Martin of Penn Street. "I look out my window at four o'clock in the afternoon and I watch traffic backed up on the Burgin Parkway...it's just backed up the whole way.

"You're going to have a mess at rush hour in the morning and at night."

Martin said that a triangular island at the intersection of Penn and Quincy Street could pose a problem for gas delivery tankers.

"The curb on the side of 20 Penn St. is so beat up the city gave up putting signs up. They get knocked over as soon as they got up. The trucks can't make the corner," she said.

Fire Chief Joseph Barron, who noted that he had seen himself damage to the curb, said the situation would need to be rectified.

Swerling said that BJ's has control over the direction their fuel delivery vehicles approach a site.

"The fuel delivery companies will get a delivery card that gives them specific instructions on how to approach a facility...we have the ability to direct the vehicles to come down southerly on Liberty and enter by taking a left-hand turn into the site," he said.

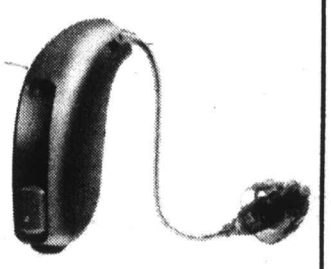

McKinnon added that if required, developers would address and rectify any issues involving the island.

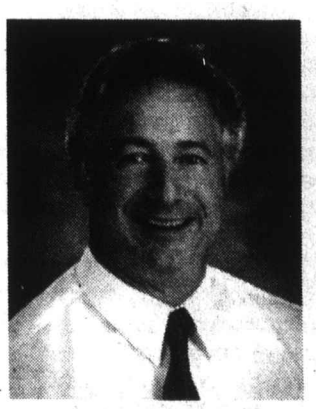

Fuel deliveries will take place during off-peak, operating hours to ensure that an attendant will be on site to supervise deliveries.

The station will operate between 6:30 a.m. and 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 6:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Sundays.

Lynch: Broader Training Needed For Ebola Response

Congressman Also Comments On ISIS Threat, November Elections

By SCOTT JACKSON

U.S. officials overstated the country's ability to handle a potential Ebola outbreak and first responders and healthcare providers need more training on how to combat the deadly virus, U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch said in a recent interview.

The South Boston Democrat commented on the Ebola crisis during an hour-long interview. He also touched on a number of other topics, including the ISIS situation in the Middle East, the upcoming midterm and gubernatorial elections, Boston's anticipated bid to host a future Olympic games, and new legislation that would affect Quincy and other communities Lynch represents.

"I think we may have out-of-the-box overstated the response that we have and I think we've overstated the unlikelihood that there could be a problem here in the United States," Lynch said when asked for his opinion on how the White House responded to the Ebola pandemic.

"The fact of the matter is recently in West Africa there had been some policy changes that directly affect us. For a while they had a containment policy in all three countries – Liberia, Guinea, and Sierra Leone. But now because Sierra Leone only has about 100 isolation beds and about 1,400 afflicted patients, they've changed their policy publicly. They've now turned to giving gloves and smocks and masks out to the general public and they're having them treat their family members at home. They're no longer doing containment.

"The [Centers for Disease Control and Prevention] has re-assessed what the population may be in terms of those infected with Ebola. Because of that explosion, and we've got probably a worse problem in Liberia, then you could have thousands of people getting on planes trying to escape that – mostly to Europe but obviously some to the United States and maybe to Central and South America.

"That changes the whole efficacy of our responses. So this idea that we have a SWAT team, a rapid response SWAT team – that would not be able to handle what we might experience here. So I think they have to have a broader training protocol so we get our nurses trained up and we get our EMS – fire, EMTS, police – trained up on Ebola response."

The U.S. is currently screening passengers arriving on international flights from three affected West African nations, – Guinea, Liberia, and Sierra Leone – at five airports. Those airports – located in New York City; Newark, N.J.; Atlanta; Chicago; and a Washington, D.C., suburb – were chosen because they handle more than 94 percent of travelers arriving from the West African nations in question.

Lynch said that screening might not be effective, as it partially depends on airport workers checking for fever, which can be masked using readily available antipyretic drugs such as acetaminophen. He suggested a holding period for persons leaving those countries on international flights.

"You do have the ability to mask fever by even Tylenol, but if you had a holding period two or three hours before you're allowed to board a flight from those countries you could be more effective at screening them," Lynch said.

More than 4,400 people have died from Ebola in the three affected West African Nations, according to the World Health Organization. There have been more than 8,000 reported cases of Ebola in those nations. At the current rate, the CDC has stated there could be upwards of 1.4 million cases of Ebola in those countries by Jan. 20, 2014. Given the increasing amount of cases, Lynch said federal officials should put restrictions in place on flights to Guinea, Liberia, and Sierra Leone.

"We're there already," the congressman responded when asked if there would be a point where the U.S. should restrict flights to and from the three countries.

"Not a complete ban, but travel restrictions so that you put – like I said, you've got to have a three-hour observation for people trying to get on flights. I think you've got to put the restrictions on and it has to be almost a quarantine-type arrangement. I know it will be cumbersome, but if we're going to allow healthcare workers to go in and out of there we've got to make sure we've got a tight lid on it.

"So yes, I think there is time for restrictions right now. Not a complete ban, but darn close. Even if you had a complete ban, you would want to have healthcare workers going back and forth. You need to have some flow."

Lynch also noted any such restrictions enacted by the U.S. would have to be done in concert with similar restrictions by other countries. Travellers bound for the U.S. from Africa, he explained, often make connecting flights in European airports.

The interview with Lynch came after two nurses who treated an Ebola patient at a Dallas hospital contracted the virus. The second nurse reportedly received permission from CDC to fly on a commercial flight while she was being monitored for signs of Ebola. Lynch called

Salem Witch Trials Topic At Crane Library Oct. 28

Rory O'Brien, author of the novel Gallows Hill will speak at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy, Tuesday, Oct. 28 at 7 p.m.

O'Brien is a licensed tour guide in Salem and will offer insight on the Salem Witch Trials of 1692, one of the most infamous, and least-understood, episodes in American history. VOICE FOR HEALTH

PIRIFORMIS SYNDROME

"Piriformis syndrome" is a condition involving the piriformis muscle, a small muscle located deep in the buttock (behind the gluteus maximus). When the piriformis muscle irritates the nearby sciatic nerve, it can cause buttock pain, spasms, and tingling along the back of the leg and into the foot that is similar to sciatic pain. While an accurate diagnosis can be elusive, it is often the case that irritation of the sacroiliac joint or hip can lead to spasm of the piriformis muscle. If so, chiropractic treatment involving manipulation of these joints may provide pain relief. Similarly, chiropractic treatment often proves to be effective when buttock and leg pain and weakness result from impingement of the sciatic nerve from other causes.

A serious inability to sit without severe buttock pain and / or Sciatica is a big red flag as far as Piriformis Syndrome is concerned. The symptoms of Piriformis Syndrome usually begin as a deep aching. Most people see a chiropractor because they're in pain. The result is that FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC can help in the management of your pain. Call us today at 617.472.4220 for a simple spinal evaluation. Manet Providing Updates, Info On Ebola

By SCOTT JACKSON

ManetCommunityHealth Center has been working to keep its patients and other community residents up to date on the Ebola virus.

Manet, a non-profit that operations locations in Quincy, Hull, and Taunton, provides care for more than 17,000. Since the start of the Ebola outbreak in three West African nations – Liberia, Guinea, and Sierra Leone – Manet has been working to provide its patients and community members with as much information as possible on the virus.

"Our goal is to educate, ease anxieties, end the myths surrounding Ebola, tell people what to do if they're afraid or if they think they have it," John Holiver, Manet's chief executive, said in a recent phone interview.

Manet has done so through social media and updates on their website. Manet's navigators, staff members who generally help people within the community sign up for MassHealth or the Commonwealth Connector, have been performing outreach within the community to keep residents updated on Ebola.

"They're educating the public on what Ebola is about, how to take precautions, and what to do if someone presents with symptoms," Holiver said.

People who present with Ebola-like symptoms, Holiver explained, would be referred to a hospital. Manet's facilities are not equipped to put a patient with Ebola symptoms into isolation, but staff members are prepared to deal with that possibility.

"Our emergency team is on high alert should someone present at a location with symptoms of Ebola," Holiver said.

More than 4,400 have died from Ebola in West Africa, according to the World Health Organization. More than 8,000 cases have been reported. Ebola has also killed one man in the U.S., who contracted the virus while overseas and was admitted to a hospital in Dallas. Two nurses who treated the man later contracted Ebola.

No cases have been reported in Massachusetts, though a Braintree health center was evacuated when a man who recently returned from West Africa arrived and complained of a headache and body aches. Boston health officials later determined the man did not fit the criteria for being considered at high risk for Ebola.

Bill Perez Senior VP Of Human Resources

Commonwealth Care Alliance, a nonprofit care delivery system providing integrated health care and related social support services for people with complex needs, has hired Bill Perez of Quincy as senior vice president of human resources.

Perez will oversee the development, implementation and monitoring of all human resource policies and programs including talent management, recruiting and on-boarding, employee relations, compensation and benefits, human resource information systems and technology, retirement planning, and other related issues.

Perez most recently worked as assistant secretary of transportation for human resources for the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) and Massachusetts Department of Transportation (MassDOT), where he designed, developed and implemented new revitalized HR systems and processes.

Lynch: No U.S. Ground Troops In Iraq To Fight ISIS

that report troubling.

"That was a collapse of protocol. As I understand the facts, she was in direct contact with the patient in Dallas. She had self-reported, self-tested. She had an elevated temperature, headaches, muscle aches – some of the precursors of Ebola – called the CDC and they directed her to travel," Lynch said.

"That's a problem. When a nurse self-reports – she was doing the right thing and I don't know where the failure occurred, but it occurred. That's troubling. So now we have a scramble going on to try and locate all the passengers on that plane and everyone she came in contact with."

The House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, of which Lynch is a member, will be convening tomorrow (Friday) for a hearing on the Ebola situation in Dallas. Among those scheduled to attend is CDC Director Thomas Frieden.

ISIS

Lynch, who will become the ranking Democrat on the national security subcommittee of the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform during the next session of Congress, completed a trip to Iraq and Turkey earlier this month.

While in the Middle East, he met with leaders of the Kurdish and Syrian groups the U.S. and its allies are equipping to fight the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria (ISIS). America and the allied nations have also launched airstrikes against ISIS.

Lynch, who was one of only two Bay State congressmen who voted in favor of arming the Syrian rebels, said the U.S. should not commit ground troops to the region. The U.S., he noted, spent $24 billion from 2003-2011 to train 938,000 Iraqis.

"There are enough Iraqi boots on the ground to fight this fight if they're willing to do so. It's not a lack of ability; it's a lack of willingness. They would just as well sit back and have the U.S. come in there, have our sons and daughters fight that fight, and deliver their country to them," Lynch said.

"You think they would be motivated because their families are at risk. Their villages would be taken over. Their wives and daughters are being taken into slavery, basically, and the men of their villages are being beheaded. They're being forced to convert into this brand of conservative, somewhat of a Wahhabis Muslim ideology. You'd think the motivation would be there within the Shia community and within the moderate Sunni community to go ahead and fight, but we haven't seen it yet."

Lynch expressed confidence in the Kurdish Peshmerga fighters the U.S. is equipping to take on ISIS in Iraq. The Kurds have worked with the U.S. since the start of the Iraq War in 2003.

"There is a long history there, since 2003, of working with the Kurds and the Peshmerga. We have found them to be very competent in terms of military capabilities. We have found them to be very sensitive to ethnic minorities and religious minorities. They protect them. They allow them to practice their own religion," Lynch explained.

"So I think our money is well spent in that regard, but we've got to get them the weapons. Right now, the weapons are going in through Baghdad and I have some real misgivings about that because it's not a great relationship between Erbil, which is the Kurdish capital, and Baghdad. We've got to work that through."

The congressman is less confident in the Syrian opposition forces – known as the Free Syrian Army – being brought together to fight ISIS in that country.

"I'm a little bit unsure of their credibility at this point. I saw some things there – these groups, some of them won't sit in the same room with each other. They only seem to come together to fight against ISIS," Lynch said.

"Somebody asked me how confident I feel about that group, and I said on a scale from one to ten I'm about a three. I'm not sure our retraining and equipping efforts are going to be successful there, based on what we've got going on right now. But it's early, I could be persuaded.

"The Free Syrian Army is still an unknown quantity. It really doesn't exist yet. It's just all these disparate groups. They're responding similarly, but they're not responding together.

"The other problem we have is most of these groups in the Free Syrian Army have been dislodged from their homes and their villages, especially around Aleppo, by Bashar al-Assad, the incumbent regime in Damascus. So they want to get him. We want them to fight ISIS."

November's Elections

When asked about the upcoming midterm elections and the race for control of the U.S. Senate, Lynch noted recent polling has shown Republicans picking up seven seats, which would give the GOP 52 senators.

One of the closest Senate contests is in neighboring New Hampshire, where incumbent Democrat Jeanne Shaheen, a former governor of the state, is being challenged by Republican Scott Brown, who previously represented Massachusetts in the Senate. Lynch anticipates Shaheen being re-elected Nov. 4

"It's interesting. Shaheen is very tough. She has a good organization there. She's got a solid record. I know she's not originally from New Hampshire, but she's been there so long people have sort of adopted her," he explained.

"I think it's going to be incredibly close. The polls have all been within the margin of error, the ones that I've read. But I would say, based on the power of incumbency, Shaheen probably has a slight advantage up there."

Lynch has not endorsed either candidate – Democratic Attorney General Martha Coakley or Republican Charlie Baker – vying to be elected the Bay State's next governor Nov. 4. Just weeks away, that race appears to be a dead heat.

"I think it might rest on turn out," Lynch replied when asked what factors would determine who would win the election.

"I think the economy has been a real concern for people and I think that probably helps Charlie Baker's campaign because he is seen as a good manager; he's got a record of that.

"I think, unfairly perhaps, what is going on in Washington may be negatively affecting Martha Coakley's campaign and her ability to win over some of the unenrolled and moderates. People don't like what they're seeing.

"Unfortunately there is a sort of negative halo effect for Democrats all over in terms of how the Democrats in the White House are handling Ebola, ISIS, and any number of crises – immigration, tax reform. Unfortunately, the party in power in the White House usually suffers a negative consequence when things aren't going well. I think that's the case now."

Boston Olympics

Boston is one of four American cities – along with Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Washington, D.C. – on a shortlist to bid to host the 2024 Summer Olympics. The potential bid is being championed by John Fish, the CEO of Suffolk Construction, and is supported by other businessmen, including former Gov. Mitt Romney and New England Patriots owner Robert Kraft.

Lynch believes Boston could successfully host the Olympics, but should only do so if the city were able to gain enough long-term benefits, such as dorms for colleges and a new stadium to replace aging White Stadium in Jamaica Plain.

"I think it could be done. It would probably be a Greater Boston Olympics; I don't think they could accommodate everything within the city. There would be a role for Quincy to play, if they chose. If we did this, we could do a very good job," Lynch said.

We have to try and do a good cost benefit analysis as to what would be left afterwards and what are the benefits going to be. I know there are some colleges and universities in the area that are thinking about dormitory construction. Is there a way to use the proceeds from the Olympics to create these dormitories on campuses that would be able to host the Olympic village and places for the athletes to come in? Then you would have those dormitories available for students afterwards, so there would be a positive result for those colleges.

"I know they're talking about redoing a stadium. White Stadium in Boston is an old schoolboy stadium in a beautiful area but really worn and it hasn't been kept up. Can we revisit that so the city of Boston would have a brand new spanking stadium for their high school sports? That would be a good residual benefit for the city of Boston after it's done.

"I know they've got John Fish – he's a really smart guy. He's a friend. He's got a pretty good team looking at it. But we would have to have enough of those lingering residual benefits to make it worthwhile. There is a right way to do this. We just have to find that way."

New Legislation

Lynch said he is working with his fellow members of Congress to see if flood insurance legislation that passed earlier this year could be amended to extend subsidies to people who own second homes on the water.

"We want to look at whether or not we can provide greater protection to those who have second homes. A lot of those people have had those homes for 20, 30, 40 years," he stated. "If you lose your second home, that's not a good thing either. That hurts the real estate industry in the South Shore, the Cape and the islands. It has a real drag on the economy."

The congressman would also like to provide federal money for Quincy's transportation needs – including a new Quincy Center transit station – if Congress passes a new transportation funding bill. Such a bill has not been passed; continuing resolutions have been used to provide funding for ongoing projects but not new ones.

"If we do a sizeable piece it will give me the opportunity to plug in some money for Quincy. But we just haven't done anything. We keep kicking the can down the road for six months and there is no new money," Lynch said.

"The Republicans were saying they would look at it again on the House side after the election so we'll see if we can get something done in lame duck [session]."

Lynch added that he hoped to be able to provide billions of dollars, in multiple transportation bills, to address Quincy's needs.

"Billions if it was possible," he responded when asked how much he would like to earmark for the city.

"It might take multiple budgets to do that but I think the need is there, between rail, roadways, the mayor has some big plans for Quincy Center. There is also some basic infrastructure we need – flood control infrastructure, things that are not glamorous but basic to some of the [neighborhoods]. Houghs Neck – there is some older infrastructure there, some of the sea walls.

"There is a lot of need. Quincy is an older city. I'm sure the mayor could give me a laundry list that could exceed a billion dollars."

Lynch is also working on new legislation, which would benefit veterans returning home from active duty who are hired to work in the federal government. Those employees currently receive no paid sick time during their first year of work in the federal government. Lynch's bill would give them 104 hours paid sick time, equal to the amount federal employees receive after one year on the job.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, October 13, 2014, at approximately 6:10 p.m., Officer James Cassidy and his K9 partner Khiya, a trained and certified narcotics detection dog, were patrolling the West Quincy area when they were dispatched to the area of Water Street and Brook Road after a convenience store was robbed at knife point. One of the suspects was soon apprehended and arrested.

At approximately 8:15 p.m., Officer Cassidy was traveling north on Copeland Street directly behind a small white two door sedan. The vehicle had bold dark tint on the rear and side windows making it difficult to see inside the vehicle. There appeared to be an out of state license plate attached to the rear, however the Officer was unable to see which state the vehicle was registered to. A black after market bracket was secured to the top section of the plate obstructing the view of the state.

Officer Cassidy activated his lights and sirens and attempted to stop this vehicle as it turned left from Copeland Street onto Furnace Brook Parkway. The vehicle maintained its speed without stopping or slowing down until it approached the entrance to the Mobil gas station, where it slowed and appeared to be turning into the parking lot. The vehicle suddenly turned left onto Miller Street and back in the direction of Copeland Street.

Once on Miller Street, the vehicle pulled over. Once the vehicle stopped and the Officer was about to radio QPD Communications, the passenger door opened and a male stepped out and began to walk away. For safety concerns, the Officer exited his cruiser, ordered the passenger back in the vehicle and then radioed QPD Communications and requested assistance. Officer Paul Murphy arrived on scene moments later.

Still not knowing how many occupants were inside the vehicle due to the dark tint, the Officers approached the passenger side of the vehicle and used his flashlight to see four occupants in the vehicle. None of the occupants were wearing seat belts. The driver said he was not aware that the Officer was trying to stop him. The driver gave the Officer his driver's license and registration, claiming the vehicle belonged to his uncle.

With the intentions of issuing citations to the passengers for no seat belts, the Officer requested identification from each of them. None of the passengers were able to produce an ID. The front seat passenger was asked for his name, date of birth, and age. As he gave this information, his date of birth and age did not match up. The 20 year old avoided eye contact and appeared to be very nervous, with his right hand shaking. The right rear passenger gave his name and the Officers immediately recognized him from past dealings involving drug offenses and past firearm convictions. The left rear passenger also provided his information. Officer Andrew Keenan arrived on scene for assistance.

LT. DAN MINTON

As Officers Murphy and Keenan kept an eye on the occupants of the vehicle, Officer Cassidy checked the license plate on the vehicle, which was registered out of Mississippi. Communications informed the Officers that the driver's license was suspended and the vehicle was registered. Due to the fact that the front passenger attempted to walk away, the fact he provided a conflicting age and date of birth, no identification, coupled with his unusually high level of nervousness, the Officer requested Communications check his information. Communications stated that the front passenger had a number of firearm violations on his record and a suspended driver's license. Communications informed the Officers that three of the four occupants had firearms charges on their record and all of their driver's licenses were suspended.

Since no one could drive, a tow was requested for the vehicle. At this point, all occupants were removed from the vehicle. Schlager's Towing arrived and per department policy an inventory search of the vehicle was conducted prior to the tow. During this inventory search of the rear floor area on the driver's side, Officer Cassidy found a silver semi-automatic handgun under the driver's seat.

At this point, Officers Murphy and Keenan placed each individual into custody. The driver was given his Miranda rights and the Officer then demanded to see a License to Carry Firearms, which he could not produce. This procedure happened for all the occupants but no one had the required License to Carry Firearms. All four were charged with unlawful possession of the firearm.

The following factors lead Officer Cassidy to believe that all four occupants were aware of the firearm in the vehicle. The driver dictated the location of the stop, which ended up being a dimly lit section of Miller Street. Once stopped, the actions of the front passenger, attempting to distance himself from the vehicle and its occupants, or possibly attempting to draw the Officer's attention towards him and away from the vehicle, were all factors. The firearm was a loaded Raven Arms Model MP-.25 and the serial number had been filed away and sanded flat. The driver was charged with, "Obstructed License Plate, Failure to Stop for Police, Failure to Wear Safety Belt, Operating after Suspension, Illegal Possession of a Firearm, Illegal Possession of Ammunition, and Possession of Firearm w/ Defaced Serial Number."

The front passenger was charged with, "Failure to Wear Safety Belt, Illegal Possession of a Firearm, Subsequent Offense, Illegal Possession of Ammunition, Possession of Firearm w/ Defaced Serial Number. The rear passengers were both charged with, "Failure to Wear Safety Belt, Illegal Possession of a Firearm, Subsequent Offense, Illegal Possession of Ammunition, Possession of Firearm w/ Defaced Serial Number. All four suspects were from Boston and in the early 20's. Nice Work!

Ask The Secretary Of Interior

By BARBARA GRACEFFA

Question: Can you help me decipher all the different paint sheens for interior walls? Robyn

Dear Robyn,

Yes, it can be confusing. To make matters worse, the sheens can vary from one manufacturer to another. For example Benjamin Moore has six interior sheens – flat/matte, eggshell, pearl, satin, semi-gloss, and high gloss, while California Paints has separate flat and matte and also a velvet flat finish.

Let's concentrate on the four basics: flat, eggshell, semi-gloss, and gloss. Flat is least reflective and therefore a good choice for walls with slight blemishes; use on ceiling or low-traffic areas like living and dining rooms, or an adult bedroom. Eggshell, easier to clean and more durable, creates a soft polished, subtle shine and is a great choice for low- and medium-traffic areas including a hallway, child's room, or family room. Semi-gloss and satin have similar properties; they offer a shiny, smooth finish and are scrubbable and stain-resistant. This sheen is more versatile for all rooms including high-traffic and high humidity rooms like kitchens, laundry rooms, and bathrooms. Semi-gloss is also a perfect choice for interior trim. Finally, a gloss finish provides extreme durability and washability and provides a noticeably shinier luster. Choose gloss when painting doors and trim, cabinets, and floors.

A few final words … First, always rely on the advice of a professional. Paint store owners can suggest not only the right sheen, but the proper brushes and rollers for each project as well. Second, don't underestimate the need for a primer or, nowadays, for only $3 more per quart, a paint and primer in one. Third, if you find a color offered by one manufacturer but prefef another brand, most paint stores have all the formulas in their computers. Finally, buy the most expense paint you can afford; you'll never be disappointed. Some paints simply have more hue (or color) in them. If you go for a bargain brand, you'll end up spending more time on more coats that might not last as long as a major brand. For the past two years in a row, Consumer Reports has named Behr (from Home Depot) as their top paint.

Question: Is it OK to have living room furniture without a sofa? Marie-Claire

Dear Marie-Claire,

Absolutely! In fact, depending on your room size, it might be your only option. I also find it more interesting. I have designed living rooms with two loveseats or even four club chairs encircling a round coffee table. Be daring; think outside the box.

Fall Automotive Care

Ask John Paul: AAA's Car Doctor

QUESTION: How often should automotive fluids be changed, if at all? I don't mean oil; I'm talking about power steering, brake, and coolant fluids. My regular mechanic says it's only necessary when you have work done on the brakes, steering, etc. But the guys at big chain stores and even the dealerships say they should be changed semi-regularly. So who do I believe? Also, why do General Motors vehicles require only Dex-Cool coolant and none other? What's the difference from Prestone or any other brand? I'd really appreciate your opinion on this subject.

ANSWER: The best advice is to follow the recommendation from your vehicle owner's manual. It many cases fluid such as transmission, differential and power steering fluids are designed to left in the vehicle for well over 100,000 miles. That being said it is my advice to change any fluid if it is dirty or contaminated regardless of the mileage. Regarding Dex-Cool uses organic acid technology and in some cases have an extended service life over 150,000 miles. It is this organic acid technology that makes Dex-Cool unique. At one time you needed to use only General Motors brand coolant but now many manufacturers have Dex-Cool compatible products including Prestone.

Q. My wife is looking to trade up to a more upscale vehicle a car she plans on keeping for several years. She is looking at 2010-2012 MercedesE350, Hyundai Genesis, Infiniti G37X, Cadillac CTS Lexus ES 350, BMW 525xi, and Toyota Avalon. Which of these do you recommend?

A. All these cars are good choices with each car having its own unique characteristics. The BMW, Infinity and Cadillac are more of a driver's cars, the Lexus, Mercedes and to some extent the Genesis and Avalon are more luxury cars without the emphasis on being a sports sedan. My choice for a sport/luxury sedan would be the BMW and for dependable luxury it would be the Lexus.

Q. My mechanic is of the opinion that it is better for a vehicle to be left out than garaged. He seems to think that vehicles do not "dry out" after heavy rain or snow. What is your opinion?

A. To some extent your mechanic is correct, but in my opinion only to a point. If the garage was completely air tight the car would remain damp and possibly cause rust or corrosion. If your car is wet or snow covered, it will dry providing there is some ventilation in the garage. If the garage has windows, or vents insure they are open-even just a bit, this will allow the air to circulate and allow the car to dry out.

Q. I have a bit of a mystery on my hands. I own a 2004 BMW 325Ci, 5sp. manual, with 145,000 miles. Recently I had quite a few repairs; the mass airflow sensor, oil level sensor and water pump were all replaced. The problem is, one week later I needed to add oil and have been adding about one quart of oil about every 300 miles. There are no leaks on the garage floor and no blue exhaust. I took it to a garage in town who "fixed" it for $1,000, by replacing the oil separator. I brought it back after 3 weeks and 3 more quarts of oil. They checked the cylinders, "pressures", and found a minimal leak from one gasket that would not account for the massive oil loss. Any advice is greatly appreciated.

A. I believe the car is burning oil and it may be caused by an issue with the PCV (crankcase ventilation system). A malfunctioning PCV system can result in excessive oil consumption. I would go to either a BMW specialist or the dealer and have them test the PCV system for proper operation.

Q. I have a 2009 Traverse and the power steering stops working at idle speed and comes back at 1200 rpm and works okay after that. On the internet I have found mentions of a faulty pump, rack and pinion unit or even a clogged inline filter. Is there a known solution without replacing everything in the system?

A. There is a specific procedure to check the power steering system operation. There are a few tests you can do without specific tools. Start with a visual inspection of the power steering system looking for damaged or leaking hoses. If all looks okay you can perform a simple "flow test." The power steering system should flow about one gallon of fluid per minute. If the pump is not following this amount the pump will need replacing. At a professional shop the technician will install gauges to test pump pressure to diagnose then failed part.

Q. I'm going to buy a new car and am interested in the Subaru Forester. Googling the Subaru Forester brings up many articles about excessive oil consumption. I am also participating in an online discussion about Forester oil consumption. The Subaru Owner Manuals currently state that losing up to 1 quart of engine oil per 1200 miles is considered within limits. That's shocking to me. I haven't bought a new car in 10 years, but I almost never have added oil to cars I've owned unless they had engine problems. Seems that this may be a story worth pursuing? What do you know about this?

A. I have not heard of any particular issues with the newest Subaru models, although Subaru did issue a service bulletin about a new design piston ring if oil use is noted.

Advice From AAA Southern New England

Advanced Fluids Simplify Car Care, Reinforce Importance Of Safety Checks

- Service intervals for oil changes, brake, transmission and power steering fluids and coolant have increased with advances in technology.
- Monthly safety checks are critical for detecting issues that could lead to a hazardous situation or major repair.

New fluid technologies and engine designs have combined to reduce the burden of properly maintaining today's vehicles. Fewer trips to the repair facility, however, may put motorists at risk of missing clues that could head off safety issues or expensive repairs.

"Every vehicle has a unique maintenance schedule, but many automakers are extending service intervals for vehicle fluids," says John Paul, AAA Southern New England Manager of Traffic Safety. "Less maintenance improves the cost of vehicle ownership, but fewer visits to the repair facility means the technician will have fewer opportunities to check your vehicle for signs of wear. It's important for motorists to conduct monthly safety inspections to identify issues before they escalate."

Examples of new fluid service intervals include:

- Oil: Cars today are designed to travel at least 5,000 miles between oil changes, and many newer models can be driven up to 7,500 miles or more before an oil change is necessary. Some vehicles that use full-synthetic engine oils have service intervals approaching 15,000 miles. Be sure to check your oil level, either under the hood or through the vehicle's onboard computer system.
- Coolant: Requirements for flushing the coolant can vary from every two years to more than 100,000 miles, depending on the coolant type used. However, be sure coolant levels are correct as leaks in the system could cause major issues.
- Brake fluid: Most vehicle manufacturers recommend that brake fluid be replaced periodically to flush moisture and contaminants from the system. Check your vehicle owner's manual for specific recommendations. If not specified, AAA recommends flushing the brake system and replacing with new fluid every two years.
- Transmission fluid: Modern automatic transmissions are increasingly being filled with "lifetime" fluids that do not need to be changed until the vehicle has traveled 100,000 miles or more. The owner's manual or maintenance booklet is the definitive source for specific transmission fluid requirements.

A monthly, 10-minute vehicle inspection can highlight issues that need attention. Motorists should check the level of the engine oil, brake fluid, engine coolant, washer fluid and power steering fluid. In addition, a check of the tire pressure and tread depth will help ensure safety on the road.

Additional information regarding AAA's recommendations for proper vehicle maintenance is available on the AAA Newsroom and AAA's YouTube channel.

AAA's network of more than 7,000 Approved Auto Repair providers is listed on AAA.com. AAA members can receive a free maintenance inspection anytime they have work performed at any of these locations.

John Paul - AAA's Car Doctor Is In

I got into a BMW once and there were no bins to put stuff like keys or cell phones. One little bin would have made this car so much fun to drive. There are some things like that.

"Years ago I went to a track event to drive a new Mercedes. I drove it around the track and the engineer came up to me afterward and said "what did you think of the car?" And I said it's a fabulous car. I think I had a water bottle with me and I said but there's no place for my water bottle. He said to me, "You Americans want to do everything but drive." And I said, yeah, kind of. We want to have a place for a coffee cup or our keys or our accessories. We don't want to lock our phone in the glove box. We want to have it readily available. Some of that's cultural. You get in some cars and you think this has a place for everything. Too bad it's a terrible car to drive."

Q: Tell us your impressions on some of the new cars for 2015 that you've driven?

A: "I recently drove the 2015 Corvette Stingray convertible. The base sticker is $58,000 and the one I drove was $71,000 because it had a lot of extras like an electronic suspension system so you could dial it from a touring setting to a track setting. You could drive this car every single day and be comfortable. There were cup holders, there were places to put things, it drove nicely. This one was an automatic. It rode soft enough that you could drive it in and out of Boston every day and not feel beat up by the time you were done. It was obscenely fast. If you were cruising around, it was quiet as can be. If you floored it, it scared old ladies and children. The interior was as good as any European sports car. It was a great car to drive.

"I drove an Infinity QX80 – a large sport utility vehicle that is about the same price as a Corvette. It was like driving a school bus but if you needed to carry six people around and cargo, it's a good vehicle for that. It's very luxurious - it has every toy in it – and can drive through any kind of weather.

"I also drove the 2015 Dodge Challenger Hellcat. It has 707 horsepower and I drove it for only a half hour on a track. The track is a private track in New York called the Monticello Race Track. It's a 4.1-mile track with multiple elevations. Where there was a straight-away, it had an automatic transmission that you manually shift – I downshifted and nailed the gas pedal and it was scary fast to the point where a 1970s muscle car that couldn't get an inspection sticker because it was too radical, that's what this car felt like. It was phenomenally fast. The Corvette was fast but at 700 horsepower when you step on the gas, it slams you back in the seat and you can't help but smile until you get scared. I think I was going 130 miles per hour in a blink of an eye and it had the ability to stop afterwards.

"When I got out of the car the person from Chrysler came back and said "you have the same expression that everybody else has." Nobody needs that much horsepower but just the idea that it's there makes the car ridiculously fun to drive. It's a fun, fun car to drive.

'I have-not driven the new Mustang yet. It's just starting to make its way into press fleets."

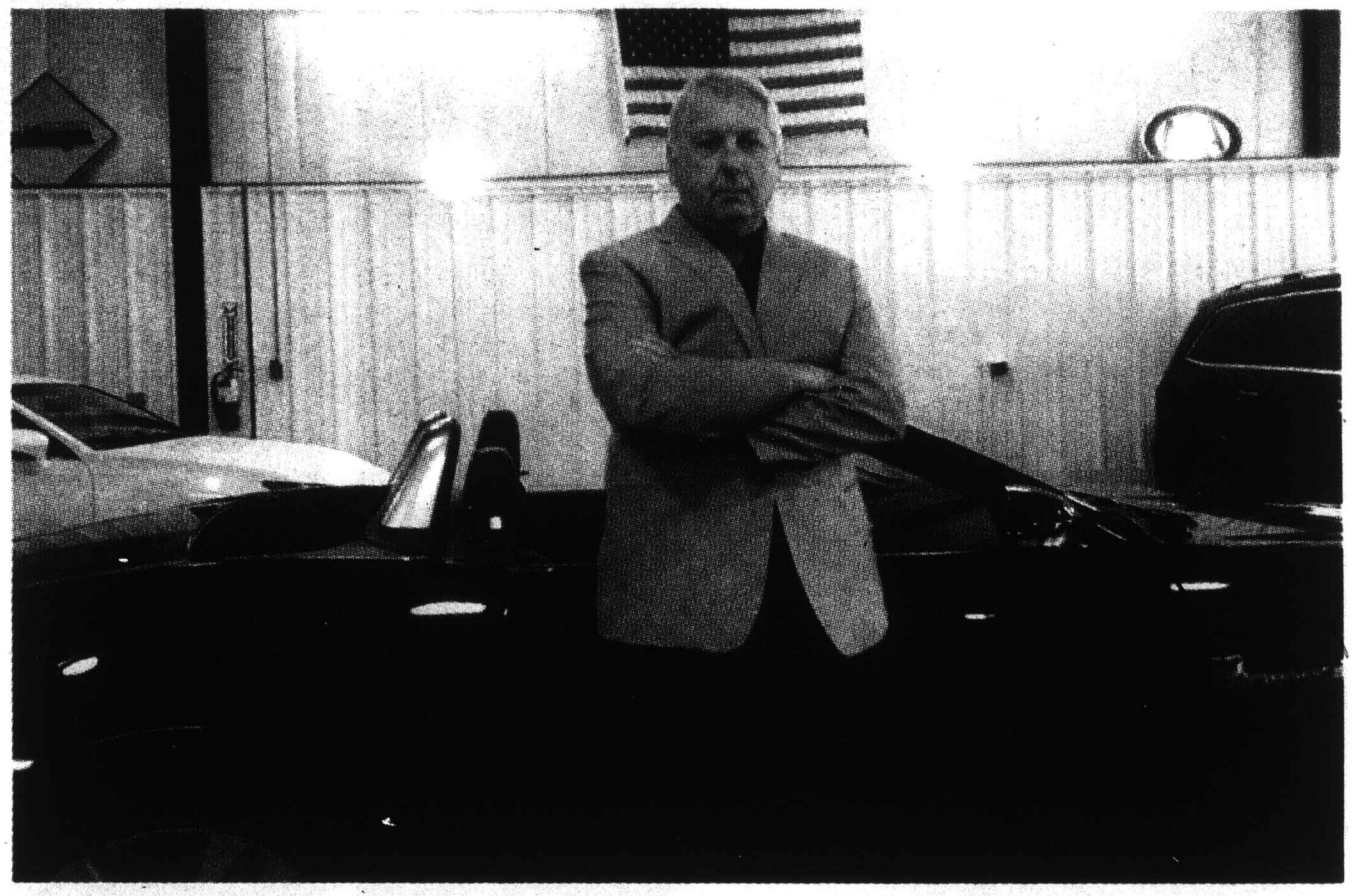

"I also drove the truly exotic BMW i8 – the gull-wing, hybrid that goes zero to 60 in under four seconds and gets 35 miles per gallon. It has gull-wing doors and I said to the BMW person there, how do I even get in this thing? It probably has a top speed of 180 mph and looks like as exotic as an exotic car can be. Just to know the manufacturers are looking at hybrid technology with super car performances is interesting in itself."

Q: Do you have any advice for prospective new car owners"

A: "First of all, you're going to ask, 'when did cars get so expensive?' Even the Chrysler 200 I drove was a $32,000 car. That's a lot of money for most folks. There will be some sticker shock. Decide what your budget is. I always like to tell people think about the cost of the car, not the monthly payments. Sometimes, people can make the monthly payments work, but if you have a six-year loan on a car, you're going to need to think about at some point you're going to have to be making payments and you're going to be paying for repairs at the same time. So the shorter loan is better because at some point you're going to need to put tires on the car – you could spend $1,000 on tires and $1,000 on brakes once the car has 40,000 or 50,000 miles on it.

"Think about what you need in a car. So many people when they have kids for instance, they think they have to get an SUV or mini-van because I have to carry around all the stuff that comes with my kid. Maybe you don't need all of that space. Maybe you can get by with something that is a little bit smaller.

"Assess your needs and decide if you are buying a car based on need or want. There's a lot to be said about the practicality. You are going to spend all this money – you should decide what do I want from this car, what do I need from this car, do I want something that has a great warranty? Do I want something that isn't going to break down? Do I want something stylish or gets great gas mileage? You may even want to look at insurance costs.

"Buy with your head, not with your heart."

Q: What is the most important thing a car owner should do to keep their car running?

A: "Read the owner's manual. It's the least-read book ever written. Today's cars are pretty complicated and sometimes you need the owner's manual to figure out what stuff is and how it works. In the owner's manual are also all the maintenance recommendations. If you want your car to last, you need to do at least a certain amount of basic routine maintenance and all the information is there.

"Two things come out of that. One is you are following the manufacturer's recommendations so as long as you do that there can never be a question about 'well, you didn't do this often enough so we're not going to cover it under warranty' and the second thing is that there may be times when you go to the dealer and the dealer might say 'you should change the oil every 3,000 miles.' And you can tell them 'well, my owner's manual says I can change it every 7,000 miles.' You find out that by following the factory's schedule of maintenance you actually save money.

"There are some who say the factory maintenance is the minimum maintenance required which is true but there's also in a lot of cases no need to do more than that. To make the car last, read the owner's manual and follow the advice."

Q: What is the most common complaint you hear from car owners?

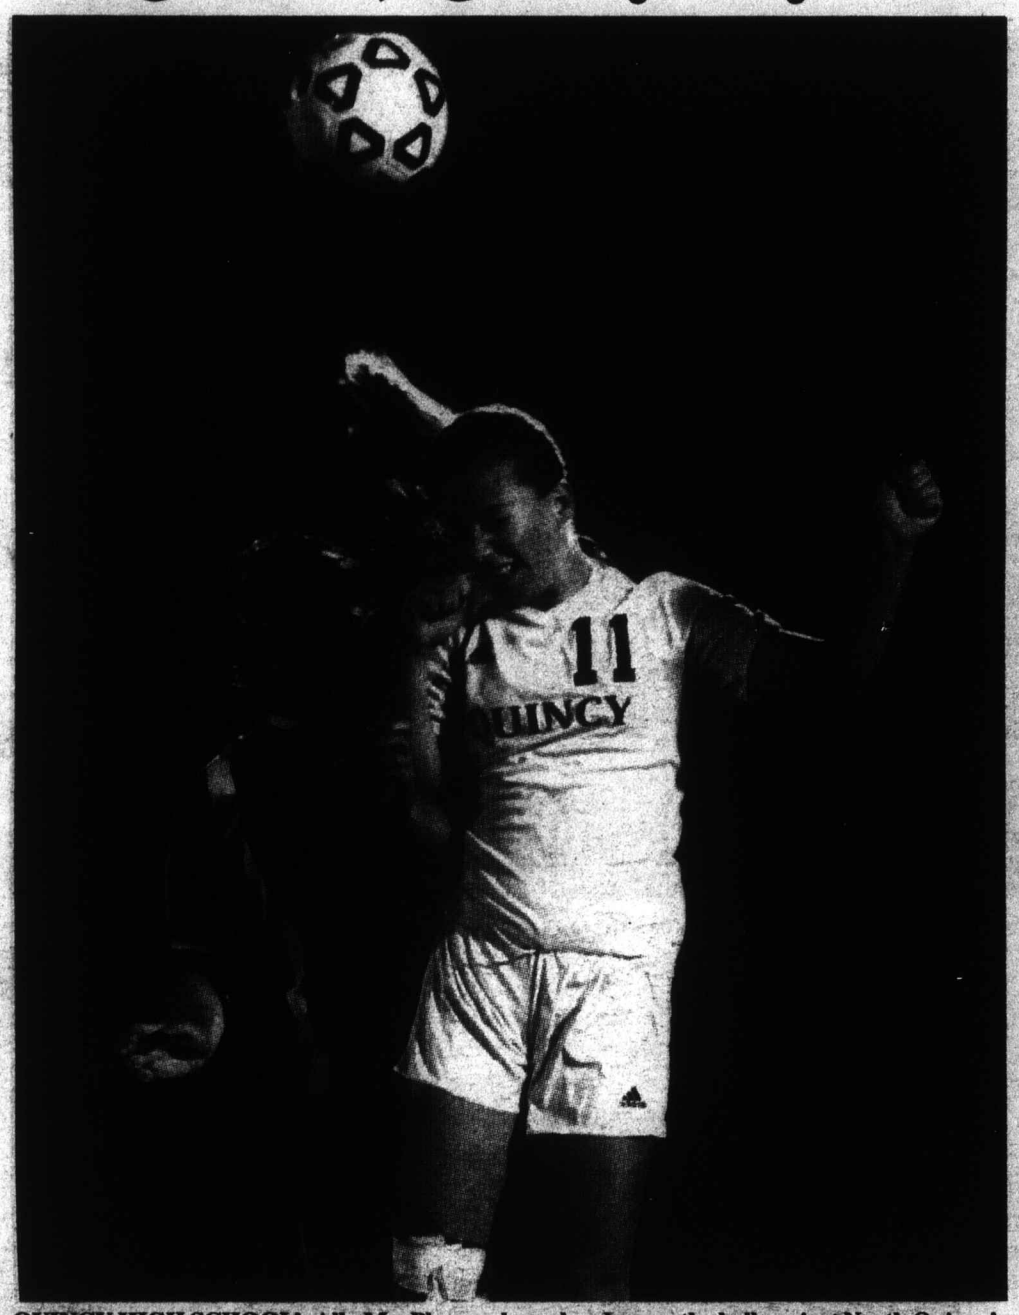

A: "We are starting to hear about problems with tire pressure monitors. Depending on the system, we are starting to hear about some of batteries going dead. You can't replace the battery. You have to replace the sensor. You could spend a couple of hundred dollars or more to replace all the tire pressure monitor sensors and you can't disable them. A garage can't physically take them out and throw them away and put a $2 valve stem in because you are in essence disabling a federal safety system. We are starting to see some of those go bad.

"Another is the cost to repair is shocking to people. It used to be if you drove a Chevy or a Ford it was pretty reasonable to fix. If you drove a fancy European car it would be more expensive. Now, all cars are expensive to fix. Still I like to tell people to shop around a bit for repairs unless you

North Quincy Girls Win 3rd Straight X-Country Crown

North Quincy's Girls Cross Country team is used to winning the Patriot League Fisher division title. This was their third straight crown.

Nobody, however, imagined it would be so easy. Consider, the meet was on Scituate's tough treacherous 2.8-mile course. The Sailors had the talented Jackie Coscia, a 21-girl team, and, at least on paper, had seven girls supposedly faster than #3 runner Marguerite Belcher.

"We just focused on everyone completing their responsibilities in order to win," said Coach Geoff Hennessy. "We wanted to go 1-2 with the Bryson twins and keep close to their #2 and #3 girls with Marguerite Belcher and Devin Hiltunen.

"As I've said earlier, one mistake, one sick kid, one turned ankle, and we're done. But that wasn't what happened. What we did was perform flawlessly and, when their top runner dropped out, we went 1-2-3-4 and clinched it 22-35."

Coscia, Scituate's top runner, had trouble breathing and dropped out just before the mile mark.

"That's a tough thing for a team to witness and still be able to give it your all," said Hennessy. "Every one of their girls had to run by that kid sitting on the side of the trail wheezing. We lost Brianna Mullaney to a similar situation here two years ago and it was devastating for our kids. She's their ace, their Tom Brady. We just hope she's better fast, they meet Whitman-Hanson next week, their girls are hardcore."

Quincy's girls lost 15-50 with LaQueen Arias the top runner. Katy Deng also turned in perhaps her best performance of the season for Quincy.

North's boys lost 26-33 but bright spots were again Mike Mullaney and Jimmy Cannon, who ended their dual meet seasons losing to nobody but each other. Aidan Golden, Romel Malimban and Victor Chu also ran great times.

For Quincy, Peter Saccoach, who missed part of the season with an injury also beat all the Scituate runners. Max Hurley, Mark Hajjar, Shawn Daly, and Kyle Cabezas ran well for the Presidents in a 20-41 loss.

Twilight Invitational

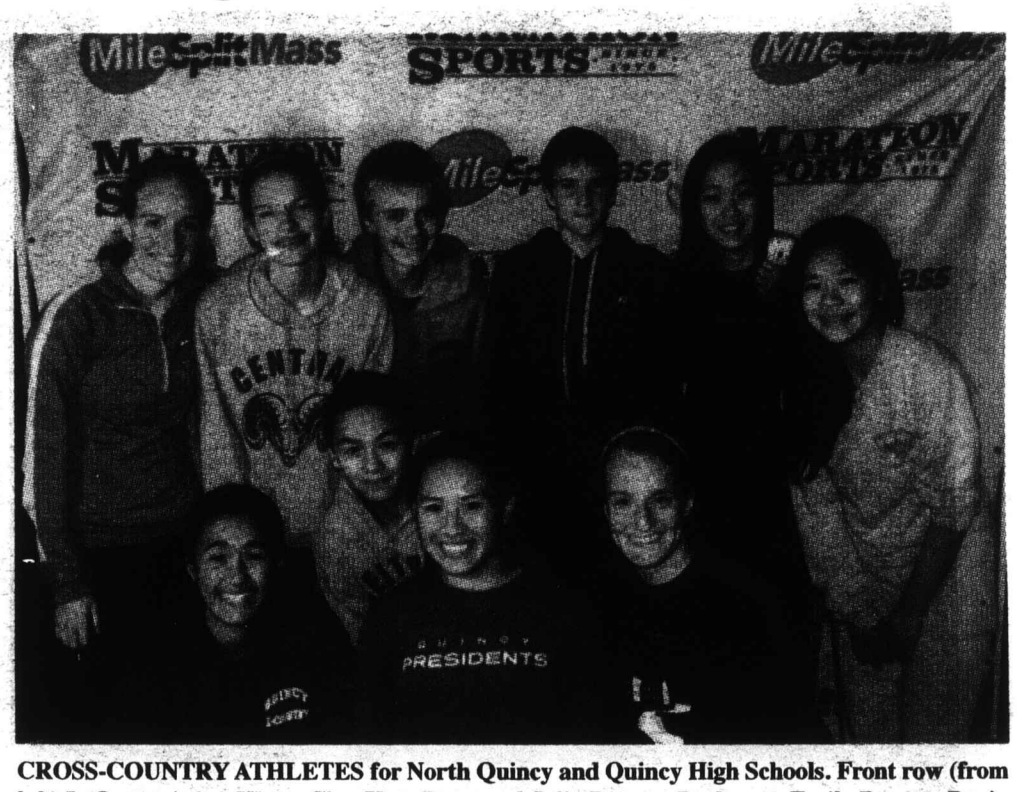

Emily Bryson repeated her third place of a year ago leading her team at the third annual Twilight Invitational at the Barnstable county fair grounds in Falmouth. A pack of six girls including Ariel Keklack of Lincoln Sudbury the eventual winner, Margie Cullen of Needham, Rebecca Grusby of Newton South, Sam Coletti of Whitman-Hanson and Ellie Constantino of Notre Dame Academy of Hingham, ran in lock-step for at least two of the 3.1 miles of the course.

Bryson's time of 18:19 beat her 2013 time by 1 second and establishes her as the #4 best girl in Massachusetts. Emily's twin sister Julia finished 38th in the talent-laden field clocking 19:40.

In the grade races Jimmy Cannon came in 7th in Sophomore boys with a 17:14, his best this year.

In freshman girls, Devin Hiltunen finished 9th in 13:02 over a 2.1-mile shorter course. Other competitors for Quincy and North included Grace Anderson, Katy Deng, Emily Zheng, Kelly Zeng, Romel Malimban, Victor Chu and Shawn Daly.

Both schools compete in the Patriot League Championships Saturday down at Silver Lake Regional.

Quincy's Balanced Attack Buries Hingham, 47-7

Showdown Against Duxbury Here Friday Night

By JOE REARDON

Quincy hadn't let loose on its passing attack yet this season heading into last week's Patriot League matchup at Hingham. So when head coach Bill Reardon gave all-everything quarterback James Lam the green light to take to the air, it proved to be a nightmare for the Harbormen.

Lam simply picked the Hingham defense apart in completing 10-of-15 passes for 140 yards and three touchdowns as the Presidents reached 6-0 for the first time since 1970 with a 47-7 pounding of the Harbormen.

K. Garcia Rosario had a mammoth game on the defensive side with a fumble recovery and two interceptions, one he returned for a touchdown. The Presidents took full advantage of Hingham's turnovers by converting six of them for scores.

The victory inched Quincy that much closer to a playoff berth heading into Friday night's huge showdown against a hot Duxbury team at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

"They're the biggest test we've had in a long time," Reardon said of Duxbury. "I know they started off slow, but they've been playing great. They've got some great athletes on the outside and the quarterback is really coming into his own. It's going to be a huge test for us."

Reardon was expecting a battle against the 2-4 Harbormen, but Paul Killinger's crew gave up 20 second-quarter points and there was no coming back from the 27-7 halftime defecit.

"I'd seen Hingham on film and they're pretty big up front," said Reardon. "I saw them move the ball up and down against Duxbury and Plymouth North. I knew, at least along the front, we were going to be in for a battle. I think our skill position players had a little more of an edge on their skill position players. I'd say it was a wash along the front line, but we were able to hit some plays with our passing game and our skill players. That made the difference tonight.

"They've been chomping at the bit for us to open up the offense for them all year. This is the night we did it so they're pretty happy."

Lam came out white hot, completing three passes for 56 yards, the third being a 10-yard scoring toss to J.T. Bain to cap the six-play, 72 yard drive for a 7-0 lead.

Hingham did manage to match Quincy for the first quarter, which wound down with the teams knotted up at 7-7. The Harbormen caught the Presidents off guard when quarterback Jack Concannon pitched the snap to Kevin Shoyer, who proceeded to hit a wide open Ryan Maguire in the flat for a nifty 68-yard score.

"It was good execution by them," shrugged Reardon. "You can tell your kids to watch for the trick plays and keep a heads up but until you actually see it, you don't know."

That was a close as the Harbormen would get on the way to their fourth loss of the season. Garcia Rosario recovered a Hingham fumble at the Presidents' 42-yard line with 10:17 left in the quarter and Lam raced untouched into the end zone three plays later for a 29-yard score. Reda Laftih made good on the point-after kick and Quincy was up 14-7.

Things got worse for the Harbormen. Isaiah Uzamere blocked a Hingham punt and Nya Domkan recovered the loose ball for a first down at Hingham's 31-yard line. Lam wasted no time as he fired a perfect pass between two defenders and into the hands of Laftih for the 20-7 advantage with 5:43 left in the half.

Hingham turned the ball over yet again at their 35 and Ryan Turpin grabbed it and trotted into the end zone and it was suddenly 27-7 after Laftih split the uprights on the point-after kick.

Red Raiders Run Into Middleboro Juggernaut

North Quincy Visits Scituate Friday Night

By BILL GRIFFIN

Playing Hanover and Middleboro in the same season is no treat. Playing the two division powers on consecutive Friday nights is a daunting daily double.

Eddie Hart scored two touchdowns and kicked four extra points to carry undefeated Middleboro to a 34-6 victory over North Quincy, who showed encouraging signs of offensive promise in a Patriot League Fisher Division game at Veterans Memorial Stadium Friday night.

Hanover blanked North Quincy in the Red Raiders' previous game. Hanover and Midleboro have a combined record of 11-1 over the first six weeks of the season. Middleboro is 6-0, averages 34 points per game and has a point differential of 204-60 against six opponents. These two are not fun to play.

"It's not easy to play them back-to-back, but that's the schedule. That's the way it is," said North coach Mark Nutley, whose team slipped to 2-4 with the loss. "Middleboro has a lot of weapons. They will have quite a little juggernaut when the playoffs begin."

Middleboro ran, threw, and executed the option efficiently out of its spread offense. They led 14-0 after one, 21-0 at the half and 27-6 entering the fourth quarter. Nick Dellamo scored on a 35-yard pass from Brendan Chipman, Casey Tucker scored on a one-yard run, and Chipman swept in from the eight to back up Hart's scoring runs from the 24 and the one.

Junior Aidan Brown scored North's TD on a 52-yard blast up the middle off a perfectly-executed trap play on the first play of the second half.

"They do a great job with their spread offense. If one player is out of position, they make you pay for the mistake," said Nutley. "Still, we were in position to make plays, and we didn't. That's where we have to improve."

The good news is North's offense played well. The most impressive part of the attack was the Red Raiders' passing game. Senior quarterback Andrew Kiley was 12-16 for 103 yards. He was poised and calm in the pocket when his protection held up and consistently delivered an accurate, catchable ball.

"Andrew threw well, especially the underneath stuff which we figured would be there against them," said Nutley.

The screen pass was a good weapon for North all night. The Red Raiders connected on four good for 35 yards. Kiley ran it well, holding the ball to the last instant and finding his receivers after North had set up its blockers.

"We did a good job of getting out and blocking for the screen, especially when we threw it to the outside," said Nutley.

Kiley spread around the receptions. Eric Cohane-Jones had four catches for 42 yards and played a fine overall game. He had two kickoff returns for 43 yards and an interception return of 15 yards.

"Eric played well. It was definitely his best game of the season," said Nutley.

Dayvon Jones had three receptions for 15 yards, Solomon Umoren had two for 11 yards and Brown caught three for 14. Jones had a a pair of good runs for 10 yards late in the game while Joel Lawless ran four carries for 26 yards in the final minutes.

"The passing game is definitely something we can build from," said Nutley.

Brown's scoring dash was an ideal combination of

Campo, Forde Lead North Quincy Girls Over Quincy

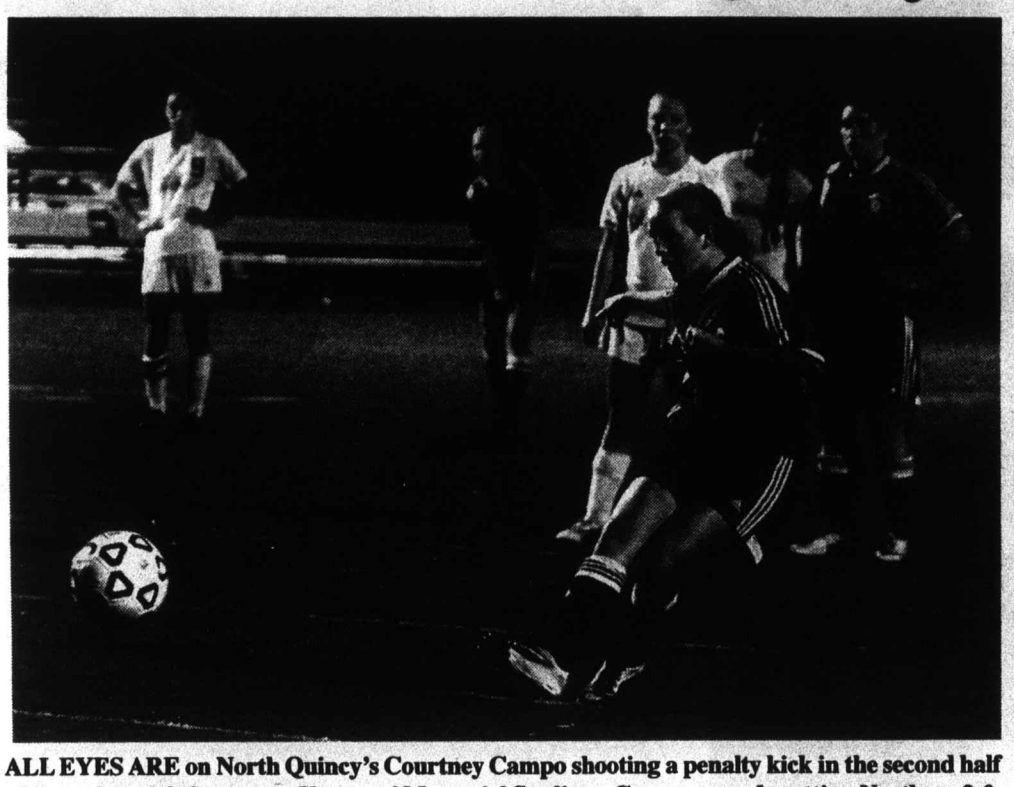

By BILL GRIFFIN

By any measure, Courtney Campo and Ciara Forde have had brilliant careers in a fine soccer tradition.

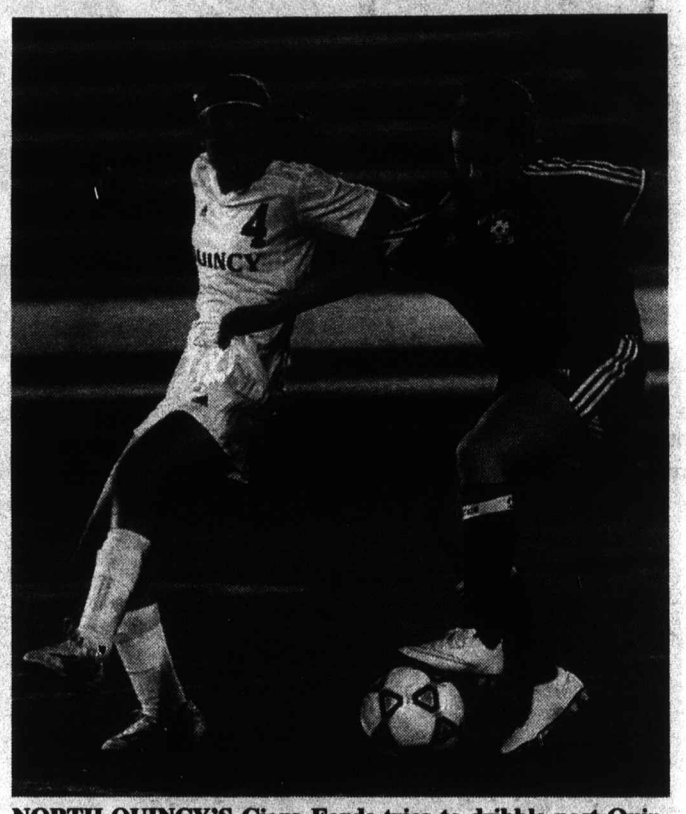

Campo is second in assists and fifth in scoring in North Quincy girls soccer history. She is a gifted athlete touched with an exceptional first step, a rare soccer player with a collage of skills from dribbling, to passing to shooting to a unteachable feel for the game which can turn a match in an instant with a goal or an assist.

Forde is not on an all-time scoring list because she is unselfish. Her team needs her to play halfback, so she plays halfback. Halfbacks do not pile up points or assists. They control the flow in the middle of the field and move the ball from defense to offense. They are not measured by numbers but by how well their team plays. They also frequently determine who wins and who loses. Forde does this for North and few do it better.

They are seniors. They are captains. They have never missed the tournament. They have played and won big matches. They have done all this, but they both knew last Saturday night that they were playing in a match they would always remember, that would mean as much as all the rest. The final Quincy match in their senior year.

ALL EYES ARE on North Quincy's Courtney Campo shooting a penalty kick in the second half of Saturday night's game at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Campo scored, putting North up 2-0. NORTH QUINCY'S Ciara Forde tries to dribble past Quincy's Liana Cunningham.

Campo had a goal and an assist and Forde directed the show from midfield to lift North to a 3-1 win over Quincy on Senior Night before a large, enthusiastic crowd at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

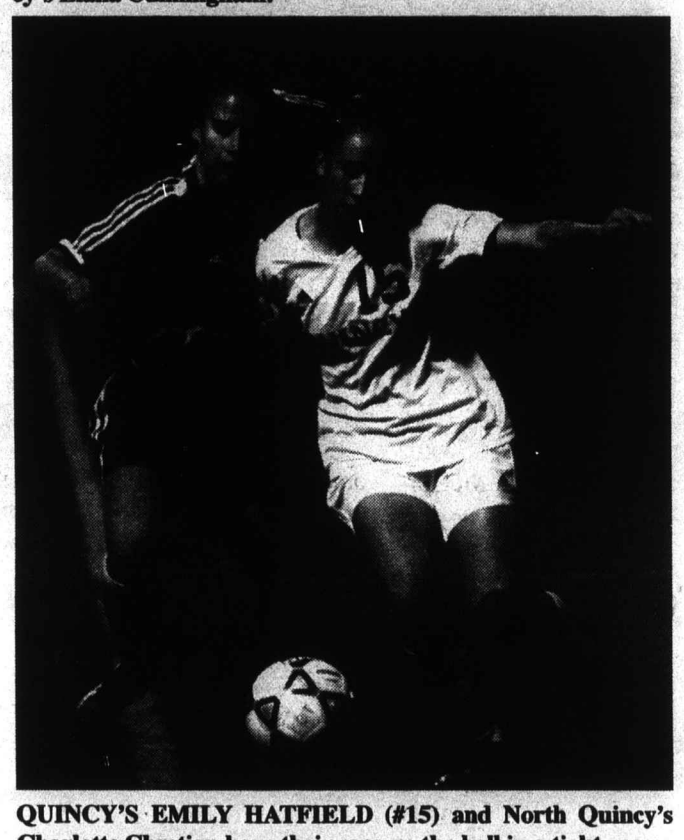

Emily Anglehart and Haley Houlihan also scored for the Red Raiders, who are 7-6-2 on the season. They needed four points in their last five matches to make the tournament for the 15th time in 18 years. Senior Kerry Phelan scored for Quincy, who slipped to 1-12-1. North swept the two-game season series by identical scores of 3-1.

"It was our final game against our biggest rival," said Campo. "It was our Thanksgiving. The game under the lights, the whole atmosphere was great, a night I will always remember. And coming on Senior Night makes it even special."

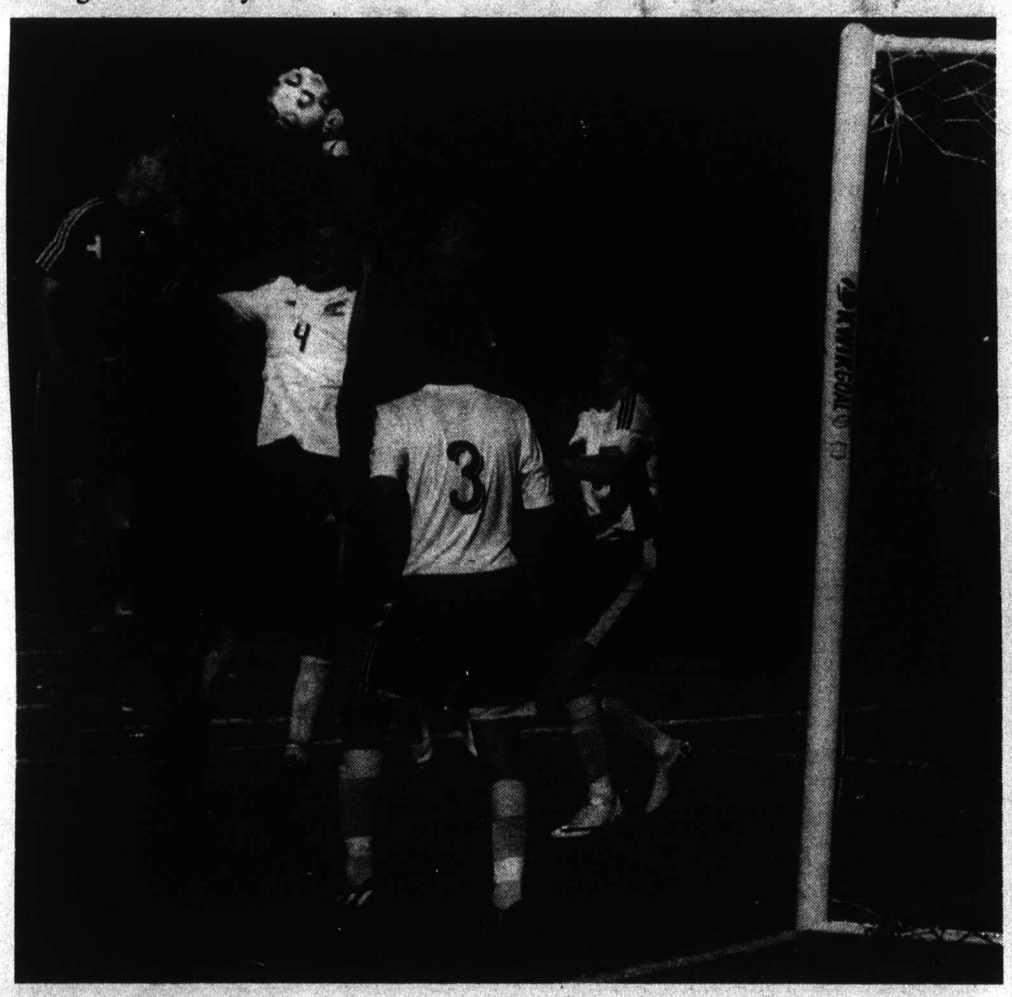

"I think as I get older and look back, this match, the last one against Quincy is something I will never forget. It's our rivalry game. I have a lot of friends on Quincy and for four years, it's been a great experience to play against them," added Forde.

Freeman Preserves Presidents' Win Over Red Raiders

By BILL GRIFFIN

The rain stopped an hour before the match. The wind remained easy and warm. The sky turned blue dotted by friendly puffy clouds which were streaked with red and orange by the late afternoon sun.

The red, black, blue and white balloons bobbed easily in the grandstand. The names of the players were pasted to the fence which circled the stadium. All was in place for a Quincy vs. North Quincy match.

And the players delivered an effort worthy of the setting. It was decided in the end by inches and seconds, by two improbable saves from backup keeper Patrick Freeman who began the match on the bench and ended it by reaching back into his goalmouth to preserve a 2-1 victory for Quincy over North at Veterans Stadium Saturday which will take its rightful place in the endless lore between the two schools.

Derek Andrade and Yuri Mascarenhas scored for Quincy who went to 5-9-1 on the season. Rob Hines scored for North who slipped to 1-12-1. Quincy swept the two-game season series by identical scores of 2-1.

"It was a full-out effort, no quarter asked or given by both sides. I could not believe the ending," said Quincy coach Mark Spendlove.

Let's begin just over ten minutes into the match when Quincy goalie Robert Smith went out with an injury suffered while stopping a clean break-in by North. Freeman, who had played exactly one game this season, stepped into goal, but had little idea of how his unlikely evening would play out.

"I was a little nervous at first, but the butterflies went away when I got into the flow of the game," he said.

Freeman gets high enough, just high enough, to graze it, but not stop it. The ball keeps sailing over his head. For a brief second, everything is suspended. The balls keeps floating. Lopes watches and waits. Freeman begins to turn. The North

Midway through the second quarter, Adamson scored again for the Storm on a 12-yard TD Run. Adamson kicked the extra points to extend their lead, 22-6. Adamson kicked the extra points and the Storm took a 30-6 lead at halftime.

APACHES' ERIC HELLMUTH (#7) had a fine two way performance on Sunday. Hellmuth played his first game at Quarterback, filling in for injured QB Danny Ferrara. Hellmuth faced heavy pressure all day from Elks' Defensive End, Patrick Devoy (#88).

Late in the third quarter, Adamson scored his third touchdown of the afternoon on a 46-yard run. The Storm defeated the Mustangs, 36-6. The Storm were led by the play of Nelson Walinjom, Andrew Airosus, Jonathan Knowles, Andrew Airosus, Anthony Gatturna, Samantha Smith, Layden, Josh Dangora, Adamson and Josh Jackson.

The final game of the QYFL regular season featured the undefeated Quincy Point Panthers (6-0) taking on the Houghs Neck Manets (4-2). The game was a defensive stalemate through most of the first half. Late in the second quarter, with only a minute left to play, Manet PR Nate Steinberg returned a punt back 64 yards for a TD, to take a 6-0 lead at the half.

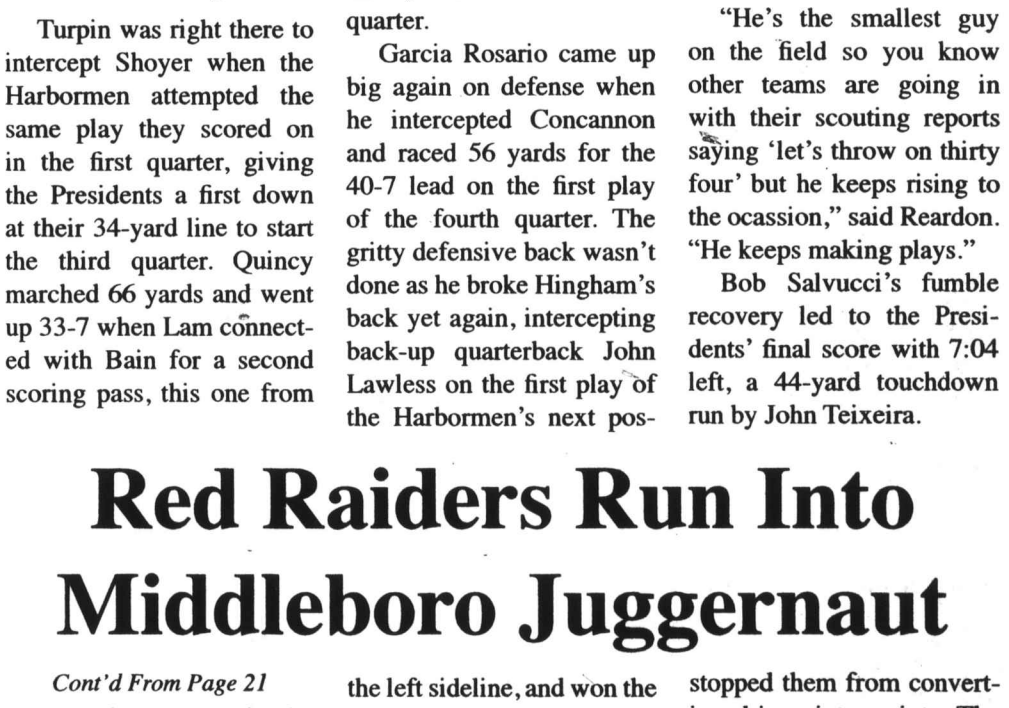

The Panthers opened the second half with onside kick and Thomas Foley recovered the ball at the 48 yard line. The Panthers marched down the field and QB Michael Lomanno capped the drive with a 1-yard TD run, to tie the game at 6-6. On their next offensive series, Panthers QB Lomanno hit Andy Ryan on a 11-yard TD pass to take a 12-6 lead early in the fourth quarter.

The Panther ate up the clock with a long drive late in the fourth quarter. Lomanno capped it off with a 1-yard TD run. PK Andy Ryan kicked the extra points, as the Panthers defeated the Manets 20-6 and remain undefeated at 7-0. The Panthers were led by the play of Lomanno, Ryan, Thaddeus Ortiz, Brian O'Connor, Mark McKenna, Cameron MacNeil, Andrew Cudmore, Andrew Grant, Sean Butts and Nick Cedrone. Quincy's Balanced Attack Buries Hingham, 47-7

Turpin was right there to intercept Shoyer when the Harbormen attempted the same play they scored on in the first quarter, giving the Presidents a first down at their 34-yard line to start the third quarter. Quincy marched 66 yards and went up 33-7 when Lam connected with Bain for a second scoring pass, this one from the 4, with 1:35 left in the quarter.

Garcia Rosario came up big again on defense when he intercepted Concannon and raced 56 yards for the 40-7 lead on the first play of the fourth quarter. The gritty defensive back wasn't done as he broke Hingham's back yet again, intercepting back-up quarterback John Lawless on the first play of the Harbormen's next possession.

"He's the smallest guy on the field so you know other teams are going in with their scouting reports saying 'let's throw on thirty four' but he keeps rising to the ocassion," said Reardon. "He keeps making plays."

a smart player, a coach who listens, a line who blocks and a runner who flies through a hole.

Kiley saw that Middleboro's line was playing wide in its splits. He suggested the play to Nutley. Nutley called it. Fred Barsamian, Nick Manning, and Conor Pound trapped and cleared out the middle. Brown bolted through the hole.

Brown outran the linebackers up the middle, cut to the left sideline, and won the race to the corner of the end zone to cut Middleboro's lead to 21-6 on the first play of the third period.

"It was Andrew's play. He saw it and we called it," said Nutley. "The middle of the line blocked it well and Aidan really hit the hole."

North's offense was consistent. The Red Raiders moved inside Middleboro's territory four times to the eight, 18, 24 and 34 yard-lines. Mistakes and penalties stopped them from converting drives into points. The biggest issue was Middleboro's blitz which threw Kiley for important losses.

"Blitz pickup is the thing we work on most in practice, but it keeps hurting us in games. We have to get better," said Nutley.

Kiley left the game with what appeared to be a shoulder injury in the fourth quarter. North is on the road against Scituate Friday night.

Yard Sale Saturday Benefts NQHS Cheerleading

A yard sale to benefit the North Quincy High School cheerleading program will be held Saturday, Oct. 25 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the school parking lot.

The sale will feature food, raffles and a bake sale.

Artisans interested in renting a table should contact Kim Fallon at 617-980-9652. Those who wish to donate items to the sale can also call Kim at 617-980-9652.

Concert To Benefit Thomson - O'Connell Memorial Scholarships

Family and friends of Dennis C. Thomson and John "Okie" O'Connell will host its fourth annual NQHS Scholarship Concert Fundraiser at Florian Hall in Dorchester on Saturday, Nov. 29th.

Doors open at 7 p.m. Donation at the door is $20.

Dennis and Okie were the closest of friends and both were North Quincy High School graduates in the class of 2002. Dennis and Okie were phenomenal athletes who loved playing and attending sporting events especially baseball. Dennis also had an interest for football and Okie's passion was basketball.

On Oct. 30, 2004, while driving to visit friends, having time off from the Air Force life an alleged drunk driver struck Dennis' Jeep and he passed away from his injuries on Nov. 22, 2004. Dennis was 20 years old.

Okie, while attending his final year in college, attempted to stop a fight between a friend and another man. He was punched without provocation, hit his head on the ground and lapsed into a coma. Okie had passed no more than 24 hours later due to his injuries on Oct. 21, 2005. John O'Connell was 21 years old.

Both family and friends have established a memorial fund in their sons' names to help those North Quincy High School students who best represent the qualities that Dennis and Okie had academically, athletically and socially.

Throughout the years there have been many fundraising events to raise money for the scholarship funds, including annual basketball and golf tournaments. Though both have been successful, the DCT and Okie Scholarship Committee still felt there was a void during the fall and saw an opportunity for a new event.

In November 2011, the Committee coordinated the first annual DCT & OKIE concert fundraiser. This started with over 300 people going to see local acts in Quincy. The event, now in its fourth year has grown and over 600 are expected to attend Nov. 29th. The concert will feature touring bands from Boston.

This year there is an option for those that cannot attend the event to make a donation at Rally.org/DCTOKIE. The support will go a long way toward the realization of a college degree for a deserving graduate of North Quincy High School.

Recreation Dept. 3 Vs. 3 Hoop Tourney

The Quincy Recreation Department recently held its annual city-wide 3 vs. 3 basketball tournament.

All teams in attendance earned an opportunity to represent their park by placing in their respective district tournaments. Recreation leaders refereed games in which competing teams play to 11 points, or 8 minutes, whichever comes first. Girls and boys competed separately.

There were three boys' divisions: ages 8-10 (Midgets), ages 11-12 (Juniors) and ages 13-16 (Seniors.) Girls competed against each other regardless of age. Sports specialists Colin Ryan, Paul Carson and Eddie Grennon ran the event.

In the girls' division final, Perkins faced a strong team from O'Rourke playground. Paced by the play of Fallon Hobin, Perkins got off to a hot start. Kaleigh and Kenzie Matulonis gave their best effort at both ends of the court and helped Perkins pull ahead in the early

O'Rourke refused to be denied, riding impressive performances from Gia Calabro and Jen Butka to a comeback victory and a girls' division championship. Also playing well for O'Rourke were Madison Ayles and Barbara Ronca.

Congratulations to all the girls who participated in this year's tournament.

In the Midget Boys' division, the championship featured two teams from Squantum playground matched up against each other. Squantum Red, led by the play of Vinny Freeman and Brendan O'Leary, ended up taking home the title and bragging rights at the park for a year.

Danny Freeman, Carson Douglas and Brendan Glynn showed off their shooting skills for Squantum Blue, and showed great hustle as they attempted to come back from an early deficit. Seany and Gavin Toland both played well for the winning team.

In Junior Boys' action, the championship featured teams from Fenno Street and O'Rourke playgrounds. The game was an exciting one with two teams that were very evenly matched. O'Rourke showcased an impressive offensive strategy, with Colby St. Marie and Landon Pierron taking advantage of their size inside, while Eion Gormley showed off his long-range shooting skills.

Brett Collins and Ethan McDevitt provided energy off the bench and played important roles for O'Rourke.

Fenno Street was led by impressive guard play by Johnny Cristiani and Franco Calabro. Brandon Sullivan played well down low for Fenno Street in the championship and throughout the tournament.

O'Rourke's potent offense allowed them to squeak out a win and earn them the Junior Division championship.

The Senior Division was hotly contested, with Mass Fields and Welcome Young moving on from tournament play to face each other in the championship game. The game opened with Mass Field players Aidan Golden and Anthony Demeis making some flashy passes and tough baskets.

Dhaaky Drake and Conor Pound both played well offensively for Welcome Young, and Devin Bragdon contributed with some hard-nosed defense.

After falling behind late, Mass Fields' Declan Murphy made a pair of long-range jumpers to keep it close, but the well-balanced Welcome Young approached proved too much for Mass Fields to handle, and Welcome Young walked away Senior division champions.

The event was very well attended and was a huge success. Players from all age divisions and ability levels showed great teamwork and sportsmanship.

Congratulations to all who participated.

had to be good because Quincy played an excellent match. The Presidents played solid, positional soccer and controlled more territory for more of the match than North. Sophomore Ally McPherson anchored the fullback line with seniors Emily Hatfield, Colleen Madden and Lauren Matthies to limit North's scoring chances. Sophomore Joelle Robinson matched North's gifted halfbacks Forde and Marissa McGue (another top-shelf effort) in midfield and gave the Presidents more than an even edge in play.

"I thought we won the edge in play, but lost on the scoreboard," said Quincy coach Seth Harmon. "We possessed the ball and moved it through midfield. I thought we contained them and dictated the pace of play."

Anglehart opened the scoring late in the first half. Junior Molly Donahue, who payed a terrific match, lifted a corner kick from the left side at just the right height for header. It sailed across the the defense to the far side where Anglehart timed it perfectly and headed it home for a 1-0 lead at intermission.

"We worked a lot on corner kicks in practice this week and it paid off," said North coach Paul Bregoli.

Campo upped it 2-0 less than two minutes into the third. She dribbled and twisted free into penalty area with a series of quicksilver moves and forced a foul for a penalty kick. She buried it in the far corner for a 2-0 lead.

"Those were great moves," said Bregoli.

At this point, the match could have slipped quietly away, but Quincy stepped up with a scoring play just over a minute later. Robinson drilled a corner kick. Anastacia Silveria controlled in front and rattled a shot off the crossbar. Phelan rushed the net to drive home the rebound and cut the lead to 2-1.

"I liked our persistence, the way we played when North went ahead. Our goal came from hard work" said Harmon.

"When they answered our goal so quickly, I thought we were in trouble," said Bregoli.

But there was a Campo, a great player playing a game she wanted badly. Less than a minute later, she controlled along the sideline, drew the defense to her, and flew free down the right wing. She rifled a pass into the middle and sent Houlihan in on a clean breakaway. Houlihan took her time, picked the corner and sent home a clean, accurate placement for a 3-1 lead which held up until the end.

"Haley did just what we want on a breakaway. She didn't try to kill the ball. She found her spot and just passed it by the goalie," said Bregoli.

Despite being down two goals, Quincy played hard and well in the final 35 minutes. The Presidents had four chances off free kicks, chances made dangerous by McPherson's powerful leg which turned long kicks into scoring opportunities. She boomed one to senior Emily Papile who chipped a perfect pass to Phelan which just missed connecting.

"I liked our defense in the second half," said Harmon. "They scored on a penalty kick and a breakaway, but I don't think we gave them another good scoring chance. I thought our seniors dug in and played a great match."

When it was over, North took its final victory run across the field after a Quincy match. The fans cheered. The balloons bounced and waved. Ciara Forde had her run and thought about the past, present and future.

"What was going through my mind was this would be a night I would look back on and it would always be a good memory," she said "I think I thought about how much I'll miss it because it's been such an awesome experience playing with my teammates. I know the season is not over, but it is the final Quincy game."

Campo, Forde, Alyx Patey, Sydney Chang, and Rachel O'Driscoll were introduced with their families before the game in honor of Senior Night. Quincy's Papile, Madden, Matthies, Hatfield, Phelan, Silveria, Kelly Donahue, Meghan Caggiano, Mary Kate Lynch, Rafheda Passley, Marina Chafa, Bella Falco, and Haley White were also introduced with their families.

North hosts Pembroke Thursday while Quincy is at home against Braintree Saturday morning at 10 a.m.

NQ Girls Soccer Edge Plymouth North

Ciara Forde scored her her sixth goal of the year with a drive into the corner of the net off a throw-in from Marissa McGue to lead North Quincy to a 2-1 win over Plymouth North in a Patriot League match last week.

After Plymouth North scored the first goal of the match, Haley Houlihan curled a corner kick inside the the far post to tie the score at 1-1 at the six-minute mark of the first half.

Molly Kate Cannon had a big defensive match for the Red Raiders limiting Plymouth North's top scorer to just two shots on goal. Junior sweeper Julia O'Donnell was also outstanding for the Red Raiders.

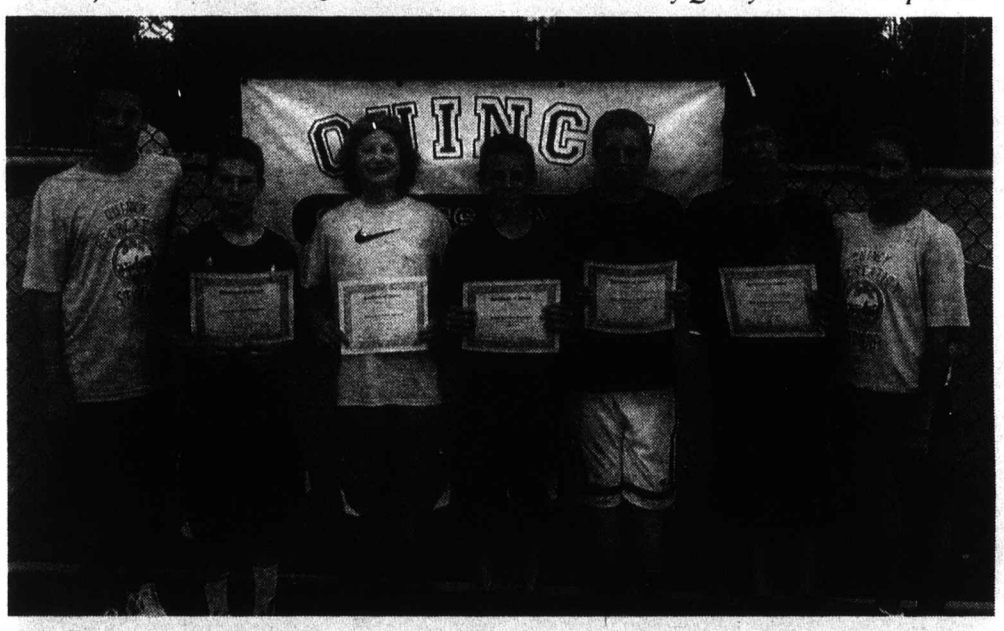

Forde and McGue controlled the match at midfield and Mandy Hazelton had a good match at stopper back.

Jilllian Hallisey, Kerin Coleman and Annie Doherty also played well for North.

Faith Lutheran Church Celebrates 125th Anniversary

FAITH LUTHERAN CHURCH in Quincy celebrated its 125th anniversary with a series of events last week inlcuding the opening of a time capsule that was sealed in the cornerstone of the church building in 1892. Here members of the anniversary committee gather after the cornerstone was shifted from the building's foundation and the time capsule was opened. Over 125 people watched as a 122-year-old time capsule was removed from the cornerstone of the Faith Lutheran Church in Quincy on Saturday according to Pastor Heidi Johnston who said the opening of the copper strongbox was just part of a week-long celebration of the church's 125th anniversary.

Stone workers from M. J. Nicholls Landscaping Design and Construction carefully removed the time capsule which was placed in the cornerstone in November of 1892.

Once the lid was removed, it was discovered that because the container was not sealed, water had leaked into the strongbox and damaged the items inside which included what was described by Johnston as possibly a Swedish hymnal book or bible, Boston and Quincy newspapers of the time, an 1892 Swedish almanac and several Swedish coins dating back to 1892.

"It was pretty wet and moldy," said Johnston, who has been pastor of the Faith Lutheran Church since 2012. She added that once some pages of the book were peeled back, a member of the church's congregation said she recognized the writing as Old Swedish.

Hidden unexpectedly behind the cornerstone in a crawlspace was an incandescent light bulb from the 1890s.

Johnston said the light bulb was most likely inadvertently left behind by the workers who constructed the building, but she was still excited by the find.

"It was a bonus," she said.

The newspaper pages in the box were badly damaged but small bits still remained readable.

The church may enlist the help of the Massachusetts Historical Commission to lift some of the text off of the moldy and waterlogged book pages said Johnston.

She is not sure whether the book's pages or cover — which was the least damaged portion of the book — will remain at the church to be displayed.

The coins will be cleaned by Jack Mayo, co-chairperson of the 125th Anniversary Planning Committee and may possibly go into a new time capsule to be placed back in the cornerstone some time in early November said Johnston.

She speculates that a photo of the congregation taken by church member Sarah Lembke will also be placed in the time capsule along with a hymnal and a list of those on the church council.

A poem titled "Faith Lutheran Church" written by a congregation member will also be placed in the box.

"Perhaps it looks a little daunting above the many granite stairs," it reads in part. "Built from quarried Quincy granite upon the rock the city wears but once you open up the doors, hopefully you'll find the spirit of the Savior of all of humankind."

All paper items will be laminated to prevent damage she said.

Members of the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum were present at the capsule opening as was Mayor Thomas Koch and Councillor-at-Large Doug Gutro.

Following the opening of the time capsule, members led 'tours of faith' of the interior of the church as well as lectures on the importance of its stained glass and its symbology were offered to those in attendance. Guests also had an opportunity to walk through the church grounds to view the gardens.

WORKERS FROM M.J. Nicholls Landscaping LLC of Quincy carefully remove mortar that sealed in a time capsule in the cornerstone of Faith Lutheran Church in Quincy. The time capsule – a copper strong box – was placed in the cornerstone in 1892 - the year the church was built. Opening the time capsule Saturday was part of the church's 125th anniversary celebration.

LARRY JOHNSON plays the guitar and Pastor Heidi Johnston holds her son, Oliver, while leading church members in a song prior to Saturday's time capsule opening at Faith Lutheran Church.

UNFORTUNATELY, the copper box holding artifacts from the year 1892 was not properly sealed before it was placed in the cornerstone 122 years ago. Over time, moisture and eventually mold spoiled some of the contents inside the box including local and Boston newspapers and a Swedish hymnal book. Here church member Jack Mayo holds the time capsule aloft moments after its lid was removed. A few Swedish coins from 1892 were also found in the capsule and are in good condition. Those coins and artifacts from present day – including a photo from the congregation - will be placed in a new time capsule that will be placed in the cornerstone and sealed back again. The church may leave instructions to open the capsule again in 75 years when the congregation marks its bicentennial.

On both Saturday and Sunday, people arrived at the church to see the contents of the box.

A 125th anniversary celebratory service was also held on Sunday, led in part by the Rev. James Kimmell, the first non-Finnish speaking pastor to be called to the church in 1969.

He retired in 2007.

A dinner at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy open to ticket holders will be held Sunday, Oct. 26 as part of the anniversary celebration and to celebrate Reformation Day which occurs on Oct. 31.

A letter by the bishop of the Lutheran New England Synod will be read aloud during the dinner, the church's mission statement will be recited, and attendees will sing songs and hymnals.

Construction of the Faith Lutheran Church, which was at one time known as the Salem Lutheran Church, began in 1892 to serve the large population of Scandinavians — Swedes and Finns — coming from overseas to work in Quincy's granite quarries in the late 19th century.

Work on the church was completed in 1894 at a cost of $8,000.

The following year, the steeple was dedicated and a bell installed.

In 1974, Faith Lutheran merged with the Trinity Lutheran Church which was constructed between 1907 and 1950.

Faith Lutheran Church was constructed of Quincy granite quarried from the church site at 201 Granite St. and adjacent ledges. The building was listed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1989.

The time capsule was brought to the congregation's attention in November of 2013 by Robert Bloomberg of the Quincy Historical Society. He discovered an article from a Quincy newspaper dated 1892 which said a strongbox had been placed in the church's cornerstone.

The new time capsule will possibly be removed from the cornerstone 75 years from now said Johnston, so that current members of the church will be alive to see it opened.

That year would also mark the church's bicentennial.

She said that despite finding the contents of the strongbox damaged, she was still happy to see her congregation and history buffs turn out for the event.

"It was a wonderful time of being together," she said.

Presentation On United Methodist Church's Stained Glass Windows Nov. 16

In the early morning of Wednesday, July 30, vandals shattered seven windows at the Quincy Community United Methodist Church. Included were two panels of stained glass. To raise money for replacement and restoration of the panels, the church hosted a very successful presentation on stained glass in August.

"That idea grew out of a sermon series I did several years ago about the sanctuary's stained glass windows," said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, the church's pastor who holds a Ph.D. in medieval studies.

"The congregation really enjoyed it."

Parishioner Julie McKeon is one of them.

"People are still talking about that sermon series and how interesting it was." she explained, "so I asked Pastor Susan to do an abbreviated repeat as a fundraiser."

The topic is still so popular Jarek-Glidden will present a condensed version on Sunday, Nov. 16, during the morning worship service.

"Some of Quincy Community's windows have some very unusual aspects to them, things I've never seen in stained glass windows before," she said. "I hope people will find them as interesting as I do."

side starts to celebrate. The Quincy side is frozen and still. It is in. Surely it is in the goal.

The shot still has enough momentum, more than enough momentum, to land and dribble across the line. Freeman spins on instinct, snatches the ball and tosses it aside inches, if that, before it crosses the goal. The raised arms on the North side begin to sink. Quincy clears the threat and starts to breath again. No goal. Quincy wins. Great stuff.

"I knew the first shot was going in if I didn't get it," said Freeman. "I touched it, but it kept going. I knew it was still going in if I couldn't clear it. I caught it and just threw it away from the goal hoping someone would be there to clear it. I didn't look. I just threw it. How close did it come? Six inches. Maybe less."

"I couldn't believe he got the first one. Then I really couldn't believe he got the second one," said Spendlove.

"From where I was I couldn't tell if it was in. Our kids and our fans thought it was a goal, but give Quincy credit. They played a good match," said North coach Rich Hanlon.

There was more than the high drama at the end. There were two goals which came from pinpoint passing and a third which was made of hustle and determination. There was the brilliant goaltending of Joey England which kept North in the match in the first half.

There was terrific halfback play from Lopes and Quincy's Ciaran McDevitt. There was Quincy's backline of Chris Coughlan, Aidan Smyth, Ben Morse and Connor Porter which protected well its backup goalie. There was Thomas Henry leading Denis Calero, Fanco Tuda and Thomas Murphy in a solid effort in front of England.

And there was the fact the Quincy played a man short for 46 minutes, more than half the match, after losing a player to a red card just before the half.

"Ciaran (McDevitt) really took on the captain's role with us playing a man short," said Spendlove. "Our back line worked and covered a lot of ground. It was a great effort from everyone, especially playing a man down."

"Our kids played their hearts out," said Hanlon. "England played a huge game in net and John Lopes was our best player. He'll be a league all star. I thought we really dominated in the last ten minutes, but we just couldn't cash in the opportunity."

After a scoreless first half, Quincy scored off a corner kick less than five minutes after intermission. McDevitt sent the corner across, and it was deflected out near the 20-yard line. Andrade battled and muscled for possession, and connected on a hard, waist-high drive for a 1-0 lead.

"We felt we needed a physical presence up front after the first half. Derek is a big, strong player and he gave it to us," said Spendlove.

The Presidents upped it to 2-0 on a checkerboard passing play which covered the width of the field. Andrade moved along the right wing, fed freshman Kevin O'Shea in the middle, and O'Shea found Mascarenhas clear on the left wing. Mascarhenas patiently waited for his opening and and sent a low drive into the far corner.

"He certainly took his time. I just wanted him to get on with it and shoot it," said Spendlove.

With 16:30 left, North closed to within 2-1. Jayne made the play along the left wing, drew the defense out of the middle and found Hines streaking to the goal with a strong, low pass for the finish which narrowed the lead to one goal and set up the memorable finish.

North is at Pembroke Thursday. Quincy visits Whitman-Hanson.

have a mechanic that you've built a relationship with and it could be at the dealer or at an independent shop. If you have someone you've built a relationship with, trust them to do the right thing."

Q: Technology advancements in motor vehicles – where are we going in the next 5 or 10 years?

A: "We are going to get to the point that the technology is going to let us do almost anything we want. But then we're going to decide whether it is a need, is it just nice to have or is it just showing off?

"I was driving the Volvo S60 a month ago. I got an email from Volvo asking me if I had a cell phone to download this Volvo app. I downloaded the app and they sent me a code and I had to put it in the vehicle identification number. The app would allow me to remote start the car from anywhere in the world, lock and unlock the doors, track all the car's use, brought up Google maps if I forgot where I parked. It would tell me the percentage of oil life left, if the tires were properly inflated, basic maintenance all appeared on my phone. Just the idea that all that technology is there then you have to decide if you really need all that technology. Then there becomes the issue of privacy. If I know it, then Volvo knows it, too. Do they need to know where my car is at all times and how fast it's been driven and when the last time it was in for an oil change?

"I drove a Hyundai Sonata that had an intelligent cruise control. I set the cruise control at 100 mph. I got on the highway and traffic on the highway was only going 50 mph and it would keep a safe distance between me and the car in front of me. I didn't step on the gas or the brake for the entire 20 minutes I was on the highway.

"I took the off ramp. The car in front of me was going 25 mph. The cruise control was still set at 100 mph – it would only go 20 mph. I pulled up to a red ight and the car in front stopped and I would stop. The car in front of me went and and my car would go by itself. I did this for an hour. I got so used to how the car performed I was in a downtown area. The light in front of me turned red but there was nobody in front of me. I thought "oh my gosh, I have to stop." I got so used to the car in front of me having to stop that it would make my car stop. Well, there was no car in front of me and the light turned red and the car doesn't know the light turned red but the technology got to the point where the car almost drove itself.

"All of this technology is there but there's a fear that if we let the cars do all the work, we'll forget how to drive. Will the car be so technologically advanced that you don't do anything other than just get in it, the car knows you are there and just drive away?

"All of this technology is becoming more and more available. There's also the fear about who's going to fix all this technology because it will break.

Q: What are some of your favorite cars?

A: "In the classic car category, the 1969 Chevy Camaro. One of the versions had a 302 engine. I like the lines of the '69 better than the '68. I'm pretty smitten with the 2015 Chevy Corvette Stingray. It's a pretty nice car.

"The BMW M5 – any of the later models - is a really nice car. I like a certain amount of utility. The Acura MDX has every luxury convenience and it's all-wheel drive and it's a great sport utility vehicle. Round it off with a great pick-up truck like the Chevy Silverado. It's a comfortable, well-put together truck.

"If I could throw one more car in there, and I've only driven it once, it would be the Shelby Cobra from the 1960s. It was just loud and mean. I just felt you were connected to the road and connected to the car. You were just emotionally attached to the car. It was fun to drive.

"I like fast cars, I like practical cars, I like useful cars. I like weird cars. I owned a Corvair Convertible. It was a fun car to drive – it wasn't anything fast but it ran well. I also had an electric car once because I wanted to see how it worked. I drove it off and on for a few years before I sold it.

Q: Car enthusiasts would say you have a dream job. Agree?

A: "I have a fantasy job. There are some days like when I had the Corvette it made me sad when I had to give it back. I'm very fortunate to be able to drive these cars."

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Lots of choices could make it difficult to select what is best for your needs. Avoid snap judgments. Take the time to check them all out to find the one that really meets your goals.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You could once again experience pressure from others who would like to see you move in another direction. But heed your Bovine instincts to stay on your own path.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Taking charge of a project that seems to be about to stall or collapse altogether could be a challenge. But once everyone knows what you expect of him or her, things should go smoothly.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Avoid the pressures of the upcoming holiday period by setting a time right now to discuss how to divide up the responsibility of helping a loved one come through a difficult period.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's not too early for all you Leonas and Leos to start making long-distance travel plans. The sooner you stop procrastinating and start deciding where, when and how you're going, the better.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone you've known for years might disappoint you, or even make you feel you've been betrayed. But check the facts carefully before you make charges that could backfire on you.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A holiday plan might need to be revised to accommodate an unexpected complication. Come up with an alternative arrangement as soon as possible to avoid more problems down the line.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Don't accept halfway explanations for a situation that requires full disclosure. The more you know now, the better able you will be to handle any complications that might arise.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The cooperation you relied upon might not be easy to get. Maybe there's an information gap. See if everyone understands the situation. If not, be sure to offer a full explanation.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Problems caused by that recent workplace distraction should soon be easing, allowing you to resume working at a less frantic pace. That personal matter also begins to ease up.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Changing your mind about a job decision isn't easy for the usually committed Aquarian. But once you check it out, you'll find facts you didn't know before. And facts don't lie.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your unique way of sizing up a situation gives you an edge in resolving that upsetting workplace problem. Stay on your current course regardless of any attempts to distract you.
BORN THIS WEEK: You are emotionally attuned to what's going on around you, and you easily pick up on people's needs.

Catholic Academy Raises $400 For Cancer Society

With October signifying National Breast Cancer Awareness Month, Quincy Catholic Academy recently sponsored a $1 dress-down day to benefit The American Cancer Society for Breast Cancer Research. Students were invited to dress in pink if they brought in a $1 or donation and raised over $400.

Breast cancer is the most common cancer among women in the United States (other than skin cancer), but millions of women are surviving the disease thanks in part to early detection and improvements in treatment.

The American Cancer Society is actively fighting breast cancer by helping women get tested to find breast cancer earlier and helping them understand their treatment options and cope with the physical and emotional side effects.

The American Cancer Society also funds research to help prevent, find, and treat breast cancer.

42% Turnout Seen For State Election

Governor's Race, Ballot Questions Highlight Ballot Next Tuesday

By SCOTT JACKSON

Turnout in Quincy could reach 42 percent next Tuesday – with nearly 25,850 of the city's 61,535 residents registered to vote expected to do so – when voters statewide cast ballots in a gubernatorial election that's coming down to the wire.

Republican Charlie Baker and Democrat Martha Coakley, the state's attorney general, are neck and neck in the race to replace outgoing Gov. Deval Patrick, a Milton Democrat who opted not to seek re-election to a third term.

Baker, a health care executive and a former top deputy to two GOP governors, is making his second bid for the corner office on Beacon Hill. Baker lost in 2010 to Patrick, winning 42 percent of the vote to Patrick's 48.4 percent. Quincy's Tim Cahill, who ran as an independent in that race, garnered 8 percent of the vote statewide.

City Has Enough Revenue To Pay Downtown Debt

By SCOTT JACKSON

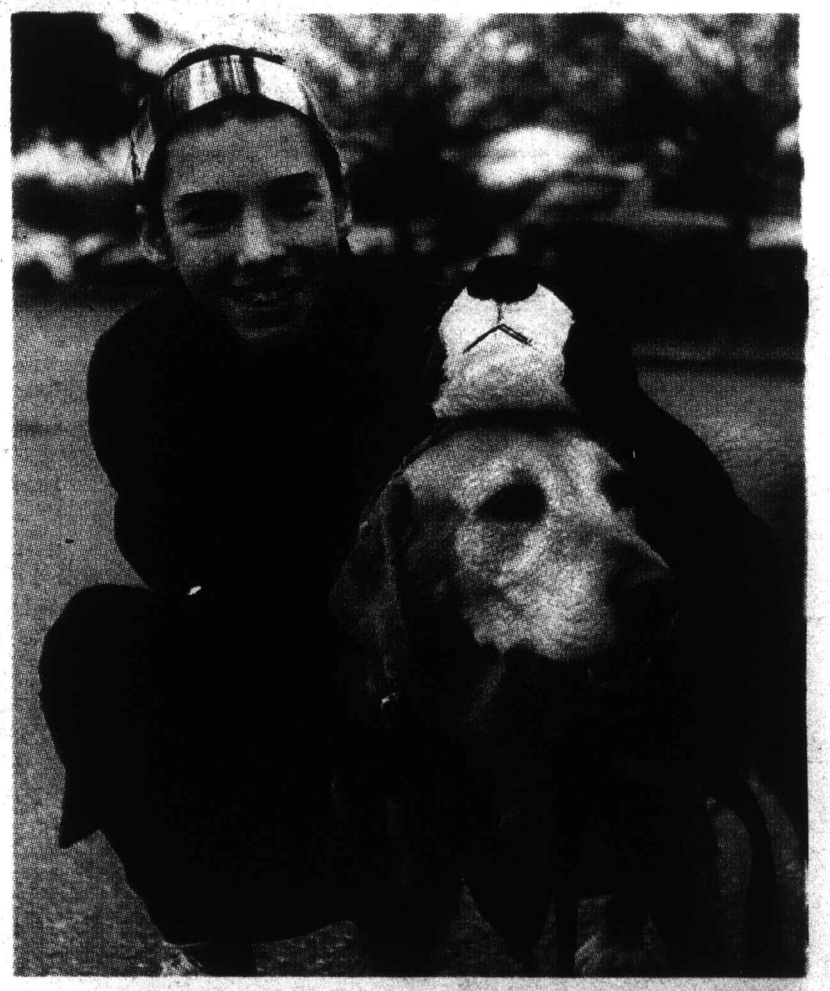

More than enough new revenue has been generated within Quincy Center to pay off $40 million in bonds the city used to pay for expenses related to constructing the Walter J. Hannon Parkway and the city's planning director remains confident in the ability to pay off that debt in future years, even with downtown development at a standstill.

The City Council's downtown committee met Monday night to review the district improvement financing (DIF) borrowing used to pay for expenses related to acquisition of land for the Hannon Parkway. The state's DIF program, which began in 2004, allows communities to issue bonds and pay them back from newly generated revenue within a certain district. In Quincy's case, the DIF district runs along Hancock Street from Dimmock to School Streets and from Burgin Parkway and Granite Street east to Washington Street and Southern Artery.

The council authorized DIF bonds for $10 million and $30 million in 2005 and 2007, respectively. Of the $40 million the city has been authorized to borrow, the city has taken out $37 million in bond anticipation notes (BANs), a funding mechanism that allows the city to pay only interest until a bond is issued.

Typically, BANs may only be used for two years before a bond

New NQ Ladder Truck

$800,000 Vehicle Equipped With 'Jaws Of Life'

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Quincy Fire Department welcomed the newest addition to its fleet of emergency vehicles on Tuesday morning with a dedication ceremony attended by Mayor Thomas Koch and Fire Chief Joseph Barron.

The new Ladder 5 truck pulled into the station — without sirens blaring — in North Quincy and replaced a 20-year-old vehicle recently taken out of service.

The older truck will be kept as a spare vehicle at the Fore River Shipyard in space provided by Dan Quirk of Quirk Auto Group.

The $800,000 cost of the truck, which has a 109-foot ladder, was paid for by the city and an additional $100,000 was used to fully outfit it with the "Jaws of Life" hydraulic rescue extraction tool at a cost of roughly $40,000, a self contained breathing apparatus at $4,000, and hand and power tools.

Amy Trillcott Receives Scouting's Silver Star

Amy Trillcott, a ninth grade student at Quincy High School and a member of the Quincy Girl Scouts, Troop 74120, was recently awarded the Silver Star - the highest award a Cadette Girl Scout can earn.

Amy discovered that the Della Chiesa School had removed their library for a physical therapy room. There was some thought about creating a small, quiet reading space for the children. Unfortunately, the space that was decided on within the school had to be used for a new classroom and the project was put on hold for a short time.

Amy worked with Kerri Connolly, the principal at the school, and they decided a mobile library cart could accomplish the goal of helping children to read and have a variety of books. Amy got to work and contacted friends, family and Quincy Girl Scouts. She sorted books and found donations through the help of the Thomas Crane Library, she held a book drive and bake sale for additional support.

She collected over 1000 titles and was able to make many donations due to everyone's generosity. There were over 25 different themes of books on the cart for the children and teachers.

A large box of books went to the new classroom starting at the school, a book shelf in the waiting area was filled also. There was a donation to Lincoln Hancock and three large boxes of books to DOVE for the children in the shelter.

Amy received the Kiwanis Junior Hero Award in 2012 and 2014. In June, she was awarded the American Legion Award by the Morrisette Post in West Quincy.

Storm Downs Trees, Limbs

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy's Park Department fielded more than 100 calls for downed trees and limbs during a nor'easter that struck New England last week.

The storm brought high winds and soaking rains to the city on Oct. 22 through Oct. 23. Park Department Executive Director Chris Cassani said the department fielded more than 100 calls between those two days, many for trees and limbs felled by the wind. The cleanup continued into this week.

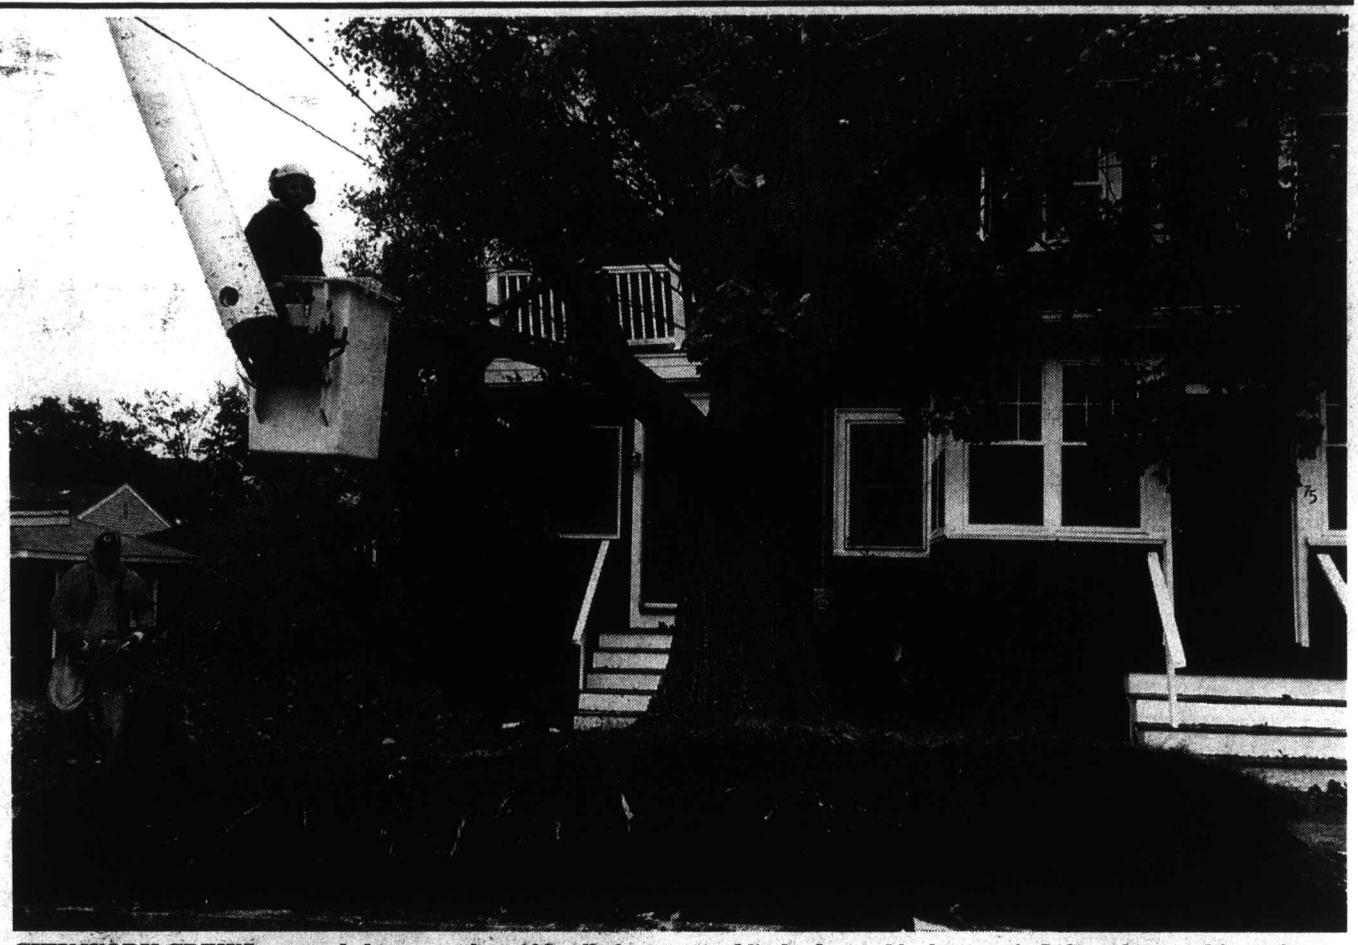

"We responded to more than 100 calls last week," Cassani said Tuesday. "Crews have been out this week collecting branches and other debris."

Particularly hard hit, Cassani noted, were neighborhoods near Wollaston Beach. The wind walloped those areas right off the ocean.

"The wind was furious," Cassini said.

The crews that cleaned up the aftermath of the storm reported that it was among the worst events of this type they've seen. Many trees in the city still had leaves on their branches, adding to the damage.

Localized flooding was also reported as a result of the nor'easter. A reported 4.5 inches of rain fell on the city.

Teen Home From School Foils B&E In Wollaston

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A student home sick from school Oct. 23 foiled a robbery attempt at his home in Wollaston, according to police.

At around 11 a.m., Brendan J. Oliverio, 27, of Quincy, began knocking on the front door of a home on Andrews Road, said Police Lt. Jack Sullivan. The 16-year-old boy, who was on the second floor of the single-family home, looked out of the window and saw the man who he didn't recognize. Oliverio stopped knocking on the front door and proceeded to go to the side of the house where he knocked on another door.

Following the two failed attempts at gaining entry to the home, Oliverio walked to the back of the house and entered the basement through a bulkhead door. Sullivan said it was unclear whether the door was locked or left open.

The man successfully entered the home and made it up to the second floor before the teen accosted him and yelled at him to leave.

Oliverio ran from the home and down Fenno Street.

The teen called 911 and both he and his neighbor, who saw Oliverio as he fled the scene, gave a description of him to an officer who arrived shortly thereafter with a police dog. The dog immediately picked up a scent and began tracking Oliverio through a marsh. He was eventually apprehended in a nearby clearing by two officers half a mile away from Andrews Road, said Sullivan.

Oliverio, who was charged with breaking and entering, had not stolen any property from the home nor was he found to be carrying any weapons said Sullivan.

He did not resist arrest.

"As soon as you're suspicious of someone at your door, call us," advised Sullivan.

Ask the GEMOLOGIST

BY JEFFREY M. BERTMAN
GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST

THE SUNSET GEMSTONE

In addition to the well-known blues, topaz comes in yellow, yellow-brown, honey-yellow, flax, brown, green, blue, light blue, red, rare pink, and sometimes, no color at all. The color which topaz is most commonly associated with is yellow. Beauty aside, the versatile topaz is a relatively hard gemstone that ranks behind only diamond, sapphire, and ruby on the Mohs scale of hardness. Along with its considerable durability and captivating beauty, the relative abundance and availability of topaz make it one of the most popular gemstones. While many are drawn to blue topaz, the most valuable colors of topaz are the golden orange-yellow type (Imperial Topaz) and the dark pinkish-red and orange-red colors.

Topaz is the birthstone for the month of November. Most of the gem quality yellow topaz available today comes from Russia and Brazil. It is believed that the energy of this stone attracts helpful people into your life who will benefit you. Come into our store at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center, where you will find an amazing selection of birthstone jewelry, diamond engagement rings, pendants, watches, and earrings. Emily Suslowicz: Fashion Focused

Son Beams

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

She's only 16 years old but Emily Suslowicz already sees her future.

The Quincy High School junior is focused on making a name for herself in the fashion world and hopes someday to launch her own clothing collection.

Emily is talented enough and driven enough to achieve the goal and you can see for yourself next week.

She will appear on the new reality TV show Project Runway: Threads, a fashion competition series on Lifetime. Emily is one of three contestants on the show's third episode that airs Thursday, Nov. 6 at 10 p.m.

The one-hour show is hosted by Vanessa Simmons and features judges Designer and CFDA Member Christian Siriano, Seventeen magazine editor Gina Kelly and YouTube Fashion sensation Ingrid Nilsen. Simmons is an actress who appeared on MTV's Run House. Siriano was the season four winner of Project Runway - the series that spun-off "Threads."

How did Emily do in the competition? Well, she can't disclose the outcome before the show airs next week. But she says she was pretty happy with the experience and the results.

"I was definitely happy just to put my design on TV," she says. "That was enough for me. I got to meet designers and the editors of Seventeen magazine. That was great. Going to California was great and I got to tour the college I want to attend – the Fashion Institute of Design and Merchandising."

Emily was selected to appear on the show after attending a presentation from FIDM while she was interning at Nordstrom's.

"I had already seen the presentation from the woman who gave it and she suggested that I audition. I auditioned for it because I want to be on Project Runway when I'm 18 and I thought it would be good practice. It's the same format: you have to do the same stuff on the shows. I didn't think I'd actually get on it and then I did," she says with a big smile.

Joining Emily on the show is her father, David, who is her assistant.

"Contestants choose a family member to go with them. They are just helpers. The idea for the show is to showcase the children's talent so they don't want any family members who know how to sew," she says.

On the show, Emily and two other contestants – a girl from Chicago and a boy from California – are given a style challenge. They present a look that is designed at home.

"It's supposed to represent who we are as a designer and then it's immediately judged on the runway and the winner receives an advantage in the main challenge. My challenge had a theme to it but I can't give it away. I had to create a look that goes with this purpose and my dad had to help me. Then (the judges) throw twists at you and you had a create a second look in the same amount of time."

Asked what was the most difficult aspect of the show, Emily replied:

"I think the difficult part was remembering to stay who I am as a designer. I wanted my look to follow the challenge but I also wanted to show my aesthetics as a designer so I didn't want to sway from that just to go with the challenge so I made sure my look was still grunge but it fell into the challenge.

"I was just happy that I was able to do that."

She says the feedback she got from the judges was positive. Their critiques were also helpful.

"They told you want you needed to hear," Emily explained. "They gave everyone positive comments but also some helpful critiques, too. Just because we're kids they're not going to conceal any critiquing. They told us what we needed to hear whether it was construction-wise – you can fix this and this – or we don't see what we're going for.

"After the initial 'show us your style' challenge, everyone got something to keep in mind when they made their next design and whether to push it a little farther or do a little bit less. They offered advice to help ensure that we all did better in the main challenge. It's helping us be the best designers that we can be because they want us to succeed."

There are eight episodes this season and each episode features three teens or tweens competing for a prize package of $25,000. The winners each receive $10,000 to be used at Jo-Ann Fabrics, a scholarship to a summer program at FIDM, and a top-of-the-line sewing and embroidery studio from Brother International. The winning designer's look will also appear in Seventeen.

While it's unclear whether the winners from the eight episodes will return and compete against one another, auditions for season two are underway.

Besides the TV exposure, Emily says the experience was even more special because she spent quality time with her dad. It was her first-time on an airplane and the all-expense paid trip included accommodations at the historic Millennium Biltmore Hotel located on Pershing Square in downtown L.A. Scenes from many movies and TV series have been filmed at the hotel including Beverly Hills Cop, Ghostbusters and Charlie's Angels.

"We were on set for six hours a day for four days. We also had time for school and lunch and dinner and interviews. My dad and I got to go to dinner every night in downtown LA and we went for walks in the parks. The weather was beautiful – 80 degrees.

"This was a great experience. My dad just made me laugh and it made it more fun that he was with me," Emily added.

Emily's experience on the show also led to an internship with another designer that was on Project Runway. She works with Sam Donovan – he appeared on Project Runway "Under the Gun" and he came in second.

"He is from Boston and I followed him on Twitter and he said he needed an intern. I emailed him and told him my interest. He asked to see my work and resume. I sent it to him and I just started working for him about a month ago. I work with him on the weekend. He teaches me how to do things that I don't know how to do so it's more like a learning thing which is great. It's great to learn from him because he went to Parsons – one of the top fashion schools in the country."

Emily has a full plate and has immersed herself in what she hopes is the beginning of a successful career in fashion. Besides the internship, she is a fashion major at QHS and is the head of the merchandising committee for the show's annual Fashion Show that is set for next April 10th. She's busy creating fashions for the show and also has designs on her own clothing collection.

The QHS fashion show – which could feature has many as 100 students next spring – is coordinated by Lorraine Walsh, the faculty advisor. Emily calls Walsh her mentor.

"She definitely showed me that I wanted to be in fashion. I knew nothing about it when I was a freshman. I knew how to hand sew but I really didn't have an interest in it until we started making clothes. I made a dress for myself and I really liked it."

She's come a long way in a short time. The third-year high school student knows she has the potential to be a big-name in fashion.

"Ever since I started fashion as a freshman in high school, I've really taken an interest and I've tried to do more to get there with internships and jobs and auditioning for Project Runway: Threads. It showed me that from the judge's critiques and being in L.A. and seeing some of the top designers in the country that I can hold my own.

"It showed me that I have the potential to do well and make a living as a designer. It's a tough industry especially if you want to go to fashion school and make a living. You have to really want it bad and put in the work and effort which is what I've always wanted to do but wasn't sure if it was possible.

"Getting reassurance that girls would want to wear my clothing makes me want to do it even more," she adds.

Viewers tuning in Nov. 6 will see more than a talented teen-ager from Quincy with ambition and drive.

They will hear Emily share an important message about her own life experience that should resonate with teens and adults alike.

And, like the outcome on the show, we'll let Emily speak about this on TV next week.

But let's just say that even if Emily doesn't win the fashion challenge, she's already a winner.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1938 postcard reproduction of the old boathouse on Black's Creek near the intersection of Furnace Brook Parkway and Longwood Road in Merrymount. Opened in the 1920's, this boathouse rented canoes, rowboats and sailboats for over three decades. The long-serving and revered lifeguard here named Bruno taught life-saving techniques and lifeguard training to dozens of Quincy youngsters. After the business closed, the boathouse was used by the Campfire Girls until it was destroyed by fire. The site was last used as a small parking lot, but it is now inaccessible to vehicles. Council, Superintendent To Meet On NQHS West Wing Construction

Anticipating a record attendance next fall that will overtax the present structure at North Quincy High School, Superintendent James N. Muir will meet with the city Council in a plea for action on the construction of the west wing of the North Quincy High School.

The City Council has already received a transfer order for $4,000 from Mayor Thomas J. McGrath to meet the cost of the plans for the new wing, but this order is in the finance committee.

In his plea for action, Supt. Muir is expected to present similar figures to the City Council that he has already given to the school committee, showing that the annual growth of the school's attendance makes the addition necessary for the fall of 1933.

PARKING LAWS DRIVE OPENED BY POLICE

Police tags, those distributing little slips of pasteboard the motorist finds attached to their motor vehicles, acquired a new set of teeth when Police Chief Ernest N. Bishop instructed members of the police department to enforce all traffic regulations throughout the city. The new order is the result of a recent conference between Mayor Thomas J. McGrath and Quincy merchants who requested that parking regulations be strictly enforced in the retail district of the city.

Chief Bishop warned, "One tag means warning; Two tags means court!"

He's Voting Yes On Question 3

I will be voting to oppose casino gaming in Massachusetts by voting YES on QUESTION 3 because of the very reasons offered to support casinos: jobs and tax revenues.

Proponents of casino gambling trumpet construction jobs, permanent casino jobs, and a flood of local and state tax revenues generated by the project as the reason to support these casinos. However, a new study shows that for each new slot machine in a casino, 1-2 local jobs are lost each year. This occurs because "pocket change" and "fun money" that otherwise would have been spent in support of local restaurants and businesses is spent instead at casinos.

Even if that new study is wrong, I am opposed to the gambling industry as a way to generate jobs and revenue in the Commonwealth because I believe that turns casinos into an easy "quick fix" to economic problems.

One of the commercials in favor of casinos portrays an Everett woman thanking Wynn Resorts for its promise to clean up an area of Everett neglected for decades. My response: it takes a casino to clean up Everett? Where are Everett's residents, community organizers and city officials?

Are people in Everett, and are tax payers in the Commonwealth, looking for others to do what they should be doing themselves?

I am opposed to casinos as an economic engine because in supporting them for the sake of economic development I believe we are doing on a local and Commonwealth level what we would never advise on a personal level.

If a family was struggling to make ends meet, we would never encourage that family to attempt to double their money at a casino in order to pay their bills. But, isn't that what supporting casinos does? Aren't we gambling on the gambling industry as a way towards prosperity in the Commonwealth?

I believe the answer to our economic questions is full employment where each worker is paid a living wage based on work that adds value to society. We have a long way to go in this country in achieving full employment. But, I believe we get there when each person takes his or her responsibility to society seriously and contributes work, civic engagement, and tax revenues for the common good.

While casinos may produce short-term winners, on the whole, supporting them for economic reasons is an excuse for us to avoid the important work necessary to achieve true and lasting prosperity that justly shares the common wealth.

I invite you to join me in voting YES on QUESTION 3 and against casino gaming in Massachusetts.

Take A Proactive Approach Concerning Traffic Safety

It has been demonstrated that longer yellow lights reduce the amount of red light running.

The pedestrian crossing lights at my part of Hancock Street, aka Route 3A, aka bullet highway, turn from green to red with a yellow light interval of 3.87 seconds. During the day when there is relatively light traffic, vehicles move along at a good clip.

As a vehicle approaches the crossing and the light turns to red, there is very little time for a driver to react and stop. The usual action is to hit the gas and barrel through the crossing. Luckily, no one has been naive enough to cross just as the light turns red.

Common sense would dictate that the length of time the yellow stays on be made longer to, say, ten seconds. At what other thoroughfares in Quincy may such situations obtain? Sea Street comes to mind. Our brand new Traffic Engineer should take a proactive approach concerning the traffic safety of this city.

Library Bookstore To Mark 3rd Anniversary Nov. 8

The Crane Library Bookstore will celebrate its third anniversary Saturday, Nov. 8th with a special, fun day at the charming little shop, located in the rear of the library.

The store's volunteer staff will be distributing giveaways and door prizes to patrons.

The store features books, CD's, DVD's, children's books, gifts, audio-books, reading material and media in Chinese, etc. And there is usually a shelf of giveaways for media items which are no longer in demand.

Since its establishment in the basement of the original section of Quincy's famous library designed by Henry Hobson Richardson--the same man who designed Boston's Trinity Church--the store has become quite a popular little place to purchase gently-used items.

Supported by The Friends of the Crane Library, 100% of the bookstore's proceeds are used to provide the many community programs funded by The Friends, including lectures, movies, concerts, storytellers and special events for children.

The Friends also provide for the popular museum-pass program that allows Quincy residents to visit many area museums and zoos at discounted admission.

The Crane Library Bookstore is open every Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Thursday evenings from 6 to 8 p.m. A variety of reading, watching and listening materials are offered at reasonable prices.

'Story Of Jessie Ewing Glasgow, Jr.' Tonight

University of Massachusetts Boston history professor Julie Winch will discuss her research into the life of Jesse Ewing Glasgow, Jr., at a Quincy Historical Society program, Thursday, Oct. 30 at 7 p.m. at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center.

Glasgow's story is one of living in two very different societies and of maintaining purpose and integrity while facing death. Born in Philadelphia in 1838, Glasgow grew up a free African American in a nation that accepted African slavery. As a young man in the 1850s, he moved to Scotland and attended the University of Edinburgh. On a return visit to Philadelphia in 1859, he was in demand as a speaker for anti-slavery groups.

In 1860, knowing he was fatally ill, he returned to Scotland and wrote the first full account and explanation of John Brown's recent raid, trial, and execution to be intended for a British audience.

Drawing on Glasgow's writings, Professor Winch will examine Glasgow's experiences, his complex relationships with both America and Scotland, and the talent and potential that was cut short by his death.

This program is co-sponsored with the St. Andrew's Society of Massachusetts and the Scots Charitable Society of Boston.

Everyone is welcome to attend. There is no admission charge.

Skeletal Black Birds Give Flocking Fundraiser Halloween Twist

You've probably seen them on a neighbor's lawn. A flock of pink plastic flamingos accompanied by a sign proclaiming "You've been flocked!" has become a familiar sight around the city, as local groups hold "flocking" fundraisers for worthy causes.

This Halloween, however, the popular fundraising program has taken a spooky turn, as the Quincy High School PAC is replacing the traditional pink flamingos with a flock of skeletal black birds. The cause: to raise funds to support Quincy High School's post-prom Senior Stay-Out event.

"Senior Stay-Out provides a safe, fun-filled place for seniors to go immediately following the senior prom," said Angela Walker, the parent of a Quincy High student and organizer of the flocking fundraiser. "To participate in the fundraiser, people make a donation to have a friend or neighbor's yard 'flocked.' It's all in good fun and supports this event that helps keep our seniors safe on Prom Night."

Walker said the idea for adding a Halloween twist to the traditional flocking came from School Committee Member Anne Mahoney, whose son Liam is a senior at Quincy High School.

"As a School Committee member, I have great respect for the PTOs across the city that raise funds to support our schools, provide resources for our classrooms and help keep our kids safe," Mahoney said. "Our family also happens to really enjoy Halloween, so when we came across the skeleton flamingos we thought it would be a fun addition to this popular school fundraiser."

Stuffed Peppers With Leftovers

By MARIE

One thing about making stuffing is you're not limited as to what you can use, and no matter what -it seems to comes out great.

And that's about what happened when I was about to make stuffed peppers-and found a couple of things in the refrigerator.

When I told my daughter Rita about them, she said I should call it "Everything but the kitchen sink" stuffed peppers.

STUFFED PEPPERS

4 peppers (I used green and red)
2-3 cooked brussels sprouts (optional) (they were in the fridge) (cut in small pieces)
2 crumbled up meat balls
1 cup brown rice (cooked)
1/2 slice bread (soaked)
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons tomato sauce
5-6 black olives (cut in pieces)

Cook the rice according to directions. Cut the meatballs into small pieces. Cut the tips off the peppers, and use small pieces if desired in the stuffing. Mix all of the ingredients together, and stuff each pepper. I usually drizzle each pepper with a little olive oil on each so they don't dry. Place side by side in a baking pan. Add a bit of water and a small amount of oil on the bottom of the pan, and bake covered in a 350 degree oven until peppers are tender.

P.S. Peppers can also be cut in halves and stuffed.

Instant Power Chocolate

By SUZIE

Who doesn't love chocolate? Especially during Halloween?

Even on Good Morning America recently, there was a doctor discussing the health benefits of chocolate, but he wasn't referring to the commercially made kind. The real cacao powder is made from ground cocoa beans and completely unadulterated. It is raw, unheated or processed.

Raw cacao is loaded with flavanols, polypenols, magnesium, (which most of us are lacking in) fiber, and anti-oxidants. One of the healthiest foods on the planet and has been proven to be able to reduce blood pressure as well if eaten in it's pure form. I made this in a few seconds and tossed it in freezer for 15 minutes in ice cube trays.

Here's how you do it:

INSTANT POWER CHOCOLATE

2 tablespoons raw cacao powder (I use Navitas brand)

2 tablespoons organic extra virgin coconut oil, liquified (mine was already in its liquid state because it was so warm outside but today is a different story! Hello New England!)

2 heaping tsp. raw honey. Dash of sea salt. Dash of vanilla.

Small amount of slivered almonds or chopped walnuts and dried cranberries or raisins.

Just mix all up and spoon into ice cube trays. Freeze for 1-20 minutes and pop out. These made about 6 candies. Keep in fridge or they will melt. Enjoy!

is running for higher office for the second time since being elected attorney general in 2006. In 2010, she ran in the special U.S. Senate election, when she was upset by Republican state Sen. Scott Brown. Coakley was re-elected attorney general later that year.

Baker and Coakley are joined by three independent candidates running for governor.

Tuesday's election also features races to fill two open statewide seats – attorney general and treasurer – and two members of Quincy's delegation in the state house face challengers. Not to be overlooked are four ballot questions, asking voters to repeal casino and gas tax legislation, expand the bottle bill, and require employers to provide sick time to employees.

Polls open at 7 a.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 4, and remain open until 8 p.m. City Clerk Joseph Shea is predicting a 42 percent turnout on Election Day. In 2006, the last time there was an open governor's race, the turnout in Quincy was 53.7 percent, with 29,271 of the 54,495 registered to vote in the city casting ballots. That number was even higher in 2010 as 31,603 of the 55,231 registered to vote did so, good for a turnout of 57.2 percent. Shea said there appears to be less interest this time around than either of the previous two state elections.

"It just seems quieter," he said. "I can't put my finger on [why]."

Shea's estimate is based in part on the number of absentee ballots received. As of noon on Oct. 24, 710 residents had voted absentee. Shea anticipates up to 1,000 total absentee ballots being cast before the deadline to do so at noon the day before the election. Approximately 2,500 absentee ballots were cast leading up to the November 2012 presidential election; turnout reached 70 percent on Election Day that year.

Despite the open race for governor and other statewide offices, Shea believes the ballot questions may be the bigger draw Tuesday.

"The questions are bringing out some folks," he said, "maybe more than the candidates on the ballot."

The election will cost Quincy approximately $78,000 – the city pays for poll workers and police details, among other expenses, while the state picks up the tab for printing the ballots.

The five candidates running for governor, and their running mates seeking to serve as lieutenant governor, are:

• Charlie Baker, 57, of Swampscott. Baker is the state's former secretary of administration and finance. He served in that capacity from 1994-98 under Govs. Bill Weld and Paul Cellucci. Previously, he worked as Weld's secretary of health and human services from 1992-94.

In 1998, Baker became CEO of Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates. Less than a year later, he was named president and CEO of Harvard Vanguard's parent company, Harvard Pilgrim, and remained there until July 2009. From 2004 until 2007, Baker was a member of Swampscott's board of selectmen. He graduated from Harvard College and earned an MBA from Northwestern.

His running mate is Karyn Polito. A Shrewsbury resident, she served in the state House of Representatives from 2001-11 and ran unsuccessfully for state treasurer in 2010. Polito previously served on the Shrewsbury board of selectmen and the state Lottery Commission.

Baker defeated Mark Fisher in September's primary election. Baker and Polito appeared in Quincy just days after the primary and were later endorsed by Mayor Thomas Koch, a Democrat. Baker received 33.5 percent of Quincy's vote when he ran for governor four years ago; Patrick received 40.6 percent of the vote in the city that year while Cahill finished with 24.6 percent in his hometown.

In September's primary, Baker won Quincy handily over Fisher, 74.5 percent to 24.7 percent.

• Martha Coakley, 61, of Medford Coakley was

Mariano: 'I've Helped The Quality Of Life In Quincy'

Democrat State Rep. Seeks Re-Election In The Third Norfolk District

By SCOTT JACKSON

Rep. Ron Mariano, a Democrat running for re-election to the state's House of Representatives, said he has done a lot to boost the quality of life in Quincy during his 23 years on Beacon Hill.

Mariano, who turns 68 later this month, is running for re-election in the Third Norfolk District, which includes Ward 2 and Ward 4, Precinct 5 in Quincy as well as portions of Holbrook and Weymouth. He was first elected to the House of Representatives in a 1991 special election. Mariano serves as the majority leader in the House, that chamber's second highest position. During a recent interview, he said he has worked hard to improve the city during his time in office.

"I work hard. I've done an awful lot to help the quality of life in the city, both from an economic point of view and a social point of view. I would like to continue to do that," Mariano said, adding that he will be able to help the city as it moves forward on plans to redevelop Quincy Center.

"We face many challenges here...The mayor is going to need help as he moves through the development phase of his plan and I think I can be a help to him. I love the city, I want to see it thrive and be very, very successful. I'd love to continue in my role as a state rep. and as the majority leader in the House."

RON MARIANO

When asked what his greatest contribution is locally, Mariano noted he was able to help secure funding to construct a crosstown connector – the Walter J. Hannon Parkway – and relocate Town Brook in addition to getting the state to begin a $244 million project to replace the Fore River Bridge and reconfigure the intersection of Quincy Avenue and Howard Street.

"Working with the mayor and working with city officials, I've been able to secure money for the crosstown connector, for the relocation of the brook, which is going to spur development in the downtown," Mariano said.

"The Fore River Bridge – my predecessors tried for years to fix a very dangerous public safety issue in Quincy Point. We're well on our way to getting it fixed. The intersection with Quincy Avenue, you can see the work being done as we speak. Those are all significant improvements I helped bring to the top of the list through my advocacy."

On state issues, Mariano said he is especially proud of passing healthcare reform in 2006, which was used as a model for nationwide healthcare reform.

"I'm especially proud of the healthcare bill we did in 2006. I was an integral part in what has now become the national model. It got us to 99 percent coverage of citizens in Massachusetts. It took an awful lot of negotiations and problem solving to get a bill through. That I'm very, very proud of," Mariano said.

"We followed that up with two other healthcare bills, one in 2010 and one in 2012, the last one being the cost containment bill. Not to mention the fact that I secured $12 million for Quincy Hospital. We wouldn't have a Quincy hospital if I didn't secure that money, and that's a direct result of my involvement in the 2006 healthcare bill."

Mariano also noted he

Kriegel: 'I Want To Represent The People'

Republican First-Time Candidate Running For State Rep. In 3rd Norfolk

PATRICIA KRIEGEL

By SCOTT JACKSON

Patricia Kriegel, a Republican candidate for state representative, said she wants to represent the people on Beacon Hill.

Kriegel, 67, is running for state representative in the Third Norfolk District, which includes all of Ward 2 as well as Ward 4, Precinct 5 in Quincy and several precincts in Weymouth and Holbrook. Kriegel was born in Nahant and moved to Cohasset at age 12. She has resided in Quincy since 2001 after living in Norwood and Foxborough, where her late husband Harold "Skip" was originally from.

Kriegel currently works as a school crossing guard in Quincy; she previously worked at a local car dealership and as a realtor. Kriegel, who is making her first foray into politics, had been registered as an independent for most of her life; she even went door-to-door and held signs in support of Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti, a Democrat whose wife is godmother to Kriegel's grandchild.

In 2009, Kriegel changed her enrollment from independent to Republican because of her dissatisfaction with President Barack Obama.

"I was an independent up until 2009. Then I went to Republican because I didn't like how the president was not working with Congress, just making his own rules and everything," she explained during a recent interview.

"That was my sign of defiance – I turned Republican."

Kriegel decided to run for a seat in the House of Representatives after she and a friend – who is now Kriegel's campaign manager – attended a town hall forum featuring Scott Brown and organized by talk radio station WRKO a year-and-a-half ago.

"We were at this town hall event and they just kept saying 'you can't just sit around and complain, you've got to do something.' So here I am, doing something," Kriegel said.

Average people in Massachusetts, Kriegel added, are not represented on Beacon Hill. As an example, she highlighted stalled legislation that would have allowed persons who entered the U.S. illegally to obtain drivers licenses from the state.

"I don't feel like I have a say. Nobody represents the average person. In this state, they want to give driver's licenses to illegal aliens. If you ask your normal person on the street, do they want was the lone South Shore representative who voted in favor of gay marriage.

"Being there for the first gay marriage vote was a significant event in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and I was proud to lead the fight for gay marriage," he said. "I was the only South Shore representative from here to the Cape that voted for gay marriage."

Mariano supported the legislature's bill that cleared the way for gambling in Massachusetts and opposes Question 3 on November's ballot, which would repeal that law. He noted that state loses an estimated $1 billion annually to casinos in Connecticut and Rhode Island.

"I do believe we lose an awful lot of revenue out of Massachusetts – that seems to be lost in the debate," Mariano said. "We've been estimating that we lose $1 billion a year in money going to Mohegan Sun and other gambling venues, which is a significant amount of money and we would like to recapture that if we could."

He added that casinos would not threaten the state's lottery revenues, explaining that residents already have the option to visit casinos in neighboring states.

Mariano also voted in favor of indexing the state's gas tax to inflation. Question 1 on the ballot asks voters to repeal that measure; Mariano is opposed to the repeal. He said he voted in favor of indexing because of the state's infrastructure needs.

"The Fore River Bridge probably wouldn't have been done if we didn't come up with a reliable, significant fundraising mechanism for our infrastructure," Mariano said. "Infrastructure is an economic development issue. People have to be able to get to work. Trucks have to be able to roll over the highways. We've neglected our infrastructure for 15 years because we don't know how to pay for it."

He also noted indexing would help the environment by encouraging residents to drive more fuel efficient vehicles.

Mariano opposes Question 2, which would expand the state's bottle deposit bill to include non-carbonated soft drinks if approved.

"I do think it's an additional tax – it's a tax at the register if you do purchase any of these drinks," he explained. "Number two: it provides a real burden to small businesses who have to create space and find additional room to handle the bottles that are returned. Not everyone goes to a redemption center."

Mariano supports Question 4, which would require companies with 11 or more employees to provide paid sick time to certain employees if passed.

"There are an awful lot of people who work very, very hard without the opportunity to accumulate any sick days," he said, later adding. "I don't think it's a burden on small businesses. What I think it does is create some labor stability for some of these small businesses. When you can give a benefit like this, employees tend to stay with you a little longer."

In the race for governor, Mariano is behind his party's nominee, Attorney General Martha Coakley. He said he supports her plan to expand access to Head Start and other early education programs, beginning in gateway cities such as Quincy.

"Her positions on early childhood education, I support strongly," Mariano said. "I've always been a supporter of early childhood education. It's one the great indicators of success for students. The earlier you get these kids in school, the earlier you get them reading, the more successful they're going to be."

Mariano resides at 200 Falls Boulevard in Quincy. He is married to Eve Powell, a former teacher. Mariano grew in Quincy and holds a bachelor's degree from Northeastern and a master's of education from UMass Boston. In addition to his time on Beacon Hill, Mariano also served on the Quincy School Committee.

that, of course they don't," Kriegel said.

Voters casting ballots Nov. 4 should vote for her, she later added, because she wants to represent the people.

"I want to represent the people. I want to go by the law – I want to represent the legal people. I want to enforce the laws that exist," she said.

"I want to help stop the waste, the fraud, and the abuse that goes on in this state."

Since she began running for office, Kriegel has been out meeting and greeting people in the communities she aspires to represent. She's enjoyed doing that so far.

"I love it. I love talking to people. It's been fun. Every time I go out – I go door-to-door and I go up to people on the street – everybody is looking for a change. And people are so nice," Kriegel said.

"I knew a lot about the community but I'm meeting so many nice people. It's amazing, it really is."

If elected, Kriegel said one of her first priorities would be to make it easier for companies doing business, or hoping to do business, in the state. As an example, she noted that Massachusetts has a corporate excise tax, commonly known as an inventory tax, of $2.60 per $1,000 of inventory.

"Regulations that hurt businesses that want to start doing business," Kriegel replied when asked which issues are facing her district. "We have that silly inventory tax – who does that? Where would you start a business, here or New Hampshire?"

She also wants to ensure the state does not provide welfare benefits to persons who entered the country illegally.

"Tightening up on welfare benefits for illegals. You can self declare and say 'I'm a resident' and get benefits," Kriegel said. "That's not fair. That's out of my money, your money. It's not fair."

Kriegel, who lives in a senior citizens building at 25 School St. in Quincy, also identified senior housing as a priority of hers.

Kriegel helped gather signatures to get a referendum asking voters to repeal a state law tying the gas tax to the consumer price index, on November's ballot. Kriegel said she will vote yes on that question, Question 1, citing the cost to drivers and municipalities.

"It makes everything cost more," Kriegel stated. "It makes food cost more. Our city taxes – say like in Quincy they have to fill the police cars with gas, they have to fill the school buses with gas, so that makes it more expensive for the towns."

Kriegel is opposed to Question 2, which would expand the state's bottle bill to cover non-carbonated soft drinks if approved. She said it would cost money for business to implement the expanded law and would cost consumers more.

"We have recycling already," Kriegel said. "Say like Stop & Shop, where are they going to put those cans and bottles? They'd have to pay money to store them and we then would have to pay more at the store. We're already paying more at the store because of gas prices."

Kriegel said she was unsure of her position on casinos in the state, but would vote against Question 3, which would repeal the state's casino law and stop them from opening as planned.

"That I am not sure. I am going to vote for the casino and whatever the people decide. I want it for Springfield, for the jobs out there," Kriegel said.

Kriegel said she would vote no on Question 4, which would allow employees of companies with more than 11 employees to earn an hour of paid sick time for every 30 hours worked, up to 40 hours a year. Workers at smaller companies would earn unpaid sick time at the same rate.

Instead, Kriegel supports GOP gubernatorial candidate Charlie Baker's alternative proposal, which would allow employees working for a company with 50 or more employees to earn an hour of paid sick time for every 40 hours worked, up to 40 hours annually. Workers at companies with fewer than 50 employees would be able to earn unpaid sick time at the same rate.

QUESTION 2 / 議題2

LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Do you approve of a law summarized below, on which no vote was taken by the Senate or the House of Representatives on or before May 6, 2014?

SUMMARY

This proposed law would expand the state's beverage container deposit law, also known as the Bottle Bill, to require deposits on containers for all non-alcoholic non-carbonated drinks in liquid form intended for human consumption, except beverages primarily derived from dairy products, infant formula, and FDA approved medicines. The proposed law would not cover containers made of paper-based biodegradable material and aseptic multi-material packages such as juice boxes or pouches.

The proposed law would require the state Secretary of Energy and Environmental Affairs (EEA) to adjust the container deposit amount every five years to reflect (to the nearest whole cent) changes in the consumer price index, but the value could not be set below five cents.

The proposed law would increase the minimum handling fee that beverage distributors must pay dealers for each properly returned empty beverage container, which was 2¼ cents as of September 2013, to 3½ cents. It would also increase the minimum handling fee that bottlers must pay distributors and dealers for each properly returned empty reusable beverage container, which was 1 cent as of September 2013, to 3½ cents. The Secretary of EEA would review the fee amounts every five years and make appropriate adjustments to reflect changes in the consumer price index as well as changes in the costs incurred by redemption centers. The proposed law defines a redemption center as any business whose primary purpose is the redemption of beverage containers and that is not ancillary to any other business.

The proposed law would direct the Secretary of EEA to issue regulations allowing small dealers to seek exemptions from accepting empty deposit containers. The proposed law would define small dealer as any person or business, including the operator of a vending machine, who sells beverages in beverage containers to consumers, with a contiguous retail space of 3,000 square feet or less, excluding office and stock room space; and fewer than four locations under the same ownership in the Commonwealth. The proposed law would require that the regulations consider at least the health, safety, and convenience of the public, including the distribution of dealers and redemption centers by population or by distance or both.

The proposed law would set up a state Clean Environment Fund to receive certain unclaimed container deposits. The Fund would be used, subject to appropriation by the state Legislature, to support programs such as the proper management of solid waste, water resource protection, parkland, urban forestry, air quality and climate protection.

The proposed law would allow a dealer, distributor, redemption center or bottler to refuse to accept any beverage container that is not marked as being refundable in Massachusetts.

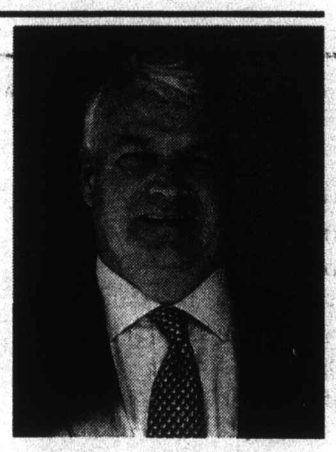

The proposed law would take effect on April 22, 2015.

A YES VOTE would expand the state's beverage container deposit law to require deposits on containers for all non-alcoholic, non-carbonated drinks with certain exceptions, increase the associated handling fees, and make other changes to the law.

A NO VOTE would make no change in the laws regarding beverage container deposits.

Heffernan Touts Experience In Private Sector

Republican Says He Has Skill Set To Be Next State Treasurer

MIKE HEFFERNAN

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mike Heffernan, the Republican candidate for state treasurer in November's election, believes his experience in the private sector makes him the right man for the job.

Heffernan grew up in Southborough and now resides in Wellesley. He began his career as a clerk for EF Hutton and later spent nearly two decades with Citigroup, rising to the position of managing director in charge of the firm's seven institution equity sales offices in the U.S. He left Citi in 2010 when he cofounded Mobiquity, Inc., a tech start-up that now employees 300 worldwide, include 120 in the Bay State. That experience, Heffernan explained, would pay dividends if he were elected treasurer Nov. 4.

"The treasurer, obviously, has all the debt, cash management, and bill paying. Thirty years of experience I think helps a lot. It also has the pension system, and I've worked with professional investors who actually manage pension money for 25 years," Heffernan said during an interview Monday.

"So I have the skill set for the management and the debt issuance and I also have the depth of management to sit on top of the pension fund and the pension system."

Heffernan, an elected Wellesley Town Meeting member, decided to enter the race for treasurer because of concern over the state pension system, schools, and cuts to local aid.

"Our pension system has gone from 84 cents on the dollar to 60 cents on the dollar – it's underfunded. We have some of the highest debt levels on a per capita basis in the nation. We've cut local aid nearly $700 million over the last 10 years. Those are just unsustainable trends and all of that is underneath the treasurer," Heffernan said.

"I love living here. I want my kids to be able to afford to live here. We use the public schools – I have two girls in public high school now. My dad is a retired teacher, so he's on the pension system. The pensions and the schools and the local aid are all personal to us."

If elected treasurer, Heffernan would also be in charge of the Massachusetts School Building Authority. In that role, Heffernan believes he could spur on job growth in the state by coordinating the construction of new schools with local community colleges and public universities – Lynn Public Schools students, for example, can currently enroll in North Shore Community College and transfer those credits to Salem State. He also wants to ensure new vocational schools would be able to meet their student's needs.

"We have the most educated population – we're just above 40 percent with bachelor's degrees," Heffernan said. "But we need to

擬議法律會以未領取的容器押金設立本州的環保基金。環保基金的運用必須由州議會提撥，且須用於支持廢土管理、水資源保護、公園、城市森林、空氣品質和氣候保護等計畫。

擬議法律將於2015年4月22日生效。

elected attorney general in 2006 and re-elected to that position again in 2010. Prior to serving as the state's attorney general, she was Middlesex County's district attorney for eight years.

Coakley worked as a prosecutor in Middlesex County for a decade before being elected district attorney; she also spent two years with the U.S. Justice Department's Boston Organized Crime Strike Force as a special attorney. Coakley attended Williams College and Boston University Law School.

Her running mate is Steve Kerrigan of Lancaster. Kerrigan, the president of the Massachusetts Military Heroes Fund, was a co-chair of President Barack Obama's second inaugural committee and served two years as the CEO of the 2012 Democratic National Convention Committee.

Coakley beat two challengers in September's primary, state Treasurer Steve Grossman and health care executive Don Berwick. She has appeared in Quincy twice in recent weeks, each time joined by House Majority Leader Ronald Mariano.

Grossman carried Quincy during the primary, taking 46.8 percent of the city's vote, while Coakley finished with 35.9 percent and Berwick came in third with 16.8 percent. Quincy voters also favored Brown over Coakley in the 2010 special U.S. Senate race, giving him 53.3 percent of the vote to her 45.5 percent. Coakley took the city easily in each of her runs for attorney general, carrying 66 percent of the vote in 2010 and 75 percent in 2006.

• Evan Falchuk. The Newton resident is the founder of the United Independent Party, vice chairman of Best Doctors, Inc., and an attorney. His running mate is Angus Jennings, a professional planner and consultant who resides in Concord.

• Scott Lively. A Springfield resident, Lively is a pastor and attorney. His running mate is Shelly Saunders.

• Jeffrey McCormick. McCormick, a Boston resident, is a founding partner of venture capital firm Saturn Partners. Joining him on the ticket is Tracy Post, a member of Yarmouth's Board of Selectmen.

Two candidates are running to succeed Coakley as attorney general. They are:

• Democrat Maura Healey of Boston. Healey most recently worked as an assistant attorney general under Coakley before resigning to run for office. She spent seven years in the attorney general's office, starting as the chief of the civil rights division and later becoming head of the public protection and advocacy bureau and the business and labor bureau. Healey formerly worked as a prosecutor in Middlesex County and as a litigation partner at Wilmer-Hale. Before beginning her legal career, Healey played basketball professionally for two years in Austria.

• Republican John B. Miller of Winchester. Miller previously practiced construction and government contracts law for Gadsby & Hannah and later became the head of the international law practice for Patton Boggs, LLP. He is the author of several books of public infrastructure contracts and also taught at MIT, his alma mater.

The three candidates vying to replace Grossman as treasurer are:

• Democrat Deborah B. Goldberg of Brookline. Goldberg is a former member of Brookline's board of selectmen, a position she held from 1998-2004, including two terms as the board's chairwoman. She ran for lieutenant governor in 2006, losing in the party

LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Do you approve of a law summarized below, on which no vote was taken by the Senate or the House of Representatives on or before May 6, 2014?

SUMMARY

This proposed law would (1) prohibit the Massachusetts Gaming Commission from issuing any license for a casino or other gaming establishment with table games and slot machines, or any license for a gaming establishment with slot machines; (2) prohibit any such casino or slots gaming under any such licenses that the Commission might have issued before the proposed law took effect; and (3) prohibit wagering on the simulcasting of live greyhound races.

The proposed law would change the definition of "illegal gaming" under Massachusetts law to include wagering on the simulcasting of live greyhound races, as well as table games and slot machines at Commission-licensed casinos, and slot machines at other Commission-licensed gaming establishments. This would make those types of gaming subject to existing state laws providing criminal penalties for, or otherwise regulating or prohibiting, activities involving illegal gaming.

The proposed law states that if any of its parts were declared invalid, the other parts would stay in effect.

A YES VOTE would prohibit casinos, any gaming establishment with slot machines, and wagering on simulcast greyhound races.

A NO VOTE would make no change in the current laws regarding gaming.

take it a step further to make sure that everybody – all 100 percent – have the right skills."

To help increase local aid and provide additional funding for pensions, Heffernan would call on the state to dedicate a percentage of new tax revenue to those areas.

"Over the past five years tax revenues in Massachusetts have gone from $18.5 billion to $24.5 billion," he said. "I think we need to earmark not only a restoration of local aid with that increase in tax dollars but also increased funding for our pension system."

So far, Heffernan said his campaign has gone well.

"People really like the fact that someone with 30 years of private sector experience wants to come in and get involved in the public sector," he stated. "That's why I'm running. I believe if you bring private sector experience and marry it with the public sector experience we can actually solve a lot of the issues we have."

Heffernan and his wife, Peggy, have three children. He holds a bachelor's degree in economics from Georgetown, a master's of business administration from New York University, and a master's of public administration from Harvard's John F. Kennedy School.

• Ian T. Jackson of Arlington, a member of the Green-Rainbow Party. Jackson is a software engineer and the president of Arlington's Martin Luther King, Jr. Birthday Observance Committee.

The two Democratic incumbent constitutional officers who sought re-election this year each face challengers.

Secretary of State William F. Galvin of Boston, who was first elected to the post in 1994, is opposed by Republican David D'Arcangelo, a Malden city councillor, and Acton attorney Daniel L. Factor of the Green-Rainbow Party.

Auditor Suzanne M. Bump of Great Barrington is seeking re-election to a second term. She is opposed by Republican Patricia S. St. Aubin of Norfolk, who has worked as an auditor for financial firms, and Green-Rainbow Party member MK Merelice, a Brookline town meeting member.

Tuesday's election is also mid-term congressional election. Democratic U.S. Sen. Edward J. Markey of Malden is seeking re-election to a full six-year term in Washington; he is challenged by Republican Brian J. Herr, a Hopkinton selectman.

U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch, a South Boston Democrat, is running unopposed for re-election in the state's Eighth District, which encompasses Quincy.

The five members of Quincy's delegation on Beacon Hill, all Democrats, are seeking re-election this year; two face Republican challengers.

Sen. John Keenan is seeking re-election to his third term in the state house. Keenan, an attorney, previously served on the Quincy City Council and as executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets. His opponent this year is Republican Les Gosule of Quincy, who helped champion the passage of a three strikes law in Massachusetts. Gosule is an accountant who runs his own firm in Milton.

In the Third Norfolk House District – which includes Quincy's Ward 2 and Ward 4, Precinct 5, as well as parts of Weymouth and Holbrook – Rep. Ronald Mariano, a Democrat, is seeking re-election. The majority leader in the House, he has served on Beacon Hill since 1991 and is a former

LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Do you approve of a law summarized below, on which no vote was taken by the Senate or the House of Representatives on or before May 6, 2014?

SUMMARY

This proposed law would entitle employees in Massachusetts to earn and use sick time according to certain conditions.

Employees who work for employers having eleven or more employees could earn and use up to 40 hours of paid sick time per calendar year, while employees working for smaller employers could earn and use up to 40 hours of unpaid sick time per calendar year.

An employee could use earned sick time if required to miss work in order (1) to care for a physical or mental illness, injury or medical condition affecting the employee or the employee's child, spouse, parent, or parent of a spouse; (2) to attend routine medical appointments of the employee or the employee's child, spouse, parent, or parent of a spouse; or (3) to address the effects of domestic violence on the employee or the employee's dependent child. Employees would earn one hour of sick time for every 30 hours worked, and would begin accruing those hours on the date of hire or on July 1, 2015, whichever is later. Employees could begin to use earned sick time on the 90th day after hire.

The proposed law would cover both private and public employers, except that employees of a particular city or town would be covered only if, as required by the state constitution, the proposed law were made applicable by local or state legislative vote or by appropriation of sufficient funds to pay for the benefit. Earned paid sick time would be compensated at the same hourly rate paid to the employee when the sick time is used.

Employees could carry over up to 40 hours of unused sick time to the next calendar year, but could not use more than 40 hours in a calendar year. Employers would not have to pay employees for unused sick time at the end of their employment. If an employee missed work for a reason eligible for earned sick time, but agreed with the employer to work the same number of hours or shifts in the same or next pay period, the employee would not have to use earned sick time for the missed time, and the employer would not have to pay for that missed time. Employers would be prohibited from requiring such an employee to work additional hours to make up for missed time, or to find a replacement employee.

Employers could require certification of the need for sick time if an employee used sick time for more than 24 consecutively scheduled work hours. Employers could not delay the taking of or payment for earned sick time because they have not received the certification. Employees would have to make a good faith effort to notify the employer in advance if the need for earned sick time is foreseeable.

Employers would be prohibited from interfering with or retaliating based on an employee's exercise of earned sick time rights, and from retaliating based on an employee's support of another employee's exercise of such rights.

The proposed law would not override employers' obligations under any contract or benefit plan with more generous provisions than those in the proposed law. Employers that have their own policies providing as much paid time off, usable for the same purposes and under the same conditions, as the proposed law would not be required to provide additional paid sick time.

The Attorney General would enforce the proposed law, using the same enforcement procedures applicable to other state wage laws, and employees could file suits in court to enforce their earned sick time rights. The Attorney General would have to prepare a multilingual notice regarding the right to earned sick time, and employers would be required to post the notice in a conspicuous location and to provide a copy to employees. The state Executive Office of Health and Human Services, in consultation with the Attorney General, would develop a multilingual outreach program to inform the public of the availability of earned sick time.

The proposed law would take effect on July 1, 2015, and states that if any of its parts were declared invalid, the other parts would stay in effect.

A YES VOTE would entitle employees in Massachusetts to earn and use sick time according to certain conditions.

A NO VOTE would make no change in the laws regarding earned sick time.

Incumbent Democratic County Commissioner Peter Collins of Milton is being challenged by Republican Michael Sotter of Bellingham. The remaining county office holders – District Attorney Michael Morrissey, Register of Probate Patrick McDermott, and Treasurer Joseph A. Connolly – are unopposed.

In the race for Governor's Council, Democratic incumbent Christopher Iannella Jr. of Boston is opposed by independent Jason Cosby of Abington and Joe Ureneck of Boston, a member of the Working Families Party.

Voters will also weigh in on four binding ballot questions Tuesday. The questions will appear on the back of the ballot.

Question 1 asks voters to repeal legislation that indexes future increases in the state's gas tax to the consumer price index (CPI), a measure of inflation. A yes vote would repeal the indexing, while a no vote would make no change to the law.

Question 2 asks voters to expand the state's bottle bill, so that a 5-cent deposit would be charged for the purchase of non-carbonated soft drinks, including bottled water and sports drinks. The state's current bill requires a 5-cent deposit for carbonated beverages, such as soda. A yes vote would expand the bottle bill; a no vote would make no change to the legislation.

Question 3 asks voters to repeal legislation that would allow three casinos and a slots parlor to open in Massachusetts. A yes vote would repeal that legislation, prohibiting casinos from opening. A no vote would keep the law in place.

If passed, Question 4 would require employers with 11 or more employees to provide up to 40 hours of paid sick time per year. Companies with less than that many employees would need to provide up to 40 hours of unpaid sick time. A yes vote would enact the proposed law, while a no vote would make no change.

您是否同意下文概述之法律？州參議院或眾議院於2014年5月6日當日或之前未就該法律投票。

摘要

為員工數在11名或以上之僱主工作的員工每一曆年最高可享有並使用40小時的帶薪病假，而為較小規模僱主工作的員工每一曆年最高可享有並使用40小時的無薪病假。

若有請假必要時，員工可使用病假，以(1)關照影響到員工本人或員工子女、配偶、父母或配偶父母的生理或心理疾病；(2)參加員工本人或員工子女、配偶、父母或配偶父母的例行性醫療約診；或(3)處理家庭暴力對員工本人或員工直系子女的影響。員工每30個工時即可獲得1小時病假，且可自到職日起或2015年7月1日起累計病假時數，以日期較晚者為準。員工可在到職日後第90天開始使用病假。

擬議法律涵蓋公私立機關僱主，惟特定市鎮的勞工僅在州憲法規定之情況下方涵蓋在內，擬議法律適用與否以地方或州政府立法機關投票結果或視是否有充足經費撥款得支付此項福利而定。使用帶薪病假時，帶薪病假將獲得員工同等時薪之補償。

員工最多可將40小時的未使用病假結轉至下一曆年，但每一曆年最多不得使用40個小時以上。僱主不必在員工離職時將未使用的病假時薪支付給員工。若員工因病假適用之理由而請假，但與僱主達成協議，將在同一次或下一次支薪期間工作相同時數或輪班數，則員工不必因請假而使用病假，且僱主也不必支付員工請假期間的薪水。嚴禁僱主要求員工增加額外工時來補足請假時數，或尋找替代員工。

若員工使用的病假時數超過24個連續排定工時，則僱主可要求員工提供病假需求證明。僱主不得因未收到證明而延遲接受病假申請或支付病假期間薪資。若有可預見的病假需求，員工應善盡一切努力事先通知僱主。

嚴禁僱主因員工行使病假權利而干擾或報復員工，或因支持另一名員工行使此權利而報復員工。

如果僱主在任何合約或福利計畫中採用較擬議法律寬大的病假政策，則擬議法律之效力不高於僱主在此類合約或福利計畫中的義務。擁有與擬議法律相同目的及相同情況之自有帶薪病假規定的僱主不必提供額外的帶薪病假。

擬議法律將於2015年7月1日生效，並聲明如果其任何部分被宣佈無效，其餘部分仍然有效。

投贊成(YES)票將使Massachusetts州勞工可在特定情況下享有並使用病假。

投反對(NO)票則不對病假相關法律做任何變更。

"It's a staggering amount of money but a truck like that should see service for 20 years," said Barron. "It's got an awful lot of nice features."

In total, Quincy has three ladder trucks in service at all times; one in North Quincy, one in Wollaston, and one at the fire department's headquarters on Quincy Avenue.

The new ladder truck will also join Quincy's fleet of eight engines spread throughout the city's five single-company stations.

The station in North Quincy has one ladder truck and one engine said Barron.

"This is a valuable piece of apparatus to our fire service," said Koch. "It's not cheap but we've got to continue to invest in our equipment and provide the resources the men need when they're called."

Koch added that ladder trucks are "built from scratch" and that it takes time to complete the assembly of such complex vehicles which nowadays rely on sophisticated electronic operating systems.

"The guys that run it every day were part of designing it," he said. "I'm very happy with it and am glad it's in service now and we'll be looking to do other pieces in the near future."

Barron said the truck was a welcome addition and that it would be reliable in handling not only fire emergencies, but medical emergencies which comprise up to 50 percent of the department's calls.

Evelyn, Anthony Venuto Celebrate 70th Anniversary

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Evelyn and Anthony Venuto celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary last Friday surrounded by friends and staff at the John Adams HealthCare Center.

Evelyn was 19 and Anthony was 22 when the pair tied the knot on Oct. 25, 1944.

Anthony said that the two met in Quincy while he was a resident of South Braintree.

He worked for Stride Rite, where he was employed for 30 years, and she at one time worked for what was at the time Quincy Hospital in the kitchen.

"I have to tell her," joked Anthony. "She forgets all the time!"

The two, who are known as "ma and pa" by staff, say the secret to a long marriage is to never stay mad at one another, but even if you do fight, to keep the arguments small and to never slam the door when exiting a room.

"Like I tell everybody, we always get along; we always agree to each other," said Anthony. "Nobody went out the door slamming, sleeping on another bed like they do today."

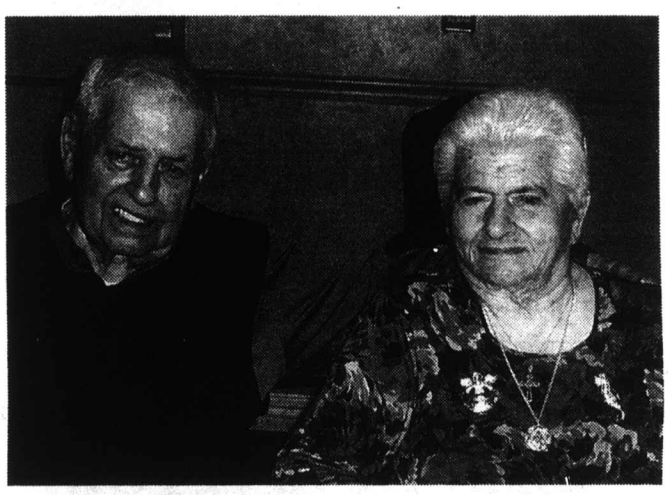

They both agreed that being May babies also made them more compatible.

Patience may also have something to do with their long-lasting relationship.

Anthony, 92, said Evelyn, 89, spends an hour almost every morning just doing her hair.

Anthony said he's grown used to her daily grooming routine and pointed out that he keeps his short; a simple pass of a comb through his hair is all he needs before he leaves his room.

When posing for photos, the two — who have been residents of the nursing center for about five years — weren't shy about showing outward displays of affection. In fact, Anthony insisted that his arm be around Evelyn's shoulder for the cameras.

ANTHONY AND EVELYN Venuto celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary Oct. 24 surrounded by staff and friends at the John Adams HealthCare facility. Married on Oct. 25, 1944, the two played several rounds of Bingo before being surprised with cake donated by Konditor Meister and a slideshow of photos depicting their life together. Anthony, 92, insisted on having his arm around Evelyn, 89, for all photos.

The pair thought they were simply going to play their favorite game — bingo — in the dining room as they usually do in the afternoon. Evelyn even won a round.

They had no idea that staff had planned to throw them a small celebration one day ahead of their actual anniversary.

Their wedding song "Always" by Frank Sinatra played as cake was cut and shared with over a dozen other residents of the facility who joined in on the party.

A slideshow of the couple played on a nearby television for all to see. The photos depicted the couple on their wedding day as they danced and more current pictures of the two at various social events at the facility were shown.

One photo showed Anthony in his full army uniform. He was military police, he said, and brought prisoners of war and wounded soldiers back to the United States.

In almost every photo of the two, they were holding hands.

The following day, the couple celebrated the momentous event surrounded by close family.

Honeywell Refinancing Approved

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city's move to refinance its lease of Honeywell equipment is projected to save more than $2.5 million.

The City Council voted Oct. 20 in favor of authorizing a $24 million bond to buy out the remaining amount of the lease. Quincy's outside financial advisor, Cinder McNerney, recommended the city use the bond to buy out the remaining amount of the lease to take advantage of low interests rates on bonds, according to Jim Fatseas, the chief of staff to Mayor Thomas Koch.

"Rates have moved dramatically and she suggested this is something we can't pass up," Fatseas said.

The exact amount Quincy will save won't be known until the bond is issued, at which time the interest rate would be set. McNerney indicated to city officials the savings could be in the range of $2.6 to $2.8 million, or possibly higher.

The bond will be paid off in full by 2026, keeping it on the same schedule as the original Honeywell lease agreement.

In other business Oct. 20, the council also:

Presented a commendation to the Quincy Police Department in recognition of its Narcan program. The department's officers have been carrying the nasal spray, which can be used to reverse an opiate overdose, since October 2010. Officers have used the spray 300 times since the program began.

"These public servants are literally saving lives by using Narcan. They are saving lives on a frequent basis. These are Quincy's children, mothers, fathers, sisters, and brothers. These are our people whose lives are being saved," said Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, who presented the commendation.

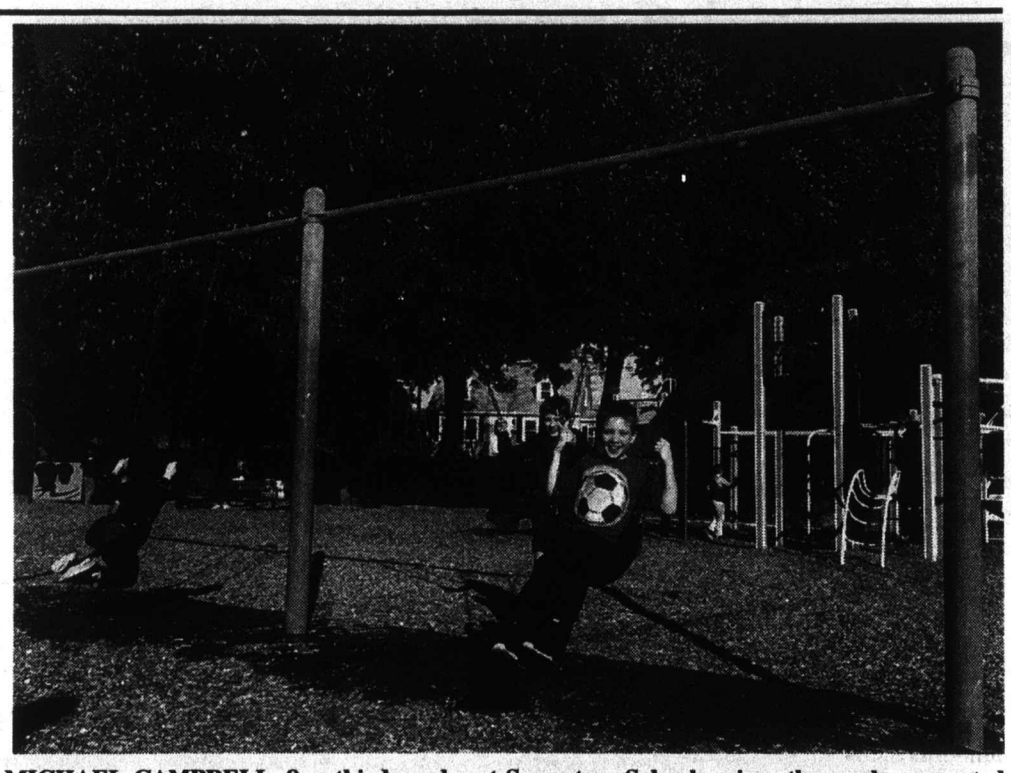

"If it wasn't for these officers, as individuals and as a department, there would be far more funerals in Quincy, far more tears shed by loved ones."

Police Chief Paul Keenan accepted the commendation on behalf of the department. He praised the department's patrol officers for the program's success.

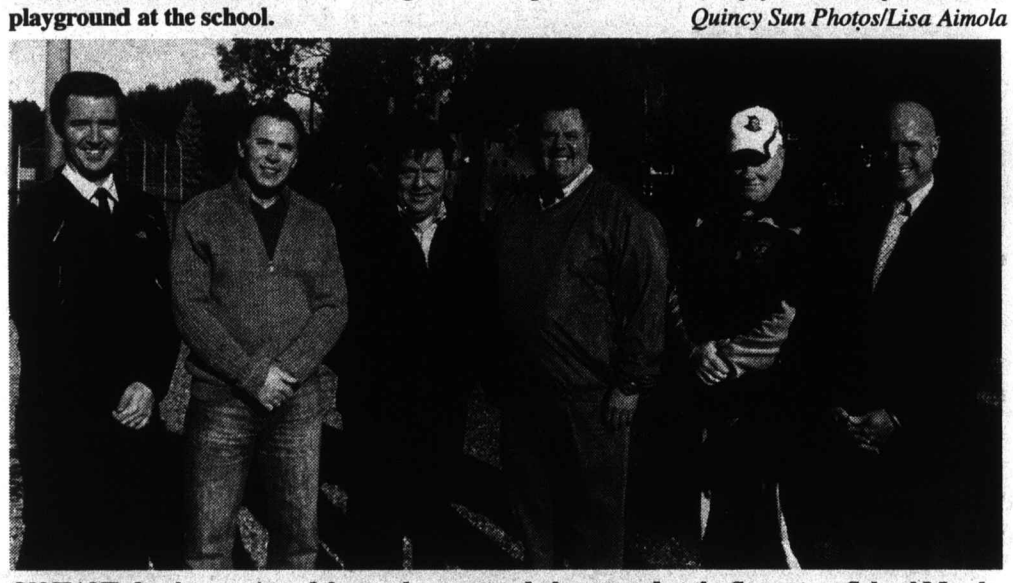

"I'm the face of the Quincy Police Department but the patrol officers – the men and the women that are out on the street everyday – are the backbone of the Quincy Police Department and they're the ones who truly deserve this recognition," Keenan said.

The council accepted a $200 donation from the 500 Victory Road Association to the Quincy Police Department's DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education Program).

Additionally, the council accepted $12,725 from various donors to the Mayor's Charity Cup Golf Tournament, proceeds of which benefit several local nonprofits. The donations accepted Oct. 20 night include $5,000 from Cabot, Cabot & Forbes; $2,500 from Fallon Ambulance; $1,000 each from Siemens, QATV, Holmes & Edwards, and Nauset; $500 from Tighe & Bond; and $725 in individual donations.

Renovated Squantum School Playground Opens

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A ribbon cutting ceremony held on Monday morning officially opened the newly renovated and updated Squantum Elementary School playground to students and neighborhood children, said Executive Director of the Park and Forestry Department Christopher Cassani.

Using $40,000 in mitigation funds approved by the City Council, $55,000 in Community Preservation Act funds, and supplemental funding collected through private donations, the playground saw major upgrades to its drainage system and associated structures.

A new retaining wall was built and new fencing was also placed.

Cassani said an asphalt perimeter was poured around the playground which is behind the school building and rubber surfacing was placed in high activity areas such as below the slide and underneath the swing set as a safety measure.

He said that he was also extremely happy with the six new benches placed on the playground.

The benches were purchased by Squantum residents looking to contribute financially in some way to the project, he said.

"The Squantum Playground renovation project highlights the heart of what the Community Preservation Act is all about in Quincy, showing the genuine interest and support of Quincy communities," said Director of Community Preservation Lisa Aimola. "Squantum resident Dave Blaton along with an enthusiastic group of local residents received a grant from the [Community Preservation Committee], funds raised within the community to contribute to the project, and worked closely with the Quincy Parks Department to update a very active playground for so many children and families to enjoy on a daily basis."

Grateful For Storm Response

It seems that I do my fair share of complaining but a real good storm in New England can put things into perspective.

That was a hell of a storm last week, and being surrounded by trees, I always find myself praying for their strength to remain upward. It was unsettling enough to prepare as we do for what may happen, but as the wind whipped outside, the temperature kept any fear of losing power at bay.

As we lost limb after limb, I passed the time listening to the police scanner, and it was like having the radio on, there was no break in the action. It was interesting to hear how they prioritized everything that was being thrown at them in rapid fire. It wasn't until my street became impassable that I called the police. It was a busy night for them and the dispatcher was collected, and within the half hour the guys from the park department arrived to clear the street.

My sister and I darted out to get everything that had fallen out of our yard and our neighbors. The wind had subsided some but the rain was torrential. The weather didn't leave much room for conversation, but the guys from the park department couldn't have been any nicer. In no time the mess was gone, and we were drenched. We were back in the house, and into warm dry clothes knowing that this was just one stop in a series of calls for help that these guys were responding to.

It is at times like these when I realize how lucky I am to live in such a responsive city. Thanks to all the men and women who worked that storm – it was one hell of a night!

needs to be issued, but special legislation allowed Quincy to issue the DIF BANs for up to ten years. Because the BANs were taken out incrementally beginning in 2007, the first $10 million bond must be issued in 2017, followed by another $10 million bond in 2018, and a third $10 million one in 2019. The final two BANs worth $3 million and $4 million were issued in 2012 and 2014, respectively, and bonds for those amounts need to be issued by 2022 and 2024.

To date, the city has paid $1.48 million in interest payments on the BANs, according to city auditor Susan O'Connor. That money has been paid from the short-term debt service section of Quincy's annual budget.

While the money has been taken from the city's general fund, Planning Director Dennis Harrington stated new revenue generated within the DIF district has been more than sufficient to pay off the interest on the BANs, according to reports issued by RKG Associates. The increased revenue is because of rising property values.

"I've tracked it through RKG, who are real estate economists. We have numbers, a set of numbers, and a program to show that there are more DIF taxes as a result of land values in downtown, including 10 Faxon and the one next door [Monroe Place]," Harrington said.

"We have sufficient tax revenue gained to cover DIF expenses and to continue to cover DIF expenses."

Harrington expects new projects, such as Quincy Mutual's project at Merchant Rows (also known as Block 4), to bring in more than enough revenue to make principal payments when the city starts issuing bonds beginning in 2017.

"At that time a major project will come on Block 4. Although it's a private project, there are incremental DIF taxes that have to be paid," Harrington said. "Any other construction that's downtown – we have three or four projects going downtown – they all create incremental new growth taxes."

Harrington added that RKG's reports have indicated approximately $1.5 million in new revenue has been generated in the DIF district to date.

In response to that, Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said the city has been lucky it has been able to pay the DIF interest without any new projects taking place yet in Quincy Center. He cited a confluence of factors that benefited Quincy, including rising property values, low interest rates, and tax increases.

"When you're telling me the interest paid thus far has been $1.479 million and the approximate new growth number is $1.5 million, we're pretty lucky because it's right on and we haven't achieved the growth we all hoped to achieve in the area," Palmucci said.

"We've been lucky in a sense that things have broken our way with interest rates, with values, with taxation – a new mayor hasn't come in and lowered the taxes or this mayor hasn't come in and lowered taxes – because that would change the numbers."

Downtown committee chairman Doug Gutro, who was on the council when both DIF bonds were authorized, said he and his colleagues at the time believed that new construction would pay off the $40 million in debt; he asked the administration to check with the state Department of Revenue to see if using tax receipts from rising property values would be eligible to pay off DIF debt. Gutro concurred with Palmucci that Quincy has been lucky to be able to pay off the interest so far.

"When you draw a circle around a neighborhood and you spend $37 million in that neighborhood for public improvements and you see absolutely nothing in terms of new construction or development and you rely on increases in existing property values to pay down the debt, there is a level of luck to that," Gutro said.

"The original proposal under the Phelan administration and continuing under the Koch administration had grand visions of new revenues coming from new growth and we're not there with those new revenues from new growth. We're relying essentially on increased property values in a district that has really seen no transformation in seven plus years to pay down the debt. We're fortunate [to be] in a place, potentially, where the debt is paid down."

Of the $37 million in DIF debt issued to date, $33 million has been budgeted.

The downtown committee reviewed the expenditures Monday night. Palmucci and Gutro were both critical of the use of bond money to pay for items including salaries, meals with Street-Works, and expenses incurred after the city purchased the Quincy Fair Mall and had to wait before demolishing it.

According to an audit provided to the council, the city spent more than $1.3 million of the DIF money on personnel services expenses from 2008 on; more than $50,000 in a purchase line item for meals, Quincy Fair Mall utility bills and other expenses such as fliers and photos; and nearly $67,000 for repairs and maintenance relative to the Quincy Fair Mall. Both councillors questioned the spending because the city will have to pay those expenses, plus interest, over the life of the bonds.

"The question remains the same for all of these," Gutro said. "Printing fliers, mileage, meals reimbursing conference attendees, supplies, repairs, monthly gas bills – what's the wisdom of paying those back over 17 or 27 years?"

James Fatseas, executive secretary to Mayor Thomas Koch, said the administration was comfortable with the expenditures based on their benefit to the city.

"There was a thought process that this council and this administration have that there would be an opportunity to benefit, and we still believe there will be a benefit, from the overall transformation of Quincy Center," Fatseas said.

"There will be a cost-benefit analysis that will be very positive for the city of Quincy. We still feel that way. That's why we continue the project."

Harrington noted the employees who were paid from the DIF bonds were responsible for securing millions in federal and state grants for the city, including $10 million for relocating Town Brook and $1 million for park design.

"These personnel services produced millions and millions of dollars," Harrington said. "They're worth their weight in gold."

Walking Tour Spotlights Hancock Cemetery History

Historical Society Director Edward Fitzgerald Leads Group Of 25 History Buffs

EDWARD FITZGERALD (right of tree), the director of the Quincy Historical Society, explains history of the John Quincy Adams family tomb to about 25 people who took a tour of the Hancock Cemetery last Saturday. By KRIS KALABOKAS

A walking tour of Hancock Cemetery on Saturday morning entertained and educated over 25 history buffs on the importance of gravestone imagery and highlighted some of the cemetery's most notable occupants.

Quincy Historical Society Executive Director Edward Fitzgerald, PhD, as part of the Quincy Parks Department Environmental Treasures Program, described in detail different gravestone designs while tying in elements of the history of the cemetery and some of the people buried there.

Across the street from the United First Parish Church, the cemetery — which has 700 known graves — was not connected in any way to the house of worship. "You have to dissociate the church from your imagination all together," said Fitzgerald. "The church wasn't there. In fact nothing was there. This was the edge of town."

He explained that the Puritans did not consider burial a deeply religious event or rite of passage, nor did they connect it in any way to their houses of worship. It was more of a practical affair, said Fitzgerald.

"You have to put them some place," he joked.

The cemetery is named after the Rev. John Hancock — whose son of the same name was one of the country's founding fathers — and was founded c.1640 with the earliest surviving stone being that of the Rev. William Thompson who died Dec. 10, 1666.

In 1809, the Adams, Quincy, and Beale families purchased the site under the conditions that cows no longer be allowed to graze in the area and that a wall be constructed to separate the cemetery from the city explained Fitzgerald.

Most notably, the cemetery was the original burial place of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their wives Abigail Adams and Louisa Adams prior to their relocation to the United First Parish Church crypt.

The crowd zigzagged through the cemetery, being careful not to bump into head and footstones which Fitzgerald described as "haphazardly placed" as bodies were not buried in chronological order at the time.

Placing stones to mark graves became more commonplace in the late 1600s he said. He added that it was likely that bodies unmarked by grave or footstones were buried in the cemetery.

The tombs lining the perimeter of the cemetery were constructed at a later date and signified that the deceased was a member of a higher socioeconomic class.

The stones lacked religious symbols such as crosses or praying hands as was customary at the time and in keeping with the Protestant belief system. Instead, they were adorned with winged death's heads, Grecian urns, skulls, and what could be interpreted as either waves or climbing vines, signifying the passage of time or a soul's ascent into heaven.

The lack of religious symbols may also have been tied into the theological notion of predestination which is the belief that everything that will happen has been predetermined by God and cannot be altered.

Fitzgerald pointed out what is widely consider the cemetery's most intriguing stone due to its unusual carvings. Depicted on the grave marker were two birds — either phoenixes or peacocks he said. He speculated that phoenixes could have been used to represent rebirth and renewal and that the carving was possibly the earliest example of such imagery used on headstones present in New England.

"There are a number of different ways to look at the cemetery," said Fitzgerald. "You can look at the designs of the stones as pieces of art; you can also use it as a way of kind of just measuring the different stages in which the early history of this community thought about death."

Once Mount Wollaston Cemetery opened in 1855, Hancock Cemetery slowly fell into disuse with very few burials occurring in the 20th century.

"I love the history," said Quincy native Marjorie Vient who took the tour with her daughter Johanna Dilorenzo.

Dilorenzo said that she and her mother find the city's history "very interesting" and that they both attend as many Historical Society public programs and tours as they can.

Fitzgerald said he found the tours, which he has been conducting for several years, so successful that he hopes to schedule them more frequently so that he can interact more personally with smaller groups and answer more of the public's questions.

Man Charged With Assault In Hancock Cemetery

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A Quincy man was charged with two counts of assault and battery and one count of assault with a weapon following an unprovoked attack behind City Hall on Saturday morning witnessed by 25 people taking a tour of Hancock Cemetery.

A Quincy Sun reporter called police at 11:18 a.m. after the group noticed three men and one woman getting into a physical altercation behind the fence separating the cemetery from the walkway which begins at the Quincy Center T Station.

According to Quincy Police Lt. Jack Sullivan, Jarrod R. Nelson, 37, of 7 School St. accosted the three other individuals as they passed by and demanded that they give him drugs. The situation quickly escalated and the men began punching and pushing each other.

Nelson, who appeared to be under the influence of some type of drug according to Sullivan, then grabbed the woman and began physically assaulting her.

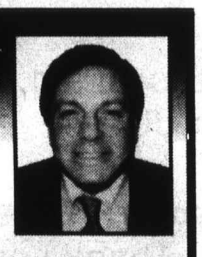

Four cop cars responded to the emergency call and officers quickly diffused the situation and cuffed Nelson, who has no significant violent history but has been known to repeatedly call police regarding insignificant grievances, said Sullivan.

The three victims declined medical attention however they did not sustain any serious physical injuries.

Nelson brandished a bottle opener as a weapon during the altercation, leading to the one charge of assault with a weapon, said Sullivan who added that the three victims who were friends did not know Nelson.

The tour, headed by Quincy Historical Society Executive Director Edward Fitzgerald, was briefly stopped while police responded to the incident but resumed 15 minutes later.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

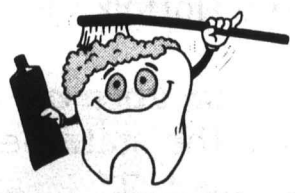

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE IMPORTANCE OF DENTAL CARE FOR DIABETICS

While daily brushing and flossing and regular visits to the dentist are important for everyone, people with diabetes face a particular challenge since poorly controlled blood sugars raise the risk of a number of oral health problems. Uncontrolled diabetes impairs white blood cells, the body's main defense against bacterial infections that can occur in the mouth. As diabetics' ability to fight bacterial infections is reduced, they face a higher risk of developing gum inflammation (gingivitis and periodontitis). Other potential oral problems related to diabetes include dry mouth (which can lead to soreness, ulcers, infections, and tooth decay) and fungal infections (thrush) that arise from antibiotic use. Diabetics who smoke face an even higher risk of developing thrush and periodontal disease.

As discussed in today's column, to the traditional issues considered specific to diabetics you can now add oral health. Regular brushing and flossing can be very beneficial to reducing plaque and bacteria from the mouth of a diabetic. We will know better how to help you achieve proper oral health if we know more about your diabetic health. We recommended seeking the professional dental advice we have to offer. Please call us at 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Because diabetes causes blood vessels to thicken, diabetics who do not properly control their blood sugar levels may not heal quickly after oral surgery or other dental procedures.

Quincy Battles North Quincy To 3-1 Win In Volleyball

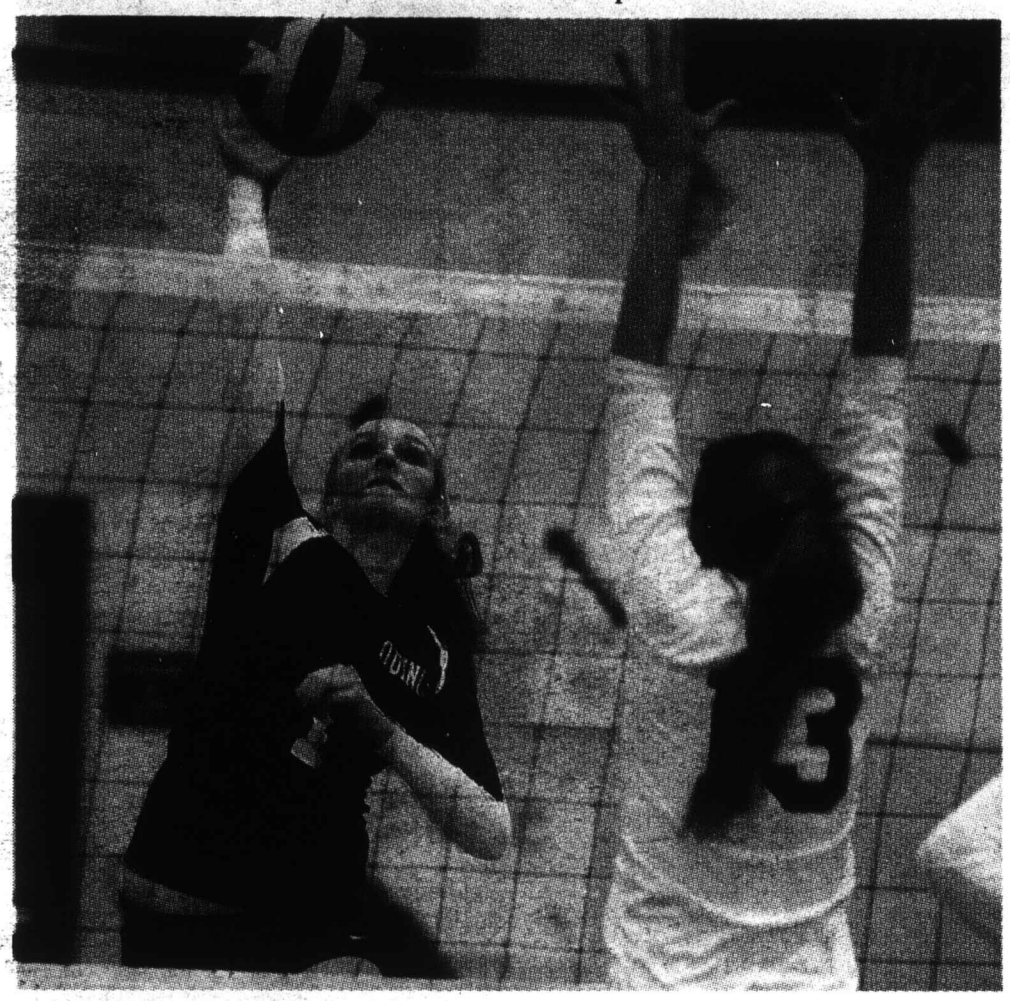

By BILL GRIFFIN

Emma Kimmell and Camille Mullaney will take away different memories from their final rivalry match.

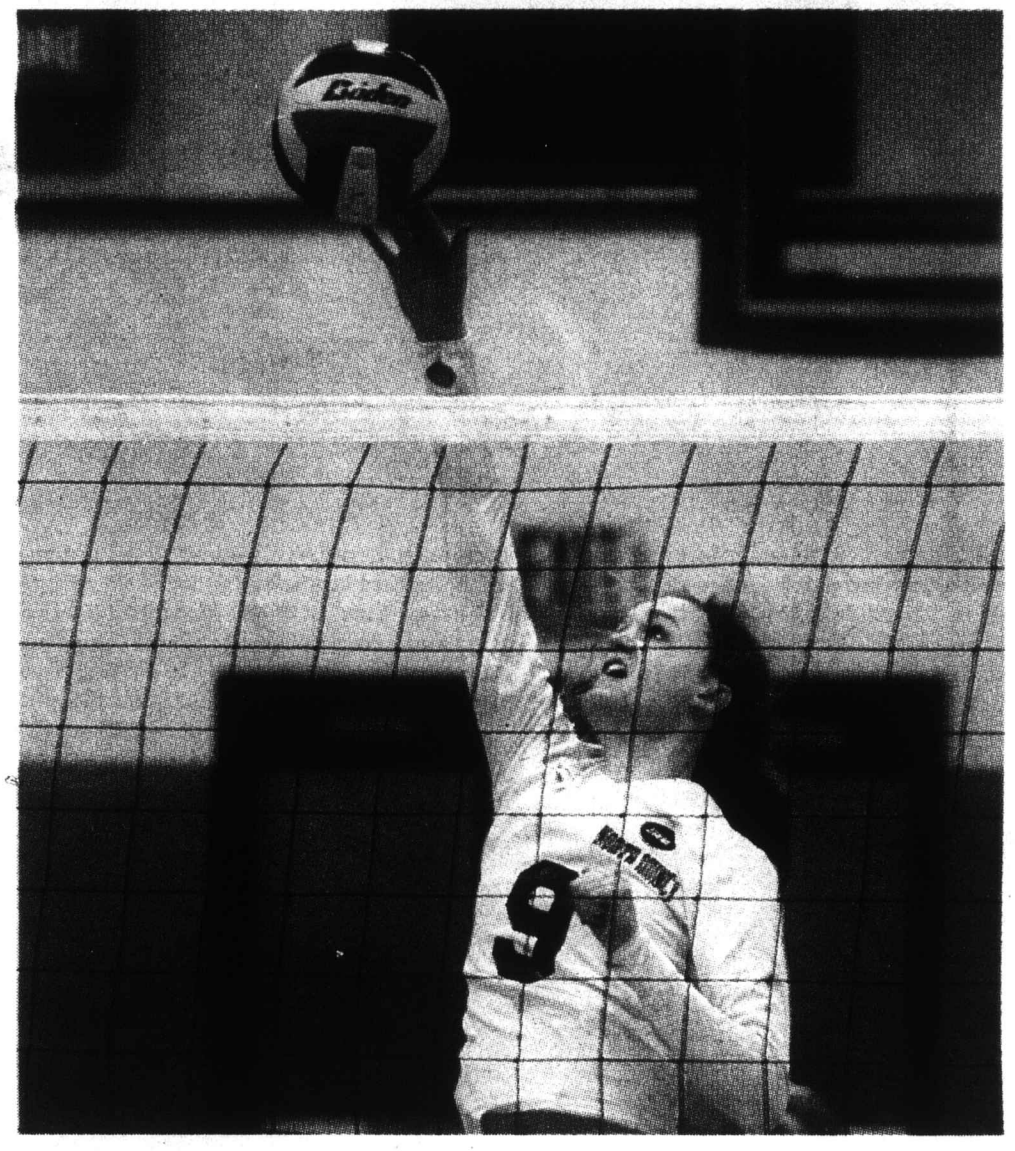

For Kimmell it will be the sweet sweep of North Quincy in her senior year. She will remember the match she played, the spinning, accurate serves and the digs she made for her talented front line which helped Quincy hold back a furious effort by the Red Raiders for a 3-1 Patriot League volleyball victory last week.

For Mullaney, it will be the joy of a match played hard and well. She will remember the blocks and the kills, the serve and the returns, the dives to the floor to keep alive points, the passes to teammates for shots into the open patches of the defense – all of which put North on the threshold

Democratic Incumbent, Republican Challenger Vie For State Senate Seat

Keenan, Gosule Face Off On Finances In TV Debate

By SCOTT JACKSON

Questions about finances dominated a recent debate between the two candidates vying to represent Quincy in the state Senate – incumbent Democrat John Keenan and Republican challenger Les Gosule.

The two candidates debated each other during an hour-long forum co-produced by Quincy Access Television and its counterparts in the other communities that comprise the Norfolk-Plymouth Senate District – Abington, Braintree, Holbrook, and Rockland. The debate, which originally aired Oct. 23, will re-air on QATV tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m., tomorrow (Friday) at 9 p.m., and at noon and 7 p.m. Saturday.

When asked which issue would be the most important to voters as they head to the polls next Tuesday, both Keenan and Gosule agreed it would be the state's finances.

Keenan, a former Quincy city councillor running for his third term in the State House, said steps have been taken over the past several years to improve Massachusetts' finances.

"I think the most important issue is making sure we have our financial house in order and we have been taking great steps in that regard," Keenan said. "We have been able over the past several years to reduce the income tax rate – we are now at 5.2 percent. While doing that we've been able to start restoring some of the budget cuts that occurred."

"I think it's important we continue to monitor each and every budget for fraud, waste and abuse," Keenan added. "Once we have our financial house in order, we're then able to commit the resources that we need to commit to education, to transportation infrastructure, to all the things that need to be done. Getting the house in order is the first thing we need to focus on next session."

Gosule, a certified public accountant who helped champion the passage of a three strikes law in Massachusetts, cited waste in the state's budget.

"I agree we have to do a better job in terms of monitoring the budget," he said. "We don't have a revenue problem in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. We have a spending problem in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Talk about waste, there are a lot of different examples."

In particular, he noted the Massachusetts' Health Connector's website encountered numerous issues during the rollout of the federal Affordable Care Act.

"We have a failed website that didn't work for the Affordable Care Act," Gosule said. "We spent over $50 million. There was silence in the State House. It concerns me. There was no lawsuit. There was no accountability. In a private business that would never happen."

The two candidates differed when asked about the legislature's vote this year to raise the minimum wage to $11 an hour by 2017.

"If you have a good company and you have a good employee there and that employee is making your business better, that employee is going to be paid a fair wage for the effort they put in," Gosule said. "You don't need government to tell you what to do."

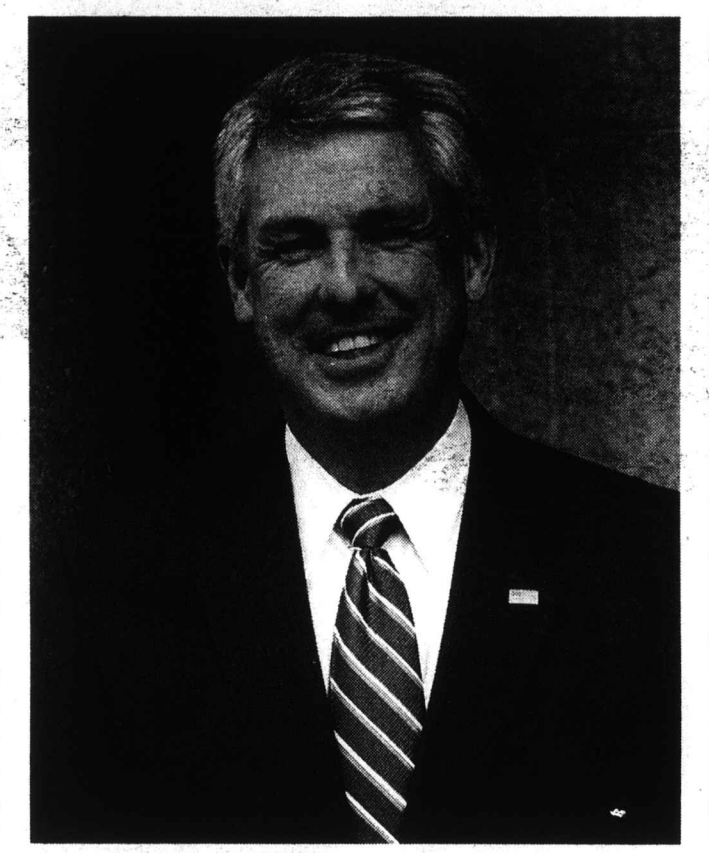

"I think you pay people a decent minimum wage. History has shown that if government doesn't call for that, it doesn't happen," Keenan, who voted in favor of the increase, replied. "Minimum wage has not kept up with the growth in the economy. Minimum wage has not kept up with the higher wage and has not kept up with wage levels of higher earners in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. That gap is growing."

The two were also asked how they would encourage economic development.

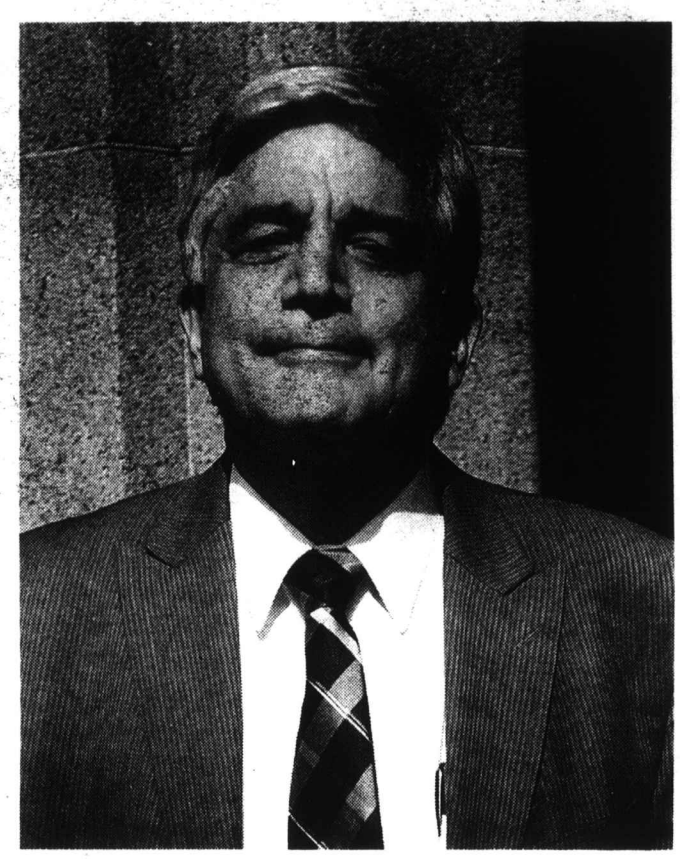

Keenan said he would focus on education, housing and infrastructure.

"If we are going to succeed as a commonwealth, if we are going to compete not only against other states but complete globally we have to make sure we have an educated workforce that is ready to step in and do that job. Recent estimates are that we are going to fall short on that if we continue on the path that we are as far as we fund public education and higher education here in Massachusetts. So I think it's critical that we fund education," Keenan said.

"Beyond that, I think we have to get housing costs under control. It's important that if we are going to have a workforce that they have the ability to live where they work. It's better for transportation. It's better utilization of time and I think it also strengthens their ties to the community if they are not spending a lot of time on the road. Which leads to the idea of investing in our infrastructure. Goods and services travel over the road and I think it's important we do that. We also have to find a balance between the appropriate amount of taxation, regulation, so that businesses can feel welcome here and that it's a friendly business climate."

JOHN KEENAN

LES GOSULE

Debate Airs On Quincy Access TV Channel 8 Thursday, Friday, Saturday

Gosule, who owns an accounting practice in Milton, responded by saying the state should help small businesses grow, encourage employers to do businesses here, and boost local aid.

"Obviously economic development is really important to the district and to the state. I'm a believer, based on my background, that you have to have a win-win situation. That means we have to have a state economy that encourages employers to be here. And good employers are going to hire good employees. We have to have a win-win situation. Economic development would mean we sponsor small businesses and I don't believe we're doing that," Gosule stated.

"There are a lot of different examples. There was a vote by Sen. Keenan on a sales tax for computer technology. I don't think that's a way to sponsor small businesses and get small businesses in here. You talk about economic development, the issue becomes education. I believe education is really important, obviously. The greatest asset we have is our children. Education is key. Well if education is so important, shouldn't we have greater local aid? We haven't had real increases in local aid since 2007."

During his rebuttal, Keenan noted local aid in his district has increased since he was elected and that he later voted to repeal the tech tax.

The two candidates were asked also about issues facing the communities they are vying to represent, such as the redevelopment of Quincy Center and the state's role in that project going forward.

Keenan said the state should play an active role in encouraging redevelopment, by creating new economic target areas in the city and by assisting with infrastructure costs.

"I think the state should encourage it. We should encourage it with economic target areas, if necessary, in other business districts in the city. In the downtown we've already done that. We should do it by way of assisting with infrastructure costs," Keenan stated.

"An amendment I got into a recent bond bill provided a way for that to happen. We were also successful getting into a transportation bond bill money for design and engineering the Quincy Center train station garage. Those are all vital pieces of the downtown redevelopment."

Gosule concurred that the state should help encourage development, adding it should also look into what went wrong with the original plan.

"It's a place we as a state should help sponsor and improve as much as possible. The question I really have is Merchants Row was a disaster. It took a long time to get nowhere. My question is what responsibility do we have to see what happened? Who do we hold responsible? I think that that's part of the question for me," Gosule said.

"Yes, we should help Merchants Row and yes we should help downtown Quincy – the infrastructure, the train station. We should do it in a responsible way in terms of how we raise taxes. But we should also see how it got to this problem in the first place."

Quincycycles Urges No On Question 1

Do you want to drastically cut your gas tax? Then ride your bicycle to work, or walk to the store, or take public transportation on your next trip to Boston. Those are proven ways to lower your gas tax. However, as a matter of public health and safety, Quincycles supports gas tax indexing and urges voters to vote NO on Question 1.

Recently, members of Quincycles heard a presentation given by Steve Miller of the Harvard School of Public Health. Steve introduced us to innovative safety-focused engineering designs from around the world, some of which are being implemented in Boston and Cambridge that allow motorists, pedestrians, and bicyclists to share the roads in safer and smarter ways in congested urban areas like Quincy. These infrastructure improvements have proven results of lowering the amount of injuries and fatalities and have increased the safety for all who use the roads. One example is a Dutch designed intersection where the four corners of an intersection are expanded to make the distance to cross the street shorter for pedestrians, rounded to protect bicyclists from right-turning trucks and cars, while at the same time maintaining the usual flow of traffic.

However, these safety-focused designs require financial commitment. They are not prohibitively expensive, but they are new and become more difficult to implement if there are not sufficient revenues to support them. A NO vote on Question 1, to maintain gas tax indexing, is a vote to support the necessary revenues the Department of Transportation needs to both maintain and improve upon our current network of roads, bridges, and highways. A NO vote allows gas tax revenues to increase with inflation to support both repair and maintenance projects, and also for investment in innovative and safety-focused infrastructure designs with a proven track record of public safety and effectiveness.

We understand that tax increases are not popular. However, we also believe that residents of the Commonwealth want and deserve the safest roads that money can buy. For the sake of public health and safety, we urge a vote of NO on Question 1. Together, let's think in fresh new ways, and make the necessary investments, to make our streets and roads as safe and user friendly as possible. And again, if you want to cut your gas tax, then ride your bike!

Board Votes 4-1 For Sportsplex Beer, Wine License

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Board of License Commissioners in a 4-1 vote last Tuesday approved the application of the Marina Bay Sportsplex, 260 Victory Rd., allowing them to serve beer and wine to patrons on site despite concerns from neighbors regarding a lack of parking in the area, the possibility of an increase in traffic, and noise.

"We will never resemble a night club," said manager Donald E. Martin, who has successfully applied for two, one-day licenses in the past permitting him to sell alcohol during charity events.

"There were no incidents or complaints that we're aware of," he said.

The 24,000-square-foot facility, which opened in 2011, is a completely enclosed sports facility that hosts soccer, lacrosse, baseball, football, and other sports leagues.

Martin said that alcohol would be served primarily to customers using the virtual golf machines in the evening hours and that people would not be going to the facility just to drink.

He added that pressure from competing sports complexes in neighboring cities who serve alcohol to their customers pushed him to apply for the Common Victualer Wine and Malt Restaurant License.

Customers have also been requesting that alcohol consumption be permitted on site, he said.

"It's in response to its existing customers and clientele," said Attorney Jon Aieta. "These individuals have asked whether they can have a drink before or after some of their adult leagues.

"No one in the Quincy immediate area has access to this type of a facility without our facility," he said.

Alcohol will be served from a roughly 5-foot-long countertop with no seating. Customers will then be directed to a separate room with about eight or nine tables where they will be able to drink their beverages. Prepackaged foods that can easily be heated up in a microwave will also be served.

Alcohol will only be served by individuals who are TIPS (Training for Intervention ProcedureS) certified on the ground level in plastic cups; the upper level will remain closed off to patrons.

Aieta said the alcohol serving area would have a capacity of 35 patrons.

Both youth and adult sports leagues use the facility, however Aieta stressed that the two would not intermingle and both adults and children would not see changes to their league schedules.

"This is something that's an accessory use; it's not going to change the identity of the Sportsplex," he said.

He added that those who have just finished a workout would most likely be wearing workout clothes and would not be comfortable heading to another bar or restaurant outside of the complex for food or alcohol.

Board members were presented with a petition signed by roughly 150 people, mostly Quincy residents, in support of the proposal. Signatures included those of School Committee Member David McCarthy, Ward 1 City Councillor Margaret Laforest, and Norfolk District Attorney Michael Morrissey.

The serving of alcohol will not create an increase in foot traffic in Marina Bay because the facility will be only serving customers utilizing the sports fields or watching competitions, said Martin.

"Our business is financially dependent on adult leagues," he said, adding that he was concerned he'd lose customers if he didn't start offering alcohol.

"Residents don't want another Ocean Club scenario," he said. "We will never, ever — and I can't say this enough — be a night club. That's not our intent; we're in the sports business."

Residents who opposed the proposal said they felt that the increase in alcohol licenses in Marina Bay had created a shortage of parking for residents and visitors to the area.

"We have nine licenses; when is enough enough?" asked 14-year-resident of Marina Bay Maureen Glynn. "Every time I turn around somebody gets a liquor license.

"We have an issue with parking," she added.

Martin noted that adult leagues typically use the Sportsplex on weeknights during the colder months which are off-peak hours for Marina Bay's restaurants.

Kelly Coleman, whose father Peter Coleman is a member of the facility's management team, said she was in favor of the project.

"I actually don't really understand the arguments against the liquor license because there are plenty of establishments there that already serve alcohol and serve a far greater number of patrons than this would," Coleman said. "I think this business is really great for Quincy."

Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee, who has been vocal in his opposition of the complex holding any alcohol licenses in the past, spoke out against the proposal relaying concerns from Marina Bay residents who feel that there are enough establishments serving alcohol and that the area was low on parking spaces.

"The vast majority of Marina Bay residents are adamantly, vehemently opposed to this," he said. "[Martin] can talk about enhancing the experience of his customers but my role is to make sure that he doesn't enhance the experience of the residents of Marina Bay to more noise and drunkenness."

He said he was concerned patrons would loiter in parking lots causing trouble following closing time.

"This is not a welcome, additional license to Marina Bay," he said.

McNamee's sentiment was shared by Board Chairman Joseph Shea.

"My opposition is based on parking, general traffic flow, and I think there's enough places [serving alcohol] at Marina Bay," said Shea. "I will be voting no."

Several board members said they felt any increase in traffic would be negligible and that parking would not be impacted by granting the license.

Fire Chief and board member Joseph Barron said he was in support of the proposal because the facility is entirely indoors.

"I don't really have any hiccup with this," added board member and Police Chief Paul Keenan. "I don't think we're adding a lot of people to Marina Bay. I don't think people are going to go out there and decide to go hang around and drink beer. I think basically you're going to serve the clients you already have."

Beer and wine will be served between 8 a.m. and 1 a.m., seven days a week, however Aieta said that if patrons are not present, alcohol service will be stopped earlier in the evening.

The applicant will not be seeking a full liquor license in the future, said Aieta.

In additional License Board news:

• Eight Quincy businesses have been cited following failure to comply with alcohol regulations. Inspections were performed on Sept. 27 by Quincy police.

A hearing will be scheduled for representatives of the eight businesses to go before the board on Nov. 18 during a regularly scheduled meeting of the License Board of Commissioners.

Those businesses are Yaz's Place, Chab's Daily Mart, Taiyou Shabu & Sushi, Atlantic Market, Dave's General Store, Kama Lounge, S6 Sports Bar, and Nonna's Kitchen.

The board also sent notices to package stores informing them of operating hours for the 2014 holiday season:

• Wednesday, Nov. 26, package stores may remain open until 11:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 27, Thanksgiving Day, Package stores may not sell or deliver alcoholic beverages at any time during the day. Wednesday, Dec. 24, Christmas Eve, package stores may remain open until 11:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 25, Christmas Day, package stores may not sell or deliver alcoholic beverages during the day; restaurants serve alcoholic beverages at noon on Christmas Day. Wednesday, Dec. 31, New Year's Eve, package stores may remain open until 11:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 1 2015, New Year's Day, package stores may sell or deliver alcoholic beverages at any time during the day.

QUINCY QUARTERBACK James Lam follows the blocking of teammate and fellow captain William Young against Duxbury. Lam rushed for 206 yards, including a touchdown.

Quincy At Needham In Playoff Matchup Friday

Duxbury Deals Presidents First Loss Of Season

By BILL GRIFFIN

The final margin certainly did not tell the story, and even the final result result was a bit surprising because Quincy and, especially senior quarterback James Lam, did so many good things in its showdown against Duxbury at Veterans Stadium Friday night.

For three quarters, the two were dead-solid even. However, the Dragons scored 21 points in the final period to break open a tense battle and hand the Presidents their first loss of the season, 35-14 in a victory which decided the Patriot League Keenan Division title.

Quincy (6-1, 4-1 in the league) will make its first appearance in a football playoff game since 2003 when the Presidents visit Needham (5-2) Friday at 5:30 in the opening round of the EMass Division 2 South Sectionals.

Needham (5-2) is seeded No. 4 in division while Quincy is seeded No. 5. Needham plays out of the Carey Division of the Bay State Conference. Needham's losses were to Walpole and Newton North who are each 7-0.

The only common opponent the two teams played was Braintree. Quincy dropped Braintree, 29-8 while Needham edged the Wamps, 25-23.

Duxbury (5-2 overall, 5-0 in the league) won its seventh straight league crown and will face Natick in the division playoffs.

"It (the Duxbury game) wasn't played like a game decided by 21 points, but it is what it is," said Quincy coach Bill Reardon. "We made too many mistakes for a game that decided a league title, and Duxbury knows how to capitalize in big games."

All this is true, but most people would have predicted a victory if told before the game that Quincy would do all of the following:

--- Begin with Lam. He played an unforgettable first half. In the opening two quarters, he rushed for 144 yards on 15 carries and threw for 37 more on four completions. He threw an eight-yard TD pass to J.T. Bain, ran one in from the one after carrying for all six plays of the 51-yard scoring drive, and hit Jake Bergonzi with a conversion pass four seconds before intermission to tie the score at 14-14. That's one half.

In the first two quarters, Quincy ran 33 offensive plays. On 32 of them, Lam ran, punted or threw the ball. In the first half, Quincy gained 181 total yards. Lam either ran or threw for all of them. All of them. Quincy scored 14 points. Lam ran or threw for all of them. All of them.

On third-and-five early in the second period, on a remarkable play which should be put in a time capsule, he blew up two tackles in the backfield, pinballed through at least five more in the secondary, and simply refused to go down en route to a 21-yard journey to the Duxbury 44.

On his scoring run from the one, he went through a clean, head-on hit three yards in the backfield to get the TD.

He finished the night with 206 yards rushing and 59 yards passing on five completions. It was an extraordinary effort.

"He is a beast. He's a tremendous talent and a tremendous competitor. His lower body strength is outstanding," said Duxbury coach Dave Maimaron.

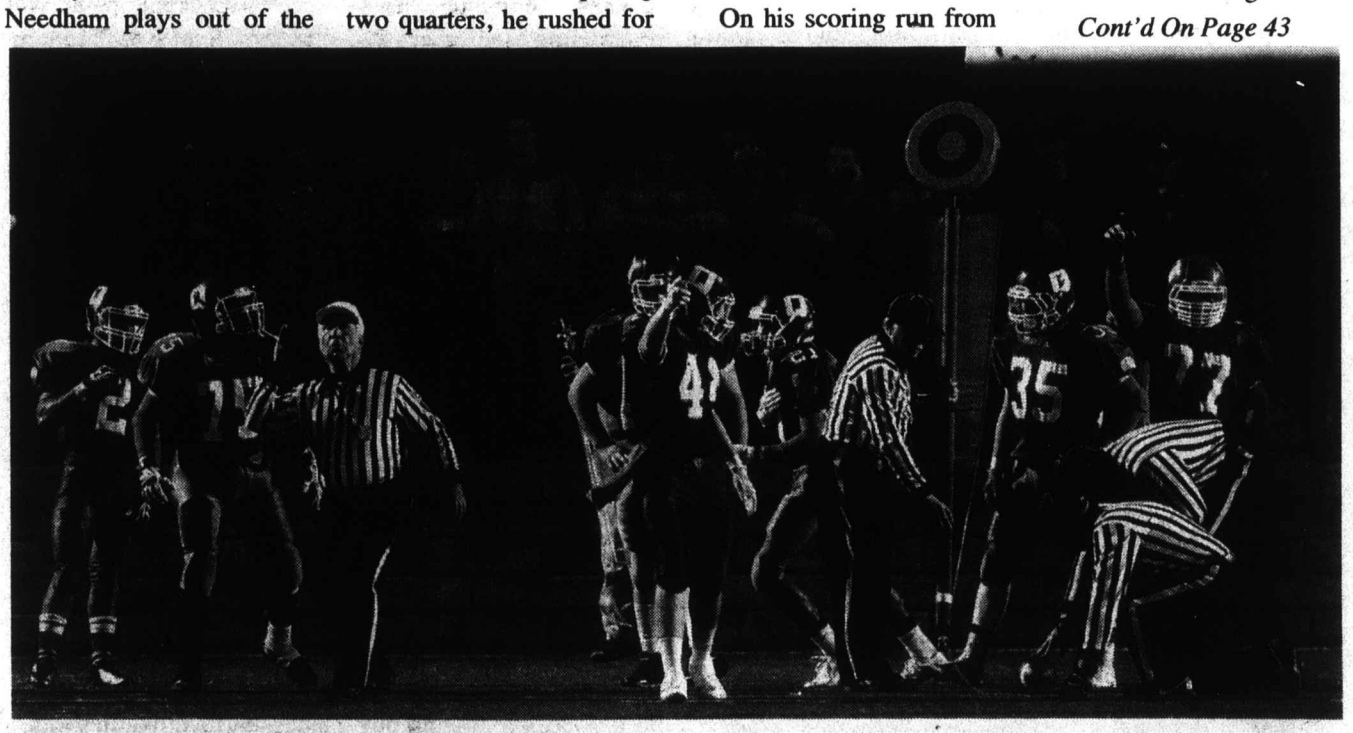

--- The defense made big plays. Bain ended a Duxbury threat in the first half with an interception in the Quincy end zone. Jake Bergonzi and Curtis Calley stuffed a fourth-down quarterback sneak by Bobby Maimaron at the Quincy 49 to set up the Presidents' tying score just before the half.

Bergonzi and Garrett Cronin stood up Duxbury's Devin DeMerritt on fourth down at the Quincy 12 early in the third period. Early in the fourth with Quincy down, 21-14, Calley recovered a fumble to give the of a huge upset.

"It's such a great feeling," said Kimmell who has been on varsity for four years. "We had never beaten them until this year and we got a sweep of the two matches. They're our rival, the match we look forward to more than any other all year. The way we played made me proud."

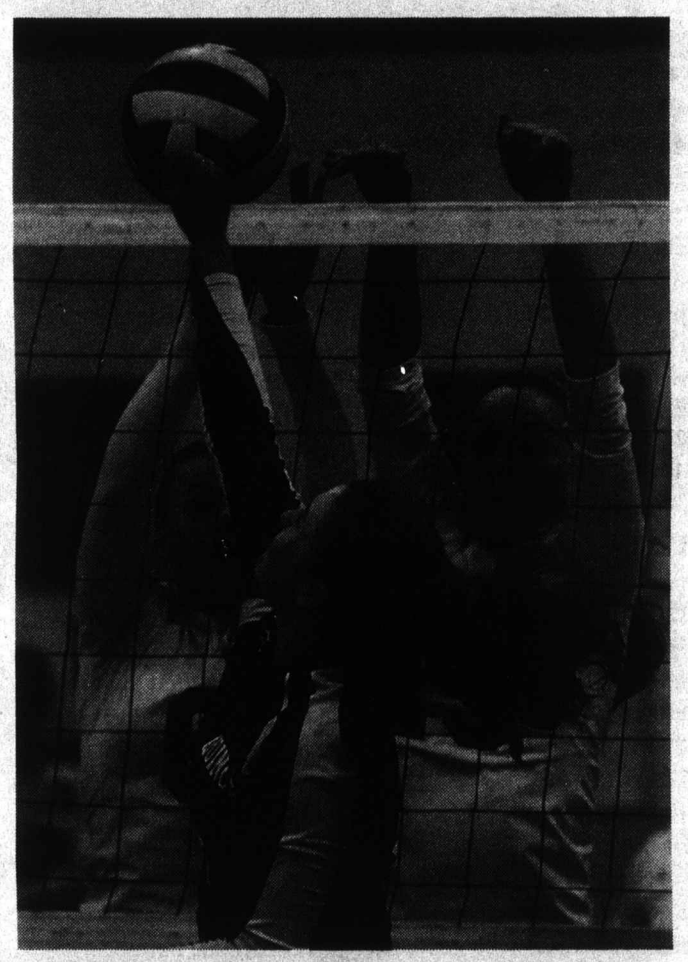

"Well, it would have much better if we had won," Mullaney smiled. "But to be a part of it, to be a part of a night like this is a great feeling. It's always fun playing Quincy. We played hard, as well as we could and we gave them a good match."

Kimmell and Mullaney both got it right. For Quincy (16-2), the 25-13, 20-25, 25-22, 22-19 triumph was another chapter of a four-star season which will wind its way to the south sectionals of the state tourney. For North (6-10), it was a night when the Red Raiders played their best volleyball, an effort on Senior Night which ended a difficult season with a sense of good feeling.

"I liked the way we didn't panic and communicated well when they came back against us," said Quincy coach Jacqui Niosi. "But give them credit. North played awesome. They were aggressive, and they didn't hold anything back."

"I couldn't be prouder of the kids. It was our best match of the season," said North coach Kerry Ginty,

The key to Quincy's fast start and the key to the entire night was the Presidents' gifted front line of Nicole Jorgensen, Sarah Gibbons, Angela Hoti and Maggie Parker. Kimmell, Alicia Walker (24 assists), Emma Kelly (12 digs) and Jesse Lei (three digs, four kills, and a rocket of a serve) had solid

THE QUINCY - NORTH QUINCY volleyball match Oct. 22 was competitive from the opening volley until the Presidents secured a 3-1 win over the Red Raiders. Quincy won the first game but North evened it 1-1 after two. The Presidents won the third and deciding fourth game by scores of 25-22 and 25-19. matches. But it was the front line who played with power and touch, who blocked and passed so well that decided the match.

Gibbons had 13 kills and two aces. Jorgensen (nine kills including two howitzers which won the pivotal third game), Parker (six kills), and Hoti (five kills) formed a front line which left few holes, few safe places for North's shots. That's 33 kills between four players. That's balance. That is not easy to defeat.

"Our front line drilled the ball and cleaned up a lot of their play especially in the final two games," said Niosi.

North was close. The Red Raiders were at their best in the second game when they played better defense and took back the net. They were within a point late in both the third and fourth games. Molly Minton was terrific on the backline with 12 digs. Dana Grasselli and Sammy Caldwell did a good job moving and setting the ball. The Red Raiders found a pace and a flow to their game.

"I think after the first set we played much better defense, we kept balls alive and that helped us get back in the match," said Mullaney.

"We cleaned up some things with our passing and that was a big help," said Ginty.

At net, senior Gabrielle Flaherty (three kills and ten digs), junior Isabelle Flaherty (six kills, five blocks and seven digs), freshman Jen Butka (three kills, two blocks), sophomore Remy Aucoin (a kill, a block and a dig) and the ever-present Mullaney (three kills, a block, two aces and nine digs) moved the ball around, challenged every Quincy shot and found open spaces for their shots.

"I thought our front line played well, and we have a lot of those girls back next year," said Ginty.

North was within 22-21 in the third when Jorgensen delivered two unreturnable slams to clinch the game. The Red Raiders led, 17-14 in the fourth when Quincy closed it with a 10-2 run thanks to the serving and net play of Gibbons and the excellent shot-making of Parker who was accurate and confident with her placements for the whole match.

"We stayed aggressive in the last two games and did a good job digging out points," said Niosi.

Before the match began, the two teams rushed the net and exchanged flowers. After it was over, the handshakes were those of friends who had just battled in a match that meant a great deal to both teams. Play hard, no hard feelings. Just as it should be.

"I've played with girls from North in leagues all my life. Before and after the match we're friends. During the match we'll do anything to beat each other," smiled Kimmell.

Kimmell and Mullaney each battled injuries this year. Kimmell played with a bad knee. Mullaney had ankle and leg injuries. However, when they talked after the match, they didn't speak of injuries. They spoke of the wonderful spell of the rivalry match.

"This is what we build up to, our biggest game. I love the atmosphere, the way the gym feels with all the fans watching," said Kimmell.

"It's just fun. This is the biggest crowd we get all year for our games and it adds so much to the match," said Mullaney.

Each had a favorite memory of their rivalry games.

"I think I'll remember diving to the floor to keep a point alive. You see the ball, you don't think you can get it, but you hear the crowd cheer and you find something extra make the play. It's a great feeling." said Kimmell.

"I'll remember that in junior year I once blocked a shot from Nicole Jorgensen. She's 6'4". That's not easy to do," said Mullaney with a big smile.

On Senior Night, North's Lindsay Delaney, Caitlin Coneran, Mckenna McBirney, Gabrielle Flaherty, Grasselli, Minton, and Mullaney and their families were introduced to the crowd before the match.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

A RUNNING START

As runners know all too well, their favorite form of exercise is a weight-bearing activity that has the potential to cause back pain. Each time the running foot hits the ground, which occurs between 80 and 90 times per minute for each foot, the body absorbs the shock of two to four times its body weight. While the feet, ankles, knee joints, and surrounding muscles and tendons absorb the initial impact, these forces transmit directly to the pelvic and spinal area. Injury avoidance involves selecting good running shoes, maintaining an erect posture, improving flexibility in the lower back, stretching regularly, and running on soft surfaces. Following a chiropractic maintenance regimen also helps to ensure a healthy back.

The structure and condition of the body influences how the body functions and its ability to heal itself. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we provide quality, principled chiropractic care with professionalism, efficiency, and integrity. We will help you find relief and set you on a path to correcting the problem without the use of drugs or surgery. Study after study confirms that chiropractic care can be beneficial to all family members. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and let us help you and your family maintain healthier lives free of pain. Come see us at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health!. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. Runners with underlying lower-back problems may find that running/jogging makes their pain worse or leads to additional types of pain such as sciatica (leg pain, weakness, or numbness).

North Quincy Football Visits Norwood Saturday

Red Raiders Look To Rebound After Loss To Scituate

By JOE REARDON

North Quincy had a prime opportunity to pick up a much-needed win last Friday night against a Scituate team that was in the midst of a brutal slump and trying desperately to right a four-game losing streak and salvage its season in the Patriot League.

Once again the Red Raiders weren't able to take advantage of a golden opportunity and it cost them a win.

Poor tackling in the second half and an untimely interception turned the tables on North Quincy as the Sailors scored 28 points to deal the Red Raiders a frustrating 35-13 loss at Scituate. North Quincy's record dropped to 2-5 on the season heading into Friday night's contest against an opponent that has yet to be determined while Scituate improved to 3-4 with the win that certainly gave the team a much-needed lift.

Head coach Mark Nutley echoed the frustration of North Quincy. "That was a game I think they felt that they had," he said. "Especially the way they came out and ran the ball. We talked about it at halftime. They were going to make an adjustment on defense and we were going to block it up and the first play we don't block anybody. We're the type of team where once things start going bad for us we don't recover from it very well, which is frustrating.

"If I knew how to change it I would have corrected it weeks ago. We'd be 7-0 instead of 2-5 if I knew how to fix it."

The two teams looked evenly matched in the first two quarters and headed into the half knotted at 7-7. Running back Dayvon Jones punished the Sailors with 85 rushing yards in the opening 22 minutes, including a nifty 11-yard scamper up the middle that put the Red Raiders up 7-0 and put the toppings on an eight-play, 69-yard drive.

The Sailors tied it in the second quarter as Scituate quarterback Christian Brady completed four passes for 59 yards to move the ball to the Red Raiders' 4-yard line. Colin May busted into the end zone on the next play and Fran Donovan kicked the extra point to make it 7-7 with 5:09 left in the half.

The second half turned into a nightmare for the Red Raiders and saw their hopes for a win quickly dissipate on Scituate's Senior Night.

Scituate made the adjustment at halftime to jam the line to slow down Jones and the Red Raiders' running game and the results were immediate. North Quincy went three and out on its first possession and matching penalties gave the Sailors a first down at the Red Raiders' 13-yard line. Two plays later Brady deked his way into the end zone from 10 yards out to put the Sailors up for good, 14-7, with 6:09 left in the quarter.

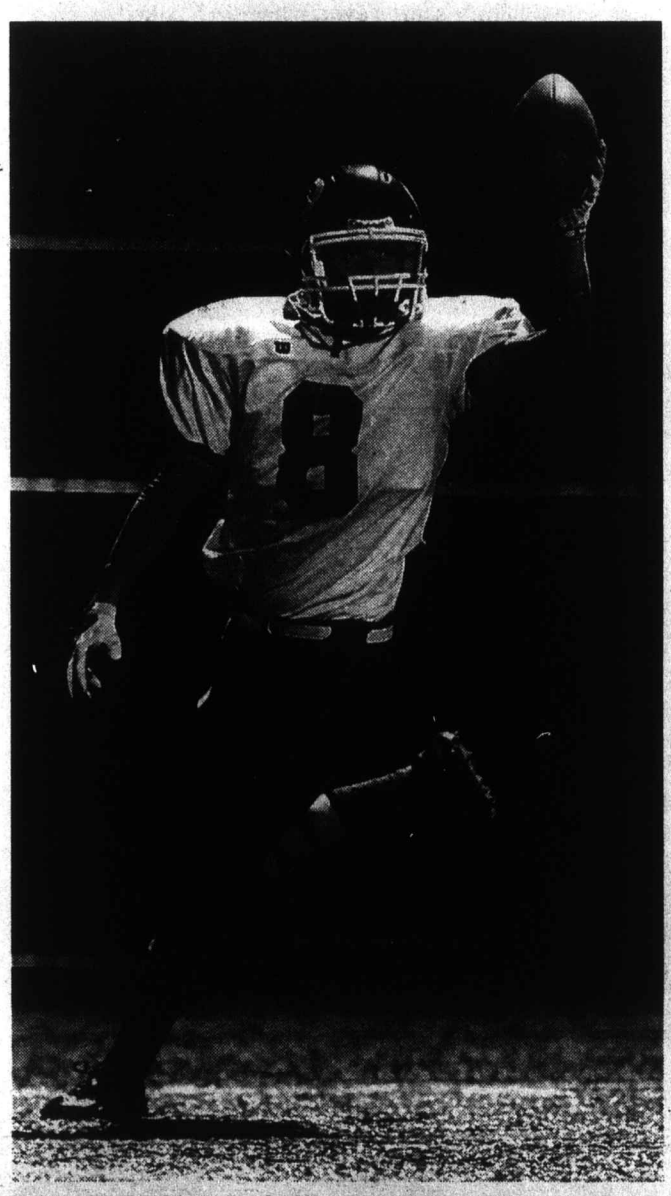

Scituate was able to contain Jones, who was held to zero yards rushing, but still a respectable 77 on the night. The change in the Sailors' defensive scheme came as no surprise to Nutley. The Red Raiders' inability to run the ball came as a big surprise.

"They sent eight and nine guys," said Nutley. "The times we needed crunch plays, we didn't make them and that's the frustrating part about it. We're not use to pressure situations. We haven't been in situations like that where it's close at the end and we have to battle."

Penalties worked in North Quincy's possession on its next possession as a facemask flag on a pass from Kiley to Aidan Brown put the Red Raiders at Scituate's 43-yard line. Soloman Umoren pulled in a Kiley pass, broke a tackle and bolted for a touchdown on the next play. Dara Griffin's PAT went wide left and it was a 14-13 contest.

From that point forward it was all Scituate. Brady ran untouched for a 38-yard touchdown on Scituate's next possession to go up 21-13. Defensive tackle Nick Manning sacked Brady for

Red Raiders Defeat Arlington In Girls Soccer

By BILL GRIFFIN

The ending of the final match at home was just right with images of two fine senior players making the plays which won the day.

Senior captain Ciara Forde drove home the winning goal past the midway point of the second half, and senior captain Courtney Campo made a perfect touch pass to Haley Houlihan for the clincher in the final two minutes to lead North Quincy to a 3-1 non-league victory over Arlington Catholic at Veterans Stadium Monday afternoon.

Forde and Campo. Two four-year players who will have a fond memory of their last game for North at the stadium. Each has been a key factor in North's 5-0-2 run since the Scituate match which has seen the Red Raiders clinch second place in the Fisher Division of the Patriot League and earn their 15th trip to the state tournament in 20 years.

"Ciara can shoot with either foot and Courtney passed the ball well all day," said coach Paul Bregoli whose team was 9-6-4 after the victory.

The win ended a productive and busy week for North. The Red Raiders defeated Middleboro, 1-0. They tied Pembroke and Plymouth South by 1-1 counts. The tie against Plymouth wrapped up the bid to the tourney. After the Scituate match, Bregoli and his club promised a strong finishing kick, and they delivered.

"And I don't think we've played our best soccer yet," said Bregoli. "The early part of our schedule was very tough. We needed to finish strong and we did."

Forde's goal prevented an afternoon of great frustration for North. After the two teams swapped goals in the opening five minutes of the match, North dominated the play. Halfbacks Marissa McGue and Mandy Hazelton ruled the center of the field and sent their mates away for a glut of scoring opportunities.

There was one problem. The ball would go not into the set. Shots sailed high and shots sailed wide. A penalty shot was missed. Shots were blocked and deflected. Shots were sent directly at the Cougars' keeper. Clean shots from checkerboard passing were canceled by offside calls. It had all the feel of one of those days when a team would win the play, but tie on the scoreboard.

"The halfbacks were good," said Bregoli. "Marissa has a very high soccer IQ and Mandy has come a long way as a sophomore. Her goals kicks are great. They set us up. We just couldn't convert."

Finally Forde struck with her late goal, her eighth of the year. Junior winger Molly Donahue, who had a goal, an assist and was the best player on the field, took a cross from freshman Cora Cluett. She settled, passed up a difficult shot and made a spot-on drop pass to Forde. Forde took her time, picked her spot, and rifled a drive which broke through the keeper for a 2-1 lead.

"Molly played her best match of the year," said Bregoli. "Not only did she get a goal and an assist, she played good defense and made excellent decisions."

Campo has been a key figure in North's late run with three goals and five assists in the last five matches. Her pass, her second assist of the match, to Houlihan finished it in the final minute. She controlled along the left wing, slipped between two defenders and chipped the ball ahead to Houlihan. Houlihan blasted a drive which deflected off the keeper and rolled into the net for the 3-1 final.

"Haley has such a hard shot that it can break through the keeper. When she keeps it on net, it's hard to stop," said Bregoli.

North took a 1-0 lead just two minutes into the match. Sophomore Abbie Koch started the play along the left wing. She fed Campo who dribbled and drove to the middle. Campo left it for Donahue, and Donahue fired a laser into the far corner.

"Abbie is a good passer, and that shot was a rocket. Molly struck the ball well the whole match," said Bregoli.

Sophomore keeper Shannan Kennedy was solid for North, and Molly Kate Cannon and Julia O'Donnell were strong for the Red Raiders on the fullback line.

North ends the regular season on the road against Fontbonne Thursday. Pairings for the tourney come out Friday, and North is likely to play a first-round match on Sunday.

In the Plymouth South match, Forde scored for the Red Raiders at the 8:27 mark of the first half off a terrific pass from Campo. Forde deked a defender and

Honors For North Quincy Cross Country Teams

The honors continue to pile up for the North Quincy girls cross country team.

Four girls were voted onto the All-star team for the Fisher division: Emily Bryson, Julia Bryson, Marguerite Belcher and Devin Hiltunen. This is the fourth time the Bryson twins have been selected Cross Country All-stars. This is senior Marguerite Belcher's first selection. Hiltunen is a freshman.

On the boys side Mike Mullaney made his fourth squad and it was Sophomore Jimmy Cannon's first selection. Sportsmanship awards went to Quincy's Max Hurley and Katy Deng, and North's Romel Malimban and Grace Anderson. Middleboro won the team award.

Milesplit Mass has declared Emily Bryson the #1 Cross Country senior girl in Massachusetts by virtue of her 18:19 clocking at the Twilight Invitational. She is mulling over several colleges including Bates, Brandeis, Boston University and UMass Amherst.

The Patriot league championship was held this past Saturday at Silver Lake featuring a dry, fast course and none of the ridiculous wind and rain of the preceding week. The runners from both North and Quincy turned in their best runs of the season over the 5K course.

North runners swept both individual titles as Mike Mullaney and Emily Bryson led wire to wire for the victory. Emily's time was 18:13 #4 in the state this year and almost a minute faster than she ran a year ago. Sister Julia Bryson got into the act with a third place finish. Only Whitman-Hanson's talented Sam Coletti could split the pair. Devin Hiltunen and Marguerite Belcher finished 21 and 22. Grace Anderson was 38th.

With several Quincy girls taking ACT exams Coach Geoff Hennessy bumped the Quincy girls into the JV and all turned in great times. LaQueen Arias was third overall in 23:03. Alyssa Camara and Kelly Zeng were the other competitors. In the boys race Sophomore Jimmy Cannon placed 13th in 17:20 his best time at Silver Lake.

In other varsity and JV boys action Peter Saccoach ran 18:28 for 22nd, Aidan Golden ran 20:18 in JV boys. Max Hurley and Mark Hajjar both ran a minute faster than their time from early September. The teams ran here back on Sept. 3rd on a hot dry day and each athlete improved a least a minute over those times. Freshman Devin Hiltunen improved 4:22 over her first meet.

"We're in championship season now" said Coach Hennessy. "Every athlete is training to do their best in the biggest meet. Our workouts, our mental prep, all point to maximum performance regardless if its the slowest JV, an inexperienced freshman or a senior leader."

Saturday's upcoming event is the State Coaches meet at Wrentham Development center. Seniors Mike Mullaney and Marguerite Belcher will run as they missed last week's Twilight Invitational.

The Bryson twins will rest in preparation for the MIAA Eastern Mass Divisionals also at Wrentham. Several freshmen and sophomores will run in the grade races, a feature of the Invitational.

Quincy Track Clubbers Compete At Final Hershey Meet

Devon Marshall, Rosheline Molina Among 450 Youngsters From U.S., Canada, Mexico, Puerto Rico

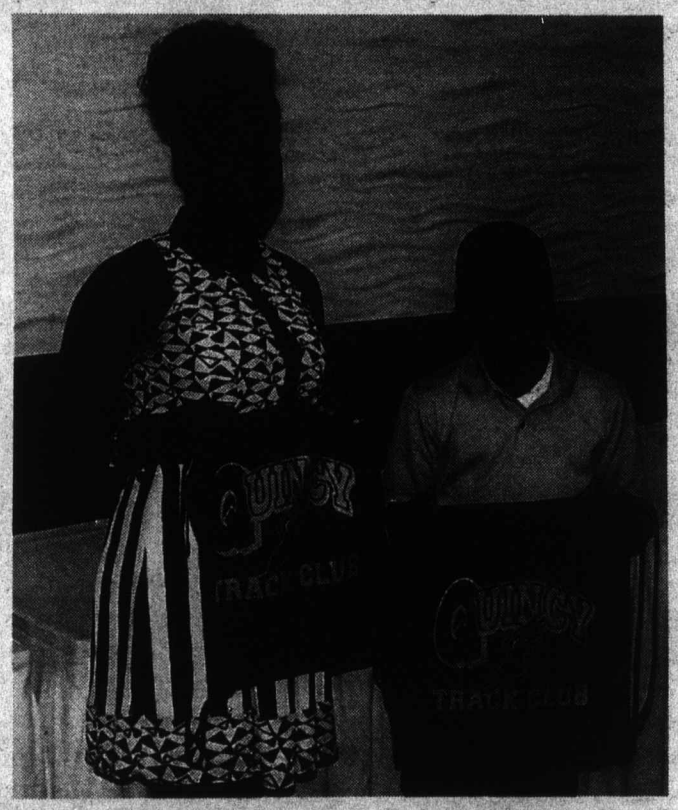

By GEOFF HENNESSY

You could call it the equivalent of a kid's Olympics, complete with former Gold Medalists.

The atmosphere was electric at the 37th and final Hershey North American Championships held on the spacious campus of the Milton Hershey School, built by the founder of the Food giant Milton Hershey himself. For representatives of the Quincy Track club 10 year-old Devon Marshall of the St. Agatha School in Milton and 14 year-old Rosheline Molina who attends Point-Webster, the event was a four day whirlwind replete with fun and games and a little track and field mixed in. They were part of a 450 youngster contingent from all 50 states as well as Canada, Mexico and Puerto Rico.

Fourteen different events were contested and when it was done, the exhausted athletes returned home to their parents with a lifetime of memories.

On hand to encourage the future stars were Olympians Carl Lewis, Jack Joyner-Kersee, Rafer Johnson and Dan O'Brien. While Lewis and Joyner seemingly are household names, one might have to research carefully the history of 1996 decathlon Gold medalist Dan O'Brien who was once part of the NIKE marketing ploy Dan vs Dave (Johnson) as the two challenged for the title of World's greatest athlete back in '96. Rafer Johnson goes even further back, the former St. John's University star won decathlon gold back in 1960 before turning to acting, sportscasting and philanthropy. His other star crossing claim to fame was being one of two athletes (the other being Los Angeles Rams football star Rosie Grier) who subdued Sirhan Sirhan who had just assassinated Robert F. Kennedy in 1968.

Festivities began as the youngsters arrived on July 31st at Hershey's Chocolate factory, a facility not opened to the public. Friday included team practices, team photos and a day in historic Hershey Amusement park for unlimited rides and excitement. Saturday featured the competition as well as a banquet at Founder's Hall and a dance which concluded the evening. All 450 athletes and their chaperones where housed at nearby Elizabethtown College, and bussed back and forth daily.

Devon Marshal competed in the boys 9-10 50 meter dash and placed a close fourth (7.78), Rosheline Molina was 8th in the 13-14 girls softball throw (147'04"). Young Devon has become an accomplished trackster having been involved in the club for the past three years. He won several events at the Needham Allstar meet as well as the Needham Youth Classic. And if you're wondering how far the apple falls from the tree, his dad, Tyrone, a Boston firefighter, was state champ in the 55 meters indoors and 100 meters outdoors competing for Boston Technical High (now the John D. O'Bryant).

Rosheline has won the Mass State Hershey softball throw for the past three years and was finally the New England (also known as Region 6) champion, earning the right to travel to Pennsylvania.

A multi-sport star, she also takes part in basketball, softball and volleyball. At press time she is a member of the Quincy High volleyball team, at 14-1 one of the top teams in Massachusetts. The Lady Presidents enjoy a rich tradition of excellence in that sport. Recently Rosheline also won the Turbo-javelin in the Junior (10-14) division of the Baystate Games.

Quincy Track club director Geoff Hennessy feels she has potential to become one of the best javelin throwers in the state, and he should know. Five girls under his direction have won the Mass State javelin title since 1984.

Both Hennessy and Quincy Director of Recreation Barry J. Welch are both proud of the tradition Quincy athletes have had with the Hershey Youth program. Over the past 37 years over 100 Quincy youngsters have made the trip to Hershey.

"We say 'thank you' for all the opportunities provided to our city's youth over the years" said Welch.

Perhaps the one athlete who most benefitted was North Quincy graduate Karen Cashman who competed in five Hershey National championships in a row before continuing on to North Quincy High cross country and track teams. She parlayed her running career into speed skating, attended the University of Northern Michigan, earning a spot on the 1992 Olympic short-track speed skating relay, and earned a bronze medal at the 1992 Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway.

A mural honoring Cashman adorns the wall of the Walter "Cap" Bryan memorial gymnasium at North Quincy High school.

Cashman is now the mother of a son (Bryan), and resides with her husband Scott, in Plymouth and teaches at Marshfield High School.

Ask Barbara Graceffa: Secretary Of The Interior

I need help choosing paint colors for two adjoining rooms. I have brown leather furniture in the living room and a light cherry dining room set. I want two different colors but don't know where to start. Sharon

Dear Sharon:

You're in luck; brown is a neutral so all paint colors will go with your furniture. First, choose one color you love. For example, if you open your closet and you have lots of blue clothes, you obviously like the color blue. Go to the paint store and look at the selection. Consider how much natural light you have in the room before you choose a paint chip too dark. I'd suggest something in the middle of the paint strip so there is not too much contrast with the brown furniture. So, there's one paint color.

Next, find yourself a color wheel. Complimentary colors are those opposite each other on the color wheel and work well together for a dramatic look; for example all tints and shades of reds and greens, blues and oranges, violets and yellows will work together. Remember, all tints and shades; so if you choose blue and orange, the colors could be colonial blue and peach. Analogous colors are beside each other on the color wheel and play well together, too, for a harmonious look. So reds and oranges, oranges and yellows, yellows and greens, greens and blues, and blues and violets will also work in adjoining rooms.

Also, I recommend you choose two colors with the same value – the brightness or darkness of a hue. Line up the two paint strips with your choices for the living and dining rooms and choose two colors in the same position on the strip. In other words, if you choose a color for one room that's the third from the top on the strip, choose the second color third from the top on the second strip. I'm not saying you can't deviate one tint or shade in either direction, but if they line up, they have the same value and will live happily ever after.

One final tip: bring the wall color from your living room into the dining room in a tablecloth, draperies, and accessories. In the same vein, add the dining room wall color on pillows, chair throws, area rug, etc. in your living room. Both rooms will look coordinated this way.

Winter Protection For Young Plants

Q: Last winter was a doozy by any standard, and several of my border shrubs that had survived previous winters unprotected froze and died off. I replaced them, but I don't want a repeat if we have another bad winter. What's the best way to protect the new plants? -- Jane V., Worcester, Mass.

A: Many shrub varieties are hardy, and can put up with a lot of weather. Some do very well under a coat of snow or ice (which actually can help insulate the plant during the coldest part of winter). But snow-less cold snaps or sudden weather changes can test even the toughest of these plants.

Since these are new plants, you should take extra protective measures regardless of how mild or rough the winter is. Go ahead and place burlap covering (available at home and garden stores by the yard) over or around the shrubs, ideally before the first hard frost, but definitely ahead of any multi-day periods with temperatures below freezing.

Drape or wrap the burlap around the shrubs, not too tightly -- enough to keep it from flapping loosely in the wind, but not so tight that it constricts the plant. Secure the wrap at the base of the plant with twine, again being careful not to damage the bark.

For larger outdoor plants with extended branches, carefully tie up the branches by loosely wrapping twine around the bottommost branches, then sliding the twine circle upward a few inches to gather in the plant. Repeat with another length of twine to secure the branches higher up, and repeat again higher up if necessary. Then wrap burlap around the plant and secure.

If you're worried about a plant being pushed over by wind or banks of snow, place wooden stakes around the plant and wrap burlap around the stakes and plant to secure them. During the winter, immediately clear snow banks from around the plant so the weight doesn't push the plant over.

Protect the roots of new and old shrubs during the winter, by placing fresh mulch around their base as an insulator. First, rake back existing mulch to expose the base of the tree or shrub trunk to the air for a few days. Next, cover the exposed area with new mulch.

Straw, pine needles or wood chips, or a combination of these, work well as winter mulch, insulating without compacting, so that water can get to the roots. This cover needs to be removed in the spring.

HOME TIP: Mulch around tree and shrub bases should be kept just 2 or 3 inches deep, to insulate while allowing air and water to get to the roots.

Send your questions or home tips to ask@thisisahammer.com.

Quarry Street Project Concerns Councillors

Proposed 398 Residential Units Draws Questions About Construction, Traffic

ARTIST'S RENDERING showing the entrance to the proposed Avalon Quincy development on Quarry Street. The developer has proposed building five new residential buildings – three six-story buildings and two five-story ones (pictured above). The buildings would include 398 residential units total. The project site is adjacent to the HighPoint development. The City Council will continue its discussion of the proposal Dec. 3. Renderings Courtesy The Architectural Team

ARTIST'S RENDERING shows part of the proposed five-building Avalon Quincy residential complex. The developer has proposed constructing 398 residential units in a vacant parcel of land next to the HighPoint development on Quarry Street. The proposed complex includes a fenced in pool and adjacent longue area (pictured) as well a gym inside one of the buildings. The City Council will continue its discussion of the proposal Dec. 3.

By SCOTT JACKSON

The developers aiming to build 398 residential units next to the HighPoint apartment complex will have six weeks to come back to the City Council with more information about the proposed project's impact on traffic on nearby residential streets.

The council, in its capacity as Quincy's special permit granting authority (SPGA), met Oct. 22 to review plans by AvalonBay Communities to develop the 25-acre Quarry Street parcel into five residential buildings, a project known as Avalon Quincy.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci – whose district includes neighborhoods near the Avalon Quincy site, but not the site itself – voiced concern about the project's impact on residential streets. The developer, he said, would need to amend its plans to provide some mitigation for any impacts residents on those side streets might encounter.

"Will you do some more work? Will you do some more traffic counts? Will you help us alleviate negative impact, mitigate any negative impact this project will have on those residential side streets?" Palmucci said.

"If you're willing to do that, I'm willing to keep an open mind. The folks in the area, their biggest problem is the traffic. It's a big enough problem right now."

Lars Unhjem, Avalon's director of development, said the company would revisit that issue in the coming weeks and provide an updated plan to the council when it meets to consider the proposal again on Dec. 3. Unhjem also said he would provide Palmucci and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin with information relative to traffic at HighPoint and a traffic study conducted when that project was first conceived in 1998.

Coughlin, who represents the Avalon Quincy and the residential areas directly abutting it, also raised concern regarding construction on site. HighPoint was constructed during his tenure on the council, and he received numerous complaints from residents about its impact.

"The complaints I received about the blasting, and the hoe ramming, and the construction process, and the noise, and the dust and construction activities, and times that work was going – it was a constant battle," Coughlin said.

"I know what these folks had to go through and the specter of that happening again is not endearing."

In particular, Coughlin was concerned because the foundation of one of the five planned buildings would need to be constructed, meaning blasting could be necessary to get down to bedrock.

Unhjem replied that it would be difficult to tell if blasting or hoe ramming would be needed because the site was formerly home to a municipal dump and steel or other objects could be mistaken for bedrock if boreholes were used for testing. The impact of the project, he added, would be less than HighPoint's impact because a significantly smaller amount of excavation will be done.

"I can't make a promise, but we will do the same things that were done before in terms of communicating with the neighborhood if we are exposed to a situation where we need to introduce loud noises relative to blasting or hoe ramming," Unhjem explained.

"We're hopeful we won't have that need but if we do have that need it is contained in one building footprint. It is not cutting open an entire 75-acre site."

Coughlin cited additional issues regarding the height of two proposed buildings nearest Hospital Hill. Those buildings, under Avalon Bay's proposal, would total six stories each with five floors of residential units atop ground level parking. Residents living on Hospital Hill, Coughlin explained, are concerned over the visual impact of those buildings; he asked Unhjem if it would be feasible to lower the height of those two. Unhjem said he would have that answer at the next meeting.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee expressed concern about the developer's employment practices, noting Quincy's special permit granting criteria allows the council to consider neighborhood characters/social structures, community needs, and the impact on the city among other criteria.

"I'm going to look for Avalon to demonstrate, before they get a favorable vote from me if one at all exists, that they support commonly held values of the community," McNamee said. "That includes paying the prevailing wage, a commitment to do work with contractors that are committed to fielding a skilled labor force that includes apprentice training, safety training etc.

"I'm also going to look that they hire local. I know that that's been struck but there can be efforts to hire from not New Hampshire, but certainly locally."

City Solicitor Jim Timmins, however, advised McNamee against basing his decision on those criteria.

"You're not permitting the applicant, this is permitting the project and it's based on the physical dynamics of the site," Timmons said. "You're actually allowing something you're not supposed to allow into the picture here.

"While that can be a legitimate concern of yours and I do understand it, regrettably it's not something you can use the zoning power to enforce or influence what goes on."

City Hosts Housing Symposium, 16% Population Growth Projected

Mayor Thomas Koch, in partnership with the Massachusetts Area Planning Council, recently hosted a special housing symposium.

The symposium, attended by more than 60 agency haeds, business leaders and city officials, was led by the city's economic development team of Nick Verenis and Maureen Geary and was held in the Richardson Room of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

With a growing number of young professionals moving into the city, housing development is surging in the city and an analysis by the MAPC found that demand for housing in Quincy will continue to grow for the next several decades.

The MAPC analysis anticipates that the City's population will grow by 16 percent by 2030, with the most demand for housing found in younger groups and a segment of the population now approaching retirement age.

Koch said the city's aggressive economic development plans must strike a balanced approach "that targets the right areas and protects existing neighborhoods."

"What we have happening now is a great deal of potential being realized with the number of young people and young families moving into the City, and that's going to continue to push housing demand," Koch said. "For the city, that means continuing to do the things that promote growth, but at the same time, keeping our eye on the ball when it comes to traffic issues, parking issues and the other factors of increased development."

The key elements of the City's economic development planning efforts revolve around new and expanded housing near public transportation and other city amenities – which are they prime drawing points for young residents, Koch said.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday, October 22, 2014, at approximately 1:58 a.m., Officer Patrick Folan was dispatched to the Tedeschi's Convenience Store at 230 Washington Street on a report of an armed robbery that had just occurred.

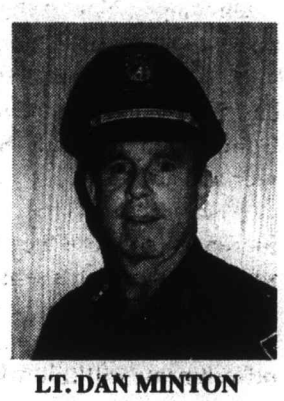

Upon arrival, the Officer met the male Clerk who stated that he was robbed at knife point by a male and a female. He added that he was the only employee working and was alone in the store at the time.

The Clerk said that the two suspects entered the store with their faces covered. The male had had a dark colored T-shirt covering his face with two eye holes cut out. The female had some type of shirt or rag covering her face from the nose down. He said he knew she was a female because they were talking to each other during the robbery. The male pulled out a large knife and demanded, "Open up the drawers." The female suspect stood by the entrance and yelled out, "I'm watching. . . . . I'm watching." The male then began yelling, "Hurry Up" as he pointed the knife at the Clerk.

The Clerk complied and opened his cash drawer, then handed over the money. Once the male suspect had the money in hand, the two suspects fled out the door northbound on Washington Street toward Quincy Center. The Clerk then called "911." A radio broadcast was then made of the suspect's description and their last known direction of travel. The Clerk said that he didn't pay much attention to the female because he was focused on the knife pointed at him. He estimated that approximately $500.00 in cash that was removed from his drawer.

At this time, Officer Daniel Church, who was working a construction detail on Granite Street by Hancock Street, radioed that he spotted a male matching the description. As Officer Church headed towards the male suspect, the suspect ran away, with Officer Church accompanied by detail Officer Duran in pursuit. The Officers quickly caught up to the male in the rear of Quincy City Hall. Officer Folan went to the Officer Church's location and learned that no weapon was found, however, the suspect did have a cell phone. After the suspect identified himself, he was advised why he was being stopped. Officer Duran gave the suspect his Miranda Warnings.

During this time, Officer Andrew Sweeney, who was holding the suspect's cell phone, heard the phone ringing, then stop and start up again. The phone showed the name of the caller as "Tracey." Officer Sweeney then observed a female standing by a taxi stand at the Quincy Center MBTA station approximately 25 yards from their current location. The female appeared to be attempting to make a cell phone call so Officer Sweeney approached and engaged her in conversation. The female stated that her name was Tracey and she was attempting to call someone named "Alex." Officer A.J. Sweeney then detained the female suspect. Officer Duran gave the female suspect the Miranda warning and told why she was being detained. Officer Duran confirmed that the male and the female both knew each other and live together in Quincy.

The male and female suspect gave conflicting statements concerning their recent activities. The male stated that he fled because he did not know he was being approached by Police Officers, which didn't make any sense. It should be noted that both Officers were in full uniform with badges displayed on their outer garments. He added that he was on his way to the "T - waiting for his ride - probably a cab." Initially, he did not mention a female or any other companion. The female suspect stated that they were out to "look for weed" and confirmed that they walked past Tedeschi's but did not enter the store. She said that they separated at the old I Hop at Washington Street and McGrath Hwy. The male suspect then said that the plan was to get weed and meet at the "T."

Officer Folan escorted the Clerk to the location of the suspects and asked him to look at the two people detained to determine if they were involved in the robbery. The Clerk confirmed that the male was the right height, the right build and the sweat shirt he was wearing was the same color as the garment worn as a second layer by the suspect. He also confirmed that the female was the same height but again stated that he did not pay much attention to the female during the incident. The Clerk said he was 95 % sure that the male was the suspect in the robbery.

At this time, the Manager of the store arrived on scene and provided access to the store's video surveillance system. Officer Folan observed the incident which was recorded in color and observed that the two suspects in the video had matching clothing items to what they were wearing. The male's and the female' shoes were identical to the one's they were wearing.

At this time, based on the totality of the circumstances, the male suspect, a 20 year old Quincy resident and a 34 year old female Quincy resident were placed under arrest for the offense of "Armed Robbery While Masked." Nice Work!

VERIFY YOUR INFORMATION: If you receive a telephone call from anyone asking you to verify your information, be very wary. This call can be from a warranty extension program, a credit issue, a computer problem, to name a few. The most likely approach is that the caller will attempt to alarm or concern you that there is an issue you must deal with immediately. This will be followed by the caller asking you to verify your name, address and then it can get into personal information that should not be shared, such as date of birth, social security number or credit card data. Remember, if they called you and claim that you are having a problem, they would already have your information. Before you answer their questions, ask the caller to recite information that they already have about you. The most common responses by the caller will be to either hang up or tell you that this is a service they provide to all. The best action is "Just hang up."

a six-yard loss on the first play of the fourth quarter, but the Sailors continued to run the ball, leading to a 10-play, 69-yard drive that ate up 6:10 of the final quarter. It was topped off by Travis Kelley's 11-yard score for a 28-13 advantage.

A 49-yard rush by May and a 1-yard scoring with 3:12 left closed out Scituate's scoring.

North Quincy now has to put its full energy on the remaining four games of the season, including a big Thanksgiving Day matchup against Quincy, which suffered its first loss of the season last Friday to Duxbury.

North Quincy travels to Norwood Saturday for a 1 p.m. kick-off and visits Milton Friday, Nov. 7 before returning home to host Hingham Friday, Nov. 14. Friday game times to be announced. The Red Raiders square off against Quincy in the annual Thanksgiving Day game Thursday, Nov. 27 at 10 a.m.

"We haven't played a full game yet," said Nutley. "The last two weeks the first half we were playing terrible. Tonight we played great in the first half and didn't show up in the second half. We have three games before Quincy and we have to run the table. Pure and simple. We have to get ready for a Quincy team that's good. We know they're good. We've got to go right after them."

cracked home the goal with a hard accurate shot.

After Plymouth South tied the score, Kennedy made four outstanding saves to preserve the valuable point.

McGue and Forde controlled the midfield while North also received fine performances from Jillian Hallisey, Alyx Patey, Hazelton and O'Donnell.

As she has all season, Cannon shut down the opposition's top scorer.

Against Pembroke, Campo drove home her own rebound off a beautiful cross from Kerin Coleman to earn the tie for North.

Once again, Kennedy was sharp in net, preserving the tie for the Red Raiders.

Ciara Viscione made an important play, deflecting away a corner kick to keep the score at 1-1.

Campo also delivered against Middleboro, scoring a dramatic goal with 39 seconds left in the match off a chip pass from Donahue.

North out-shot Middleboro by a 3-1 ratio. Emily Anglehart had an excellent chance, a hard drive which just missed the net.

Cluett and Annie Doherty had excellent games for the Red Raiders.

Quincy Community United Methodist Church To Celebrate All Saints' Day

Has someone you loved passed away recently or some time ago? Would you like to honor her or his memory.

Many people would answer 'yes' to both those questions. If you are one of them, plan to attend QCUMC's special worship service on All Saints' Sunday, which this year will be held on the second Sunday of November, Nov. 9.

Before the service, the congregation will be invited to write their loved ones' names on paper tags and on a sheet of paper. The tags will then be attached to little bells, the bells pinned to a banner, and the banner carried into the worship service during the opening procession. During the service, all names listed on the sheets of paper will be read. After each name, the bells will be rung. Everyone is invited to take their loved ones' memorial bell home with them after the service.

An especially moving part of the service is the brief biographies. These highlight the lives of those individuals connected to QCUMC who have passed away during the past year. Margaret Buckley, the church's historian, compiles the information and presents it.

The Rev. Dr. Susan Jarek-Glidden, the church's pastor, noted:

"All Saints' Sunday is an opportunity for everyone to thank those people who have stood before us, whose lives touched our lives for the better, who made a difference for us, whose love and care helped us on our life's journey. It is a very moving and very powerful service."

Quincy Community United Methodist Church is located at 40 Beale St. in Wollaston, diagonally across the street from the Wollaston MBTA stop. The building is handicapped accessible at the front doors nearest the flagpole.

For more information, please call the church office at 617-773-3319.

Revelations At Souther Tide Mill?

By FRANK HOGAN

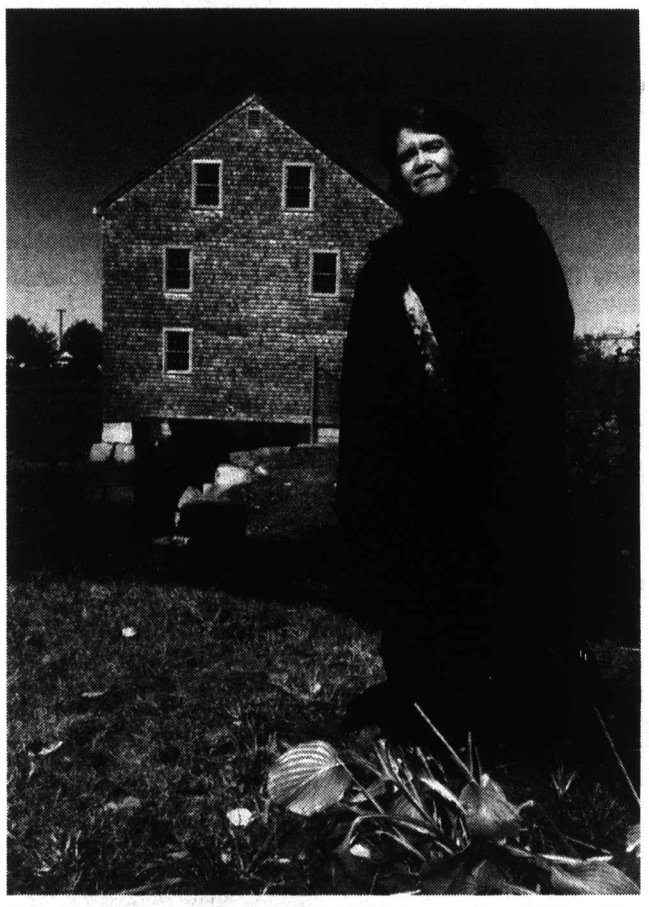

Could a mill site over 200 years old hold some stories?

Over the years, some visitors to the Souther Tide Mill have sensed something they couldn't explain—a door closing, a floor board creaking, feeling a presence. We wondered if bringing in a spirit medium might help to shed some light on this.

At a recent visit to the Souther Tide Mill on the Southern Artery, spirit medium Karen Miranda of QATV's Whispers From The Other Side said she made contact with several spirits.

Frank Hogan of Friends of Souther Tide Mill had contacted Ms. Miranda and invited her to tour this 19th century mill to see if she could sense any presence there. She had no previous knowledge of the tide mill and was eager to visit it. Hogan and Doug Morrill, president of the Friends, showed her around the mill.

Amongst the spirits she was in contact with were two men named John and two people, Francis and Frances, as well as a woman who told Miranda that she had been a slave. Miranda described these people and their dress to Morrill. John Sr. indicated to her his pleasure at people coming back to the mill and trying to preserve it.

KAREN MIRANDA of QATV's Whispers From The Other Side outside the Souther Tide Mill. She is the author of "Dairy of a Spirit Medium."

Miranda showed her sketch pad on which she had drawn a portrait of a male. Morrill then showed her a portrait of one of the Souther men who bore a remarkable resemblance to the person in the sketch. It looked like Francis L. Souther. His wife was Frances. Francis L. Souther was the first Union soldier to die in the Civil War. He died at the Battle of Big Bethel in southern Virginia in June 1861.

After that, at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Morrill showed Miranda the gravestone of Francis and Frances Souther. He told her that Francis' grandfather was John Souther, Sr., the original owner; Francis' father was John Souther, Jr.

Miranda also pointed out that, when she first entered the mill, she sensed that the spirits were cautious. It took a little time before they revealed themselves to her, later making her feel welcome.

"We did make some big plays on defense, we just didn't make enough of them," said Reardon.

--- Quincy was close, on the threshold in the final two periods. With the score tied at 14-14 late in the third, a Duxbury blitz stopped Lam on fourth down at the Dragons' two after the Presidents had marched 83 yards in 11 plays.

With Duxbury up, 21-14 and just over 4:00 left, Lam broke cleanly around the left side at the Quincy 43. He was gone. Absolutely gone. Tie game. There was nothing but 57 yards of turf ahead of him. But Duxbury's Nick Gearin reached out and just caught Lam by the shoestring. Three plays later Quincy fumbled, and the Dragons put it away with two late touchdowns.

"James looked like he was gone on that run, but we should have been able to get it in from the two when we got close," said Reardon.

--- These games are usually won up front. Quincy's line of Calley, Abraham Hoti, William Young, Steve Scolaro and Mike Munroe cleared holes on offense and, on defense, stopped the inside running game of Duxbury backed by linebackers Bergonzi, Cronin and Alex Leo.

"Our line blocked well and gave us room to run through three quarters," said Reardon.

So, what decided it? The Dragons don't have a single player who goes both ways. Duxbury is strictly two-platoon. Maimaron felt that his depth wore down Quincy in the second half. In addition, the absence of tailback Jahvae Handsom-Fields for the second straight game was a factor. If Quincy has a second big-time threat to balance out Lam, it's probably a different story line. In the second half, Duxbury sent everyone but the freshman class president at Lam.

"Jahvae does make us more balanced," said Reardon.

"We had to make adjustments at halftime. We had to do something with Lam. We couldn't let one player beat us," said Maimaron.

For Duxbury, Bobby Maimaron scored on a three-yard run and hit Brian Zec with a 28-yard TD pass in the first half which ended tied at 14-14. Maimoron hit Zec again from eight yards early in the fourth to put the Dragons up, 21-14. Cam Walsh and Colin Prudente scored add-on TDs for Duxbury in the final minutes.

It was a difficult loss for Quincy. This was to be Quincy's year in the league. Quincy hasn't won a league title since 2003. For the first time in 44 years, the Presidents went unbeaten through six games. They had Duxbury at home. Duxbury, of the 15 league titles, four Super Bowls victories, four undefeated seasons and 37-game win streak from years past, is the gold standard.

Quincy hit hard and played well. Quincy was right there, two yards away from the lead in the third period and a desperation tackle away from a tie game with 4:00 left in the game. The season is far from finished. There are the playoffs and there is Thanksgiving. But this one hurt.

"Emotionally, it is a struggle," said Reardon. "But good teams snap back, and this is a good team. We have the playoffs next week and we'll be ready."

Needham finished the first seven games with a power rating of 14.86, just ahead of Quincy's 14.43.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A rejection of your attempt to be friendly leaves you with two choices: Try again, or give up. If you want to make another effort, go slowly. Let things develop without pressure.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It could be a problem dealing with unfamiliar people who do things differently from what you're used to. But rely on that strong sense of purpose to get you through this difficult period.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) To avoid neglecting a personal matter because of a demanding new workplace schedule, start prioritizing immediately. Knowing how to apportion your time takes a little while to set up.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It won't be easy to avoid some of the pressures that come with change. Best advice: Take things a step at a time, and you'll be less likely to trip up while things are in a chaotic state.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) A much-talked-about workplace change could be coming soon. Be sure to get all the details involved in the process, and once you have them, you can decide how you want to deal with it.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might still believe that your trust was betrayed, although the facts would appear to prove the opposite. But by the week's end you should learn something that will help set the record straight.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Holiday plans could be a challenge because of shifting circumstances. But by midweek, allowing you to firm up your plan-making once and for all.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The facts continue to be on your side. So make use of them in dealing with any challenge to your stated position. Also, open your mind to the offer of help from an unlikely source.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) There could still be a communication problem holding up the resolution of a troublesome situation. Stay with it, and eventually your message will get through and be understood.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A possible change in your workplace schedule might create a chaotic situation for a while. But once things begin to settle down, you might find that this could work to your advantage.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A recent job-linked decision might need to be reassessed because of the possibility of finding benefits you might have overlooked. Check out all related data to help in the search.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A personal situation you agreed to might not be as acceptable to the other person involved in the matter. Avoid pressuring and bullying. Instead, seek common ground by talking things through.

We Democrats think the country works better with a strong middle class, real opportunities for poor people to work their way into it and a relentless focus on the future, with business and government working together to promote growth and broadly shared prosperity. Baker Projected Winner

Keenan, Mariano Re-Elected
Voter Turnout 44.3 Percent

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Republican Charlie Baker appeared the winner of one of the closest gubernatorial races in Massachusetts' history Tuesday with a razor-thin margin that included a four-point win over Democrat Martha Coakley in Quincy.

As The Sun went to press early Wednesday morning, Baker held a 48% to 47% percent lead over Coakley. With 95 percent of the statewide vote reporting, Baker had 979,127 votes to Coakley's 951,782. Out of 1,930,90 votes cast in the governor's race, Baker's lead at 12:30 a.m. Wednesday was 27,345 votes.

At least one major news outlet projected Baker the winner of the tight governor's race shortly after midnight. However, Secretary of State Bill Galvin indicated that if the election margin were less than one percent, he would seek a recount.

Fifth Graders In Middle Schools Concern Parents

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Sterling Middle School and Point Webster Middle School are the only two grade 5-8 middle schools in the city, a fact that has some parents concerned that fifth graders in a middle school setting are not receiving the same curriculum as their elementary school counterparts, are having to switch classrooms too frequently, or are feeling stress from being in an environment with older kids.

Concerned parents had an opportunity to voice their opinions on the matter at an ad hoc committee meeting chaired by School Committee board member David McCarthy last Tuesday.

"Being a big kid in fifth grade in your school does something for your self esteem," said Courtney Perdios, the parent of a first grader at the Clifford Marshall Elementary School. "Are these kids getting stressed out by going into a system where they're switching classes so much?"

Quincy Public Schools Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said that in any grade, fully transitioning takes time and that adjusting to new surroundings and schedules is common across all grades.

"All of the student learning outcomes, learning expectations, the standards are the same no matter which environment the students are in," said Madeline Roy, Senior Coordinator of Middle School Curriculum and Programs for Quincy Public Schools.

She added that in the middle school setting, fifth grade students are study-

Veterans Day Parade, Observance Tuesday

Parade Steps Off At 10:30 A.M. • U.S Army Reserve Lt. Col. Diana Gibbs Keynote Speaker

By SCOTT JACKSON

U.S. Army Reserve Lt. Col. Diana Gibbs, a veteran employment specialist for the Quincy Career Center, is the guest speaker for Quincy's Veterans Day observance on Tuesday.

The city's observance of Veterans Day, Nov. 11, commences with a parade that will step off at 10:30 a.m. from the intersection of Quincy Avenue and Scammell Street and runs north along Hancock Street until it reaches the Adams Academy. Units marching in the parade will form up in the Quincy Credit Union parking lot at the intersection of Quincy Avenue and Scammell Street beginning at 10 a.m.

The observance will be held outside the academy, which is located at 8 Adams St. In addition to Gibbs, Mayor Thomas Koch, City Council President Joseph Finn, Quincy Veterans' Council Commander Charles Hurd, and George Nicholson, the parade chairman and Quincy's director of veterans services, will all address the assembled crowd. Robert LaFleur, the Quincy Veterans' Council chaplain, is set to deliver the invocation and Heikki Pakkala, the council's assistant chaplain, will give the benediction. Lawrence Norton, the president of the Quincy Chapter of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces-Quincy Chapter, will serve as master of ceremonies.

Immediately following the ceremony, the marchers will regroup and head to City Hall Plaza where the World War II statue will be unveiled.

In the event of inclement weather, the observance will held in the Quincy High School gymnasium at 52 Coddington St. Access would be through the Russell Street entrance in that case.

Gibbs is a graduate of the University of California Santa Barbara, where she received a bachelor's in law and society; she also received a master's from the University of Central Texas in criminal justice. Her military education includes Officer Candidate School, Basic Airborne Course, Military Police Officer Basic and Advanced Courses, Combined Arms Services Staff School, and Army Command and General Staff College.

Manet Health Center Opens Renovated NQ Facility

$5M 'Medical Mall' Expected To Accommodate Nearly 30,000 Additional Patient Visits Annually

MANET COMMUNITY HEALTH Center CEO John J. Holiver inside the new waiting area at the organization's North Quincy facility, which underwent $5 million in renovations over the past nine months. Manet Community Health Center's newly renovated North Quincy facility is expected to accommodate nearly 30,000 additional patient visits annually.

Manet will mark the opening of the renovated facility, located at 110 W. Squantum St., with a ribbon cutting ceremony today (Thursday) at 8 a.m. The location was renovated over the past nine months at a cost of $5 million drawn from a number of sources including the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA), the federal Affordable Care Act, and a block grant from the city of Quincy.

Manet more than doubled the number of exam rooms available inside facility, going from 18 to 44. As a result of the renovations, the organization will be able to hire 30 more employees, including eight providers, over the next three years. Manet expects the new facility to bring in more than 6,900 new patients and create 29,200 new annual visits. In 2012, Manet saw 14,478 patients make 53,475 visits.

The goal behind the $5 million project, according to Manet CEO John J. Holiver, was to create a 'medical mall' – a one-stop shop where patients can meet many of their needs under one roof.

"The medical mall means once you come in through the doors downstairs we can provide just about anything you need, as opposed to when you come through most doors of a community health center you have to be referred out. So if you needed orthopedics, or you needed eye care, or you needed behavioral health, you would come here and be taken care of for your primary care needs but then we'd have to refer you to different places," Holiver explained during a visit to the North Quincy facility Monday.

"Our model is a little bit different. Our model is getting as many of the subspecialties under one roof so you take an afternoon off from work and in one visit [a patient] can come here and see as many subspecialties as possible."

Holiver singled out four such areas – optometry, dentistry, behavioral health, and a pharmacy – Manet will be able to accommodate in the renovated space.

"Number one is optical. We're going to have an optometrist here that's going to be able to give you a full check up and prescribe lenses, glasses, etc. I can't tell you how much of a need there is out there for folks," Holiver said.

"The second one is dental. We'll be offering full dental services here as well. Some of it would be free; some of it would be just a small co-pay depending on what your situation is.

"The third is behavioral health. Recognizing that 50 percent of our patients present with a comorbidity – meaning they have something other than their primary thing – is behavioral health. In other words, you might come in and say I have a laceration in my arm but I'm also depressed. Greater than 50 percent

DIVINELY DIVA

When the term "diva" was originally coined to mean the primary female singer in an opera company, women wore opera-length necklaces that gave them a decidedly sexy look. Worn to hang as far down as the navel, these very long necklaces originally became popular during the 19th century when they were seen dangling from the necks of the most fashionable opera buffs. Today's versions need not necessarily be solely composed of pearls. There are also fine gold chains that are punctuated with dazzling colored gemstones, which look equally beautiful when worn over a button-front shirt and blazer, a cashmere sheath, or a black evening dress. Any way it is worn, an opera-length necklace speaks of glamour and style.

This type of necklace can be worn as a single strand or, if it has a clasp, you may be able to double it and wear it as a two-strand choker. This length may also be knotted at any point you wish to emphasize, or it can be very dramatic with a pendant and left as a single long strand. Select the perfect silver and gold jewelry to fit your taste for necklaces, bracelets, earrings, or pendants at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center, or contact us at 617-773-3636.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Nov. 19, 1863, President Abraham Lincoln delivers what will become one of the most famous speeches in American history at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. Using just 272 words, Lincoln articulated the meaning of the Civil War for a public that had grown weary of the conflict.

• On Nov. 23, 1876, William Marcy "Boss" Tweed, leader of New York City's corrupt Tammany Hall political organization, is delivered to authorities in New York City after his capture in Spain. He had formed the "Tweed Ring," which bought votes, encouraged judicial corruption and extracted millions of dollars from city contracts.

• On Nov. 18, 1883, American and Canadian railroads begin using four continental time zones to end the confusion of dealing with thousands of local times. It was not until 1918 that Congress adopted the railroad time zones.

• On Nov. 22, 1916, Jack London, who chronicled the last Wild West frontier of Alaska, dies in California. London only spent a brief time in the Klondike, but returned with a trove of tales. He produced over 50 volumes of short stories and novels, including "The Call of the Wild," about a domestic dog who joins an Alaskan wolf pack.

• On Nov. 20, 1947, Princess Elizabeth marries her distant cousin, Philip Mountbatten, former prince of Greece and Denmark who renounced his titles to marry the English princess. Mountbatten was made the duke of Edinburgh.

• On Nov. 17, 1972, socialite Barbara Baekeland is stabbed to death by her son, Antony, in London. When police arrived, Antony was calmly placing a telephone order for Chinese food. Antony was institutionalized until a bureaucratic mistake resulted in his release in 1980. He then moved to New York City, where he stabbed his grandmother.

• On Nov. 21, 1986, National Security Council staff member Oliver North and his secretary, Fawn Hall, begin shredding documents that would have exposed their participation in a range of illegal activities. North was fired, but Hall continued to sneak documents to him by stuffing them in her skirt and boots.

Coakley – who opted to run for governor instead of seeking another term as attorney general – polled 12,249 votes or 45.39 percent here.

Three independent candidates for governor collected an aggregate 5 percent of the vote here. Evan Falchuk received 945 votes (3.5 percent); Jeffrey McCormick 204 votes (.76 percent) and Scott Lively 164 votes (.61 percent.)

Unlike the governor's race, contested elections for two local legislators were not close.

In the Norfolk-Senate District, incumbent Democratic Sen. John Keenan won a third two-year term defeating Les Gosule, a Quincy Republican and first-time candidate who helped champion the passage of a "Three Strikes" law in Massachusetts. In Quincy, Keenan received 18,252 votes while Gosule polled 7,336 – a margin of roughly 71 percent to 29 percent.

House Majority Leader Ron Mariano was easily re-elected to a 12th two-year term. Mariano, who was first elected to the 3rd Norfolk District seat in a special election in 1991, defeated Quincy Republican Patricia Kriegel who was making her first bid for elected office.

Mariano's district includes six precincts in Quincy (all five precincts in Ward 2 along with Ward 4 Precinct 5), five precincts in Weymouth and three precincts in Holbrook. In Quincy, Mariano received 3,177 votes (71%) while Kriegel collected 1,272 votes (29 percent). In Holbrook, Mariano outpolled Kriegel – 1,919 to 1,054 votes.

Library Bookstore 3rd Anniversary Saturday

The Crane Library Bookstore will celebrate its third anniversary Saturday, Nov. 8th with a special, fun day at the charming little shop, located in the rear of the library.

The store's volunteer staff will be distributing giveaways and door prizes to patrons.

The store features books, CD's, DVD's, children's books, gifts, audio-books, reading material and media in Chinese, etc. And there is usually a shelf of giveaways for media items which are no longer in demand.

Since its establishment in the basement of the original section of Quincy's famous library designed by Henry Hobson Richardson--the same man who designed Boston's Trinity Church--the store has become quite a popular little place to purchase gently-used items.

Supported by The Friends of the Crane Library, 100% of the bookstore's proceeds are used to provide the many community programs funded by The Friends, including lectures, movies, concerts, storytellers and special events for children.

The Friends also provide for the popular museum-pass program that allows Quincy residents to visit many area museums and zoos at discounted admission.

The Crane Library Bookstore is open Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Thursdays from 6 to 8 p.m.

Holiday Food Drive Saturday

A holiday food drive to benefit Quincy food pantries will be held Saturday, Nov. 8 at several locations in the Houghs Neck, Germantown and Adam Shore neighborhoods.

The public is encouraged to drop off non-perishable food products, paper products and soap products between 9 a.m. and noon at the following locations:

• LaBrecque Field in Houghs Neck

• Adams Shore Library in Adams Shore

• O'Brien Towers Senior Facility in Germantown.

Items will also be collected at church services held Saturday at Our Lady of Good Counsel and Most Blessed Sacrament Church.

The holiday food drive is being coordinated by John McCone. The food drive is dedicated to families grieving the loss of a loved one to substance abuse, he said.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1930's postcard view of the main office of the Quincy Trust Company at 1486 Hancock St. on the corner of Cottage Avenue. The bank which was founded in 1915 by a group of Quincy businessmen built this Quincy granite building in 1918 at a cost of $40,000. It is of Classical Greek Revival styling with a pointed Greek pediment facing the corner. Two Doric columns enclose the handsome double wooden doors. The bank published this postcard to announce the installation of its new Recordak single posting bookkeeping system. In the early 1980's, the bank moved across the street to a larger building at number 1495 and became the Hancock Bank. This bank building then was home to Tag's Furniture and Sleep Shop and then in 1988 it became the Quincy Jade, a Chinese Restaurant. In 2008 it became home to Alba restaurant which moved from across the street. Later Alba expanded into the store on the left which was Massik's dry goods store at the time of this photo. Alba has also expanded up to offer rooftop al fresco dining under the stars. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

80 Percent Turnout Expected For Election

The Democrats' drive to take over the 13th Congressional District, state senate seat in the Quincy-Braintree District and at least three house seats, in addition to retain the one gained four years ago, is expected to be a major factor in bringing out the vote on the South Shore.

The 80 percent figure generally held four years ago in the list of off-year elections when there was not as strong a fight between the two major parties for local offices.

Both the Republicans and Democrats carried out strong registration drives to get every eligible voter on the voting lists.

At the Quincy city clerk's office, 440 absentee ballots have been processed to date.

In the last off-year election in 1954, 79.5 percent of Quincy voters turned out to cast their ballots.

BURKE WINS SEAT IN CONGRESS, DEMOCRATIC SWEEP INCLUDES S.S. OFFICES

The Democratic election sweep covered the South Shore, as well as the state and the nation when that party locally wrested from the Republican a seat in Congress. James A. Burke (D-Milton) defeated State Representative William W. Jenness (R-Quincy). Mr. Burke polled 88,223 votes to Rep. Jenness' 77,247.

Democratic City Councillors Charles Shea, James McIntyre and Joseph E. Brett won seats in the state legislature, replacing incumbents, Republican State Senator Charles Hedges and Republican State Representative and Quincy Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa retained their seats in the state legislature.

Says Quincy Needs New Leadership

New Quincy leadership is needed.

Mayor Koch has overall done a fine job, but being at a job for too long has its drawbacks. For example, many feel that they're entitled to special benefits and powers, like giving themselves hefty raises without input from residents / constituents.

Another drawback is the perception that officials who are too long at their jobs control city hall. For example, I feel the current Quincy city council and the Mayor Koch have a working relationship that is not the best interests for the city.

And what about Phoenix House? Why weren't the residents and businesses asked for input? Why was it dumped on their laps without any consideration for their concerns? That meeting at Central was a slap in their faces. Phoenix House might be a "Godsend", but to the residents and businesses, right now, it's an albatross around their necks.

And what about Bay State Community Services on Hancock St., that serves people released from jail? Where was the announcement, asking for input from residents and businesses?

And having Bay State next to the Woodward School for Girls? Duh. Why? Where was the Quincy city leadership to intervene? One of my best friends was released from prison, but having Bay State next to an all-girls school doesn't make a whole lot of sense to me.

I look forward when I will have a chance to vote for new Quincy leadership, both for mayor and for city council. I hope you take action and do, too.

Police Self Defense Program Was Excellent

I want to thank the Quincy Police Department and the Mayor for continuing to sponsor a self-defense program for women.

The program (at ENC) was well organized, the officers were helpful, it was well attended and we all learned a lot. Topics covered were awareness, prevention, risk reduction and risk avoidance (for information on the next program, the contact is dminton@quincyma.gov).

I thought the program was excellent.

Last Call For Christmas Parade Floats

The Christmas Parade Committee announces its final call for floats for the City of Quincy 62nd Annual Christmas Parade set for Sunday, Nov. 30 at 12:30 p.m.

The theme of this year's parade is "An Old Fashioned Christmas." Floats should be created with this theme in mind.

The Christmas Parade Float competition is ideal for school groups and non-profit organizations in working together creating unique floats seen by the thousands of parade spectators. Knowing the time and effort needed to create floats for a parade, floats are judged and cash prizes are awarded in several categories at the conclusion of the parade. The grand prize for best overall float is $2,000. First prize is $1,500, second prize is $1,000, third prize $750, and fourth and fifth prizes are $500 each. Commercial floats may also be entered in the parade, however they are not considered for the cash awards and an entry fee is charged.

To receive a float package application, contact the Christmas Parade Committee at 617-376-1394, or email crooney@quincyma.gov. The number of floats accepted is limited. The Christmas Parade Committee will work with groups and organizations in creating a Christmas float that represents an idea of "An Old Fashioned Christmas."

WHAT'S COOKING

Marie & Suzie

Caponata

By MARIE

There are several names for today's recipe depending on what ingredients are used.

Today's recipe, made by my niece Jean is called caponata. It is sometimes called giambott or ratatoville.

No matter what it is called, is the most delicious combinations of vegetables ever.

It can be eaten either hot or cold as an appetizer or a side dish.

CAPONATA

2 medium sized eggplants (diced)
2 stalks of celery (cut)
1 sliced small onion
3 tablespoons tomato paste
1 cup crushed tomatoes
2 tablespoons white vinegar
1/4 cup green olives (pitted)
1/4 cup black olives (pitted)
1/4 cup capers
6 tablespoons olive oil (to start)

In the hot oil start by sautéing the eggplant in single layers, and cook until tender. Keep doing this until the eggplant are finished. You will have to add as much oil as you need until they are finished. Set aside.

In the same pan, sauté the onion, celery, salt and pepper, the olives and the capers. Add the tomato paste and the crushed tomatoes and vinegar, and cook for a 10 minutes. Fold in the eggplant thoroughly, and cook covered for 15-20 minutes.

Everyone raved over this combination.

Millet Fritters

By SUZIE

Have you ever cooked with millet?

Millet is a very small, round grain with a history that traces back thousands of years. It was the chief grain in China before rice became popular and continues to sustain people in Africa, China, Russia, and India, among other places.

Millet is an extremely nutritious and hardy crop that grows well under harsh or dry conditions, both of which contribute to its widespread use and popularity around the world.

Millet can be used in porridges, cereal, soups and breads. It is a delicious wheat free substitution for couscous because of its consistency. Always rinse before cooking, and use 1 part Millet to 2 parts liquid. It is that easy! You can find it in the bulk section of the health food store.

I like to cook it in broth, and add a bunch of fresh herbs then put a pat of butter on it with some pecorino romano cheese as a side dish. But here is a recipe for Millet Fritters that I hope you will enjoy.

1/3 cup millet cooked according to package directions (I cook mine in salted broth for more flavor, and cook it a little extra to help to get it "Mushy" so it is a good consistency to make the fritters.)
1/4 cup onion, chopped fine
1/4 cup red bell pepper, chopped fine
1 garlic clove, minced
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 teaspoon dried basil
2 tablespoons or so of fresh parsley
1 egg, beaten
1 teaspoon sea salt, 1/2 teaspoon pepper
3 or so tablespoons romano or parmesan cheese

Simply mix all ingredients together (when millet is cooled) well with wooden spoon until nicely incorporated. Form into patties (a couple of tablespoons is a good size) and cook in heated skillet in some olive oil. Do not flip until edges are browned, but not burned. Flip over and cook until the other side is done. Drain on paper towel lined plate. This recipe is great with a spoonful of tomato sauce and a sprinkling of cheese! Enjoy!

Animal Shelter To Celebrate 15th Anniversary Nov. 14

The Quincy Animal Shelter, Inc. will celebrate 15 years of animal rescue at its third annual Pawcasso: Arts for Animals on Friday, Nov. 14 from 7 to 11 p.m. at Port 305, Marina Bay, North Quincy.

The special event will celebrate 15 years of operation as a successful No-Kill Animal Shelter. This event once again re-unites shelter supporters with Kris Henriksen, one of the original shelter founders.

"Kristie has been a tremendous supporter of QAS since 1998, when she discovered the condition that Quincy's dogs and cats were living in," said event organizer, Sandra Sines. "She took matters into her own hands and with the help of some her own Siros employees, started volunteering at the Animal Control building then known as the 'dog pound.' Kristie approached the city and offered to help so that no more animals would be euthanized."

In June of 1999, the first of many fundraisers was held at Siros. That event raised $20,000 and organizers hope this year's event tops that amount.

"The daily cost to care for animals has risen significantly over the past 15 years," said Shelter Director Kit Burke. "The support and exposure that Kristie and the Eat Drink and Mingle Group has provided QAS is significant. She has helped QAS save the lives of many dogs and cats," Burke added.

This celebration will include local artists, hors d'oeuvres by Port 305, raffles, and entertainment. There will also be photography, watercolors and handmade jewelry to purchase.

"It is a chance to see and purchase art work from some really talented artists just in time for the holidays," said Joanne McCarthy, event organizer.

Tickets are $50 per person and are available online at www.quincyanimalshelter.org, or at the Shelter during regular business hours. For more information, call the Shelter at 617-376-1349 or email events@quincyanimalshelter.org.

The Quincy Animal Shelter – 15 Years Later: Why Are We Still Here?

By SANDRA SINES
QAS Volunteer since 1999

There are many reasons why The Quincy Animal Shelter, Inc. still operates today. The answer is very simple; 15 years later there are still many animals in Quincy that need our services. There are plenty of volunteers that show up every day and care for our homeless cats and dogs.

In June of 1998, our goal was immediate and clear. Stop the killing of homeless cats and dogs in Quincy. There were few resources available, just some very dedicated volunteers, a building and two animal control officers gracious enough to let us work alongside them.

From the start we always said we are the type of business that truly wants to go out of business someday. We hope that someday, animals will no longer be dropped off at our doorstep in a bag or box or worse. We hope that the phone will stop ringing with people saying "I'm moving today and can't keep my seven cats!"

We pray that there will not be any more Puppy Doe investigations. We wish that the family dog would not be given up because no one has time for him. We want pets to be healthy and well cared for. We wish that we could close our doors forever but for the right reason. We wish that no more animals suffer at all.

The reality is that we are still here. Despite finding homes for more than 500 cats and dogs each year, for the last 15 years, the need still exists.

We are not there yet.

QAS is just one of many shelters and rescue groups in the South Shore Area doing the exact same thing! We have made progress in spaying and neutering but it is not as significant as we would like. This year already we have seven pregnant cats. Kitten season means the use of many resources and of course, that means we need dozens of adopters. Of course kittens are adorable, we love them too, but there are still far too many kittens that are born and never even make it to us to be rescued. Overall, we have made some progress with dogs, but the homeless cat population is still a huge problem in Quincy.

We are still here because we do good work. We have more than 150 loyal volunteers caring for our animals each week who serve on our committees and Board of Directors. Many have been with us since 1999. The shelter is a great place to volunteer. We are also still here because of the loyal support of the community. We rely on private donations to operate the shelter. We are still here because we care about what we do and that we do it well. We work hard to make the best decisions for our animals. Every animal is treated like it is one of our own.

We are still here because we need to be here for the humans too. Unfortunately, situations occur and people have to give up their animals. Sometimes they cannot afford veterinary care. We are here to help.

We are still here because the City of Quincy allows us to reside in their building and work alongside Animal Control officers Don Conboy and Bruce DiBella.

In 1998, many of us had no idea what we were doing. We had pets but we never ran a business or gave animal vaccinations or trained a dog. We just had passion and the commitment. That was enough. We are still here because we still have that same passion and that same level of commitment.

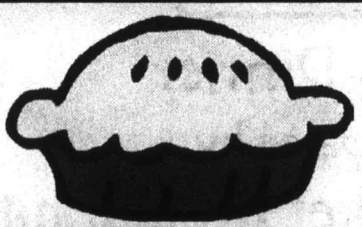

We can't give up.

We have so many stories to tell, many happy endings and some very sad. As new volunteers walk through the door so do more cats and dogs that need a hug. They still need us and that is why we are still here.

The last 15 years have gone by fast. I have always joked that we want to go out of business, it is pretty clear that will not happen for a good long time. We hope to be around as long as we are needed.

What would happen if we were not still here?

Fifth Graders In Middle Schools Concern Parents

ing the same topics using the same books as their fifth grade peers in elementary school.

Middle school fifth graders have the added benefit of a health specialist and the opportunity to participate in cross country, fall soccer, and flag football, activities not offered at the elementary school level, she said.

Assistant to the Superintendent Laura Owens compiled a list of Massachusetts cities that also have grade 5-8 configurations such as Weymouth, Natick, and Hanover.

Cities such as Wachusett and Milford, she found, have both 5-8 and 6-8 grade configurations.

"I think it's safe to say that a number of towns are wrestling with some of the same issues we are with growing populations or shifting populations," said Owens.

"When I look at the other communities going through similar things... they have a population of 10,000 people total," said committee member Anne Mahoney. "They're apples and oranges compared to what we're looking at."

Conversation shifted to open enrollment requests at the first grade level in the Point Webster and Sterling districts. There are currently 183 students enrolled in the fifth grade between the two schools.

Last year, seven students requested placement at a K-5 school, however none of the requests were granted because the target schools were already at or approaching capacity, said DeCristofaro.

The previous year, five of eight requests to attend a K-5 school were granted.

As of now there are no open enrollment requests for a K-5 school, said Owens.

All open enrollment requests should be granted for parents not wanting to send their fifth graders to Point Webster or Sterling, said Perdios.

"If fifth grade in middle school is such a great idea, then we should be offering that to the other schools... why was Central not considered for that?" she asked the committee.

A new Central Middle School facility was built, opening in 2013 with a grade 6-8 configuration.

Mahoney asked for statistics showing how many children leave Quincy Public Schools to go to the city's private schools such as the Catholic Academy in North Quincy or leave the system all together.

"We don't want students to leave our schools," she said.

McCarthy insisted that leaving the public school system happened across all grades in all public schools in the city and attempted to table the discussion because he felt it was not relevant to the topic at hand.

"You either pull your child out of the school they've been in since kindergarten or put them in a whole new school for a year before they go to middle school anyway or you let them go to middle school where you're not sure they're getting the same equal opportunity or where they may have more pressure on them than if they were in a different school," said parent Alexis Veith, who has a first grader at the Clifford Marshall Elementary School. She added that she knew of several parents who, after failing to get their children into their desired school through open enrollment, sent their children to the Catholic Academy or even moved out of the city.

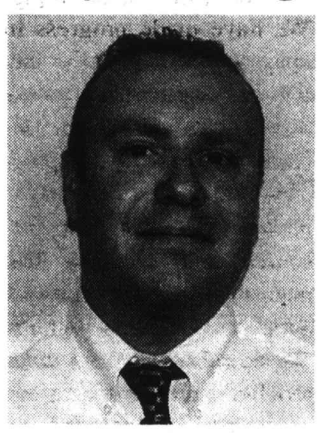

Some parents, she said, made the decision when their child was still in kindergarten.

"It is about treating all of the fifth graders equally regardless of the building that they're in," said Veith.

Arlene Goldstein Program Manager For Community Health Alliance

Arlene Goldstein, MEd, has assumed the role of Program Manager for the Blue Hills Community Health Alliance (CHNA 20).

CHNA 20 is a coalition of public, non-profit, and private sectors working together to build healthier communities through community-based prevention, planning, and health promotion.

In this newly created position, Goldstein will increase community engagement opportunities and expand its general operating and community funding capabilities. She comes to CHNA 20 with experience in prevention, coalition building, and community outreach. Previously, Goldstein was a Program Coordinator for the substance abuse prevention coalition Impact Quincy, a program of Bay State Community Services.

"This new position will allow me to continue working in communities to implement innovative public health strategies," she says. "Thanks to the contributions received from our generous Massachusetts Department of Public Health Determination of Need (DoN) program donors at South Shore Hospital, Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and Steward Quincy Hospital there is so much potential for positive impact in our communities."

When CHNA 20 completed a community needs assessment, four priority areas became the primary focus of the organization; substance abuse, mental health, chronic disease & wellness, and access to care & services. Goldstein will work in tandem with Kym Williams, CHNA 20's Community Health Specialist, to create initiatives and programs across all four priority areas. For example, in response to the need to address substance abuse, CHNA 20 has begun a Start-up Substance Abuse (SA) Prevention Coalition Assistance Program. The program targets newly formed SA coalitions not eligible for the resources available to more developed coalitions. The goal of the initiative is to help new groups lay a foundation and increase capacity to eventually have access to state and federally funded substance abuse prevention grants and technical assistance programs.

CHNA20 is one of the 27 Community Health Network Areas across Massachusetts. CHNA 20 is a partnership of 13 communities and is composed of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, local service agencies, hospitals, schools, businesses, boards of health. and concerned community residents and citizens working together to, identify the health needs of member communities, find ways to address those needs. The 13 partner communities include Quincy.

School Committee Questions Validity Of MCAS Test

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A summative review and comparison of 2013 and 2014 MCAS scores presented at the Oct. 22nd meeting of the School Committee revealed increases and decreases in performance amongst English Language Learners (ELL), high needs students, and students with disabilities.

Committee members, however, questioned the validity of assessing academic performance using one standardized test.

Prior to presenting board members with the scores, Superintendent of Quincy Public Schools Richard DeCristofaro said that he had anticipated an overall two percent increase in MCAS scores this year.

In some cases the improvements were dramatic and well over the two percent goal. Grade four ELL students saw a ten percent increase in correct answers since last year in the math category. Science scores in the overall school population however, remained relatively stable with only a .6 percent decrease in correct answers since last year.

While board members applauded the improved scores, they questioned the validity of assessing a student's knowledge using only one testing tool.

"We have a mixture of kids that we're looking at so it's a lot to expect because when you're looking at it, overall we have so many different levels and there are certain kids who are achieving higher proficiencies in that group," said school committee member Anne Mahoney. "It would be so much simpler if we had one elementary, one middle, and one high school and we don't so the needs at each of our schools are unique to those schools."

She added that educators are being spread thin due to over testing and having to cater to Common Core Standards which are designed to prepare students for introductory college courses or entering the workforce.

"I hate that we're basing all of our evaluations on one test," said committee member Paul Bregoli. "This MCAS is a snapshot of all our children. It's a visual test that doesn't take into account those children who are auditory learners, or need to learn or be evaluated through a multi sensory approach."

He added that developmentally, some children are not ready to take on a curriculum that focuses heavily on teaching to cater to MCAS and Common Core. "I just don't like the way we evaluate our kids," he said.

He urged parents not to base their children's school success solely on the results of the MCAS.

Committee member David McCarthy applauded the improvement of ELL and high needs students but echoed Bregoli's statements, saying that the district was "locked into" the test and Common Core Standards. "When you get past the MCAS, you graduate and you move on; they're looking at SATs, they're looking at your school…who brings up MCAS anymore?"

"Every kid doesn't fit into the same box," said Mayor Thomas Koch who suggested sending a letter to Department of Education officials criticizing education mandates pushed on school districts.

The following action was also taken at the Oct. 22nd meeting of the School Committee:

• Quincy High School football coach Bill Reardon was named a New England Patriots High School Coach of the Week following his team's 12-7 victory against Plymouth North High School on Oct. 10. Patriots Executive Director of Community Affairs and Pro Football Hall of Fame linebacker Andre Tippett visited the coach and his team at Quincy High School on Oct. 14. The new England Patriots Charitable Foundation committed to donating a$1,000 check to go towards the football program in Reardon's name.

• Quincy Public Schools were presented with a check of $10,000 from the President's Road Race which will go directly to QPS health and wellness programs.

• Open houses for grade eight parents were held at both North Quincy and Quincy High School. Quincy's open house took place on Oct. 23 and North's open house took place on Oct. 28.

• School committee members voted to accept the revised policy regarding National Background Checks for Employees, Vendors, Volunteers and Criminal Offender Record Information (CORI).

• Jordan DeLucca, BSN, RN, was appointed the school nurse for the Atherton Hough Elementary School.

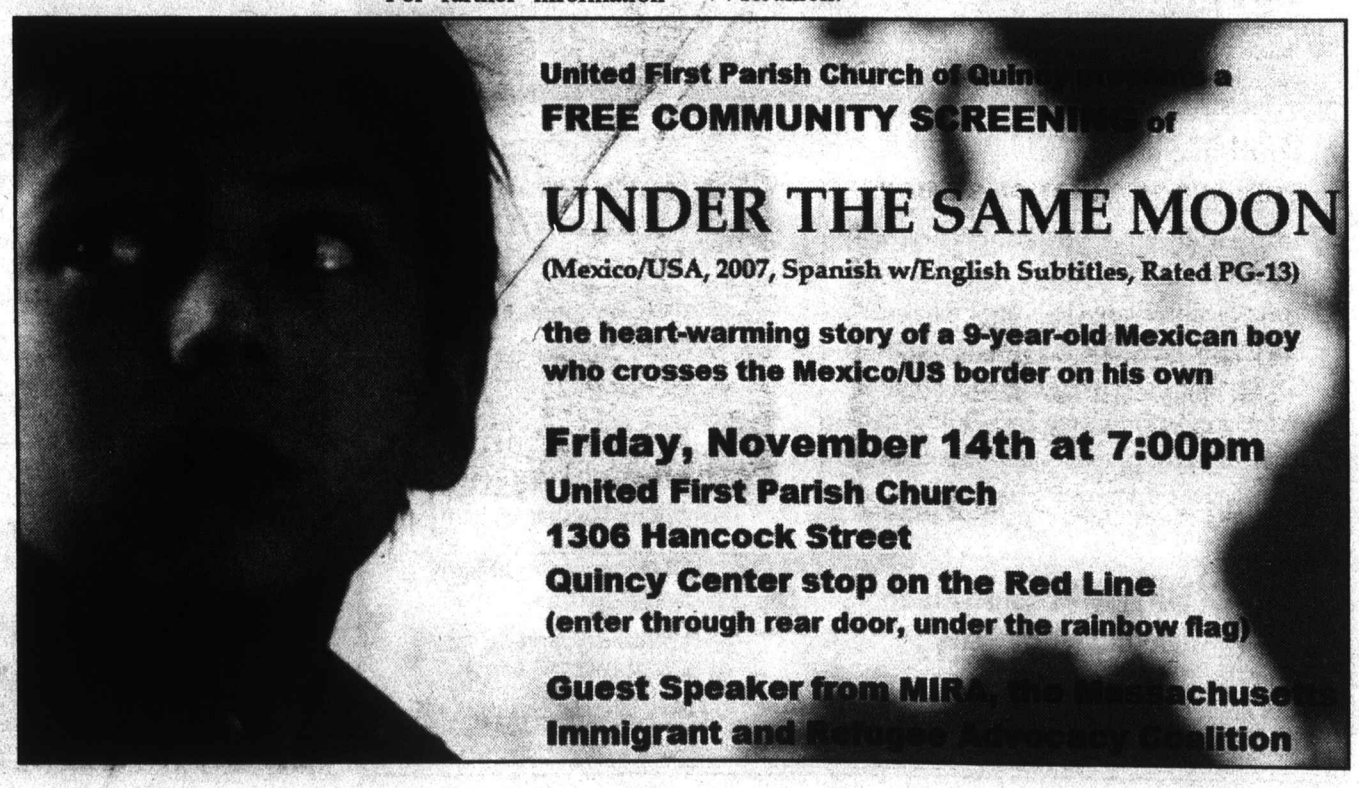

• Overnight travel for the North Quincy High School AFJROTC to go to Camp Edwards in Bourne from Nov. 19th to the 23rd was approved.

of the people we see have some sort of a behavioral health issue so we're going to bring behavioral health in house here.

"The fourth thing is we're putting in this thing called a 340B pharmacy. A 340B pharmacy caters to those folks who are in that socioeconomic status I just mentioned – whether they're unemployed, homeless, or whatever – and we charge just the basic, lowest price you could charge for any prescription."

Holiver, who was previously the president of Norwood Hospital, said the new setup is an uncommon one.

"It is not common. This is something I'm kind of bringing over from my acute care days," Holiver said. "When you go into a hospital most of the time it is one-stop shopping."

The vision center is expected to open in December, the behavioral health and dentistry suites in mid-January, and the pharmacy in February.

The West Squantum Street facility isn't Manet's only location that underwent major renovations. The organization received a $500,000 HRSA grant to upgrade its Hull facility, which was used to add new exam rooms and could attract up to 4,000 new patients.

"We just got a grant for $500,000 to upgrade our site in Hull. We put in a number of new exam rooms on the first floor. We upgraded the facility to be more modern. We brought new technology down there," Holiver said, including new labs.

"If you look at the place it's absolutely beautiful down there and we have the ability now to see an additional 3,000-4,000 new patients down there resulting in probably 15,000 additional visits per year."

Manet is also looking to bring the medical mall concept behind the renovated North Quincy facility to its new site in Taunton.

"We just got a new site down in Taunton, which is the furthest from our family. But we picked it up and we plan on heading down the South Shore and to the south. Taunton was something we did this year; we're very proud of that," Holiver explained.

"We worked very closely with Steward's Morton Hospital to roll out the same concept we have here in Taunton, which is the medical mall concept."

The Taunton site is currently housed in a temporary location. Manet is in the process of looking for a permanent space there and Holiver said such a space should be identified within the next 30 days.

In Quincy, Manet is working with the Quincy Housing Authority – including QHA executive director James Lydon and the agency's board of commissioners – to identify possible improvements at Manet's Snug Harbor location.

"We have a partnership with him and the housing board to look at Germantown in particular and to see what we can do there to improve the facility down there," Holiver said. "It's very important that we're doing this as a partnership."

Holiver himself is new to Manet, having come on board as its chief executive officer in early September. He spent the previous 23 years as an administrator at hospitals in Massachusetts –before serving as president at Norwood Hospital he was the president of St. Elizabeth's Medical Center in Brighton and Caritas Good Samaritan Medical Center in Brockton as well as a vice president at South Shore Hospital. The transition to his new role at Manet has gone well, Holiver said. He opted to join Manet because of the emphasis put on community health centers found in the Affordable Care Act.

"I decided to make the change to community health because, number one, I saw where the affordable care act was going and the emphasis that was being placed on community health. Secondly, I saw the funding was following that commitment in the form of dollars being put into renovations," Holiver said.

"The third things is it's extremely important that if we're going to make a commitment to make sure that everyone has to have insurance, we need to do our part to make sure the deliverable is there. The worst thing is to say you have to have insurance otherwise we're going to penalize you in your taxes and then not be able to get insurance. That's awful. What we try to do with our navigators and with our staff is go out and make sure that you have the right insurance."

A RIBBON CUTTING ceremony is scheduled for today (Thursday) at 8 a.m. to officially open Manet Community Health Center's renovated North Quincy facility at 110 W. Squantum St. The renovated location includes 26 new exam rooms, for a total of 44. Manet will begin offering optometry, dentistry, and behavioral health services as well as an in-house pharmacy in the coming months.

Norfolk Prosecutor Recognized For Outstanding Animal Protection

For the second time in three years, an Assistant Norfolk District Attorney has been recognized with an IMPACT award from the Animal Control Officers Association of Massachusetts for exceptional work in protecting animals.

ADA Tracey Cusick, who has been involved in some of the state's most high-profile animal cruelty and protection cases in recent years, was presented with the Important People In Animal Control Today (IMPACT) earlier this month at the Annual Banquet of the state Animal Control Officers' association.

"Tracey Cusick has been doing exemplary work protecting animals and prosecuting cruelty for many years – sometimes reported in newspaper headlines, but often quietly by assisting local authorities with legal support or providing training," Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey said after the award presentation. "It is a cause that she is dedicated to both personally and professionally, and it shows in her results." Cusick is part of Morrissey's appeals unit.

Hillary Cohen, the acting co-president of ACOAM, told Cusick that she was "chosen because the board recognizes all you have done for ACOAM, individual officers throughout the Commonwealth, your hard work and dedication...and your generosity with sharing your experience and expertise through trainings and seminars."

Cusick has won other animal protection and safety awards over the years, but noted with some pleasure that this recognition comes from "the people in our communities directly intervening for animals who are not safe. They are a special group."

Memo: QMC May Lose $20M

By SCOTT JACKSON

Facing increased competition from hospitals in neighboring communities, Quincy Medical Center may lose $20 million this year, which could lead to major changes at the hospital.

An Oct. 29 memo from the Massachusetts Nurses Association obtained by The Sun said the union is in talks with Quincy Medical Center's parent company – Steward Health Care – and academics specializing in health care as well as 1199SEIU to identify a way for QMC to move forward given its financial status. The memo indicates the hospital could lose $20 million this year, a figure it calls unsustainable.

"We have an agreement for a collaborative process, involving caregivers, academics and the community to identify hospital services that are viable and meet the community's needs," the memo states. "This implies very significant changes.

"The hospital predicts an unsustainable loss this year of about $20 million. It is becoming clear that the conversation must focus on IDing outpatient services that can thrive if no one can describe how inpatient services can viably continue."

Sandra McGunigle, Quincy Medical Center's director of public relations, referred a reporter to a Steward spokeswoman for comment. Messages left for that spokeswoman, Vice President of Media Relations Brooke Thurston, were not returned before The Sun went to press Tuesday.

The memo points out several causes of Quincy Medical Center's financial woes: Decreasing patient referrals from the Granite Medical Group; Radius Specialty Hospital's decision to close its 38-bed unit in QMC in September; the impending loss of a urology medical group and a obstetrics medical group; the expansion of competing hospitals who attract both patients and physicians; and insurance reimbursements, which the memo says favor wealthier hospitals and hurt community ones, such as Quincy Medical Center.

It goes on to say that many of those issues nearly led to the closure of Quincy Medical Center before Steward acquired the hospital in October 2011. The expansion of South Shore Hospital, and its pending merger with Partners HealthCare, as well as Beth Israel's merger with Milton Hospital have made inpatient services at Quincy Medical Center unsustainable, the memo added, because physicians have been recruited to admit or refer patients only to hospitals run by Partners or Beth Israel.

"It is clear, regardless of what recruitment efforts are made, they will not be enough to alter the level of inpatient volume to offset such large ongoing losses," the memo states.

"Instead, to keep QMC, we will focus on preserving jobs with services that can thrive – largely outpatient, while also securing opportunities for the dedicated QMC employees at other Steward hospitals."

The memo further states union officers would work with the academics to identify community needs – including those currently being met by Quincy Medical Center and those going unmet as well as needs being met at other hospitals – and areas of community demand QMC should emphasize.

Despite the predicted losses, the memo concludes by dismissing rumors Quincy Medical Center is facing imminent closure.

"The rumor that there is an [imminent] hospital closure that should cause caregivers to jump ship is inaccurate," the memo states.

"There is a mutual commitment to find a way forward. It will result in very significant changes. No one knows just what those changes will be, because this transparent process is not fake. Our members will know everything as it happens without surprises so that all have time to make rational decisions with full information."

City Officials Silent As QMC Faces Uncertain Future

OP ED

By ANNE MAHONEY

These are desperate times for Quincy Medical Center. According to a recent memo from the Mass. Nurses Association, this much-needed medical facility is facing an estimated loss of $20 million this year – a loss the memo calls "unsustainable." Among the options mentioned in this memo: a sharp reduction, or even possibly the elimination, of in-patient services at Quincy Medical Center – a facility that serves a city of more than 92,000 people and is a major local employer.

City officials should have seen this coming. The competitive health care market has threatened Quincy Medical's future for some time now. In recent months, the situation has only grown worse, as other South Shore hospitals have affiliated with major Boston medical centers and physicians' groups have been recruited to admit patients only to those other facilities. Yet on the topic of this vital health facility, City Hall has been silent.

That wasn't always the case. When Steward acquired Quincy Medical Center, residents heard not only from Steward but also from the mayor about the great things that were on the horizon. City leaders talked with excitement and pride about the revenues for-profit Steward would add to the city tax base.

Sadly, like many of the promises made by this administration, it seems that this promise also will not come to fruition. While city leaders have been busy demolishing downtown Quincy and displacing North Quincy homeowners in order to build a parking lot, Quincy Medical Center has been flatlining.

This situation is made all the more ironic by the recent controversy over a drug rehabilitation facility set to open just down the street from Central Middle School. Residents who attended a city-organized public hearing were outraged to learn from Mayor Koch that Phoenix's purchase of the property was a "done deal" and would move ahead regardless of resident opposition. The so-called "public hearing" was a sham – designed only to give the appearance of public input when it was too late for residents to do anything about it.

Another missed opportunity?

One can't help but wonder whether our current city leaders missed another major opportunity here. On one hand, you have a public health facility struggling to stay alive amid declining patient admissions. On the other, you have a drug rehabilitation facility looking for a place to admit patients in need of treatment. Could our city leaders have brought these two parties together? Could Phoenix have potentially leased a portion of Quincy Medical Center, providing the hospital with the revenue while offering a far more appropriate location for Phoenix's programs? Could this have been a win-win situation for the city, the hospital and Phoenix?

It seems we'll never know. What is clear, however, is that Quincy residents have a right to expect city officials to stay on top of critical issues like these, rather than wasting valuable time and taxpayer money on costly and unnecessary projects that hurt rather than help the quality of life in our city.

City Closes On 7th Hunt St. Home

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city has now closed on seven of the nine North Quincy homes it planned to purchase and demolish as part of a $12 million project to renovate Teel Field and construct a new parking lot for the field and North Quincy High School.

The city finalized its purchase of 34 Hunt St. on Oct. 31, according to the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds' online records. The house, a two-story single family home, was purchased for $450,000. It had an assessed value of $314,100, according to the city assessor's online database. Previously, the city purchased six more homes in the neighborhood – five on Hunt Street and one on Newbury Avenue – for a combined $2.945 million. In total, Quincy has spent $3.395 million on the seven homes.

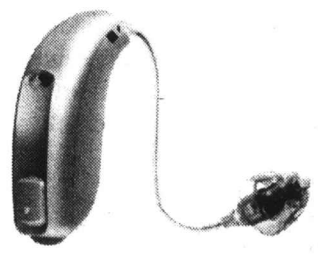

City Solicitor Jim Timmins said Tuesday negotiations with the owners of the two remaining properties are still ongoing.

Wreath Laying Celebrates Life, Legacy Of John Adams

Following an invocation by Rev. Rebecca Froom of the United First Parish Church, Douglas Adams, a fifth generation descendant of John Adams spoke of the man who he called the founder of the American Navy.

He said he wanted to focus on what he felt was the most important day of John Adams' life; Oct. 25, 1764, the day he married Abigail. Throughout their courtship, he kept a journal. "She is tender, feeling, sensible, friendly," he wrote of Abigail. "A friend. Not an imprudent, not an indelicate; not a disagreeable word or action."

She was however, much more influential and important to John than that, he added.

"She was his dearest friend," he said. "Also [she was] his foremost political council."

Their relationship was remarkable because even though they spent extended amounts of time hundreds of miles and oceans apart, they remained connected and confided in each other through frequent letters, he said.

"The most earnest wish of my soul is to be with you," wrote Abigail to John following eight years of separation throughout the American Revolution.

Senior at the Woodward School for Girls Emma Will connected the history of her school with the advancement of women's education made possible through the actions of John Adams at his wife's urging.

"The school's founder, Dr. Ebenezer Woodward, a cousin to the Adamses and a leading physician in Quincy until his death in 1869, along with his wife Mary Anne Greenleaf, were inspired to establish a school for girls," she said. "John Adams was strong in the belief that educated citizens were essential to establish and sustain a democracy. He wrote that liberty cannot be achieved without a general knowledge among the people, who have a right and desire to know, and that children should be educated and instructed in the principles of freedom."

Abigail wholeheartedly agreed with her husband on educating the population and felt strongly that women should be afforded the same educational opportunities as men. "If you complain of neglect in the education of sons," wrote Abigail, "what shall I say with regard to daughters, who every day experience the want of it?"

"From we who are students, the president's greatest gift to posterity may be his requirement that the commitment to education for all citizens be writ directly into our state's constitution, as a duty of the legislature," said Will, who will graduate in May as a member of the class of 2015.

"I have chosen to dedicate my life to service," she said. "I am currently engaged in the application process to the United States Naval Academy…it's my dream the be the first female Navy officer in my family."

Quincy High School Junior Katherine Stevenson said the relationship of John and Abigail exemplified the essential concepts of teamwork and that instances of their ability to rationally and thoughtfully work through hardship had been preserved in over 1,000 letters of correspondence.

"Today, teamwork has become a staple of our society," she said. "It's necessary to pass laws, catch criminals, and innovate…

The two confided in each other, she said, and worked together to shape their community, much like teachers working together in today's schools to provide students with a well rounded education.

North Quincy High School Senior Cornelius Koch said "it is not possible to speak of this brilliant statesman without speaking about his partner, Abigail,"

"They were truly a team in every sense of the word," he added.

He called Abigail one of John's "top advisers" and said of this month's elections that "John and Abigail would encourage us all to research the issues, educate ourselves on the questions, and most importantly exercise our right to vote."

Rev. Sheldon Bennett, Minister Emeritus of the United First Parish Church, was the last to address the crowd.

"Through my own years of ministry, I often looked to John Adams for inspiration," he said. "How could I not?"

Some historians, he said, have been dismissive of John Adams' presidency, calling him ineffective by focusing on the highly controversial Alien and Sedition Acts signed in 1798 following the French Revolution. The acts increased residency requirements from five to fourteen years for American citizenship, allowed the president to imprison or deport aliens considered dangerous, and restricted public speech criticizing the government.

"I believe such disparaging interpretations fail to understand the precariousness of the national situation when Adams took office, and they take too narrow of a view of what makes for a good leader and an effective president," said Bennett.

Adams, he said, had to "face the daunting challenge" of following George Washington who was widely lauded as a successful president.

Below the visage of success of the Washington presidency, he said, trouble was brewing; trouble that was placed directly in the hands of John Adams as he assumed office.

The Federalist and Democratic-Republic Parties disagreed on fundamental issues. Adams, as a Federalist, favored a strong central government with great control over commerce and the ability to tax citizens while the opposing Democratic-Republican Party preferred that control be handed to local governments and was strongly against imposing tariffs.

MORE THAN 300 people, including students from Quincy High School, North Quincy High School and the Woodward School for Girls filled the pews at United First Parish Church Oct. 30 to celebrate the life and legacy of John Adams. The second President was honored with a Presidential wreath on the 279th anniversary of his birth Oct. 30.

Adams, Bennett said, when contemplating going to war with France, understood that following popular opinion would be "ruinous" to the country and instead fought an undeclared war with the French labeled the "Quasi-War" which occurred mostly at sea.

"Although it took him until near the very end of his term, Adams did in the end win an honorable treaty with France, ending hostilities," said Bennett.

"It's always a great honor for me to come over...for the annual wreath laying of John Adams in recognition of his birthday," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

"It's a reminder to me, each time I come over where we are, who we are as a people because of the contributions and leadership of John Adams and Abigail Adams," he said.

Petty Officer 2nd Class David Clarke and Petty Officer 2nd Class Ivan Pena of the Navy Honor Guard marched the wreath of red, white, and blue flowers to the basement and into the crypt of the church and placed it atop Adams' tomb.

The tradition of laying a wreath on the grave sites of all deceased former presidents to honor their birthday was started by President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Following closing remarks, the retirement of the colors, a musical postlude, and a benediction by Froom, guests were invited downstairs to view the presidential burial place.

Chef Tony Derienzo, Abby Park Take 2014 Best Chef Title

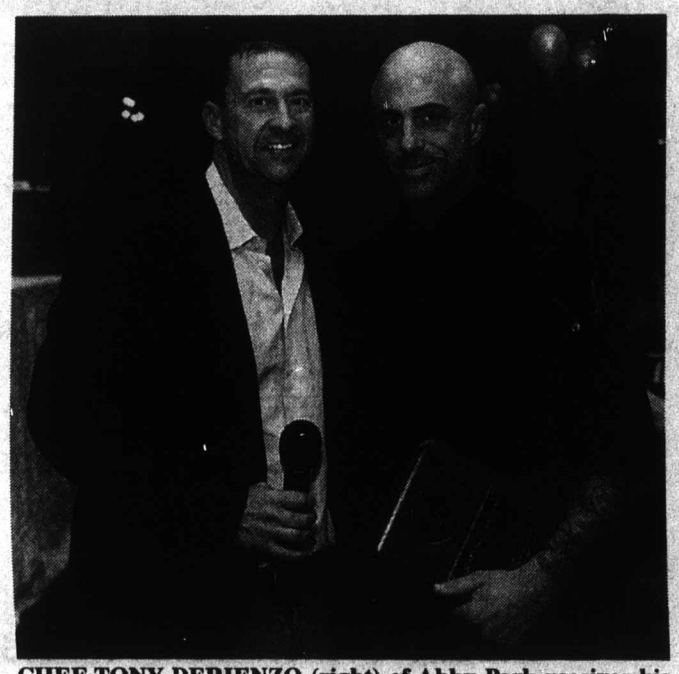

Annual Event Raises Over $120,000 For Quincy Community Action Programs

Chef Tony Derienzo, Executive Chef of Abby Park in Milton, came away victorious in the third annual Best Chef competition.

The event was held recently at Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy. Emceed by Dave Andelman of the Phantom Gourmet, the event raised more than $120,000 in funds to benefit Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP), which serves 20,000 unduplicated people every year in Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Hull, and more than 80 surrounding Norfolk County, South Shore, and Metro Boston communities.

"The event surpassed our expectations," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP's Executive Director. "The chefs and their restaurants not only put on an amazing show but they also generously donated their time and culinary creations for our guests. We could not be more grateful to them, our judges' panel, our emcee Dave Andelman, and all of our sponsors and donors who helped us reach our goal."

Chef Derienzo squared off against some of the area's most talented chefs including Chef Ming Cao of the Fuji Group, Chef Joel Hathaway of the Neighborhood Club of Quincy, and Chef Paul Wahlberg of Alma Nove and Walhburgers.

CHEF TONY DERIENZO (right) of Abby Park receives his award as the winner of the 2014 Best Chef title from Dave Andelman of the "Phantom Gourmet."

The challenge was to use typical ingredients distributed at QCAP's Emergency Food Center, the organization's food pantry, to create a gourmet dish. This year's menu – which was kept secret from the chefs until they were unveiled at the event - included ground turkey, canned potatoes, corn flakes, raisins, and marshmallows. The chefs were further handicapped by their cooking equipment, which included only a convection oven and a handful of portable burners, and the clock, ticking away 30 minutes to cook.

The dishes were rated on taste, plating, and how well they used the secret ingredients. The panel of judges included Maria Allen, managing editor, South Shore Living; Leah Mennies, food critic, Boston Magazine; Chef David Todisco, executive chef of Granite Links and 2013 Best Chef; and Barbara Isola, Quincy School Committee, and host of QATV's Into the Frying Pan.

The chefs were paired with a celebrity chef, who helped to rush ingredients for their chefs from the Mobile Pantry. Donning the celebrity chef aprons were state Sen. John Keenan, House Majority Leader Ronald Mariano, Rep. Bruce Ayers, Rep. Tackey Chan, and Rep. Walter Timilty.

The more than 300 guests weighed in on their own favorite chefs as part of the "People's Choice" competition, which featured serving stations around the Granite Links ballroom with dishes that reflected the flavors and styles of the chefs' respective restaurants. With his Roast Tenderloin Oscar, Chef Hathaway took home the People's Choice title.

The night also featured raffles and live and silent auctions, including accommodations in Aruba, New England Patriots Putnam Club tickets, a diamond necklace, donated by Rogers Jewelers in Quincy, and a private dining experience, donated by Chef Paul Wahlberg.

Event proceeds will benefit QCAP programs, In addition to the Emergency Food Center, services include adult education and workforce development, financial coaching, money management, and budget counseling, free tax preparation, Head Start early education and care, parent education, family engagement, and early literacy activities, child care financial assistance, affordable housing, homelessness prevention, mortgage foreclosure counseling, and housing services.

12 Champions Crowned In 44th City Tennis Tournament

Tennis in Quincy is still extremely popular and played by Quincy residents of all ages as proven by the recently completed 44th Annual City of Quincy Tennis Championships.

With near perfect playing conditions, the Quincy Recreation Department conducted the traditional fall classic with 118 matches resulting in champions being crowned in 12 separate events. When it was all said and done the 2014 title of the first family of tennis in Quincy resides with the Chan family. The long-time tournament participants captured top honors in five events.

Mother Phoebe won the Women's Singles, the Women's 35 and older and teamed with her daughter Lydia for the Women's Doubles. Dad Job won the Men's 50 and older while Lydia took the top spot in the Girls 16 and younger. The 44th consecutive year of play saw a new resident take home the hardware in the largest event of the tournament the Men's Singles as Victor Patreca has his name inscribed on the silver bowl in his first year of play.

This year's events were conducted under the watchful eyes of John Franceschini and Michelle Hanly who have been at the helm of this uniquely Quincy event for more than 25 years.

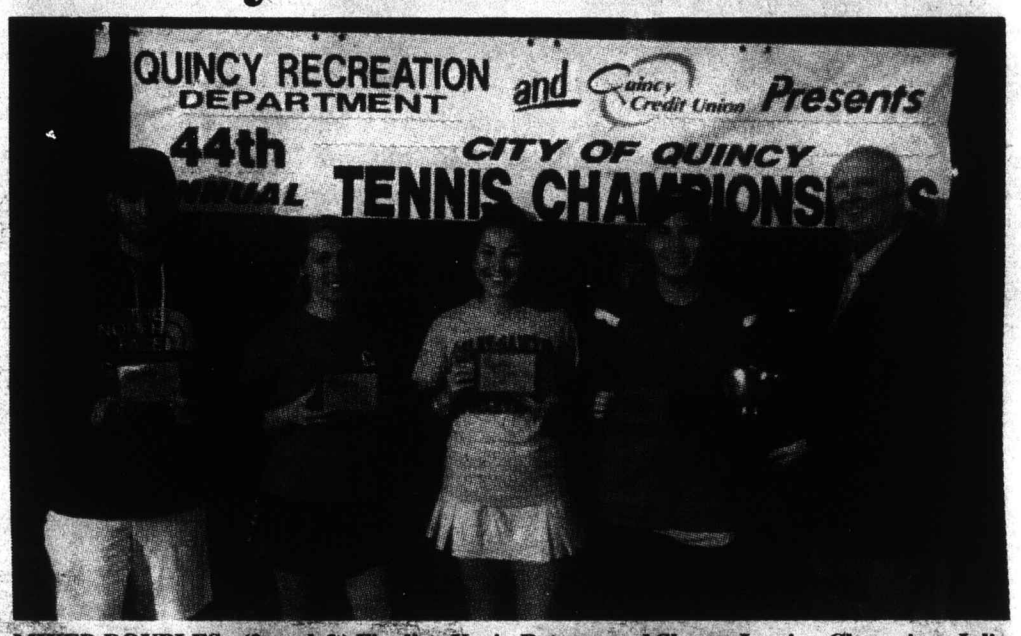

"Their knowledge and experience with the local tennis playing community is the human connection that keeps our tournament going so strongly," said Recreation Director Barry Welch. "They have the respect of the participants from beginner to advanced. We are fortunate to have them as directors."

Welch also thanked the Quincy Credit Union who stepped up for the 14th year to be the principal sponsor.

"The Quincy Credit union remains a strong commitment to our goals, and with their contribution we are able to bring the diverse tennis population that includes young, old, experienced and novice tennis players together for the benefit of our community's health and well being," Welch said.

The tournament ran for 12 days with all matches played at the Russell Park tennis courts on the grounds of Quincy High School. Welch presented all champions and finalists plaques in recognition of their achievement. Champions will have their name inscribed with past winner's on Paul Revere Silver Bowl's that remain on year round display in the main office of the rec-

Quincy Dominates Boston Latin In Round 1

By BILL GRIFFIN

The serve is generally intended to start the point. When a player and a team can start and finish the point with the serve, volleyball becomes an easy ride.

Senior Emma Kelly won 15 points off her serve, drilled six aces and quarterbacked her team with a brilliant floor game to lead No. 4 seed Quincy to an emphatic 25-9, 25-11, 25-11 win over fifth-seeded Boston Latin in the opening round of the Division 1 Central-East Sectionals Monday night at Quincy High School

Quincy (17-4) faced top-seeded Brookline Wednesday night in a rematch from last year's tournament.

"We served very well. It's something we talk about a lot and tonight it was super-important because it helped get us off to a fast start," said Quincy coach Jacqui Niosi.

Kelly was not the only ace server. Emma Kimmell had three aces. Hody Wong won 10 points off her serve and sophomore Danielle Parry added seven more. Junior Sarah Gibbons had three consecutive winners in the first set and four straight in the second. Jesse Lei served aces on the first four points of the match. The serves were hard and true. The points were quick and short.

"When you serve well, you get balls into the net, and that makes for easy points," said Niosi.

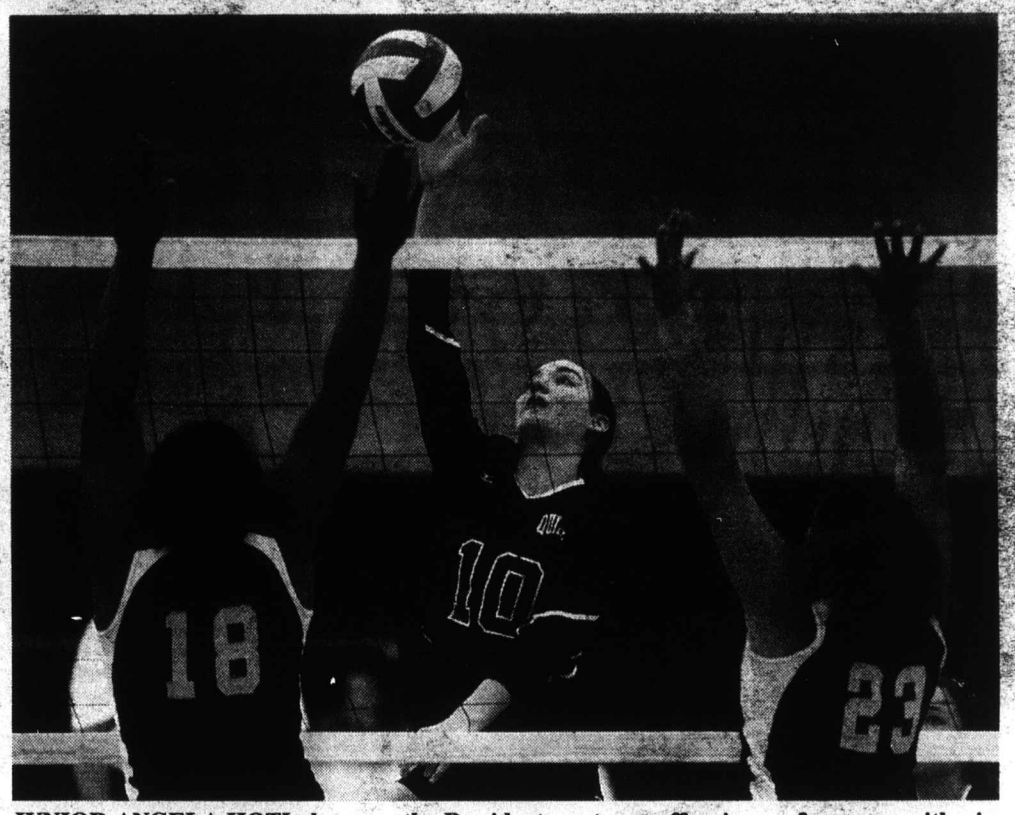

Kelly served nine consecutive winners to jump-start the Presidents in the first game and then finished the match with six straight. She mixed the height and speed on her serve, but it was more than hard, flat velocity. It was accuracy. Kelly serves a volleyball the way Larry Bird shot free throws.

She consistently placed her serve between defenders, in open, awkward spots to return. This led to desperation lunges and volleyballs floating high and wide and impossible to send back over the net. She served at 94 percent clip for the season. Teammates on the bench call out spots, and Kelly hits them. She's that good.

SENIOR EMMA KELLY powered the Quincy Presidents to a 3-0 win over Boston Latin in the opening round of the Division 1 Central-East Sectionals Monday. Kelly won 15 points off her serve and added six aces as Quincy advanced to the second round Wednesday night at Brookline.

JUNIOR ANGELA HOTI also gave the Presidents a strong offensive performance with nine kills.

QUINCY'S VARSITY VOLLEYBALL team celebrates the final point that clinched a 3-0 win for the Presidents over Boston Latin Monday night. From left are Noreen Plabutong, Emma Kelly, Alicia Walker, Sarah Gibbons and Nicole Jorgensen. Quincy visited top-seed Brookline in the next round Wednesday at 7 p.m.

"Emma's has been very consistent all season. She's worked hard on her serve and it shows," said Niosi.

Kelly has directed her team in the tourney from her libero spot for three years. It showed. She kept points alive, directed passes to the front line which were easy to pass or slam, and played with a veteran's confidence which spread to the entire team.

"She's the anchor. Emma has an instinct for volleyball. She sees everything and she gets us where we should be on the floor," said Niosi.

Quincy front line of Gibbons, Angela Hoti, Nicole Jorgensen, and Maggie Parker were dominant. They are balanced and multi-skilled. All of them can finish. Hoti led with nine kills followed by Jorgensen (six), Gibbons (three) and Parker (two). They do more than overpower the ball. They block, save points, pass and move seamlessly into position for the proper shot.

"You have to defend and pass. It doesn't matter how hard you hit the ball. To play well at the net, you have to be able to do a lot of things well," said Niosi. "Tonight I thought we were aggressive at net. We had a mind-set to finish points quickly."

Hoti was particularly impressive. She varied the pace on her slams, blending power with touch. She blocked well and had an excellent sense for the uncovered spot for her placements.

"I've never had a player who works harder in practice. It's rewarding to see it translate into the matches," said Niosi.

Niosi was able to use her bench liberally and the players responded well. Parry and Wong served and played sold floor games. Senior captain Noreen Plabutong hit well and did a fine job on defense and at the net.

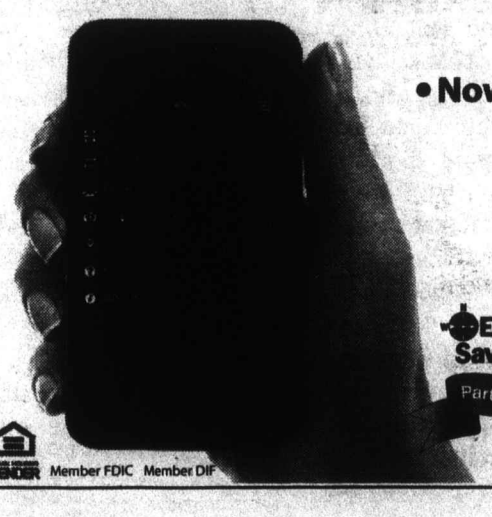

"It was good to get a lot players involved in a tournament match," said Niosi. "Noreen has been a great leader for us all year. Danielle is a sophomore setter who is developing into a good player. She had an excellent match. Hody Wong has a lot of friends on the Latin team, so it was fun for her to play against them."

Quincy's Playoff Road Ends In Needham

Presidents Visit Braintree Friday At 6 P.M.

A DISAPPOINTED PRESIDENTS' football team including (from left) Jake Bergonzi, James Lam, Curtis Calley and Mike Munroe shake hands with Needham players after the Rockets rallied for a 29-27 overtime win last Friday night to knock Quincy out of the playoffs. By JOE REARDON

When the MIAA's football committee sits down at the end of the season and weighs the pros and cons of the playoff format as it is now consituted, proponents of the middle-of-the-schedule playoffs will surely look to last Friday night's Div. 2 quarterfinal game between Quincy and Needham as an example of what's so right about the alignment.

The showdown proved to be an instant classic as the Rockets edged Quincy 29-27 in an overtime thriller at Needham's Memorial Field.

Presidents' back Jahvae Handsom-Fields, who was sorely missed in Quincy's loss to Duxbury the previous Friday due to a hamstring injury, showed no ill affects as he rushed for 93 yards on 29 carries and a pair of touchdowns. He found an opening from the 3-yard line in overtime and scooted into end zone to give the Presidents a brief 27-21 lead. Handsom-Fields appeared to be in on the conversion rush, but officials ruled he didn't break the plane and it was No. 4 Needham's turn to go for the win.

Rocket quarterback Sam Foley first hit Tom Stenberg in the end zone to tie it at 27 and on the conversion pass he hooked up with his favorite receiver once again to clinch the win and improve to 6-2 on the season.

The No. 5 seed Presidents dropped to 6-2 with their second consecutive loss. Quincy visits Braintree tomorrow (Friday) for a 6 p.m. kick-off with the Wamps at Braintree High School. Braintree fell to Hockomock League power King Philip 34-7. Quincy defeated the Wamps earlier in the season at home, 29-8.

"It's interesting how a couple of plays can make that big of a difference," said Quincy head coach Bill Reardon. "I'm very proud of the kids. They played their tails off. They buckled their chin straps and knew it was going to be a very physical game. They had to bang their heads against the wall against a very tough Needham team and they did it. We had the game and it just kind of got away from us."

Quincy opened up a 21-13 lead on the final play of the third quarter when quarterback James Lam connected with a wide-open Reda Laftih for a 37-yard TD pass to cap an 80-yard drive where Lam broke a big 23-yard pass to start the surge.

Quincy stalled on its next possession and a drop on perfectly executed fake punt on fourth down gave Needham the ball at their own 45-yard line with 3:11 to play. Reardon wasn't second guessing himself on the fake punt call after the game. "I knew it was the right call," he said. "We worked it out great all week in practice."

Needham went to a halfback option pass on the first play of the possession and it worked to perfection as Cameron Cox pulled in the 36-yard pass to give Needham a first down at the Quincy 19-yard line.

"They caught us with some big plays and some trick plays," said Reardon. "We miss the punt fake and they run the halfback pass so that kind of got them down there. They were running the criss cross across the field and we were in man-to-man and we didn't get enough pressure in that situation."

Linebacker Jake Bergonzi came up with a huge hit on Jack Roque on a pass completion to stall Needham at the 18, but Foley hit wide receiver Cliff Kurker on the next play for a score. Foley made the conversion pass look easy, hitting Dylan Murphy, who was wide open, to tie it 21-21 with 1:21 left to play. The Rockets went on to prevail in overtime.

Needham got on the board first when a fumble recovery put the Rockets on the Quincy 45-yard line just 1:27 into the game. Stenberg pulled in Foley pass down field for a 34-yard gain and Rogue hammered it home up the middle on the next play for the 7-0 advantage.

A Needham penalty on a Quincy reverse in the next series gave the Presidents the ball at the Needham 41-yard line. Lam hit Alex Leo with a 22-yard pass, followed by a 10-yard rush by the talented quarterback. Another Rocket penalty put the Presidents at the Needham 1 and Handsom-Fields went in on the next play to tie it 7-7.

"We were happy to have Jahvae back," said Reardon. "We were able to get our basic offense back instead of running everything through James (Lam). We got back to our bread and butter with our full complement of players back. You can't be one dimensional on offense. Last week it was all James and you can put nine in the box and stop him. When you have Jahvae going like that we become difficult to defend."

Quincy went up 14-7 on a 58-yard pass from Lam to Laftih with 7:33 to go in the third for a 14-7 lead. Needham followed that up with a score of its own on the next set of downs as Kurker broke a 53-yard run down the left sideline for the score. The point-after kick was wide and the Presidents were able to hold the 14-13 advantage.

Despite the heartbreaking loss, Reardon was adamant that the Presidents are on the right track heading forward. "It's not like I can say we're not a good football team," he said. "We can't do this, we can't do that. We can do basically anything we want. It's just a matter of doing it. It's not like I have to say you have to try harder. My job is to keep their spirits up because they're going to beat themselves up and I don't want them to do that. I kind of have to get them to rally around themselves. We just have to get back on the winning track."

North Falls To Norwood, Visits Milton Friday

By BILL GRIFFIN

North Quincy played stretches – long stretches – of good football, but the issue was consistency, especially on offense where a penalty, a missed assignment, or a key loss took the momentum out of promising drives.

The Red Raiders scored first, made two great defensive stands inside their ten yard line and were within a point of the lead late in the third period.

However, Norwood took control with their running game and pushed across two late touchdowns to drop North, 23-7 in a non-league contest played in the wind and the rain Saturday morning at Norwood High School.

"I thought we played well on defense," said North coach Mark Nutley whose team dropped to 2-5 on the season. "Our defense put the offense in position to score, and we had our chances. But penalties and breakdowns hurt us again. We need more consistency on offense."

North's first defensive stand came in the opening minutes. Norwood returned an interception off a tipped ball inside the North five. The Red Raiders shut down Norwood on four straight plays. Eric Cohane-Jones made the key defensive play when he knocked down a pass in the end zone.

"The line got good pressure and the whole secondary covered well for us," said Nutley.

Late in the first period, North took the lead with a 78-yard drive. Senior quarterback Andrew Kiley had a big 40-yard run on the march. Senior tailback Dayvon Jones blasted in for the TD from the 15.

Dara Griffin's kick for the conversion put North up, 7-0.

"The line blocked well and we executed our plays well on the drive. We got off the ball. That's the kind of offense we need to play," said Nutley.

The defense held the lead until the final minutes of the first half. Joe Mazzota went in from the one for Norwood to finish a sustained drive, which was mainly on the ground. Zac Pungitore rushed for the points, and the Mustangs led, 8-7 at the half.

It stayed that way until late in the third. North moved the ball well in the middle of the field, but couldn't crack through in the scoring zone. Finally, a punt return set Norwood up in good field position in North territory, and the Mustangs capitalized.

Brian Wright scored from the five and ran for the two points to put Norwood up, 16-7.

North made its second goal-line stand early in the fourth to keep the score close and give the offense a chance. However, Norwood forced a punt and put the game away with a long clock-eating drive which Wright finished with a three-yard run. T.J. Grover kicked the point for the 23-7 final.

"Their running game took control in the final period. They kept it on the ground and did a good job blocking us," said Nutley.

Jones had a fine day running the ball, and North's offense did carve out first downs, but losses on important plays, especially when Norwood blitzed, hurt the Red Raiders' offense.

"Blitz pick-up is something we have to keep working on. When we give Andrew time to throw, he throws the ball well," said Nutley.

Senior linebacker Marcello Toscanini, who has had a terrific year for the Red Raiders, once again had a fistful of tackles and played an excellent game on defense.

"He had a great day," said Nutley. "We didn't even know if we'd use him at linebacker before the season began, and he's probably been our defensive MVP."

North has two games left against Milton and Hingham before Thanksgiving morning against Quincy. On offense, Nutley would like to see improved blocking up front to finish off drives when the Red Raiders move close to the goal line.

"We have to be able to punch it in, and that starts with the line," he said. "I'd like to see us move people out when we get close. It's important for the next two games, for Quincy, and to set a tone for next year. Three of our linemen (Seamus Broughton, Derek Huynh, and Conor Pound) are back next year."

On defense, Nutley would like to see more takeaways. He would like to see his defense turn the ball over and get off the field without giving up sustained drives.

"We need to create turnovers," said Nutley. "I don't think we've had many since the opener against Medford. It's the best way to stop the long drives that have been hurting us and get our offense back on the field."

North is at Milton Friday night at 7 p.m. The Wildcats are 3-4 with wins over Norwood, Dedham, and Hingham.

Milton played Natick tough (a 28-14 loss), and Natick routed Patriot League Keenan Division champ Duxbury in the playoffs. It will be a tough test for North.

"They do some good things," said Nutley. "We scrimmaged them. They like to run the spread and show a lot of misdirection. We'll have to be disciplined, stay at home and be sure with our tackles."

Cannon Clocks Personal Best

After weeks of pretty consistent nice weather, Mother Nature has decided to throw a wrench into the works. This did little to stop several North Quincy and Quincy runners from doing their best at the MSTCA Coaches Invitational over the Wrentham Development Center. The winds and heavy rain didn't really show up until the end, although the day was filled with drizzle, cold temperatures and soggy footing.

In the Sophomore boys race, Jimmy Cannon was close to the leaders the entire way of the 5K route finishing third and clocking a 17:03 time, his best of the season. Aidan Golden finished in 20:02.

In the Freshman girls race, Devin Hiltunen had third most of the way but finished a close 4th clocking a 12:04 for the shorter 3K freshman course. In the boys race, Victor Chu finished in 13:34.

Mike Mullaney led the field in the Junior-Senior 5K race for most of the first two miles and took a close 5th in 16:30. Peter Saccoach clocked an 18:07. By then the storm was intensifying, nullifying any record efforts.

"We're still on target for states,"said Head Coach Geoff Hennessy. "Each competitor is close to a milestone in their event, so it will be our collective goal in reach them, whether it's 17 minutes, 16 minutes of whatever."

Several athletes were resting for the Eastern Mass Divisionals this Saturday, also over the Wrentham course, including Emily and Julia Bryson and Marguerite Belcher. The forecast is expected to warmer and partly sunny. Qualifiers from the Divisionals move on to the All-State on Nov. 15, which will return to Franklin Park after a three-year hiatus.

Climate Action Group Hosts Leadership Summit

The Quincy Climate Action Network recently gathered local leaders to discuss ways the city will need to change in a time of rising temperatures and rising sea levels.

The summit, which took place at United First Parish Church, drew 27 residents, including officeholders Sen. John Keenan, at-large city councillor Doug Gutro, and school committee member Anne Mahoney, as well as staffers from city government and leaders from local business, religious, scouting, educational, and environmental organizations.

Attendees brainstormed projects on which their groups could collaborate. Some ideas that emerged include a push for municipal composting of kitchen waste and expanding recycling to Quincy businesses and large residential buildings. Both composting and recycling have been shown to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

The event, emceed by Rebecca McWilliams, QCAN's outgoing chair, and cosponsored by Roche Brothers supermarkets, also introduced leaders to likeminded colleagues. "It was great to … meet environmental leaders from all over Quincy that are ready to tackle issues like sustainability, climate change, and open space preservation," said Jonathan Twining, assistant professor of biology at Eastern Nazarene College. "I hope that ENC can contribute, not only by becoming more sustainable as an institution, but also by our students being engaged in helping to solve the environmental issues the city faces."

QCAN, added Mahoney, "is working hard to open up critical lines of communication [and to] educate Quincy about some of our future challenges. I was thrilled to be part of the discussion."

Winterizing: Shutter Repair

THIS IS A HAMMER

By Samantha Mazzotta

Q: My mother's house has wooden louver shutters that have stayed open on either side of the windows outside the house for years and years. Many of them are in disrepair. Are they worth saving, or should I replace them? -- Jim H., Gardner, Mass.

A: The decision to repair or replace the shutters is ultimately yours. But there are some factors you can consider as you make that decision.

• How many shutters are on the house? You would likely need to replace all of them if you're refreshing the exterior. Shutter replacement can cost between $35 and $55 per shutter.

• Are the current shutters of good quality or unique design? You may not be able to find a match.

• Would the time and effort involved in repairing the shutters be more than the cost of replacement?

• Consider what it will take to remove each shutter, the amount of repair needed, the hours it will take to accomplish the repair and the cost of the supplies needed to fix them.

If you decide to replace the shutters, count how many you'll need. To save money you might consider just replacing the most heavily damaged with matching or near-matching shutters and then finish replacing the rest when it's more convenient. The risk you run, of course, is not being able to purchase the same shutters later.

Find the manufacturer name and details about the shutter (like dimensions), if possible. In newer shutters the information may be found on a sticker or tag on the inside frame edge. If there is no information, measure the height and width of the shutter. You should also measure the shutters on the second floor and any additional floors or attic windows, if the house has them, as the dimensions may vary. Then, order the shutters you'll need along with new hardware.

If you decide to repair the shutters, determine which are the most damaged, which need no repair and which need some repair or just touch-ups or repainting. Schedule a few hours each day or weekend to remove one set of shutters at a time and repair them.

Here's the link to a video that details how to repair damaged exterior wooden shutters: http://www.thisoldhouse.com/toh/video/0,,1632408,00.html

As the video points out, often the joints of the shutters separate, causing the louvers to slip out of place. Here's another video that shows how a decorative shutter with minor wood rot is repaired in place: http://www.todayshomeowner.com/video/how-to-repair-exterior-wood-shutters/.

If louvers are badly damaged or rotted, you should be able to find replacements in the same dimensions at your home-improvement store.

HOME TIP: Exterior shutters need little maintenance if they're in good shape. Brush away debris and dirt when needed, and keep shrubs and other plants trimmed back.

Send your questions or home tips to ask@thisisahammer.com.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Thursday, October 23, 2014, at approximately 11:00 a.m., Officer Kristen Bowes was dispatched to Andrews Road for a call of a Breaking and Entering into a private home that just occurred. She was joined by numerous other patrol Officers, along with Detectives and Community Police Officers. K-9 Officer Scott Doherty radioed that he was first on scene and gave out a description of the suspect as a white male, wearing a gray hooded sweatshirt and a hat.

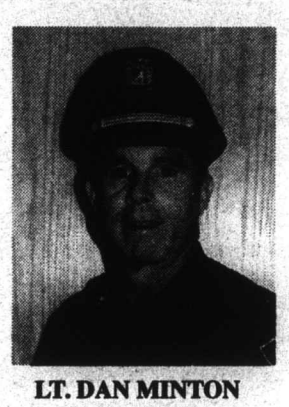

Moments later, Officer Bowes arrived and interviewed the 16 year old caller/victim. He said that he was home because he was sick. He stated that he was in his upstairs bedroom when he heard knocking at the front door. The caller said that he immediately thought this was odd because no one ever uses their front door, so he went to a second floor window where he could see a male (suspect) at the door.

After knocking for approximately 1-3 minutes, the suspect went to the side door and knocked twice. The suspect then walked to the rear of the house, so the caller went to another window to watch him. The suspect suddenly squatted at the bulkhead in the rear of the house. The caller decided it was time to call "911" and as he did this, the suspect opened the bulkhead and disappeared into it. As the caller remained on the telephone with the Police Dispatcher, he could hear someone coming up the stairs to the second floor. When the caller saw the same male in front of his bedroom door, he yelled, "Get out." The suspect, without hesitation, fled down the stairs and ran out the front door, slamming it behind him.

The caller said that Officer Doherty arrived moments later and after getting a description, started out searching for the suspect.

Officer Bowes contacted the caller's mother to come home, then interviewed a neighbor who said that she was in her kitchen when she heard a door slam. She said that she stepped outside and saw a "younger white guy" running down the sidewalk from Andrews Road toward Fenno Street. She provided the same description as did the caller. The neighbor said that the suspect looked back and she was able to get a good look at his face. She knew it was not a resident, so she went to the caller's door, who told her that the Police were on their way.

With this information, Officer Doherty picked up the track of the suspect, which led him to the wooded area on Fenno Street known as White Rock. The K-9 Unit led Officer Doherty into the woods where Officer Paul Matthews was searching for the suspect. As the Officers made their way into the back end of the wooded area, a male suddenly ran across the trail about 50 yards away. Officer Doherty was pulled toward the suspect by his K-9 Unit. The Officer shouted to the suspect, "Quincy Police K-9 Unit, you are under arrest, stop or I will release the dog and he will bite you." The suspect continued to run from the woods into the marsh, so Officer Matthews radioed other Officers that they were in pursuit of the suspect.

LT. DAN MINTON

As the Officers closed in on the suspect, Officer Doherty again instructed the suspect to stop. The suspect then turned and started walking back towards the Officers. Officer Doherty sternly warned the suspect, "Show me your hands, get down on the ground or I will release the dog." After giving the warning three times, the suspect failed to comply and kept coming towards the Officers. With the K-9 barking and ready to take action, the suspect unpredictably stopped and laid down in the marsh grass. Officer Matthews then placed handcuffs on the suspect and he was led out to Fenno Street, where Officer Holland transported him to the witness's location.

The neighbor said she was "98% positive that is the guy running in front of the house." The caller, in the presence of his mother, said he was "99% positive that this is the guy that was squatting at our bulkhead." The suspect, a 27 year old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for Breaking and Entering in the Daytime and was transported to the station for booking.

During questioning, the suspect said that he was a drug user and broke in to the house to support his $200.00 a day drug habit. Nice Work!

In this case, the caller/victim did an excellent job of monitoring the situation, then acting by calling "911" when the suspect entered the backyard. He stayed on the telephone with the Dispatcher and helped the Police in catching the suspect. As always, keeping doors locked makes it harder for criminals to get in and also prevents face to face encounters.

Nice Work to the caller!

SCAM: Bogus newspaper subscription renewal notices (from FTC)

For people who subscribe to newspapers, be aware of "urgent" renewal notices stating that your subscription is about to expire, with a notice to pay up immediately to keep uninterrupted service. Be sure to check that the company sending you this is the company you originally signed up through. It is common for subscribers to get a bill from a company that has no relationship with the newspaper's publisher or billing department. To prevent this,

• Pay online at the newspaper's website, or contact the paper's subscription department by phone. Use the number on your paper, online, or on a previous bill that you know is real.

• Sign up for auto-renewal and payment, so that you don't have to rely on renewal notices sent by postal mail. Be sure to check the price because often times the first year is an introductory offer and the price may become "full price."

• Be aware of changes to your bill. If the price or billing period changes, get in touch with the paper using a phone number or address you know is real. In some cases, the price on fake invoices has been four times higher than usual, and the subscription period has been a year, instead of monthly or quarterly.

• If you suspect an invoice might not be real, check it out with your newspaper's subscription department. If the invoice comes from a company you haven't heard of, or if it has errors and misspellings, those could be tip-offs to a rip-off.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A long-sought workplace change could be happening soon. Consider reworking your ideas and preparing a presentation just in case. A personal relationship takes a new turn.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your persuasiveness doesn't really start to kick in until midweek. By then, you can count on having more supporters in your camp, including some you doubted would ever join you.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your workload is still high, but -- good news! -- you should start to see daylight by the week's end. Reserve the weekend for fun and games with friends and loved ones. You deserve it.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Regardless of how frustrating things are, keep that "Crab" under control. A cutting comment you might think is apt right now will leave others hurting for a long time to come.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Be more sensitive to the emotions of loved ones who might feel left out while you're stalking that new opportunity. Be sure to make it up to them this weekend. A nice surprise could be waiting.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The gregarious Virgo rarely has a problem making new friends. But repairing frayed relationships doesn't come easily. Still, if it's what you want to do, you'll find a way. Good luck.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A misunderstanding with a partner or spouse needs to be worked out before it turns into something really nasty. Forget about your pride for now and make that first healing move.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Communication dominates the week. Work out any misunderstandings with co-workers. Also get back in touch with old friends and those family members you rarely see.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) As busy as your week is, make time for someone who feels shut out of your life. Your act of kindness could later prove to be more significant than you might have realized.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Congratulations. Your busy workweek leads to some very satisfying results. Sports and sporting events are high on your weekend activities aspect. Enjoy them with family and friends.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your generosity of spirit reaches out once again to someone who needs reassurance. There might be problems, but keeping that line of communication open eventually pays off.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You are among the truth-seekers in the universe, so don't be surprised to find yourself caught up in a new pursuit of facts to counter what you believe is an insidious exercise in lying.
BORN THIS WEEK: You believe in loyalty and in keeping secrets. All things considered, you would probably make a perfect secret agent.

Urgent Care Center To Replace QMC

- Community Meeting Dec. 2

By SCOTT JACKSON

A community meeting will be held Dec. 2 to discuss Steward Health Care's plan to close Quincy Medical Center at the end of the year, displacing nearly 700 workers and leaving the city of 92,000 without its own hospital for the first time in 124 years. The time and location for the meeting will be announced at a later date.

Steward plans to replace the hospital – located on Whitwell Street in the middle of a neighborhood known as Hospital Hill – with an around-the-clock emergency department and an urgent care center in two different locations within the city.

Keynote Speaker Lt. Col. Diana Gibbs' Message At Quincy Veterans Day Observance:

'Be Thankful For Our Veterans: This Day And Every Day'

By KRIS KALABOKAS

People often think of how veterans have served their country, but few people have taken the time to consider how the military has served its veterans. That was the message taken away on Tuesday afternoon by those who attended the Veterans Day observance held in front of the Adams Academy following the city's annual Veterans Day parade.

"The military has offered many benefits and experiences and opened up many doors for me," said Lt. Col. Diana Gibbs, keynote speaker. "How many companies offer a pension plan nowadays? How many companies offer medical and dental care? The opportunity to see the United States and the world?"

The military not only offered her leadership experience and personal development opportunities, but the chance to meet individuals from "all walks of life," she said.

"Now, I recognize the military is not for everyone, but for thousands of young people it is the ladder to the middle class," said Gibbs. "Those who join give quite a bit however they get quite a bit in return."

Gibbs, who is currently assigned to the 2nd Brigade, Atlantic Division, 75th Training Division in Newport, RI and serves as the Brigade Training Officer, graduated with a bachelor's degree in law and society from the University of California, Santa Barbara and continued on to receive her master's degree in criminal justice from the University of Central Texas in 1998.

She has completed Officer Candidate School, the Basic Airborne Course, Military Police Officer Basic and Advanced Courses, Combined Arms Services Staff School, and Army Command and General Staff College.

She enlisted in the Army as a specialist in 1991 and in 2007 was assigned as the Rear Detachment Commander for the 719th Movement Control Battalion in Boston.

She praised the Post 9/11 GI Bill for creating a way for veterans of the conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan to attend college or learn a trade through vocational training.

"For many veterans, their military service provided, and still to this day, continues to provide a path to the American dream," she said.

The military, she continued, created for many a sense of belonging, pride,

Once complete, the development will include 12 two-bedroom units, according to Robert Corley, executive director of NeighborWorks Southern Massachusetts. Today's event is the first fundraiser to benefit the project, which will cost $2 million and is scheduled for completion next July.

"We're trying to attract people to give to our project," Corley said, noting donors will receive a state tax credit worth 50 percent of their contribution.

NeighborWorks Southern Massachusetts will also be raising funds by selling inscribed bricks that will be installed around a flagpole outside the 12-unit development.

QCAP Launches Financial REACH Center

Financial Education, Stability Programs To Benefit Quincy Residents In Need

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) and the United Way of Massachusetts Bay and Merrimack Valley have joined forces to launch the Greater Quincy Financial REACH Center, the first program of its kind on the South Shore.

Last Thursday morning, QCAP and United Way officials gathered at QCAP headquarters at 1509 Hancock St. to celebrate the partnership and expansion of financial education and stability programs benefiting greater Quincy residents in need.

QCAP serves 19,000 people annually with programs aimed at providing adult education and workforce development, early childhood education and care, money management programs, fuel and energy assistance programs, emergency rent and mortgage assistance, affordable housing workshops, emergency food donations, and nutrition education.

The United Way provides similar social services on an international level and has funded centers in Lynn, Lawrence, Chelsea, Roxbury, and Downtown Boston.

The newly expanded financial assistance program will focus on providing services such as credit counseling and repair and job readiness training including referrals and job search support. Clients will also receive assistance with creating and staying on a budget and will be provided with free tax preparation.

Services will be offered long-term over an 18-36 month counseling period.

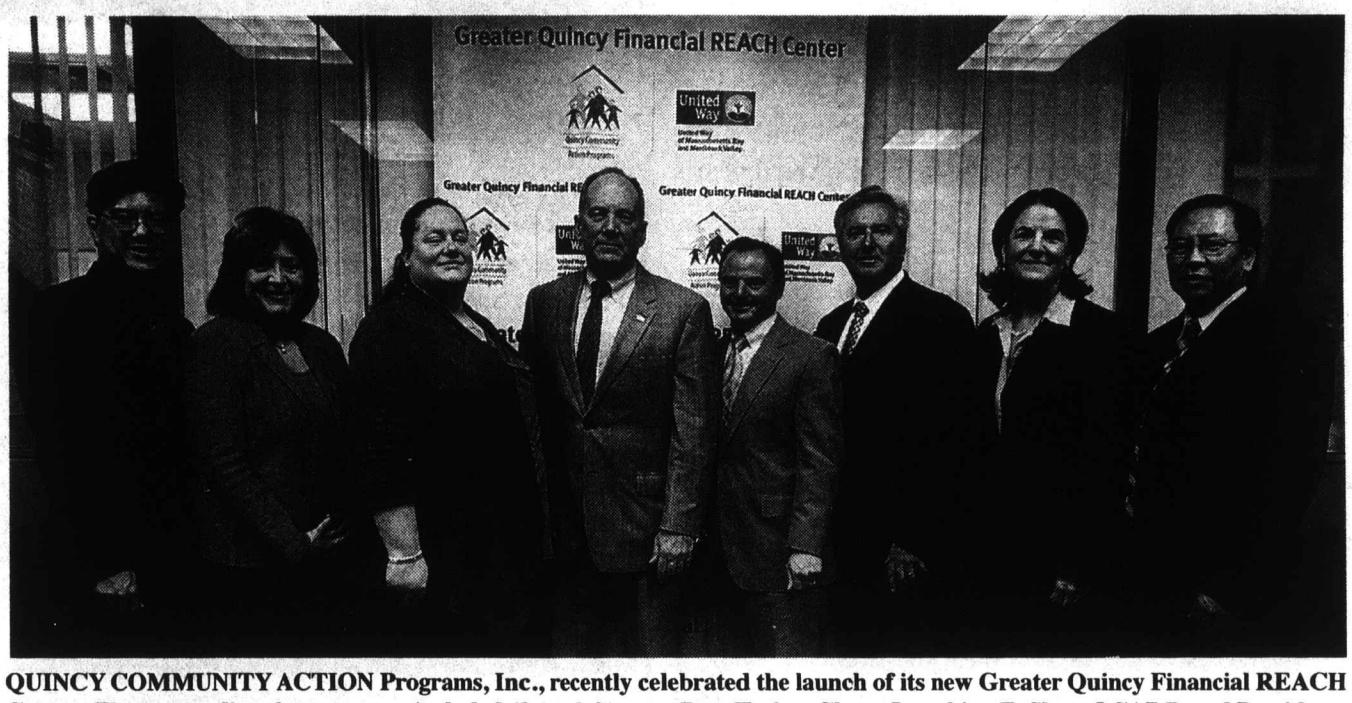

Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP executive director, called the program "a center for financial responsibility and achievement."

"It is something that we have wanted to do for many, many years and about a year ago we learned that the United Way was going to be seeking new agencies to become centers," she said.

Following what she described as a very intensive vetting process and a thorough interview, QCAP was selected to receive a grant of $300,000 to be used over a period of three years from the United Way to operate and expand their financial education program.

"We'll be able to serve more clients with direct, one-on-one budget counseling, money management, credit repair," she said. "It will also wrap in our free tax preparation program which we've been doing for many years, and it will also

New Tools For City To Collect Unpaid Fines

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council on Monday adopted a provision of state law that will make it easier for Quincy to collect unpaid municipal fines.

The council voted in favor of adopting Chapter 40U of the Massachusetts General Laws. That chapter of the state's laws applies to fines for sanitation, housing, and snow and ice removal. It allows for appeals of citations outside the court system, authorizes municipalities to charge penalties for late payment of fines, and allows the city to restrict access to municipal services for failure to pay fines. Liens could also be placed on properties whose owners failed to pay fines.

Chapter 40U was approved by the legislature and signed into law by Gov. Deval Patrick in February 2010. Quincy's City Council considered adopting the law that same year, but no final

Ask the GEMOLOGIST
BY JEFFREY M. BERTMAN
GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST

EXCEPTIONALLY BLUE

If your favorite color is blue, you owe it to yourself to become acquainted with Tanzanite, the highly desirable variety of the mineral zoisite. Mined exclusively in Tanzania at the foot of Mt. Kilimanjaro, this sapphire-blue gemstone has magnificent color that even exceeds the clear blue sky that radiates in the background of the snow-capped mountain. Adding to its considerable allure, Tanzanite also displays distinct "pleochroism," meaning that it exhibits different shades of colors, depending upon the angle from which it is viewed. Thus, Tanzanite appears to be purple, blue, or slate gray. When viewed in incandescent light, it may also appear to be more violet, which makes tanzanite most attractive for evening wear.

Generally, Tanzanite is regarded as a gemstone that has deep spiritual meaning. The color purple is attributed to higher wisdom, spirituality, and profound understanding. A better way to get money from your house

A good idea ... from Colonial Federal Savings Bank
You have a house with lots of equity. Good cash flow. Investments you don't want to touch right now. And you have something you want money for. What's the best way to get it? How about a 15-Year refinance from Colonial Federal? With fixed monthlypayments, it's more predictable than an adjustable-rate home equity line. Way less expensive than credit cards. And you'll have it all paid off in 15 short years... quicker if you make extra payments along the way. Would a 15-Year refinance be good for you? Mayor's Race Brewing?

With the state election in the rear-view mirror, political eyes are beginning to focus on next year's city ballot contests.

And, a mayor's race appears to be brewing.

MAHONEY

KOCH

Anne Mahoney, who challenged incumbent Thomas Koch in 2011, says she may mount another mayoral bid next year. Koch has not indicated whether he will seek a fourth term but observers believe he will make a run for the first four-year mayoral term next year.

Mahoney, a three-term School Committee member, says she has been encouraged by people to run for mayor next year. She remains critical of city management issues that she campaigned on in 2011.

"The city management issues that concerned me when I ran for mayor in 2011 not only still exist, but have gotten far worse. Quincy's government needs to perform better. We need to hire the right people, become more transparent and pursue only the projects that take into account all of Quincy residents," she says.

"We need to work proactively with companies and institutions to keep jobs here in Quincy."

Mahoney said she is particularly worried about Quincy Medical Center closing at the end of the year.

"That's a huge loss for the city, not only for the people who rely on it for medical care but for the hundreds of good jobs that will be lost. Where was the mayor when this was happening? While Quincy Medical was in distress, he is focused on taking people's homes for a parking lot. That is not good, effective government."

Mahoney did not set a timetable as when she will reach a final decision.

But many political prognosticators believe the race for the mayor's office will start soon after the New Year. And the field could get crowded early.

GUTRO

Besides Mahoney, there is growing speculation that Councillor Doug Gutro will also make a bid for the city's highest elected office. He told us earlier this year that a decision about his future political plans would be made next year.

If Gutro and Mahoney decide to challenge Koch, that would set up a mayoral preliminary election in September. The top two vote getters in the run-off would face one another in the November final election.

Handicappers think Mahoney is a certain mayoral candidate. She does not have to risk her school seat to run for mayor since she is at the half-way point of a four-year term. Gutro, however, would be vacating his councillor at-large seat if he opts to run for mayor.

An open councillor at-large seat would certainly spark interest in potential candidates. But even if Gutro foregoes a mayoral bid and instead seeks re-election as councillor at-large, there is another current office holder who may run for an at-large seat – whether it is open or not.

Noel DiBona, who topped the School Committee race in 2013 and unseated incumbent Emily Lebo, has strong interest in running at-large next fall – even if there is no open seat. DiBona accomplished a rare feat: he was the first political newcomer to finish ahead of three incumbents on the School Committee in 60 years, according to research by Quincy political historian and former mayor Francis McCauley.

DIBONA

The last time this occurred was in 1953 when well-known pediatrician Dr. Charles Djerf – in his first run for public office – finished ahead of four incumbents (A. Wendell Clark, Dr. Joseph McDermott, Paul K. Duffey and Ethel B. Wiley.)

DiBona is pretty well known in the youth sports and veterans' communities. He has been a long-time coach for the Quincy Point Panthers and is a member of the Sons of the American Squadron 294, Morrisette American Legion Post. Considering his impressive city-wide win in 2013, he would be considered a viable candidate for councillor at-large next fall if he decides to get into the race.

Besides Doug Gutro, the other councillors at-large that have decisions to make about their own re-election plans are Joseph Finn – who will be elected to his second one-year term as Council President in January – and Michael McFarland.

THERE WILL NOT be an open seat in Ward 5 next fall.

Incumbent Kirsten Hughes says she will seek a third two-year term next fall. Hughes, who serves as chairperson of the Republican State Committee, helped spearhead Charlie Baker's win in the governor's race Nov. 4.

HUGHES

Hughes is helping with Baker's transition team. She says no decision has been made on whether she will remain as the chairperson of the state GOP committee. Hughes and her husband, Philip, are also expecting another constituent. They have a two-year old son.

A POLITICAL NEWCOMER is testing the waters for a potential bid for school committee.

David Jacobs, who grew up in Houghs Neck and attended Quincy Public Schools and graduated from North Quincy High School in 2005, says he is considering a run for one of the three seats on the School Committee next year. Incumbents whose terms are up next fall are David McCarthy, Paul Bregoli and Kathy Hubley.

JACOBS

Jacobs has been active in the community serving on the Quincy Historic District Commission and the Quincy Public Schools Band Boosters. He attends parent and community meetings regarding Quincy schools and lives in West Quincy.

QUINCY BELLWETHER – Quincy retained its status as a "bellwether" community in state elections, going with the statewide winner in every contest last Tuesday including the close governor's race.

Republican Charlie Baker edged Democrat Martha Coakley by two percent statewide - or roughly 40,000 votes. In Quincy, the margin was four percent or 1,148 votes but not all precincts in Quincy backed Baker.

Baker and his Lt. Gov. running mate, Karyn Polito, won 19 of the city's 31 precincts. Coakley and her running mate, Steve Kerrigan, picked up 12 precincts in Quincy. Neither ticket swept all five precincts in any one ward.

Baker, who polled 13,397 votes (49.64%) here, won the following precincts:

- Ward 1 Precincts 1, 3, 4 and 5.
- Ward 2 Precincts 1, 3A and 5.
- Ward 3 Precincts 1, 2 and 4.
- Ward 4 Precincts 1, 2, 3 and 5.
- Ward 5 Precincts 3, 4 and 5.
- Ward 6 Precincts 3 and 5.

Baker's biggest margin was in Ward 6 Precinct 5 – Squantum. The margin was 374 votes (Baker had 904, Coakley 554). Ward 6 Precinct 5 was also the highest turnout in the city with 64 percent (1,538 out of 2,399 voters cast ballots). That percentage was 20 percentage points higher than the city-wide average of 44.3 percent.

Coakley, who received 12,249 votes (45.39%) here, won the following precincts:

- Ward 1 Precinct 2
- Ward 2 Precincts 2, 3 and 4.
- Ward 3 Precincts 3, 5.
- Ward 4 Precinct 4.
- Ward 5 Precincts 1, 2.
- Ward 6 Precincts 1, 2 and 4.

Coakley's largest margin of victory was in Ward 1 Precinct 2 – Germantown – with 164 votes. She polled 422 votes to Baker's 258. Turnout here was 37.7 percent.

Other notes:

• By close margins, Baker won the home precinct of Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes – the state Republican Committee chairwoman – but lost the home precinct of Mayor Thomas Koch.

In Ward 5 Precinct 3 – Wollaston and Hospital Hill areas – Baker won by 36 votes. Baker polled 504 votes to Coakley's 468 votes. Turnout here was 47.5 percent (1,031 out of 2,170 voters).

In Ward 6 Precinct 2 – the area of Atlantic and Norfolk Downs – Coakley edged Baker by 14 votes. Koch, a Democrat, had endorsed Steve Grossman in the Democratic primary but backed GOP hopeful Baker in the final election. Turnout here was 37 percent (606 out of 1,609 voters).

THE 335 FLAGS at Flags for Veterans Island in Fort Square will be removed Saturday until next Memorial Day. But that doesn't mean the location will lose its patriotic presence this winter.

Some 3,000 red, white and blue holiday lights will decorate the tree in the middle of the island sometime after Thanksgiving, says Paul Moody, commander of the Sons of the American Legion Squadron 294, Morrisette Legion Post. Part of the configuration is a photo-cell mechanism so that the lights illuminate at night and shut off at day-break.

Moody says a ceremony will be held to illuminate the tree sometime after Thanksgiving.

A GOOD DEAL for a great cause: During the holiday season – from Thanksgiving to New Year's Day – Rogers Jewelry in Quincy Center donates all proceeds from battery replacement sales to the Salvation Army. Last year, the donation was in excess of $1,500. Over the past years, the total has exceeded $20,000 for this worthy charity.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1913 real photo postcard view of the old wooden St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church complex on the corner of Linden and Hancock Streets in Wollaston. Founded in 1892 as a mission church of Christ Episcopal Church in Quincy Center, this church building was built in 1894 on a small piece of the old Taylor farm donated by heirs of the Taylor family. At that time, this section of Norfolk Downs and Wollaston was one of the fastest growing residential neighborhoods in Quincy. Today only the building on the left, which is home to the parish's Mite Box Thrift Shop on Linden Street, is unchanged from this view. A handsome seam-face granite church built in 1950 has replaced the large building in the center. Then, in 2004, a new 10-unit residential condominium with a unit reserved for a rectory replaced a smaller rectory that had replaced the one on the right. Why Aren't All Fifth Graders In Middle Schools?

Last week's Ad Hoc school committee meeting concerning fifth grade felt more like a presentation of "Fifth graders performing on a middle school level is great and here are the reasons why."

I was disappointed that there really wasn't a rapport among the committee members that addressed if these fifth graders were at a disadvantage compared to their peers. Aside from Mrs. Mahoney and Mr. Bregoli, no else asked any questions pertaining to this. I felt that the information presented was skewed to show only Point and Sterling in a bubble within themselves.

Part of the concerning issue is the achievement gap between the standard 6-8 schools and the two 5-8 schools we currently have. According to the MA Dept. of Education, since the inclusion of fifth graders at Point and Sterling the ranking and scores have steadily trended downward. Whereas the 6-8 schools have held steady or improved.

Is there a direct correlation?

If the school committee believes that this cohort of students is actually at an advantage and are in fact not disserviced at all, then we need to look at equality from a different standpoint. Why aren't all the fifth graders in the entire city performing as middle schoolers? Let them all have half days every other Tuesday. Let them all have health class. We have an obesity epidemic, surely everyone can benefit from a basic understanding of nutrtion.

What do fifth graders in a middle school setting need to learn that fifth graders in elementary don't? Why not let the fifth graders at Wollaston, Bernazzani, Montclair, Parker, Squantum, Beechwood Knoll, Merrymount, Snug Harbor and Atherton Hough have the real life skill of writing a research paper in the fifth grade with the oppourtunity to take a media skills class?

The list of other communities presented with a 5-8 grade configuration can be misleading. Stoneham for example, is only in its first year of this model. What comparison can be made from that? Hanover and Belmont only have one middle school each in the entire town. With all of their elementary schools ending at grade 4. Natick has two middle schools, however both of them are consistent in their grade configuration of 5-8. Quincy doesn't have 5-8 across the board.

The issue remains, are fifth graders at Point and Sterling at a disservice compared to fifth graders in the rest of the city?

I gathered from the presentation that the school committee sees this cohort of students at a particular advantage and are in fact not disserviced at all. If that's the case and the data proves this, then why aren't all the fifth graders in the entire city performing as middle schoolers? There should be equality across-the-board.

I hope that at the next Ad Hoc meeting there will be more of a disscussion with creative thinking as to how we can get all of the ten year olds in Quincy on an even playing field.

Voters Oust Plan E, Bring Back Plan A

Quincy will return to the Plan A form of government in 1958 as a result of Tuesday's election when the voters discarded Plan E and ousted three of seven city councillors.

Plan A won over Plan E, 14,378 to 12,851, as Councillors David J. Crowley, Alfred G. Helfrich and Frank E. MacDonald lost their seats to Thomas S. Burgin, James R. McIntyre and Charles L. Shea.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa and Councillors David S. McIntosh, Carl W. Anderson and Edna B. Austin retained their seats as 65.2 percent of the voters went to the polls.

McIntyre finished third in the election with 14,187 votes. McIntyre, 25, and still a law school student, is the youngest man elected to the council in 25 years. He was wounded during the Korean War in which he served as a Marine Corps officer.

Shea, 28, won election to the council on his second try. A Boston College graduate he finished fifth polling 12,116.

The seventh and final seat on the council was won by incumbent Edna B. Austin who polled 12,058 votes, edging out 10-year council veteran Crowley by 102 votes. Crowley received 11,956 votes and was considering asking for a recount.

Although the drama was written in the 16th century, director Thomas Doucette has set it in the 1930's for a different twist.

'JQA, Treaty That Ended War Of 1812' Nov. 20

"John Adams and the Treaty That Ended the War of 1812" will be the focus of a program Thursday, Nov. 20 at 7 p.m. at the Quincy Historical Society, Adams Acadmy, 8 Adams St., Quincy.

As part of their commemoration of the War of 1812, Adams National Historical Park and Quincy Historical Society will present a lecture by Alan Henrikson, Lee E. Dirks Professor of Diplomatic History at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University, on John Quincy Adams' role in the peace negotiations that ended the war.

Adams led a distinguished delegation that included Henry Clay and Albert Gallatin. Adams and his colleagues had to negotiate with the British in the context of extremely uneven American performance in combat. In the opinion of many historians, the peace terms they reached constituted a signal American success.

Professor Henrikson will detail the negotiations and discuss the significance of the Treaty of Ghent in the history of the United States.

Everyone is welcome to attend. There is no charge for admission.

Quincy Students Cast In 'Harvey' Comedy

Two Quincy students are cast in Xaverian Brothers High School's production of the comedy, "Harvey."

They are:

Billy O'Brien of Quincy, a junior at Xaverian Brothers and Anna Splitz, also of Quincy, a student at Ursuline Academy in Dedham.

"Harvey" follows the story of Elwood P. Dowd (played by O'Brien), made famous by Jimmy Stewart. Elwood's best friend is an invisible six foot tall white rabbit that only he can see and hear. This is rather embarrassing to Elwood's sister, Veta Simmons and his niece, Myrtle Mae. In their attempt to rid themselves of Harvey, Veta ends up committed to a local sanitarium, as the staff there believes that it is she, and not Elwood, who sees the rabbit.

This will also be the first time in over a decade that Xaverian is taking its show to state festival competition. The program plans to feature scenes from "Harvey" in its submission.

Tickets can be purchased online for $10 at www.xbhs.com/harvey.

Le Lycee Fenelon Visits Quincy High School

By EDIE BOYNTON

Fifteen families from Quincy High School eagerly and nervously awaited the arrival of their French guests Oct. 15.

After months of talking online and anticipation, the students were all finally going to meet in person. No one could have imagined the next week would be so transformative and create such strong bonds,

Students from Le Lycee Fenelon, just east of Paris, were welcomed into the homes of Quincy families. In their short visit to Massachusetts, they spent a day at QHS, enjoyed lunch at the President's Cafe, met with Mayor Thomas Koch, toured Harvard, visited Faneuil Hall, took in QHS sporting events, went to the top of the Prudential Center, took a duck boat tour, and enjoyed quality time with the families hosting them. the students quickly formed strong, lasting friendships that were evident during the tearful goodbyes on the morning of Oct. 21.

The exchange was led by French teacher Alma Bodinaku, assisted by QHS foreign language department chairperson Edie Boynton and supported by QHS administration. This will be an ongoing exchange and Quincy students are hoping to visit France in February 2015.

'Under The Same Moon' Movie Friday

The United First Parish Church (Unitarian) of Quincy will present a free community screening of "Under the Same Moon," a Mexico/USA co-production from 2007, Friday, Nov. 14 at 7 p.m. at United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Movie goers are asked to enter the church through the back door, under the rainbow flag.

Directed by Patricia Riggen, the film is in Spanish with English subtitles and is rated PG-13.

The film tells the story of a 9-year-old Mexican boy who crosses the U.S. border by himself. He is on a quest to reunite with his mother, a domestic worker in L.A. who works two jobs in order to support her son and mother back in Mexico. When the grandmother dies, the boy decides to go to L.A. to find his mother.

It is a sympathetic look at the challenges facing the estimated 70,000 unaccompanied minors who will cross the US/Mexico border this year alone, up from 20,000 in 2009. While fictional, the film is realistic in that many of the unaccompanied minors who cross the US/Mexico border are attempting to reunite with family members.

In the past, most were teenaged boys, but the percentage of children under 13 has been increasing and about a third of those arriving this year have been girls, according to the Immigration and Customs Enforcement Agency (ICE). Needless to say, they face many dangers on their journeys and most receive a distinctly unwelcoming reception once they arrive in the US.

Garden Club Seeks Entries For National Essay Contest

The Wollaston Garden Club is encouraging entries from high school students from Quincy for the 2015 National Garden Club's Essay Contest on the theme of "Choosing To Make A Difference For A Better World."

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Grilled Pizza With Polenta, Bacon

By MARIE

While at the Cape this summer, it seemed as though we tried so many other things to eat in addition to the usual hamburgers and hot dogs.

Today's recipe for grilled pizza has a totally different topping – cooked by my daughter Nancy and husband Jed. Of course this pizza can be made in the oven, but this one was made on the grill.

1 pizza crust
1 cup eggplant (diced)
1 small onion (sliced)
1 cup zucchini (diced)
1 small tube cooked polenta (cut in 1/4 inch pieces)
5 slices of bacon (cooked and cut in small pieces)
3 tablespoons olive oil of sautéing
Whole piece of Mozzarella cheese

In the hot oil, sauté the onion, and add the eggplant and zucchini and cook until tender.

Set aside. Cook the bacon and cut in small pieces. Set aside.

Grill the pizza crust for five minutes or so and then remove and add the toppings.

First add the sautéed vegetables. Around that, add the polenta slices, then place the 1/4 inch slices of the mozzarella around the pizza. Sprinkle the bacon pieces over the top and grill until done. If using the oven preheat oven to 425 and follow the same directions.

P.S. The polenta can be found in most supermarkets.

Cream Of Broccoli Soup

By SUZIE

Here is a delicious and healthy version of cream of broccoli soup. Cream of broccoli soup usually has cream or milk and flour to thicken. My soup uses cream made of cashews which is not only delicious, but much easier to digest, loaded with nutrition and very versatile since it can be used as a substitute for dairy. Many (if not most) people have a hard time digesting dairy and there is no reason to consume much of it anyway from a nutritional standpoint. We are able to get important nutrients for our bones including but not limited to calcium from many foods. Enjoy this healthy and delicious version!

2 bags frozen broccoli florets (normally 10 oz. per bag, or about six cups fresh broccoli)
3 cloves minced garlic
1 small onion, chopped
5 cups broth (I used vegetable)
3 tablespoons butter, coconut oil, or olive oil
1 cup cashew cream
Sea salt and pepper
Cashew Cream:

Place 1 cup of raw cashews rinsed and drained in bowl. Boil 3 cups of water and pour over cashews and let soak for 30 minutes. Drain but reserve 3/4 cup of the soaking water and place in blender with the cashews. Process until smooth and creamy, much like Greek yogurt.

Saute' onion and garlic in oil of choice until fragrant. Simply add broth, seasonings, and broccoli and bring to boil. Cover and simmer until just tender and still bright green. Uncover and spoon in cashew cream. Use immersion blender and blend until all pureed. Adjust seasonings and serve hot.

Pumpkin Chili

By SUZIE

Here is my famous pumpkin chili recipe that is loaded with vegetables, including pumpkin. The pumpkin makes this chili thick and sweeter tasting, especially with the added cinnamon.

You may use any kind of ground meat, I use grass fed beef or bison normally, but this works well with ground turkey or chicken as well!

1 lb ground beef/turkey/chicken
1 onion, chopped
4 garlic cloves, minced
1 15-16 oz can of tomatoes
1 15-16 oz can of tomato sauce
1 can pumpkin (NOT seasoned sweetened pumpkin, just plain pumpkin)
1 1/2 cups broth (I used beef)
1 red pepper, chopped
1 zucchini, chopped
1-2 tablespoons chili powder (depending how you like it)
2 teaspoons cumin
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
2-3 teaspoons herbamare (a unique seasoned salt) OR just plain sea salt
Green onions, avocado, Greek yogurt for top

Saute' onions in soup pot until fragrant. I used coconut oil to do this step. Add zucchini and peppers, then garlic. Cook about 5 minutes or so until sizzling and flavors are mingling. Now add the meat and cook until done. Add seasonings, including salt and combine well. Cook a bit more, then add pumpkin, broth, and both cans of tomatoes. Stir well and bring to boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer about 30-45 minutes. Serve with green onions, avocado, and Greek yogurt spooned on top if desired. Even better the next day!

Urgent Care Center To Replace Quincy Medical Center

announced Nov. 6 plans to close Quincy Medical Center effective Dec. 31. Quincy Medical Center had struggled financially for a number of years – Steward bought the hospital out of bankruptcy – and the hospital's owners attributed the decision to close it down to a decreasing number of patients who sought inpatient services, particularly commercial patients. Since acquiring the hospital, Steward said it invested more than $100 million into the hospital only to lose nearly $20 million a year.

"While Quincy Medical Center earns top quality and safety ratings, competition from Boston-area medical centers, significant cuts to Medicare reimbursements, continued Medicaid underfunding, continued rate disparity, and precipitously declining inpatient volume have made QMC unsustainable," Steward's president, Dr. Mark Girard, said in a prepared statement Nov. 6.

"On an average day, only one-fifth of all beds are occupied and it has become abundantly clear that local residents no longer seek inpatient services from Quincy Medical Center.

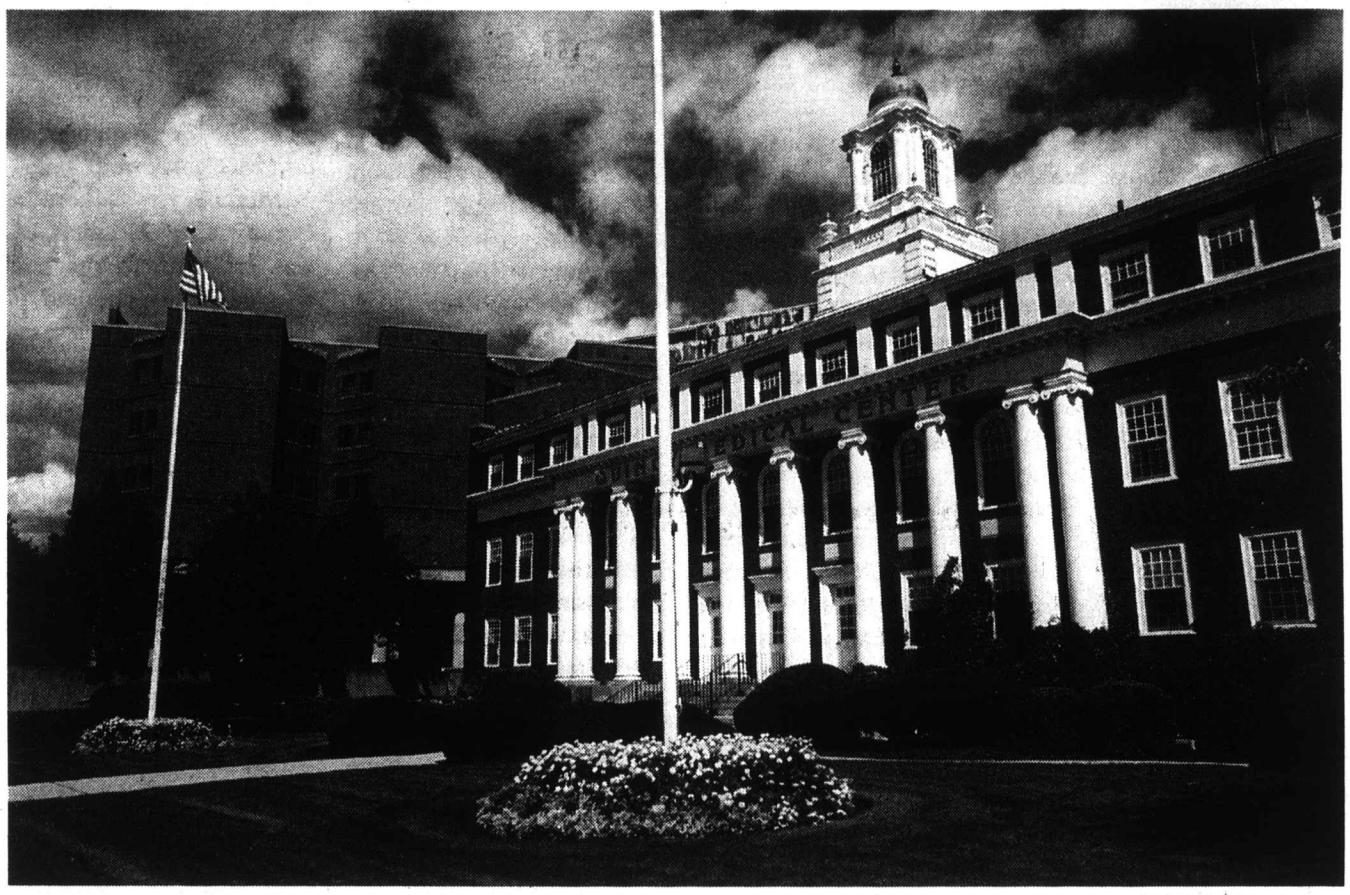

"While Quincy Medical Center will no longer operate, we are 100 percent committed to delivering convenient access to health care in Quincy, with a new 24-7 emergency department, separate sited urgent care, and the ability for patients to continue seeing their personal doctors."

Brooke Thurston, a Steward spokeswoman, said Monday the company is still determining where the emergency department and urgent care facility would be located. The announcement of those sites is expected in the coming weeks.

Steward is a subsidiary of Cerberus Capital Management, a private investment firm that manages more than $25 billion and whose other holdings include Albertsons and formerly Chrysler. Steward was founded in 2010 after its parent company bought out the Caritas hospital system. Steward operates nine other hospitals in the state.

Approximately 680 workers are employed at Quincy Medical Center. Steward said those employees would be paid for another 60 days and would receive comprehensive support services going forward. The company said it has enough job matches and opportunities in its system for a significant majority of those employees.

The hospital will remain open to patients until Dec. 31. Steward said physicians would contact patients directly about transitioning to new facilities to continue their care as QMC closes. Steward on Monday announced the establishment of a hotline for patients and other community members to ask questions related to the hospital's closure. The number, 855-470-2482, will be available between 9 p.m. and 7 a.m. on weekdays. Steward will be providing transportation that links Manet Community Health Center locations, medical offices at 700 Congress St. and 54 Miller St. in Quincy, Compass Medical in Quincy, and Boston's Carney Hospital and St. Elizabeth's Medical Center.

QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER announced Nov. 6 that it will close the hospital and landmark on Whitwell Street Dec. 31. Steward Health Care plans to open an urgent care center and 24-hour emergency department in two different locations within the city. Officials are expected to provide an update on those plans at a community meeting Dec. 2. QMC File Photo

Mayor Thomas Koch, in a phone interview, said he was saddened and disappointed by the pending closure.

"First of all, I'm obviously saddened and greatly disappointed to see it closing," Koch stated, noting he and his siblings were all born in the hospital.

"It gets emotional for a lot of people when they look at it."

The mayor identified two chief areas of concern: the fate of the hospital's employees and the need for an urgent care center in Quincy.

"My concern is for the people who work there and have dedicated so many years in that field. My hope is they all land on their feet," the mayor said, adding the Quincy Career Center would be prepared to assist any of the workers leaving the hospital.

"The second concern, and I've shared this with Steward, is that we're not left without an urgent care facility. A city this size needs a facility for urgent care."

Koch said there would have been no way for the city to help Steward keep the hospital afloat given annual losses approaching $20 million.

"There is no way city taxpayers can help with that," the mayor explained. "We could never afford do that."

Councillor Doug Gutro, the chairman of the council's downtown and economic growth committee, said his main concern was for the hospital's employees and their families.

"My thoughts are right now with the nearly 700 employees and their families who probably had long been concerned but never believed this day would come and are now dealing with a cloudy future," Gutro told The Sun.

an update from Steward on QMC's future after a state report found the hospital lost $5.6 million in the first three months of 2013 – Steward never publicly responded to the request. The councillor said he wanted that update because residents were concerned about the hospital's viability.

"I had heard a chorus of concerns coming from inside and outside the hospital about changes going on and its long term viability," Gutro explained. "We have a responsibility to try and understand whether or not they have the capability to stay afloat.

"The council did not have that opportunity. The question is what was happening behind the scenes to keep a community hospital here."

Residents, Gutro added, were still coming to grips with the pending loss of the hospital.

"I think people are just letting the news sink in and trying to grasp that for the first time in 120 years the city will be without a community hospital," he said.

"First and foremost, we should be thinking about the employees and their families."

The hospital first opened in 1890 and the city took ownership in 1919. In the 1980s, under the administration of then-Mayor Francis X. McCauley, the hospital underwent a $60 million renovation project.

"It was a big undertaking and there was a lot of money involved," McCauley recalled. "As the saying goes, hospitals compete against other hospitals, and we needed modernization up there."

The new building completed as a result of that modernization project was dedicated to McCauley. McCauley was surprised when hospital officials announced that decision during a ceremony held at the opening of the new facility in October 1989.

"I had no idea that is what they we're going to do," McCauley said.

McCauley was born at Quincy City Hospital, as was his wife, Sandra, and their children. The end of the hospital, he said, is a sad thing.

"It's a sad thing. My wife and I were both born there. All five of our children and some of our grandchildren were born there. I went there always. I never went anywhere else," the former mayor explained.

"It has a long history. I was always comfortable going there."

The hospital's financial future was in peril in the late 1990s. Then-Mayor James Sheets helped save the hospital by pressing for a $12.1 million, no-interest loan from the state, which was approved in 1999. In October of that year, the hospital became an affiliate of Boston Medical Center, and changed its name to Quincy Medical Center.

Steward's decision to close Quincy Medical Center may run afoul of an agreement reached between the chain and Attorney General Martha Coakley in 2011 that allowed the purchase of the hospital to go through.

Among other provisions, the agreement mandated a 10-year period in which Steward would not be able to close the hospital and would have to offer at least the same level of service offered immediately prior to acquiring the hospital. Under the agreement, however, Steward could have closed the hospital as soon as six-and-a-half years after the purchase provided it experienced two straight years of losses and the Department of Public Health received notice 18 months in advance.

Brad Puffer, a spokesman for the attorney general, said Nov. 6 the office had been notified of Steward's decision and was reviewing the matter.

"We have just been notified about this decision and are currently reviewing it in the context of Steward's legal obligations," he said in a statement.

Koch, in a Nov. 7 letter to Coakley, urged her office to investigate the issue, citing the 10-year no-close period and other provisions in the 48-page agreement.

"The agreement contains a series of other provisions, including financial terms, reporting requirements, and perhaps most importantly, the continued operation of an emergency department, which must be met for Steward to be allowed to proceed to closure. It is not clear at all at this point whether Steward has met any number of these requirements," Koch wrote to Coakley.

"While I understand the financial principles guiding Steward's decision-making process, I firmly believe that we must do everything in our power to ensure that the interests of the employees of Quincy Medical Center and the residents of the city of Quincy are protected to every extent possible. Councillors Want Answers On QMC Closure

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors want to know more about Steward Health Care's plan to close Quincy Medical Center Dec. 31 and replace it with an emergency department and an urgent care facility within the city.

"It is hard viscerally for me personally to watch this demise," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who introduced a resolution seeking the update Monday night. "Equally important going forward is what is the plan? We've heard pronouncements that they're going to try to do something with an outpatient facility and an urgent care facility somewhere in the city if the state will allow them do it, but to me it's leaving people in a very uncertain state of affairs."

Coughlin also faulted Steward for not contacting Mayor Thomas Koch, the City Council, or state regulators from the Department of Public Health, before announcing on Nov. 6 their decision to close the 124-year-old hospital. Residents of the city, he stated, deserve more than an automated phone message and should have a chance to hear from Steward officials regarding their plans.

"We need more than a robocall. When I got home tonight I had a robocall from the president of Quincy Medical Center seeking to reassure me all will be well. I don't know what that means," Coughlin said.

"I understand we can't force them to stay open – at least that's what I would believe – but I think we as a community deserve better at this point. So much is going to change in the community without Quincy Medical Center in place."

Councillor Doug Gutro agreed that communication from Steward was sorely lacking in this case. The council, he added, has a role to play going forward in identifying potential service that might arise in Quincy following the hospital's closure.

"I do not know where we go from here, but there could be enormous service gaps," Gutro said. "I think that we have some responsibility in identifying those, along with DPH and everybody else, and shining a light on it."

Ward 6 Brian McNamee said it would be good to hear about Steward's plans, but noted the council would be unable to do anything to keep the hospital open.

"It's not like we still have a foot in the game here – we've sold this facility. I don't want anybody to think there is a knight getting on a white horse out of this City Council chamber that's going to rescue this," McNamee said.

"I don't want anybody to think we'll be able to do very much, but it would be good to hear from them and hear what their plan is."

Council President Joseph Finn added that he would like to hear from groups representing some of the hospital's 680 workers, including the Massachusetts Nurses Association and 1199SEIU, to learn what concerns they have going forward.

Bodywork Regulations Before Committee

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's ordinance committee reviewed a proposed new ordinance, which would require businesses practicing bodywork in Quincy to receive licenses from the city if approved.

Businesses practicing massage therapy are already licensed by the state. But those state regulations do not apply to businesses specializing in bodyworks, a term that encompasses acupressure, AMMA therapy, Chi Nei Tsang, five-element Shiatsu, integrative eclectic Shiatsu, Japanese Shiatsu, Jin Shin Do, Bodymind Acupressure, macrobiotic Shiatsu, traditional Thai massage, Tuina, Zen Shiatsu, and Ayurvedic medicine.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, who is the chairman of the city's Board of License Commissioners, told the ordinance committee the number of businesses specializing in bodyworks in the city has grown exponentially in the last two decades.

"There were probably 10 of these in 1994," he said. "There are probably 100 that we know of now. This is an industry that's growing and growing and growing."

Of those 100 estimated businesses, Shea said between 40 and 49 of them have received business licenses from the city.

One of the main concerns the regulations hope to address is illegal establishments practicing bodyworks. Quincy Police Det. Leo Coppens said the department has shutdown a double-digit number of such businesses in recent years after receiving complaints about late hours or illegal activities going on inside.

The proposed new regulations would require businesses specializing in bodyworks to receive a license in the city before opening. Individuals working in the facilities would also need licenses of their own.

Two different drafts of the proposed regulation were submitted to the council. The major difference between the two sets of regulations is who would license the bodyworks facilities – the Board of License Commissioners or the Health Department. Both proposed regulations would require applicants to undergo a criminal background (CORI) check and provide transcripts from an accredited school that teaches bodyworks. They also explicitly prohibit any sexual activity from taking place inside a licensed facility.

The differences between the two proposed regulations will be reconciled, and a final draft will be given to the ordinance committee for approval at a future meeting. Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, chairman of the committee, said he would prefer the Board of License Commissioners be given the authority to permit bodyworks establishments.

"My preference, quite honestly, would to have an application that has to go before the license board," he said. "I think you get greater oversight. There is a greater opportunity for the public to be made aware of growing existence of these."

Urgent Care Center To Replace Quincy Medical

a full investigation can meet that goal."

Thurston said Steward officials have been in contact with state regulators, officials, labor leaders, and health care experts since earlier this year to express concerns over Quincy Medical Center's long-term future. She referred to Steward's decision as a transition and not a closure.

"This isn't a closure. This is a transition from a facility that was underutilized by the community to a new location that provides services the community still needs," Thurston said.

Sheets said his motivation for fighting to keep the hospital running 15 years ago – that a city with a population that could eclipse 95,000 in coming years needs an easily accessible hospital – still exists today.

"There is no question the same motives for wanting to keep it open now are the same we had then," Sheet said Tuesday.

"A city the size of Quincy really needs it's own acute care hospital."

In cases of medical emergencies, such as heart attacks or strokes, every minute counts, Sheets said. Residents' lives could be put at risk if they are forced to drive to hospitals in neighboring Weymouth or Milton.

"There are people who aren't going to be make it if they have to drive to South Shore Hospital or to Milton Hospital. They're going to hit traffic and be delayed," Sheets said.

"You need a hospital in a city the size of Quincy and that's my concern."

Stewart will maintain ownership of Quincy Medical Center's expansive Whitwell Street campus, which includes 625,957 square feet (14.4 acres) of land. The site has an assessed value of $58.9 million, according to the city assessor's online database. Steward has paid approximately $2 million annually to the city in property taxes and will continue to do so as long as it owns the site.

The property is in a PUD (planned unit development) zoning district, meaning City Council approval would be needed for major projects on site.

Dean Rizzo, president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, said the hospital might be attractive to a firm or firms specializing in biotechnology and life sciences; the city has made a push to recruit companies from those burgeoning fields.

"It certainly is a large facility to fill. There are only certain specialty tenants who could occupy a hospital facility, though Steward did renovate the building and that should increase the resale value," Rizzo said Monday.

"Maybe there is an opportunity, where the city is looking to attract biotechnology and life sciences companies, that this building would be suitable for one of those industries."

The hospital's closure, Rizzo added, will likely have a significant impact on the city's economy.

"You have to look at the trickle down effect when one of the city's largest employers closes," he said, noting the hospital was reliant on many goods and services purchased in Quincy and neighboring municipalities.

'Thank Our Veterans: This Day And Every Day' accomplishment, and fellowship; important skills for those returning to civilian life.

She admitted that the military may not be for everybody. "We all know the sacrifices that come from wearing a uniform; the missed anniversaries, the missed birthday parties, the missed sporting events," she said.

Despite the missed events, Gibbs said she has never wondered how her life would have turned out had she not joined the military.

"As one becomes older, the tendency is to reflect back on past decisions and wonder what would have been if we had chosen a different path or made a different choice," she said. "The one thing I have never regretted or wanted to have done differently is my decision to join the military."

"On this day and every day, let us be thankful for our veterans," she said. "Now go out and thank a veteran."

Charles Hurd, Commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council, delivered the POW/MIA Empty Chair Ceremony. He called the crowd's attention to an empty chair placed as a "physical symbol of the thousands of American POW/MIAs still unaccounted for from all the wars and conflicts involving the United States of America."

"This should serve as a reminder for all of us to spare no effort to secure the release of any American prisoners from captivity and to secure the repatriation of the remains of those who died bravely in defense of liberty," he said.

The POW/MIA flag was then gently placed on the chair.

"Let us never forget their sacrifice," said Hurd.

The playing of Taps and the singing of the National Anthem then followed.

Kirsten Hughes, chairperson of the Veterans' Committee, thanked those who brought children to the event. "This is about teaching them the value of the service of our veterans and how important they are in our lives," she said, adding that no other city honors their veterans as loyally as Quincy.

"We are so fortunate in this city in so many ways," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "One of those ways is that the veteran, from the time of the revolutionary call up through today, the citizens of this city have responded and said 'yes,' and gone off to war. They've gone off to conflict to protect this country and made this city so, so proud."

He then announced that the city's annual Christmas parade will honor "The Greatest Generation" by inviting three representatives to participate as grand marshals, all veterans of WWII; Robert Noble, ex-POW representing the U.S. Army; John Gillis, Norfolk County Commissioner representing the U.S. Marines; and Francis Bellotti, former Lt. Governor for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and former Attorney General representing the U.S Navy.

"Today really is just a day for us to say thank you," said Koch. "and the greatest way you and I can do that is your presence here today."

Koch: Preserve Eventide Property

home prepares for its long-planned move from the property.

The two parcels include much of the open space that surrounds the nursing home – including the area in front of the Furnace Brook and on the eastern side of the property that was known as the Gardner Property. A third parcel that includes the land on which the nursing home sits has been sold separately.

Mayor Koch said preserving the two parcels from potential development are "absolutely critical" to maintaining the character of an important historic corridor that most importantly includes the Adams National Historic Park.

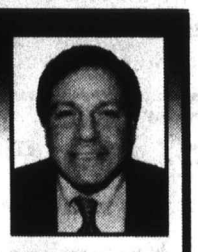

"In my mind, this is precisely the kind of the purchase that the Community Preservation Act was created to facilitate – the preservation of land that is not only beautiful but an important link to our City's history," said Mayor Koch, who added that the City would be working with the National Park Service if the purchase moves forward.

The three parcels owned by the Eventide Home are in an area zoned for the construction of single-family homes, but because of the size of the available space, a substantial development would be possible on the site.

The Koch Administration will also present a proposal to the Community Preservation Committee to purchase a parcel in Houghs Neck that could be used as part of an improvement plan for the nearby maritime center.

Following a recommendation from the Committeee, Mayor Koch will submit the formal approval for both plans to the Quincy City Council. The Community Preservation Act, approved by local voters, sets aside a 1 percent portion of local property taxes for open space purchases, historic preservation, park improvements, and affordable housing. The spending does not impact the City's annual operating budget.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

TOOTH-COLORED FILLINGS

While dental amalgam has proven itself to be an effective and relatively inexpensive material for filling cavities caused by tooth decay over the past 150 years, it is not the most pleasing aesthetic choice. Amalgam's silver color stands in stark contrast to natural tooth color when placed in visible tooth surfaces. For this reason, patients are likely to prefer composite-resin tooth-colored fillings, which can so closely approximate their natural tooth color as to be virtually unnoticeable. Composite resins may be somewhat less durable than amalgam fillings, and they may cost more, but patients' concerns over cosmetics have made them an increasingly popular choice. As far as dentists are concerned, the best filling is no dental filling. Prevention is preferred.

As mentioned in today's column, the use of amalgam is declining. There is an abundance of innovative technologies and devices available to continually help us improve the quality and comfort of care we deliver. We stress preventive dentistry for the entire family. Be sure to regularly brush, floss, and have professional cleanings. When was the last time you had a dental check-up? Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Smiles are our business. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Composite resin material, which is composed of a tooth-colored plastic and glass mixture, can be used to reshape disfigured teeth.

allow us to hire a full-time employment specialist."

She said that the grant will allow the organization to take their employment education programs to the next level by providing more intensive workshops on resume writing and interviewing skills.

The ultimate goal of the program, she said, was to increase clients' earning potential so that they don't have to live "day to day."

Strollo said she expects to double the number of clients served as a result of receiving the grant.

Dean Rizzo, President of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce said that he has had a longstanding relationship with QCAP and works to link clients looking for jobs with the Chamber's 575 member employers.

"Good works happen because people who care come together with organizations and institutions that care and find ways to be successful and that's what we're doing today," said Michael Durkin, President of the United Way of Massachusetts Bay and Merrimack Valley. "What we've seen time and again is if you put the resources in touch with people and give individuals and families an opportunity to put their own plans together about how to be successful — a little bit of help every once in a while — great things can happen."

Recent research showed that two out of every five families in the Commonwealth were living paycheck to paycheck with no savings or emergency funds, he added.

Tahlia Gunter, Chairperson of QCAP's Head Start Policy Council and QCAP Board Member, emotionally recounted how she has been helped using QCAP's services.

The Head Start Program is offered through QCAP and prepares children under five and their families for kindergarten through cognitive, physical, social, and emotional support services.

"Life comes at us so hard sometimes," said the single mother of a five-year-old daughter. "Sometimes it feels like brick wall after brick wall."

"I have struggled," she said. "I understand the struggle of the parents, the grandparents, the foster parents who are taking care of children."

She was diagnosed with cancer last April; unexpected and devastating news that only exacerbated her situation.

She was proud however to call herself a survivor as the cancer had recently gone into remission.

Through illness and financial strife, she still smiled because she saw hope in even the most dire of circumstances, she said. The encouragement and motivation offered by QCAP staff pushed her to continue on with her education.

"I always thought that I would just go back to school while my daughter was in Head Start and get my associate's degree," she said "but I knew that in the job market that I had to get my bachelor's so I did that with the help and support and love and I'm actually proud to say that I'm in my master's program right now."

She tearfully attributed all of her personal and professional success to QCAP and Head Start. Her words so touched the audience that she received a standing ovation.

Strollo called Gunter's personal and professional success "inspirational" and said it exemplified what QCAP can do for those in need.

QCAP, a nonprofit organization, was incorporated in 1965 after Quincy Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa appointed 24 Quincy residents to form the Quincy Community Action Organization (QCAO) to assist Quincy's two poorest and most in need neighborhoods — Southwest Quincy and Germantown — with what they identified as their greatest areas of hardship including health and nutrition education and housing opportunities through leadership training and community outreach.

According to QCAP, one in every 10 Quincy residents currently lives in poverty.

Stop & Shop Donates $30,000 For Quincy Christmas Festival

The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company will be the major sponsor of the 62nd annual City of Quincy Christmas Festival. The company, which is celebrating its 100th anniversary, is donating $30,000 for the second year in a row.

"The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company has been an outstanding corporate citizen in the City of Quincy" said Mayor Thomas Koch. "This generous donation ensures that the city's wonderful Christmas Festival may be enjoyed by Quincy residents of all ages."

"Stop & Shop is proud to sponsor the Christmas in Quincy events. Our headquarters is right on Hancock Street and we are an active part of this city," said Joe Kelley, Stop & Shop New England Division President. "We are pleased to support these festive Christmas events and wish everyone a healthy and happy holiday season."

The Quincy Christmas Festival is held from Nov. 28th to Nov. 30th. For more information on the parade and/or other festival activities, contact the Quincy Recreation Department at 617-376-1394 or the Quincy Park Department at 617-376-1251.

New Tools For City To Collect Unpaid Fines

vote was taken at that time, according to Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who proposed adopting Chapter 40U at Monday's meeting.

"It's really just another tool that I think is important," Coughlin said. "It's been adopted by numerous municipalities across the state in the last four years since the governor signed it."

Inspectional Services Director Jay Duca spoke in favor of 40U at Monday's meeting.

"To echo what Councillor Coughlin said about 40U, it would streamline the fine appeal process. Instead of taking folks to court who are uncooperative, we could handle this in-house as part of this new ordinance. It also increases the city's ability to hold violators accountable and it gives them an incentive to cooperate and remedy the violation," Duca said.

"I didn't see any downside and a lot of communities have passed this ordinance."

The council approved the adoption of 40U in an 8-0 vote. Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci was not at Monday's meeting.

ROBERT LaFLEUR, past commander of the Morrisette American Legion Post, sounds taps at Sunday's Veterans Day observance at Flags for Veterans Island in Fort Square.

'Some Things Are Worth Fighting And Dying For'

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 294, Cyril P. Morrisette Post honored the city's veterans during their annual Veterans Day observance on Sunday at Fort Square where over 335 American flags were placed on the Flags for Veterans Island in recognition and memory of those who have or are currently serving in the armed forces.

"As I travel across this great commonwealth and throughout our nation, I find that there are some strange people in our cities and towns," said Clifford Smith, keynote speaker and past National Commander of the Sons of the American Legion. "Sometimes they are uncommonly loud, sometimes they are uncommonly quiet. We don't know much about them. We've seen them come from a different time.

"We see them carrying the flag in our local parades. They seem too serious about carrying the colors, almost like someone had died."

They march in parades, he said, in remembrance of friends who passed away long ago. They stand by gravesides even in the rain and cold as a show of respect, and go to Veterans Day memorial events year after year.

"I wonder, do they go there to remember or do they go there to forget?" asked Smith.

"Strange people," he called them. Strange people who remember the horrors of war that can never be properly emulated in film.

Despite all of this perceived strangeness, he said, these people go above and beyond and give back to their communities by gifting money to scholarship funds or by donating their time and energy to veterans homes and hospitals.

'WHEN YOUR NATION calls, answer it," said keynote speaker Clifford Smith, past national commander of the Sons of the American Legion, at Sunday's Veterans Day observance at Flags for Veterans Island.

"Why do they sponsor Boy Scouts? Why do they sponsor baseball teams? Why do they give blood by fire trucks and go to parks and teach child safety?" Smith said.

He compared today's young people — who enjoy their proms, high school graduations, and excitedly plan for college — to the veterans being honored who had to put those milestone events on the back burner to fight for their country.

"These strange people had to put that on hold to fight and die and protect our constitution so the youth of today can go to a prom and graduate and pledge allegiance," he said.

"Who are these strange people I'm taking about? They're not strange at all. They are here today," he said. "They are our veterans."

Protecting the constitution doesn't always have to be done on the battlefield, said Smith. It can be done by instilling the value of freedom in those who never fought.

He said that being a member of the Sons of the American Legion allowed for veterans to share their experiences with their peers while not forgetting the hardships of those who had passed on before them.

"Some things are worth fighting for and even dying for," said Smith. "Our way of life does not come cheap. Hundreds of thousands of young men and women have given their lives and millions have suffered permanent injuries to protect our freedom."

Seeing the flags planted firmly in the ground at Fort Square made him feel proud to be an American.

"When your nation calls, answer it," he said.

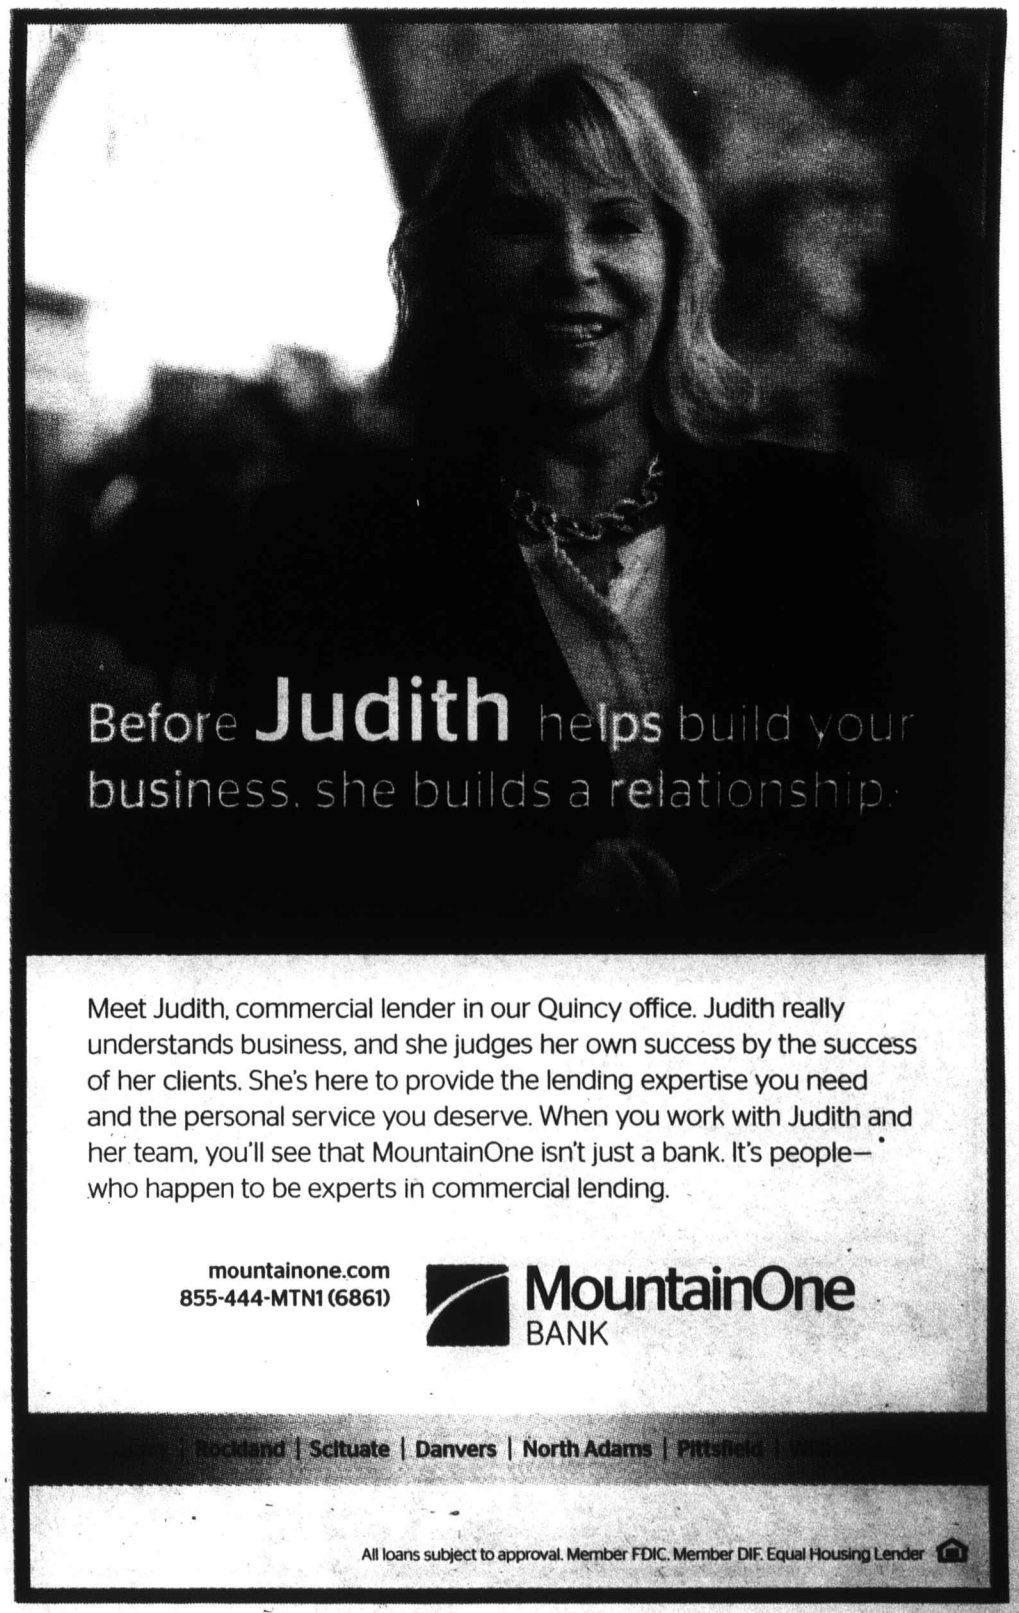

"The flags on this island represent those that have served, continue to serve, and those that have made the ultimate sacrifice to keep America free," said SAL Commander Paul Moody. "Remember, if there were no veterans there would be no America. Freedom is not free."

A moment of silence was held in memory of Joseph Koch who served in the U.S. Army between 1974-1976 and was honorably discharged at the rank of E-4. He was the brother of Mayor Thomas Koch.

He passed away in August.

No Quit Attitude Hallmark Of NQ Girls Soccer

By BILL GRIFFIN

"Losing the game didn't mean as much to me as losing this group of players," said North Quincy girls soccer coach Paul Bregoli after his team fell to Bridgewater-Raynham, 5-1 in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectionals last week.

They are strong words and they carry a firm ring of truth. The final match for the Red Raiders was much like their season. In both, they faced bad fortune and adversity. In both, they kept playing hard and well.

Against B-R, North had four blue-chip scoring chances before the Trojans had a shot on goal. They were within 2-1 at the half. When B-R broke it open with three goals in the early minutes of the second half, North never stopped. The Red Raiders played solid soccer, pressing the attack, creating chances and defending the scoring area effectively.

"We didn't quit. We kept playing hard, and that's what I'm most proud of," said coach Paul Bregoli. "Even when we were down four goals, we had strong corners and good chances in the box. I thought we had the edge in play for the final 20 minutes."

The season was a mirror image of the final game. North lost keeper Rachel O'Driscoll, midfielder Sydney Chang and forward Ali Coleman to ACL injuries. Forward Sinead Hanley broke her leg. Defender Alyx Patey and midfielder Ciara Forde played through painful injuries. These were key people. But there were no excuses. North just kept playing.

"They never complained. They were a very close group and the next person just stepped up," said Bregoli.

Charlotte Chretian stepped in and played good defense on the back line. Sophomore Mandy Hazelton, a player with great promise, and freshman Jillian Hallisey moved into midfield and combined with Marissa McGue to control the halfback line. Sophomore Abbie Koch, who had a goal and two assists in her final three matches, helped at forward with her hustle and passing.

"The kids we lost were excellent players. We needed our younger players to come through, and they did," said Bregoli. "Their attitude was great. They never quit. That's what makes it so hard to see the season end."

Against B-R, two-time Patriot League All Star Courtney Campo used her speed and dribbling to create two early breakaways, but Trojans' keeper Cailey Sullivan turned them aside. McGue was nearly in on another clean break, but the Trojans' defense barely caught her to stop a fine scoring chance.

A perfect cross from freshman Cora Cluett to Molly Donahue missed the corner by inches.

"Their goalie must have been 5'10", and she was good. We could have easily scored two or three times in the first 10-12 minutes," said Bregoli.

After Nicole Geraghty scored two of her three goals to put the Trojans up, 2-0, Campo narrowed it to 2-1 at halftime with her ninth goal of the year. Koch sent in a nice cross from the right side. Campo stepped around a defender and cracked it into the net.

"It was a beautiful move and Abbie gave Courtney an excellent cross," said Bregoli.

North's best run of the season was a 6-0-2 finishing kick which gave the Red Raiders a regular-season mark of 10-6-4. It put them in the tourney for the 15th time in 20 years and showed well the resolve of the team, especially the seniors: Campo, Forde, Chang, O'Driscoll and Patey.

"They knew what they had to do. That senior group made four tournaments in four years. Not many classes can say that," said Bregoli.

The seniors will be difficult to replace. Campo is one of the best players in a most talented league. Her quickness and skills are exceptional. She finished with nine goals and eight assists. She was second all-time for North in assists and fifth in scoring. She did this at a school with a long, proud soccer tradition. It is an impressive accomplishment. She will play at the next level.

"She played out of position for us at forward for us. She's a natural halfback which is where she'll play in college," said Bregoli

Forde is another player who will likely play in college. She had eight goals and eight assists despite playing a good part of the season at midfield. She is a four-year starter with a tough, hard shot who played through a painful sprained ankle for most of the season.

"She had to play at midfield because we changed our formation this year, and she did a great job. Her skill level improved greatly as a senior," said Bregoli.

Chang was a dominant player in midfield before being injured. Patey played excellent soccer on the back line despite hip and leg injuries. O'Driscoll helped her teammates and her coach with her knowledge of the game.

"Sydney was having her best year. She has great vision, she communicates well and she steps in on the attack," said Bregoli. "I don't know how Alyx played so well. She played when she could barely walk. Rachel has the highest soccer IQ of any player I've coached. She sees everything. I let her talk to the team and make adjustments at halftime."

Bregoli's practice of giving meaningful minutes to his entire roster in every match – including the tournament match – will serve North well next year. The Red Raiders lose only the five seniors and they developed depth this fall.

Hailey Houlihan and Coleman will bring experience up front. McGue and Hazelton will likely be the strength of the team in midfield. Donahue and Cluett are excellent wingers. Defenders Julia O'Donnell and Molly Kate Cannon will backbone the fullback line. Sophomore Shannan Kennedy will return with two years experience as keeper.

"We have the nucleus to be good again, but don't forget how tough the league is," said Bregoli.

Campo made the league all star team for the second straight year. Cannon, McGue and Forde were selected for the first time. Chang won the team sportsmanship award while Donahue won the Garth Nelson Scholar Athlete Award.

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

IT'S NEVER TOO LATE TO GET MOVING

Not only does exercise improve the health and well-being of younger individuals, it also has been linked to better health in those over the age of 65. While many studies indicate that exercise improves the muscle strength, aerobic capacity, and blood pressure levels of people in their seventies and eighties, new research shows that it is never too late to reap exercise's benefits. When researchers conducted a study involving 1,635 people between the ages of 70 and 89 who were largely sedentary and borderline frail, they found that taking up exercise and stretching led exercisers to be 18% less likely to experience "major mobility disability" in succeeding years. Chiropractic is dedicated to improving joint function and flexibility needed for regular exercise.

What many people don't know is that you don't have to be injured to benefit from chiropractic care. Red Raiders Fall To Milton, Host Hingham Friday Night

By JOE REARDON

They're 2-7 and still trying to put 48 minutes of consistent football together. They've had spurts of big plays throughout the season that goes to show there is talent on the roster. But after Friday's frustrating 18-0 defeat at the hands of Milton, it's safe to say North Quincy needs to play close to error-free football to win a football game.

The Wildcats took advantage of the Red Raiders' miscues and inconsistency on offense to capture the nonleague showdown at chilly Brooks Field on the Milton High campus.

Still, head coach Mark Nutley sang the praises of Milton and its overall toughness on the field.

"They're physical, they're good athletes and they play in a tough league," said Nutley of the Wildcats. "They have to play teams like Walpole and Natick and they had Mansfield and Stoughton to open up their season."

Yet again, North Quincy had plenty of chances to put points on the board, but were pushed back by penalties and the play of the Wildcats on defense.

The Red Raiders got all the way down to the Wildcats' 20-yard line when quarterback Andrew Kiley completed passes of nine and 35 yards to Aidan Brown and Soloman Umoren, respectively. The drive went nowhere after that with three consecutive negative yardage plays and the Wildcats took over on downs.

Milton quarterback Mike Fallon connected with Derek Perkins for a 16-yard score with 8:49 left in the half for a 6-0 lead. The score closed out an efficient seven-play drive that covered 80 yards.

A huge mental blunder by North Quincy on the ensuing kickoff gave the Wildcats the ball back after jumping on the loose ball at the Red Raiders' 37-yard line with 5:19 to go in the half. Fallon made a quick turn on the keep, reversed direction and bolted down the left sideline for another score on the next play to make it 12-0.

"We had two kids standing there watching the ball," said Nutley of the kickoff. "And I talk about it all week. It's frustrating. We're the kings of mental mistakes. I said to these guys, any time we have a positive play we come back with negative play - whether it's a loss of yards or a dumb penalty. And I tell these guys every week, we're not good enough to overcome plays like that and it showed tonight."

An interception on the Red Raiders' next drive killed any scoring chance and they went into the locker room at halftime shaking their heads.

The North Quincy defense held Milton to start the second half and the Red Raiders looked to have some life, but were forced to punt from their own 37 after a penalty and two negative-yard plays after getting down to the Wildcats' 44-yard line.

Milton was in the end zone again with 4:37 left in the fourth after the Red Raiders had to give the ball up on downs at their 42. Hard-running Jonathan Pierre switched directions on the hand off and scampered 42-yards for the score to make it 18-0. An interception on the Red Raiders' final drive clinched the win for the Wildcats.

North Quincy's next shot comes against a struggling Hingham team in what Nutley calls and absolute must win for the Red Raiders. "We have to get that game no matter what," said Nutley. "We have to do whatever it takes to get that game. They see we're not a 2-7 team. When we have chances we have to capitalize on them."

The Red Raiders host the Harbormen Friday night at 7 p.m. at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Presidents Defeat Braintree, Host Mansfield Saturday

By BILL GRIFFIN

It tested their heart as much as it tested their football abilities.

Quincy entered off two brutal losses. After starting the season with six straight wins for the first time in 44 years, the Presidents played eternal power Duxbury for the division title. This was the game Quincy had waited to play for years. Despite going without its ace halfback, Quincy battled the Dragons even into the fourth period before three late touchdowns wiped out a shot at its first league title in 11 seasons.

Then came the playoffs and Needham. Quincy led by eight with less than two minutes left. Quincy led by six in overtime. They were centimeters away from the tying conversion, but fell in a bitter loss in a classic of a football game by two points.

Last Friday night, the Presidents played Braintree, a team they had already beaten by 21 points earlier in the season. The night was hard and cold. They had few supporters in the grandstand. If ever a team had an excuse for a flat, lifeless performance, it was Quincy.

But it didn't happen. Jahvae Handsom-Fields ran for 144 yards on 19 carries, and linebacker Steve Scolaro made the defensive play which saved the game in the final minutes to lift Quincy to a 14-6 win over the Wamps in the consolation bracket of the Division 2 South sectionals at Braintree High School.

Quincy will host Mansfield Saturday at 2 p.m. If the brackets had been followed, Quincy would have hosted Duxbury in a rematch. However, due to the requirement that each team get at least one home game in the three playoff weeks, Duxbury appealed and won. The Dragons will host Braintree.

"Emotionally, it was a little tough this week. But we talked to the kids and they realized there was a lot of football still to be played," said coach Bill Reardon. "The fact that our players knew a lot of kids on Braintree helped. It made it a rivalry game. Plus we got away from pie-in-the-sky things like league titles and Super Bowls and got back to good basic football."

It came down to the final minutes again. Quincy (7-2) led by eight deep into the fourth period. Just like Needham. Braintree was driving for the tying score. Just like Needham. There were echoes to hear and Reardon heard them.

"It did come to mind, but our kids stayed solid, and this week, we made the big defensive play," said Reardon.

Braintree had a first down at the Quincy 32 with 1:40 left. Cornerback Ryan Turpin batted away a pair of passes, but the clinching play came from Scolaro. The senior linebacker chased down Braintree quarterback Mike Mahoney in the right flat and sacked him for a six-yard loss on third down which sealed the win.

"That was the play," said Reardon. "Steve was playing a position he hadn't played in a year. Garrett Cronin got hurt, and we had to shift some people around. Steve ended up a linebacker where he hasn't played since last season. And he made the most important defensive play of the game."

Braintree did hurt itself with a personal foul and a blocking-in-the-back penalty on the late drive, but the final truth was Quincy went back to what was the cornerstone of its six-game run – the big play on defense.

"When we had a streak, that's what we did – make the big stand on defense. We did it against Plymouth North and we did it again tonight," said Reardon.

Runners Advance To All-State

North and Quincy's top runners took the opportunity to run their best last Saturday in Wrentham and three are advancing to the Allstate championship to be held at historic Franklin Park this Saturday.

In the girls race, Emily Bryson stuck to a lead pack of five like glue. As the miles wore on individual girls dropped off but Emily ran with a threesome that included Needham's Margie Cullen and Lincoln Sudbury's Ariel Keklak. At two miles the other two threw in a little surge gapping Emily but she reeled them back in and with Keklak's speed propelling her to victory, Emily used her strength at the end to race past Cullen to secure second place. Her 18:02 time over the 5K course was her best ever. Even more impressive was twin sister Julia's 18:56 for 8th place. Both will go to all states.

North's girls finished 8th in Division 2 with 228 points and a time aggregate of 1:41:35 which, out of 125 schools racing in 6 different divisions put North at 26th best in Eastern Mass. Devin Hiltunen (20:36) and Marguerite Belcher (20:44) also raced to personal bests eclipsing the 21 minute goal set for them by Coach Geoff Hennessy early in the season.

Fifth runner Grace Anderson finished in 23:11 also a huge improvement from earlier races.

On the boys side Mike Mullaney finished 5th and advanced to Allstate. Other finishers were Jimmy Cannon 36th, Aidan Golden 136th, Romel Malimban 141st, and Victor Chu 144th.

For Quincy Peter Saccoach ran 18:17 nearly his best time for 101st place in the 150 runner field. Shawn Daly, a freshman was Quincy's only other competitor finishing 143rd.

On Quincy's girls side LaQueen Arias was 123rd, Katy Deng, 130th, Alyssa Camara 136th, Michele Chen 138th and Kelly Zeng 139th in the 150 runner field. All girls ran their best times of the year.

QYH PW B's Tame Bulldogs 4-2

Following two tough road games Halloween weekend with the Weymouth Wildcats [loss] and Norwell Seahawks [tie], the Quincy Pee Wee B's played three solid periods of old school hockey.

The Quincy Pee Wee B's defeated a skilled Canton Bulldog club, 4-2, at Quincy Youth Arena. Trailing 1-0 after an evenly matched first period, all-city team middle school cross country runner Michael Collins, who placed a very respectable 40th place out of 300 runners at the State Championship meet at Fort Devens earlier in the day, got Quincy on the scoreboard. Courtesy of a textbook breakout by defenseman Ryan Hester and a seamless head-man pass by center man Derek Little, Collins beat the Bulldog goalie 5-hole to even the score at one apiece.

Goalie Dan Freeman kept the bulldogs at bay, making several sensational plays all game between the Quincy pipes, while Brian Silcox, John Bell, Michael Gorman and Chris Hussey were fearless on defense. In the final minutes of the second period, Riley O'Connor won a face-off draw back to Bell, whose shotgun blast from the Canton blue line beat the bulldog netminder to put Quincy up by one goal.

A minute later, the always evasive Aidan White took a Derek Little rebound, dangled two Canton defenders and found the back of the net to make it 3-1 at the end of two periods.

Canton responded early in the 3rd period and closed the gap to 3-2. However, the Quincy lads stayed composed and relentlessly pressured the Bulldogs for the entire third period. In the final minute, the resilient fore checking of Paul Martin and Brodie "Espo" DeGust paid off as Chase Quigley roofed the final "Gino" to secure the well-earned 4-2 victory.

Next Sunday at 9:15 a.m. in support of annual Friendship Cup, the QYH PW B team will be representing the South Shore Conference against Newport PW B team at the Portsmouth Abbey School Rink in Rhode Island.

The return of Handsom-Fields gives Quincy a 1-2 punch with senior quarterback James Lam which ignites the offense. Lam was terrific on Quincy's first scoring drive of 87 yards on 14 plays which took nearly seven minutes off the clock in the first half.

Lam kept the march alive with a 28-yard dart up the right sideline to Reda Laftih on third-and 20 from the Quincy 17. Lam went in untouched on a quarterback draw from the 18 for a 6-0 lead 10:08 before halftime behind wipeout blocking from center Mike Munroe and guards William Young and Scolaro.

"That was a called play from the sideline and James ran it great. Our offensive line blocked well all night," said Reardon.

Handsom-Fields was brilliant. He ran mainly between the tackles – behind Scolaro, Young and Munroe. He hit the holes quick and hard. He had the power to break initial contact, the speed to get into the secondary and the vision and instinct to cut to the open spots. He danced when he had to and he ran over people when he had to. He had eight runs over 10 yards, including a 14-yard blast off a trap play for a TD and a 12-0 with 6:44 lead before halftime.

Lam hit Laftih for the conversion and a 14-0 edge which is where it stayed until Mahoney found halfback J.P. Salisbury on a 22-yard swing pass to bring Braintree within 14-6 early in the third. Thanks to Scolaro, the Wamps would get no closer.

"Jahvae allows us to run our offense the way we want – off our tailback," said Reardon. "James can't do it by himself. It opens up our passing game and stops teams from concentrating on one threat."

As good as Lam and Handsom-Fields were, it was a night for the defense. After giving 64 points in two games, Quincy made a statement early. Young, Handsom-Fields and Alex Leo threw back Salisbury on a fourth-and-one from the Quincy 13 on Braintree's first drive of the game. A tone was set.

Handsom-Fields was as valuable on defense as he was on offense. Twice at cornerback, he was left facing a wall of blockers when Braintree sprung a runner on a counter play. Twice he fought through and made sure tackles around the ankles with nothing but empty space behind him.

Munroe had a huge game in the middle of the defense. Jake Bergonzi was a terror at linebacker. Curtis Calley played a solid game up front and had a fumble recovery which set up Quincy's second scoring drive. The secondary with Handsom-Fields, Turpin and Laftih was steady.

"Munroe and Jahvae had excellent defensive games. Jahvae is just a good football player," said Reardon. "It wasn't our best football. We can be crisper, but it's good to get back on the winning side."

Quincy Volleyball Season A Success

By BILL GRIFFIN

The tournament is different.

A road trip to face a top-seeded team before a packed, hostile gym is a brave, new world that requires adjustment. There is the speed of the play and the noise of the crowd which influences a team and a match.

After a difficult start, Quincy's volleyball team adjusted just fine. The Presidents pushed No. 1 seed Brookline to the limit before falling, 25-13, 26-24 and 25-21 in the second round of the Division 1 Central East sectionals last week.

The Presidents stepped up their play in the final two games and were a point or two away from pushing the match deeper into a fourth game on several occasions.

"I think it was a case of settling in after being a little nervous in the first game," said coach Jacqui Niosi. "Half of our players had never played in a big tournament match on the road. It took a little time to get adjusted to the crowd and the pace of play.

Senior libero Emma Kelly helped settle her team with solid play on the backline, controlling the ball, keeping alive points and setting up her talented front line. Junior Nicole Jorgensen had several big hits, Angela Hoti blocked and swung well, and senior Angela McDonald received serve and passed effectively to the big hitters.

"The gym was loud and it takes some time to get used to that environment," said Niosi. "Once we did, we played well. It wasn't a matter of adjustments. We just played good, solid volleyball, and we gave Brookline all it could handle. I was proud of the way we played."

Quincy finished the season at 17-5. At one point, the Presidents were 16-2. They lost just two league matches – both to Duxbury – and finished second in the Patriot League. They beat Boston Latin in the first round, and for the second straight season, advanced to a second match in tournament.

By any measure, it was a successful season. However, as much as the wins and the losses, Niosi remembers the spirit and closeness of her team.

"It was one of the best groups of kids I've had in nine years, and that came from the leadership of our seniors," said Niosi. "I hope our junior class watched the way the seniors led the team because that's we would like from them next year."

Because the club was so close, Niosi was able to do team-bonding activities. They worked because the kids liked reach other and enjoyed doing things together.

"We had a pasta dinner before the tourney to settle the nerves a little," she said. "We did a Secret Santa activity. The girls draw names and either got gifts or made things for each other. They both worked because the kids enjoyed each other and got into the spirit of it."

Quincy ran off straight-set victories in 14 of its matches, but Niosi mentioned a non-league loss to a powerful Canton team in the regular-season finale as the match that was most helpful to her team.

"It made us better playing against a fast pace against a good team. I want us to play at a quick pace and that match forced us to. It made us better for the tournament," said Niosi.

The outlook for next year is good. Quincy returns its entire front line of Jorgensen, Hoti, Sara Gibbons, and Maggie Parker. Setter Alicia Walker returns for the Presidents. It is a good foundation.

It is not a front line which relies on one or two big hitters. Everybody can put away a point. They also block well, pass and move seamlessly as a unit.

"They learned so much from the beginning of the year to the end," said Niosi. "Adjusting to varsity speed for the first time is a big step. You really can't duplicate it. These girls adjusted and by the end of the season, they were clicking as a unit. They had a very good year."

However, there are losses, mainly on defense. Kelly, a two-time league All Star, was the rock of the team. McDonald, Emma Kimmell, and Hody Wong were valuable contributors. Angelina Avitable, Sam McMahon and Noreen Plabutong also helped with their play and senior leadership which meant so much to the team.

"Defense is the cornerstone of girls volleyball, and we have some key people we have to replace," said Nioisi. "All lot of the girls play in the off-season, and that will help. We also have a weight-lifting and fitness program at Quincy High School which is a big help to the players."

Kelly, Jorgensen and Gibbons were selected to the Patriot League All Star team. Kimmell won the sportsmanship award while Alicia Walker was named top scholar-athlete.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

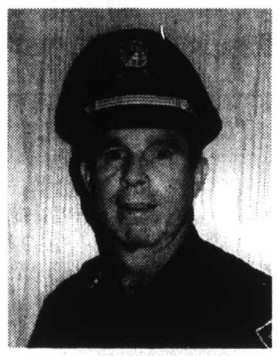

On Tuesday, November 4, 2014, at approximately 6:50 a.m., Officers Chris Donovan and Joe Cox were dispatched to Brook Avenue for a report of a disorder. The reporting person was a neighbor in an adjacent apartment, who was told by her female neighbor to call the Police.

Just before Officers arrived, Communications updated responding Officers that the female victim was now on the phone with Quincy Police Dispatchers. The victim informed the Dispatcher that her boyfriend was intoxicated and she was locked inside the bathroom for fear of being harmed.

Upon arrival, the Officers knocked on the apartment door and were met by a male who had a moderate odor of alcohol emanating from him, with slurred and slow speech. As the Officers entered the apartment, they observed it to be in disarray, with clothing and other household goods strewn about the floor.

The female victim, upon hearing the Officer's voices, emerged from the bathroom and appeared to be frightened. Officer Donovan led the victim outside the apartment to speak with her while Officer Cox interviewed the male in the apartment. The female, now visibly upset, shaking and sobbing, said, "I just want him to leave." When asked what occurred, the victim said that she and the male had been dating for approximately eight months. He moved in to the apartment two weeks earlier, however, he was not on the lease. She stated that early in the morning at approximately 2:00 a.m. the male now referred to as her boyfriend, came home extremely intoxicated and began arguing with her. When asked what the argument was about, the victim said she didn't recall, which surprised the Officers. She said that as the argument escalated, she asked her boyfriend to leave and he complied.

At approximately 6:30 a.m., he returned and began arguing with her again. She added that he appeared to be just as intoxicated as he was during the initial argument, leading her to believe that he had gone somewhere and continued drinking.

Officer Donovan asked the victim if the altercation ever became physical. She hesitated and then said that it had, but she did not want to get him in trouble, saying, "I just want him to leave the apartment." The Officer questioned the victim further about the physical contact and learned from the victim that he did not strike her, but "he pushed me all over the house" which explained why the apartment appeared in such disarray. The Officer asked if the assault occurred during the first argument at 2:00 a.m. or when he returned at 6:30 a.m., to which she stated both times.

The victim said that she didn't call the Police originally because the he voluntarily left the apartment, but when he returned and started pushing her again, she fled to the bathroom and called the Police. Officer Donovan was told by the victim that this was the first time that there was physical abuse between them. The Officers then conferred to determine what actually happened.

Officer Cox told Officer Donovan that the suspect was very calm, as if nothing went on, and claimed that the victim/girlfriend hit him, but he didn't want to elaborate because he did not want her to get in trouble. Officer Cox asked where she struck him and he pointed to his left eye which was bruised and bloodshot. Due to the absence of swelling and the coloring of the bruise, the Officers believed that the mark was at least a few days old and most likely had nothing to do with the day's events. Officer Donovan asked the victim if she struck the suspect and she said that when he was pushing and dragging her around the house, she did strike him once to try to get away. Just to confirm their beliefs, Officer Donovan asked the victim if the mark on the suspect's face was the result of her hitting him, the victim said it was not, adding that it was from an altercation he got into a week ago in which she was not involved in.

The Officers went back into the apartment to inquire further, but then the suspect blurted out that he lied about the mark being caused by her.

The Officers then placed the suspect, a 28 year old Quincy resident under arrest on the charge of "Assault and Battery on a Family/Household Member" and then transported to the station by Officer Cox. The victim was then advised of her rights under the domestic violence laws and the option of a restraining order. The victim said she was unsure, but would go to the courthouse if she decided to get one. Nice Work!

TOO OFTEN victims of domestic violence abuse do not seek restraining orders for their own protection. There is a wide range of order conditions that a victim can obtain. In some cases, the victim may want to keep the abuser out of the house and away from their place of employment. Others may allow the abuser to stay in the house with an order to refrain from any abuse. The Police and the courts are there to help victims, but the victim must take the first step. A violation of a restraining order helps the responding Police Officer take immediate action.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

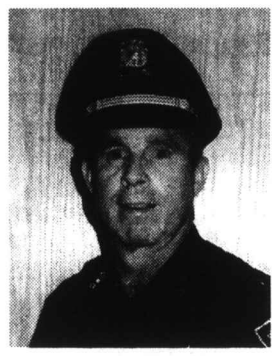

On Tuesday, November 4, 2014, at approximately 6:50 a.m., Officers Chris Donovan and Joe Cox were dispatched to Brook Avenue for a report of a disorder. The reporting person was a neighbor in an adjacent apartment, who was told by her female neighbor to call the Police.

Just before Officers arrived, Communications updated responding Officers that the female victim was now on the phone with Quincy Police Dispatchers. The victim informed the Dispatcher that her boyfriend was intoxicated and she was locked inside the bathroom for fear of being harmed.

Upon arrival, the Officers knocked on the apartment door and were met by a male who had a moderate odor of alcohol emanating from him, with slurred and slow speech. As the Officers entered the apartment, they observed it to be in disarray, with clothing and other household goods strewn about the floor.

The female victim, upon hearing the Officer's voices, emerged from the bathroom and appeared to be frightened. Officer Donovan led the victim outside the apartment to speak with her while Officer Cox interviewed the male in the apartment. The female, now visibly upset, shaking and sobbing, said, "I just want him to leave." When asked what occurred, the victim said that she and the male had been dating for approximately eight months. He moved in to the apartment two weeks earlier, however, he was not on the lease. She stated that early in the morning at approximately 2:00 a.m. the male now referred to as her boyfriend, came home extremely intoxicated and began arguing with her. When asked what the argument was about, the victim said she didn't recall, which surprised the Officers. She said that as the argument escalated, she asked her boyfriend to leave and he complied.

At approximately 6:30 a.m., he returned and began arguing with her again. She added that he appeared to be just as intoxicated as he was during the initial argument, leading her to believe that he had gone somewhere and continued drinking.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Donovan asked the victim if the altercation ever became physical. She hesitated and then said that it had, but she did not want to get him in trouble, saying, "I just want him to leave the apartment." The Officer questioned the victim further about the physical contact and learned from the victim that he did not strike her, but "he pushed me all over the house" which explained why the apartment appeared in such disarray. The Officer asked if the assault occurred during the first argument at 2:00 a.m. or when he returned at 6:30 a.m., to which she stated both times.

The victim said that she didn't call the Police originally because the he voluntarily left the apartment, but when he returned and started pushing her again, she fled to the bathroom and called the Police. Officer Donovan was told by the victim that this was the first time that there was physical abuse between them. The Officers then conferred to determine what actually happened.

Officer Cox told Officer Donovan that the suspect was very calm, as if nothing went on, and claimed that the victim/girlfriend hit him, but he didn't want to elaborate because he did not want her to get in trouble. Officer Cox asked where she struck him and he pointed to his left eye which was bruised and bloodshot. Due to the absence of swelling and the coloring of the bruise, the Officers believed that the mark was at least a few days old and most likely had nothing to do with the day's events. Officer Donovan asked the victim if she struck the suspect and she said that when he was pushing and dragging her around the house, she did strike him once to try to get away. Just to confirm their beliefs, Officer Donovan asked the victim if the mark on the suspect's face was the result of her hitting him, the victim said it was not, adding that it was from an altercation he got into a week ago in which she was not involved in.

The Officers went back into the apartment to inquire further, but then the suspect blurted out that he lied about the mark being caused by her.

The Officers then placed the suspect, a 28 year old Quincy resident under arrest on the charge of "Assault and Battery on a Family/Household Member" and then transported to the station by Officer Cox. The victim was then advised of her rights under the domestic violence laws and the option of a restraining order. The victim said she was unsure, but would go to the courthouse if she decided to get one. Nice Work!

TOO OFTEN victims of domestic violence abuse do not seek restraining orders for their own protection. There is a wide range of order conditions that a victim can obtain. In some cases, the victim may want to keep the abuser out of the house and away from their place of employment. Others may allow the abuser to stay in the house with an order to refrain from any abuse. The Police and the courts are there to help victims, but the victim must take the first step. A violation of a restraining order helps the responding Police Officer take immediate action.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN

"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer 3 consecutive days, and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. Thanks to St. Anthony & St. Joseph. St. Jude 11/13

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) While it seems that chaos is taking over, you get everything back to normal, even if it means being more than a little assertive with some people. Expect to hear more job-related news soon.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Expect to be able to move ahead with your workplace plans now that you have a good idea of what you might have to face. You also can anticipate a welcome change on the home front.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A quieter period settles in, giving you a chance to catch your breath, as well as allowing for more time to handle some important family matters. The arts dominate this weekend. Enjoy them.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The frustrations of last week have pretty much played themselves out. You should find things going more smoothly, especially with those all-important personal matters.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Once again, you find a creative way to resolve a pesky problem in short order. However, a matter involving a possible breach of confidence might need a bit more time to check out.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Reuniting with an old friend could lead to the sharing of some great new experiences. But be careful you don't find yourself once again being super-critical or overly judgmental.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You should be seeing some positive results following your move toward repairing that unraveling relationship. There might be some setbacks, but staying with it ultimately pays off.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Encouraging a friendlier environment in the home could go a long way to help dissipate anger and resolve problems, especially those affecting children. It won't be easy, but you can do it.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A recent act of kindness is beginning to show some unexpected (but very welcome) results. On another note, expect to hear more about a possible move to another locale.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The good news is that the sure-footed Goat can rely on his or her skill to get around obstacles in the workplace. The not-so-good news is that new impediments could turn up later.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A change of pace is welcome but also confusing. Before you make decisions one way or another, be sure you know precisely what it is you're being asked to do.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Don't fret if you don't get the gratitude you think you're owed for doing a nice thing for someone. There might be a good reason for that. In any event, what's important is that you did it.
BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of making the sort of wise decisions that ultimately shed new light on dark situations.

Square island memorial together.

"Today I'll mention my big brother Joe's name being added to the island to be joined with his dad's name," said Mayor Koch. "I'm here with you as a family member to those names attached to these flags."

"[Fort Square] has truly become a special spot, almost hallowed ground now because of the names attached to Old Glory," he added.

Two memorial wreathes were placed at the base of the island's flagpole; one to represent all deceased veterans and a second to honor the deceased members of the American Legion.

Guy Ferris, Master of Ceremonies and Sons of the American Legion Historian, said that one flag was placed on the island to symbolize prisoners of war and those missing in action who have yet to return home.

Because of the overwhelming response and growing support of the memorial, only the names of deceased honorees were read aloud by Ferris, followed by the playing of taps.

Prior to the benediction performed by Honorary Chaplain Rev. John Culp of the Fort Square Presbyterian Church, Quincy High School Class of 1966 representatives donated a check of $500 earned through raffles and personal contributions to Squadron 294.

All money collected from flag sales goes towards maintaining the island, as well as towards the Post's summer cook-out and their various charitable efforts.

Last year, a donation of $1,500 to the American Legion Child Welfare Foundation was made possible through the money raised, said Moody.

The flags were purchased by friends and family for a one-time fee of $30 and will remain on the island until Nov. 15.

The first SAL Squadron 294 Veterans Day observance was held in 2010.

400 Residential Units Proposed Downtown

QUINCY MUTUAL Fire Insurance Co. and Gate Residential Properties plan to construct 400 residential units near Chestnut and Hancock Streets in Quincy Center. The $100 million project will occur in two phases, beginning with the West of Chestnut development. Officials detailed plans for the West of Chestnut proposal Tuesday at Quincy Mutual's headquarters. A groundbreaking for the project is expected next spring. Construction will take 18 months. June Completion Date For City Hall Work

Sept. 30th Fire At McIntyre Government Center Caused Estimated $1.5 Million In Damage

By SCOTT JACKSON

The three-alarm fire that tore through Old City Hall in September caused an estimated $1.5 million in damage and will delay the ongoing renovation project of the 170-year old historic building by nearly six months.

Tony Papantonis, the president and founder of Nauset Construction, provided an update on the renovation project to the City Council Monday night. He outlined the steps taken on site since the fire on Sept. 30.

"The first step was to clear the building out of all debris and make it safe. The steps beyond that were to remove any of the equipment, any of the wiring, any of the damaged millwork, steelwork, which we've done. All new equipment has been ordered; some of it has arrived on site. We expect to be back to where we were pre-fire by about the end of January, so things are moving quickly," Papantonis said.

"Right now we're looking at finishing the job sometime in June."

He estimated the total costs associated with the fire – including both the damage and subsequent clean up – to be in the range of $1.5 million. The contractor's risk insurance policy will cover those costs.

James Edwards, the architect overseeing the project, said replacing granite on the building's southern façade has been the most difficult aspect of the work undertaken as a result of the fire.

"Most of the repairs that are going to take place within Old City Hall are fairly easy to accomplish," Edwards said.

"What is going to be difficult is repairing the fire-ravaged granite. There was an awful lot of flames, an awful lot of heat coming out one window of the southwest corner of the building and it damaged the granite badly."

The project team, Edwards added, is looking to source new granite to replace the damaged section of the building

City Auctioning Off Tax Titles Dec. 4

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city will be auctioning off about 200 real estate tax liens worth more than $5.8 million for subsequent collections during an auction on Dec. 4.

The liens will be bundled and sold to the highest bidder as one unit during the Dec. 4 auction. After that, individual property owners affected by the sale would need to pay the third party and not the city. This procedure is similar to a bank assigning a mortgage to a new holder who then receives all payments.

A listing of the affected properties appears in this week's issue of The Quincy Sun. Under the provisions of Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 60 Section 52, the city is required to publish a legal advertisement of the tax assignment auction, including details of all the properties to be included in the assignment, 14 days prior to the auction. The notice must also be posted in two public places, which will be the City Clerk's Office and the Thomas Crane Public Library. Each property owner is also notified by mail of the potential assignment of the tax lien on their property.

Property owners who may be impacted by the auction can prevent this action from happening by paying the amount owed to the city of Quincy by 10 a.m. on Dec. 4.

The value of the liens being auctioned – including principal, interest, and fees – was $5,864,398.57 as of Monday.

Early Deadline For Next Week's Quincy Sun

Because of the Thanksgiving Day holiday, The Quincy Sun will be published a day earlier next week, necessitating an early news and advertising deadline. The paper will go to press Monday and be circulated on Tuesday.

News, socials, church and youth sports releases as well as retail, legal and classified advertising should be in The Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Center, by noon tomorrow (Friday) for the Wednesday, Nov. 26th issue.

Quincy Salvation Army Kicks Off Kettle Campaign

Kettles Outside The Quincy Sun Tuesday, Nov. 25th; City Hall Friday, Dec. 12

The Salvation Army's Quincy Corps launched its annual Red Kettle Campaign last Friday with a kick-off event at the office of Mayor Thomas Koch.

The goal this year is to raise $130,000 to help the needy in the community.

The campaign is an important event in Quincy, and bell ringers can be seen at various locations throughout the city during the holiday season.

The money raised during the Red Kettle Campaign is a critical source of funding for vital programs and services for tens of thousands of families, youth and senior citizens in Quincy and across Massachusetts each year. This includes meals, toys and other holiday support for those in need, along with funding for food pantry, social services, and education programs throughout the year.

"This year our goal is to raise $130,000 to assist those in need right here in our community," said Captain Timothy Ross, Corps Officer of The Salvation Army Quincy Corps Community Center. That figure is part of the Salvation Army's statewide goal to raise $3.36 million this season.

"Each circumstance is a bit different," Capt. Ross said. We are excited to get the red kettles back out there so that we can continue to help all

Toys For Tots Drive At Norfolk County Registry Of Deeds

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds will be sponsoring its eighth annual U.S. Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots drive for needy children, Register William O'Donnell announces.

"The Registry of Deeds is always honored to partner with a longstanding charity like the Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots drive," O'Donnell said.

The Toys for Tots program dates all the way back to 1947, when the wife of a Marine wanted to donate a Raggedy Ann doll for Christmas and couldn't find an organization to take it. Since then nearly a half billion gifts have been donated and given to deserving boys and girls.

"Much of the success for the drive deservedly goes to those altruistic people who drop off presents at the Toys for Tots sites. Today, approximately 16 million gifts are annually donated to more than 13 million deserving boys and girls throughout every state in the nation," O'Donnell said.

Donations of new and unwrapped toys and games for toddlers and children up to 10 years of age can be brought directly to the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds Building located at 649 High St. in Dedham starting Monday, Nov. 24th through noon Wednesday, Dec. 18th.

A marked donation bin will be set up in the lobby which is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

QMC Nurses, Steward Nearing Agreement

By SCOTT JACKSON

Union officials representing more than 230 nurses at Quincy Medical Center are working on an agreement with the hospital's owner, Steward Health Care, to help those nurses being displaced when the hospital closes at the end of December.

Julie Pinkham, the executive director of the Massachusetts Nurses Association, addressed the City Council Monday night during a 90-minute hearing on the pending closure of the hospital. Pinkham was one of nearly a dozen speakers at the hearing – she was joined by other union leaders, veterans, the head of Manet Community Health Center, and experts on healthcare policy. Steward was invited to the hearing, but did not attend. A standing room only crowd of more than 60, many of them hospital workers, were present for the meeting.

Steward announced the pending closure of Quincy Medical Center Nov. 6, and plans to replace the hospital with a standalone emergency department and urgent care center in a location to be determined within the city.

Monday night's hearing was organized in response to a resolution introduced Nov. 10 by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin. At Monday's hearing, Coughlin asked Pinkham about Steward's promise of jobs in other locations for the

Toys For Tots Collection Box At Assessors' Office

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Just in time for the holiday season, the annual "Toys for Tots" drive, hosted by the city's Board of Assessors, has begun in the lobby of City Hall.

Peter Moran, chairperson of the board, urged the public to drop an unwrapped, new toy in the "Toys for Tots" donation box which will be in the lobby until Dec. 17.

The toy collection originally began in City Hall about ten years ago, he said, as a way to collect and distribute non-perishable items to deserving kids.

Last year over 100 toys for children in need were donated. The drive was so successful that the drop-off date was extended to allow for the collection of more gifts, said Moran.

"It's such good work and we're happy to do it," he said.

He asked that toys be donated for children of all ages. "We'll take anything we can get!" he said.

The toys will be sorted by age, category and gender and, with the help of local church and social welfare programs, delivered to families throughout the community.

Marine Corporal Vin Dolan, a spokesman for "Toys for Tots," has been collecting the gifts from City Hall and distributing them to local children for several years, said Moran.

"Toys for Tots" is run and organized by the not-for-profit Marine Toys for Tots Foundation charity.

STARS IN HER EYES

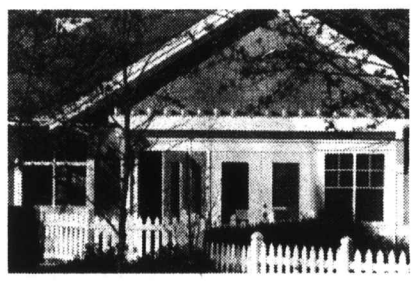

Gemstone jewelry, and diamonds in particular, has been synonymous with stars and other heavenly bodies since ancient times. Coco Chanel was once said to have looked up to the nighttime Parisian sky for inspiration and later proclaimed to a journalist that she "wanted to cover women in constellations." To this day, the same inspiration that guided the famous couturier endures, as jewelry designers continue to use star motifs in everything from diamond-studded gold cuffs to star-shaped diamond earrings and rings. Few would disagree that there is something magical about wearing star-studded jewelry as it endeavors to bring seemingly unattainable objects down to earth and place them in the hands of romantic souls.

Whether your "star" jewelry consists of gold shaped into stars, gemstones adorning star-shaped pendants, or the sparkle of well-cut gemstones catching the light, the effect is heavenly. It is not too early to start thinking about what to get for that holiday sparkle! 'Throwback Bowl II'

We're dubbing it "Throwback Bowl II."

But the 2nd annual Quincy – North Quincy Alumni Flag Football Game Saturday is as much about the past as it is the future.

Every dime the game raises – from the sale of 50-50 tickets, hats and players shirts – goes back to the football programs at Quincy and North Quincy High Schools. Money that can be spent on video technology, jerseys and player equipment. Helmets alone can run upwards of $400 each and outfitting a varsity player can cost quite a bit more. That's a big financial commitment and coordinators for the alumni game believe no youth in Quincy who aspires to be a President or a Red Raider should have to sit on the sideline because of money issues.

"We are trying to raise as much as we can and give back as much as we can and hopefully the game will help – even if it's in a small way," says Scott Campbell, QHS Class of 1989 and one of the event's coordinators.

"The money we raise," Campbell adds, "is to help the players be safe and to be as competitive as they can."

Last year, the alumni football game – and a companion golf tournament – raised $15,000 for the city's two high school football programs. It was split equally - $7,500 each – between Quincy and North Quincy. Organizers hope to raise even more this year.

One of the items available to the public for purchase is a golf hat featuring North Quincy's mascot – the Yakoo – swinging a golf club while wearing a Presidents' striped and starred hat.

That match may seem a bit odd considering togetherness – on the field, anyway - has not been the trademark of this intracity football rivalry. But once seniors play their final game on Thanksgiving morning, players on both sides join a special high school football fraternity in Quincy. A brotherhood that is bonded by more than blue and white and red and black. It's about respect, friendship and giving back to this community – and nation.

Some become firefighters, police officers, and servicemen defending freedom. Others teachers and public servants and business leaders. The lessons of teamwork, perseverance and overcoming adversity will serve them well in all walks of life.

"Throwback Bowl II" is also a reunion of sorts for others groups that were intertwined with football during their high school days. There will be about 50 alumni cheerleaders representing both schools; and members of the high school band will also be there to play rallying music for the two teams.

Besides Campbell, other organizers for Saturday's game include Quincy Police Officer Sean Glennon, a 1989 NQHS graduate; Deanne Desantis Pettinelli, QHS cheerleaders (Class of 1989); Nancy Peduzzi McNulty, NQHS cheerleaders (Class of 1983); and Rob Buttomer, band, QHS Class of 1988.

Following the game, there will be a reception at the Commonwealth on the Parkingway. Sponsors for the game include The Commonwealth, Everyday Café, and Lallis and Higgins Insurance.

How big is the reunion game becoming?

Consider this year's match-up will feature more nearly 100 players representing the two high schools. We say "former" in quotation marks because their high school days are over. But once a President or a Red Raider, always a President or Red Raider.

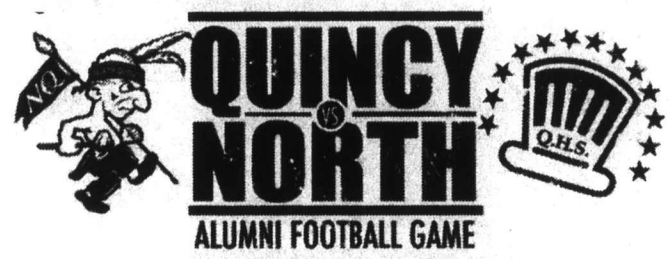

This year's squads include players who are traveling from as far away as Illinois and Florida. Every state in New England and New York is represented on the field. The "Throwbacks" go back as far as the 1970s since the last time they donned pads and strapped on helmets at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

And the game is competitive. Don't let anyone tell you otherwise.

Sure, before the game starts, there is camaraderie amongst the players.

Then it's time to get serious.

"As soon as the whistle blows and the game begins, it's very competitive," Campbell says. "There's some pushing and shoving all in good fun but the teams want to win."

There's some chippiness – but in a gentlemanly kind of way. You really can't take the athletic drive out of an athlete.

"At the end of the day, this is still a North Quincy – Quincy rivalry," Campbell says.

And he scoffs when asked what the score was last year.

"Whatever . . . who cares," says the affable but never timid Campbell. "We know we lost but this is this year."

The Red Raiders prevailed last year, 32-6. On Saturday, Quincy is out for redemption. The "Cousins of Bill Belichick" are believed to have had two practices in preparation of Saturday's showdown. Campbell won't confirm – but the limp in his legs would indicate otherwise.

While Quincy is out to avenge last year's loss, North Quincy would like nothing better than to go up 2-0 and enjoy bragging rights for the next 364 days.

"Every check that I've received from players who are participating this year has jotted down at the bottom on the memo line 'beat North' or 'beat Quincy," Campbell says, noting that even the checking account that has been created for the alumni game has two sets of check headings. One reads "QHS/NQHS Alumni Football." The other: "NQHS/QHS Alumni Football."

The high school football rivalry has roots that run deep in this community. The Q-NQ football game dates back to 1933. For most high school football players here, the last Thursday in November at the stadium is the biggest athletic stage they'll ever stand on. They are told to take a moment and soak in the atmosphere of the Q-NQ game because for many it's the defining – and final – moment in their high school athletic careers.

They may forget who spoke at their graduations and names of some of their teachers. But they'll remember the score of those Thanksgiving football tilts when the hub of the universe was – for several morning hours anyway – set squarely on that 100-yard field at the corner of Hancock Street and Southern Artery.

"Playing football in Quincy at either high school develops a brotherhood," Campbell says. "To this day, I still see guys that I played against. We remember the games and the moments and we reminisce.

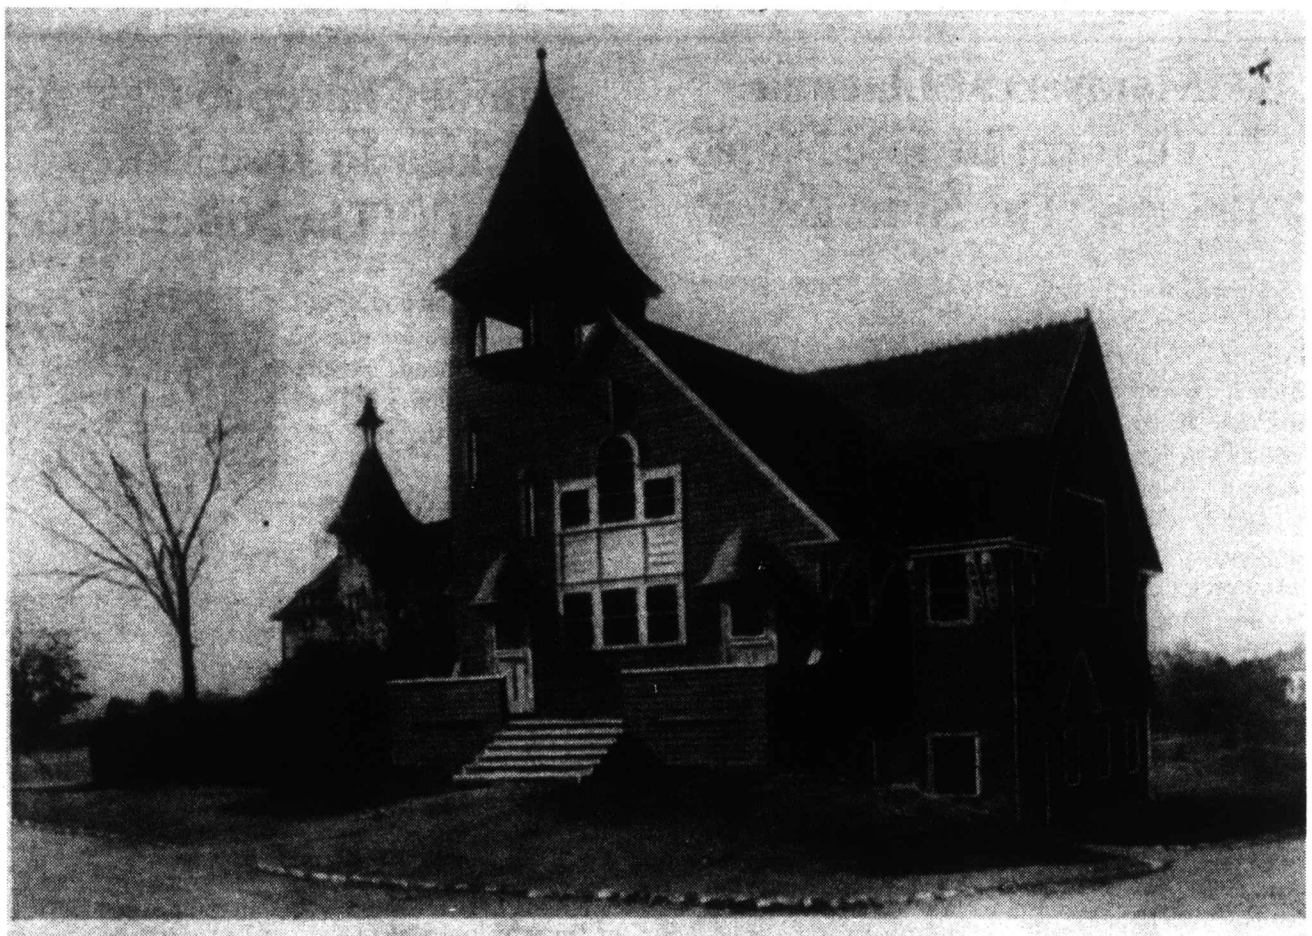

"This alumni game is something that people are drawn to because they get to see people without it being a formal reunion. Not only is it not a formal reunion, you get to see people from the years before and the years after you. Hopefully the kids who graduate this year and in the coming years will keep it going," Campbell says.

"Throwback Bowl II" is more than a reunion.

It's about coming together to give back to the football programs so that all of city's youth have the opportunity to represent their schools, show their pride and some day, be alumni who care about the next generation of high school football players.

"As you get older, this football bond is about the love of the game and helping the kids who are playing today and making sure they are properly equipped so that the teams are as competitive as possible," Campbell says. "We want to help give them the resources so they can enjoy the game to the fullest extent possible."

METHODIST CHURCH, ATLANTIC, MASS.

THIS 1906 POSTCARD is a view of the original Atlantic Methodist Episcopal Church building on the corner of Hunt Street and Newbury Avenue in Atlantic. Built in 1894, this building was later replaced by a stone church just around the corner on East Squantum Street. That building is now condominiums. The building seen here in the left background with the distinctive steeple was the original eight-room Quincy Grammar School on East Squantum Street. It was built in 1873 on the site of today's North Quincy High School, and was replaced in 1906 with a brick building on Newbury Avenue that is now condominiums. Lane And Ross Nominated For Mayor

State Rep. Myron N. Lane and former Mayor Charles A. Ross were nominated for mayor in Tuesday's city preliminary election.

Lane led the field of five candidates with 4,807 votes followed closely by Ross who had 4,478 votes.

Lane expressed his appreciation for his vote stating, "In return for this endorsement I intend to conduct a clean, vigorous campaign, confined to the real issues before us. If I am elected Mayor I intend to give the city the best municipal administration in its history."

Ross said, "The vote indicates ultimate victory. It reflects confidence throughout the city and is evidence of the approval of my pledge to continue the stability and progress and betterment of Quincy."

BURGIN MADE NAVY LIEUTENANT, JENNESS WILL BE ACTING MAYOR

Mayor Thomas Burgin, who had announced that he would retire from office at the end of his term to enlist in the Armed Forces, said that he had been commissioned as full lieutenant in the U.S. Naval Reserve.

The First Naval Division announced later that Burgin had been assigned to the office of the supervisor of shipbuilding at the Fore River Shipyard. He reported for duty Monday, Nov. 16.

Ward One Councillor and Council President William W. Jenness would serve as acting Mayor for the balance of Burgin's term, which ends on the first Monday of January 1943.

Under the law, Burgin and Jenness will share the mayoral salary of $96 per week. Each received one-half ($48).

Saddened By QMC Closing, Potential Uses For Site

I was saddened by learning the bad news regarding the closing of Quincy Hospital by Steward Health Care. This will leave a large section of our neighborhood and city workers with no activity. Hopefully during the attorney general's investigation on the Partners' expansion plans of purchasing South Shore Hospital could shed some light on the whole picture. If the hospital does close, it could possibly be used as:

1. Quincy College, which operates a very successful nursing program.
2. An urgent care and emergency care facility.
3. A large nursing home.
4. An assisted living facility.
5. Independent living facility.
6. Professional offices for doctors, lawyers, etc.
7. A physical fitness and rehab training facility.
8. A support facility for small businesses who serve the South Shore area.

Hopefully, the city will help in finding a good use for all the buildings and land now owned by the hospital.

Competition - Not Politics - Precipitated QMC Closing

The news on the upcoming closure of the Quincy Medical Center is a big blow to the City of Quincy but hardly a shocking surprise. Smaller community hospitals have been in financial trouble for years and Quincy was no different. Over the years going back to the days of Quincy City Hospital, repeated attempts have been made such as the partnership between Quincy Medical Center with Boston Medical Center. Many hoped that when Steward Health Care System took over the hospital that it could have a rebirth. However, with the recent announcement of the closing, it would appear that even Steward couldn't save the day.

Nearby in Milton, Milton Hospital became BI Deaconess Milton Hospital and for the moment seems sustainable in the atmosphere of larger hospitals nearby that can seemingly offer so much more.

I don't know what the Mayor's Office could have done to save the hospital when the place could only fill about 20 percent of its 196 beds on a daily basis. What could politics have done when the reality is that Quincy is surrounded by many hospitals that helped precipitate the closing. Within a 10-mile radius, there are 15 other hospitals.

The good news is that the 680 employees out of work in Quincy will be getting paid for the next 60 days and that many of them also may end up working at other Steward facilities such as the Carney in Dorchester.

The bottom line, Quincy Medical Center just ran out of time. This is not the time for anyone to be playing politics over this unfortunate timing of the closing.

Veterans Day Tribute A Tremendous Success

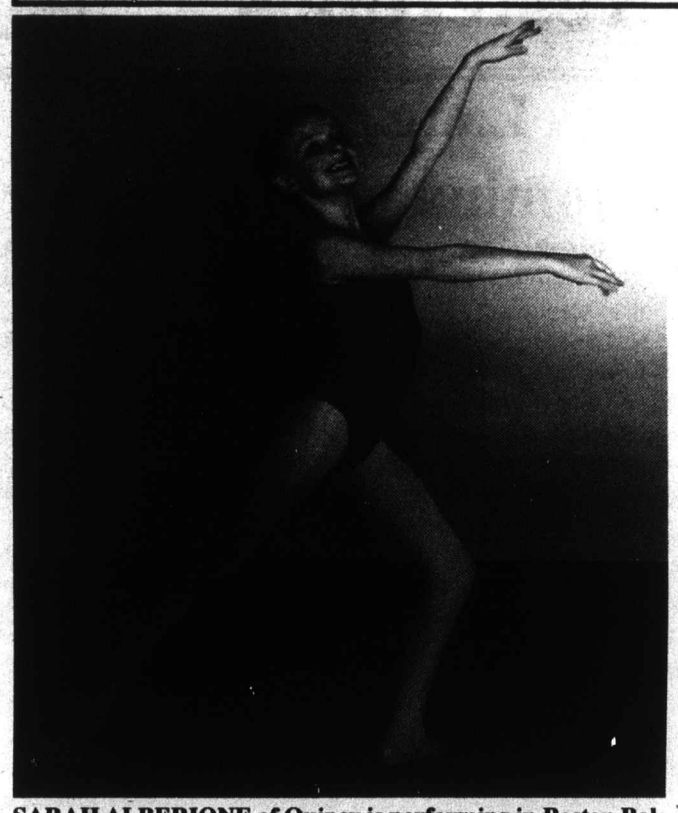

I felt obliged to praise the efforts of Quincy's Veterans Services and our city leaders for their efforts in commemorating Veterans Day.

The adults and youth groups in the parade were very good. The speaker, Lt. Col. Diana Gibbs, U.S. Army Reserve, was excellent. The turnout of citizens was impressive. It was great to see so many youngsters listening with rapt attention to stories of turmoil and suffering that our young men have endured at war.

It was a tremendous success as a tribute to our fallen and returning veterans. Many thanks.

NQHS Class Of '49 Holds Marks 65th Reunion

By KRIS KALABOKAS

About 20 members of the 280 member North Quincy High School class of 1949 held their 65th reunion last Wednesday at the Granite Links Golf Club.

The event was organized by 1949 graduates Marilyn McConville, Mary (Shannon) Cramond, Jean Martin Delaney, and Marvin Martin, who is referred to in the 1949 edition of the North Quincy High School Manet yearbook as "Moe."

Former Quincy Mayor Walter Hannon was in attendance and joked that he used to pull on his female classmate's pony tails to playfully annoy them.

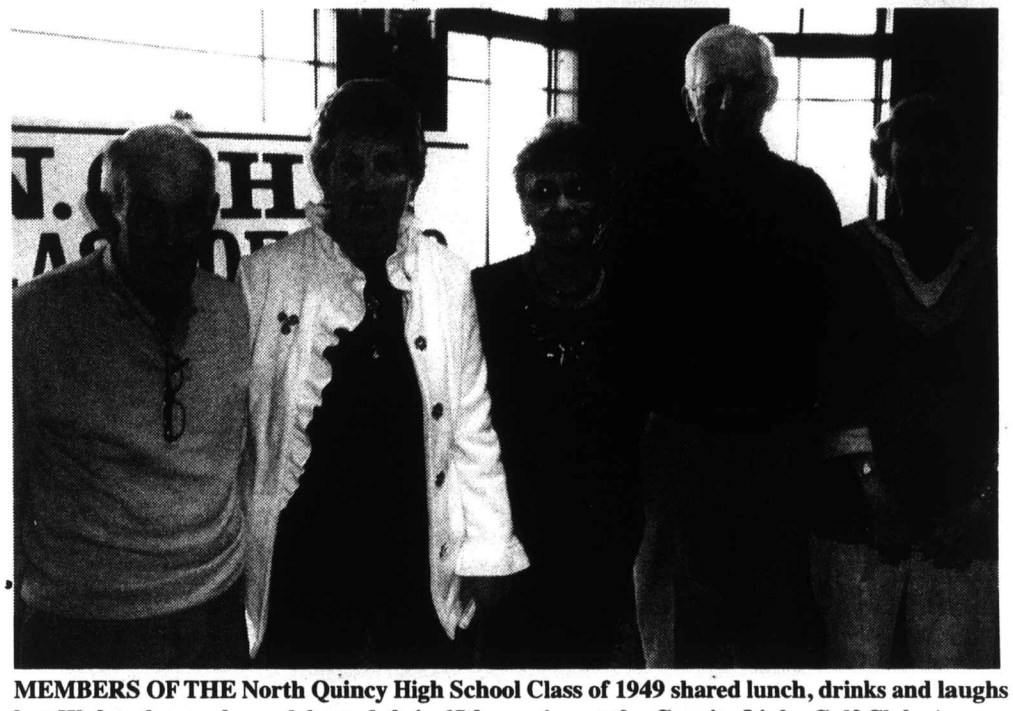

Hannon was voted "most versatile" in the 1949 class census and the blurb underneath his yearbook photo reads "sharpie of the class, likes sports, full of laughs."

He was a homeroom representative, student council representative, and on the prom committee; activities that were sure to have primed him for his stint as the city's mayor from 1972-1975.

Marvin Martin and and Jean Delaney Martin adamantly — yet lightheartedly — joked that they were not related.

Classmates John Wright and Jim MacGregor shared a classroom and exchanged fond memories of their teachers.

MacGregor, who currently lives in Plymouth, joked that he had come over to Massachusetts on the Mayflower, landing at Plymouth rock.

He was also voted "best dancer" in the class census.

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Recipes For Thanksgiving

By MARIE

Today's recipe is for three foods that we can enjoy for Thanksgiving Day and beyond.

One is for a very simple cranberry sauce that my daughters Rita and Ann Marie make and the other is for pumpkin cheese cake and pumpkin pecan pie both made without the conventional pie crust. They are made with ginger snaps or graham crackers.

These recipes are timeless and may be some you have already made.

CRANBERRY SAUCE

1 cup cranberries
1/3 cup orange juice
1/3 cup sugar
2 tablespoons honey
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

Mix all of the ingredients together, and then cook in a pan until the cranberries are all blended in the juices. Within a few minutes you have a delicious cranberry sauce ever.

PUMPKIN CHEESE CAKE

3-eight ounce packages cream cheese (softened)
1-15 ounce can pumpkin mix (without sugar)
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 eggs

In a bowl, whip up the cream cheese, sugar and vanilla until smooth. Add the pumpkin and the beaten eggs and mix well. Set aside.

For the Crust

1 1/2 cups ginger snaps or graham crackers
5 tablespoons melted butter

Mix the two ingredients together and place on a greased pie plate pressing on the bottom and on the sides. Bake in a 400 oven for 8 minutes.

Remove from the oven and place the filling. Bake in a 425 degree oven for 15 minutes, and then at 350 degrees for one hour or until a toothpick comes clean from the center.

PUMPKIN, PECAN PIE

1-15 ounce pumpkin pie mix (without sugar)
5 ounces evaporated milk (or 2% milk)
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 teaspoon cloves
2 eggs (beaten)
1/2 cups chopped pecans)

Mix the eggs, milk, sugar and spices until blended. Add the pumpkin and nuts and stir until smooth.

Use either of the crusts and bake for 8 minutes in a 400 degree oven. Then when filled bake for 425 degree oven for 15 minutes and then 350 degree for one hour or until toothpick comes out clean in the center.

Giblet Turkey Stuffing

By MARIE

This is a recipe for stuffing that I usually make for Thanksgiving Day. It contains the giblets from the turkey. If you don't want to use them, just eliminate them from the recipe.

GIBLET TURKEY STUFFING

4 ounces of ground meat (any favorite)
2 stalks celery (chopped)
1 small onion (chopped)
Livers from the turkey (cut up)
2 tablespoons Bell's seasoning (or thyme)
1/2 bag stuffing mix
1 cup seasoned bread crumbs
1/4 cup Parmesan cheese
1/4 cup white wine

Saute the celery and onion. Add the ground meat and the livers and the wine. Cover and cook until meat is done. Add the stuffing mix that you have soaked in water or stock.

Stir and cook covered, then add the bread crumbs and the cheese and cook for another few minutes. If the mixture looks thin, add more crumbs. If thick add more liquid (water or stock).

You can either cook the stuffing separately or when completely cooled in the turkey. If separate, bake covered in a 350 degree oven for 25 minutes until done.

Quinoa Butternut Squash, Kale Pilaf

By SUZIE

Here is a delicious recipe for those who may be on the "fence" about trying quinoa. Quinoa is easy to digest, gluten free, delicious and easy to prepare as well. For culinary purposes quinoa is considered a "grain" but actually it is a seed. Loaded with calcium (who needs milk?) 5 grams of protein, fiber, iron, and many other minerals, I think you will start keeping quinoa in your pantry after tasting this recipe.

QUINOA BUTTERNUT SQUASH AND KALE PILAF

2 ½ cups rinsed and drained quinoa
5 cups chicken or vegetable broth
½ cup chopped onion
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 head of lacinto kale, destemmed and chopped
2 cups butternut squash, cubed
3 tbsp. Olive oil
1 tbsp. Ghee or pasture butter sea salt pepper
½ lemon juiced
2 tblsp. Each fresh sage and fresh thyme, chopped.
Parmesan cheese

Place quinoa and broth in saucepan and let come to boil. Cover and simmer between 12 and 15 minutes until broth is absorbed and quinoa is done. Keep covered.

While quinoa is cooking, saute' onion in oil and ghee/pasture butter until lightly browned and sizzling. Add squash and kale. Toss in about a teaspoon of sea salt and some freshly ground pepper. Stir well and put heat down low. Toss in garlic and cover and cook, stirring occasionally, about 15 -20 minutes until squash is done and kale is tender. (Sometimes I add a bit of broth at the end if too dry, it all depends on how many times you take off the cover and let off too much steam.)

Toss vegetables in with the cooked quinoa: Add in the herbs, lemon juice, more sea salt if needed, and pepper to taste. Drizzle with olive oil and sprinkle with cheese. Serve hot.

680 workers employed at the hospital. She replied that MNA officials, who represent 237 nurses– 162 full-time and 75 per diem – at Quincy Medical Center, have met with Steward twice in recent weeks to discuss new job opportunities at other Steward facilities and severance packages for those nurses. The deal could be finalized within one or two weeks.

"The discussion that we're having is that people should land safely as much as they're able, including severance and early retirement for people, possibly, to increase the likelihood of being able to place other people who are in full time jobs," Pinkham said.

"I don't expect that we'll get everything exactly the way we wanted, but this committee and this membership should walk away feeling it was a fair and just process and comfortable with the outcome."

Pinkham, who lives in Houghs Neck, said Quincy needs a hospital of its own.

"Residents of the city and the surrounding communities who would otherwise use Quincy City Hospital will now be forced to go elsewhere: South, to South Shore Hospital, or over to Milton to Milton Hospital, or across the Neponset Bridge, possibly to Carney but more likely to Boston," she told the council.

"Ironically, they will travel further for their care and they will do so at higher cost with no improvement in their outcomes."

Hank Bradley and George Nicholson, the former and current director of veterans services for the city, respectively, both spoke to the council during the hearing. They did so because Quincy Medical Center is home to the Quincy Community Based Outpatient Clinic, which is operated by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs. That clinic opened in 2000, after years of lobbying by Bradley, who said veterans have visited the clinic 1,700 so far this year.

Nicholson said veterans who use the clinic are in a state of 'double jeopardy,' because of both the pending closure of the hospital and potential changes being made at the VA. Nicholson's primary goal is to keep a clinic in Quincy.

"When I came on board it was a salvation to know we had the clinic there for the guys and the women here in this city. It's been an ongoing battle, year in and year out, to get extra facilities, extra services, extra staff. Now we don't know what is going to happen with it," Nicholson explained.

"The primary requisite as the primary advocate for the veterans in the city of Quincy now is to see that that clinic stays here, because there isn't a medical delivery system in the world that understands the care and need of that exclusive population known as America's veterans as the Veterans Administration does. We've got to hold their toes to the fire to get their continued support."

John J. Holiver, the CEO of Manet Community Health Center, said his organization is looking at its facilities to see if they could accommodate a relocated VA clinic in the city.

Manet operates four facilities within Quincy, including one in Quincy Medical Center. Holiver said the location is the organization's second busiest, behind only the location on West Squantum Street in North Quincy. Manet is scouting out possible new locations for that facility.

"Plans are already under way to make sure that particular location goes to another place in the city that is easily accessible by public transportation and other ways so that these folks do not go untreated," Holiver said, noting Manet's renovated location in North Quincy could handle all patients who seek treatment at its Quincy Medical Center facility.

Manet is also looking to expand their services to offset any loss of service resulting from QMC's shutdown. The organization is looking at expanding hours, including possibly opening on Sundays. Additionally, Manet is working on agreements with other organizations to provide inpatient services for those seeking assistance with behavioral health; Manet can only provide outpatient services at its facilities.

"Many of you know the meaning of our name, Manet. The word means 'it remains,' and that's what we plan on doing," Holiver stated.

"We will be marshaling all of our resources to make sure we can mitigate and tackle any issues that come up relative to the loss of services happening at Quincy Medical Center."

Deborah Socolar, the former co-director of the Health Reform Program at Boston University's School of Public Health, outlined four potential steps the city could take. She suggested the city seek an injunction or temporary restraining order to stop the shutdown of the hospital or at least keep the emergency room open past Dec. 31; keep in frequent contact with Attorney General Martha Coakley and Attorney General-elect Maura Healey relative to the closure; urge Gov. Deval Patrick to declare a public health emergency, which she said would allow the state to take over QMC; and keep in contact with local officials in communities where other Steward facilities are located.

Following the hearing on Quincy Medical Center, the City Council approved two resolutions relative to the hospital's closing in a pair of 9-0 votes.

The first, introduced by Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, asks the federal Department of Veterans Affairs to find a new location in the city for the clinic currently inside Quincy Medical Center.

The second, proposed by Coughlin, asks Coakley to determine whether or not Steward's plan to close the hospital violates the 2011 agreement that allowed the for-profit company to purchase Quincy Medical Center. That agreement required Steward to keep the hospital open for at least six-and-a-half years and provide 18 months notice to state regulators before closing. Mayor Thomas Koch has already asked Coakley to rule on that agreement, as have the members of Quincy's delegation on Beacon Hill.

The DPH will hold a community meeting on the planned hospital closure Dec. 2. That meeting will take place at 7 p.m. inside Point Webster Middle School's auditorium, located at 60 Lancaster St.

June Completion For City Hall Work

nearby combustible material. That break-in was the second reported incident at Old City Hall; just days before thieves used a hacksaw to remove copper from the building.

Given the previous break-in, Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci asked Papantonis why the security on site hadn't been enhanced before the fire. Papantonis said providing on site security, the only way to stop break-ins, is unusual for project sites.

"We typically do not use on site security. It's really just not cost effective," he explained. "It's the only way to guarantee an incident like this doesn't happen but…it's highly unusual to do that."

Since the fire, Nauset has installed surveillance cameras, which are monitored at Quincy Police Department headquarters, as well as motion detector alarms.

Old City Hall, formally known as the James R. McIntyre Government Center, opened in 1844, replacing the previous town hall located on the other side of the Hancock Cemetery.

The building closed in 2011 because of safety concerns. The renovation project began in October 2012 and had been scheduled for completion in early 2015 before the fire broke out.

School - Community Partnership Awards $30,000 In Mini-Grants

82 Creative Mini-Grants Presented To Quincy Public Schools Professional Staff

The Quincy Public Schools / Quincy School – Community Partnership Teacher Mini-Grant Award Ceremony was recently held in the Atrium of Honor at North Quincy High School.

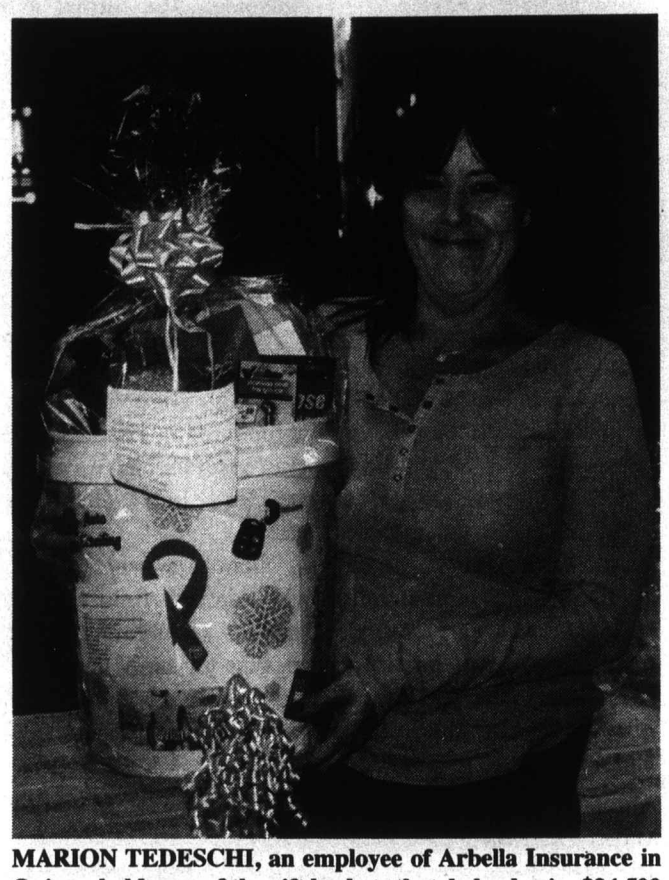

Eighty-two creative mini-grants totaling $30,000 were awarded to Quincy Public Schools professional staff members. Since the initiative was created 14 years ago, a total of $267,000 in mini-grants have been awarded. The grants were gifts from Boston University, George G. Burke, Esq., David Ezickson, Fund for Excellence in Teaching, and members of the Quincy School – Community Partnership.

On hand for the ceremony were Mayor Thomas P. Koch and School Committee members Barbara Isola and Paul Bregoli. Isola addressed the group and congratulated the winners on their dedication to their students. Mayor Koch commended the winners for their dedication and commitment. Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro referred to the group as the "best teachers anywhere."

Fifteen individuals representing QSCP partner organizations attended the event and awarded the grants to the recipients. Participating at the ceremony were Arbella Insurance Group, George G. Burke, Quincy Education Association, Granite Telecommunications, Bluefin Robotics, Boston Scientific Corp, MountainOne Bank, Quincy Medical Center / Steward Health Care, Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co., Quincy Retired Teachers Association, Quirk Auto Dealers, Quincy Credit Union, Cerebral Palsy of Mass., and Wessling Architects.

The winning grants were for various classroom related subjects such as iPads, white boards, weather related science equipment, subscriptions for periodicals, music composition software, as well as rrenewable energy kits and mimeo view document cameras.

Arbella Insurance Raises $34,500 For Dana-Farber Cancer Institute

MARION TEDESCHI, an employee of Arbella Insurance in Quincy, holds one of the gift baskets that helped raise $34,500 for the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

For the sixth year in a row, Arbella employees have joined forces with the Arbella Insurance Foundation to raise funds to provide cancer screenings and education for medically underserved populations through the work of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

At the sixth Annual Pink Day event, held Oct. 20, Arbella employees raised nearly $17,250 for Dana-Farber. Those funds were matched by the Arbella Insurance Foundation for a total donation of $34,500. The contributions will support Dana-Farber's Mammography Van community visits in 2015, as well as Dana-Farber's Blum Family Resource Center Van stops, which provide prostate cancer screening and education, and skin cancer screening.

Founded in 2009, Pink Day is the creation of Arbella employee Dot Olson. After being diagnosed with breast cancer, Olson underwent treatment with Dana-Farber. It was her experience with the institute that inspired her to create "Pink Day." The inception of Pink Day has been instrumental in furthering Dana-Farber's mission to garner continued support for breast cancer awareness and research. As Pink Day has grown, the event has been placed in the hands of the Arbella Activities Committee (AAC), a group of employees who are committed to promoting a culture of teamwork and camaraderie through corporate citizenship and, more importantly, fun.

To show their support during the Pink Day event, Arbella employees wear pink to work, donate money to dress casually, purchase Dana-Farber bracelets, and contribute to and participate in departmental gift basket drawings.

All of the proceeds go directly to Dana-Farber to support their efforts and research advancements. To date, Pink Day has raised more than $110,000 for cancer treatment and research.

Two Quincy Schools Participating In 'Smoking Don't Go There'

Physician members of the Massachusetts Medical Society and the Norfolk South District Medical Society are again volunteering their time to help spread the word on the perils of tobacco use and cigarette smoking to adolescents in South Shore communities.

This is the 16th year of the Norfolk South District Medical Society's anti-smoking program of "Smoking – Don't Go There," a public service effort by the physicians held in conjunction with the National Great American Smoke-Out today (Thursday.)

The program is led by Dr. John Walsh, Immediate Past President of the Norfolk South District Medical Society and an emergency room physician at South Shore Hospital. Dr. Walsh has been enlisting volunteer physicians who will visit elementary, middle and high schools in the South Shore Area to discuss the perils of tobacco use.

Two schools in Quincy - the Broad Meadows Middle School and the Sterling Middle School - are among the schools participating.

Medical Society officials say such prevention programs have become increasingly important as the state has drastically cut back on tobacco control and education programs. Physicians cite statistics released by the national Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids that called attention to the declining funding levels for anti-tobacco efforts across the nation and here in Massachusetts, despite the 1998 landmark settlement of $246 billion with tobacco companies.

Physicians note tobacco use primarily begins in early adolescence. Each day about 3,500 kids in the United States try their first cigarette and each day 1,000 other kids under 18 become new regular daily smokers. Ninety percent of all adult smokers begin while in their teens or earlier, and two-thirds become regular daily smokers by age 19.

known as West of Chestnut. The development, which will include two six-story buildings with 169 total units and 12,000 square feet of retail space, is planned for the wedged shaped block bounded by Hancock and Chestnut Streets and Cottage Avenue. Street-Works, the city's previous downtown developer, planned to build its Merchants Row project on the same site but halted construction last fall. Quincy Mutual worked in recent months to acquire all the property on the lot, and completed those transactions in October.

"This is really a new day for Quincy Center and we are so grateful for the contribution by Quincy Mutual," Mayor Thomas Koch said at Tuesday's announcement.

"This is a crucial day, because of what Quincy Mutual is going to do with this site. But also because of the message this sends to all those other investors and developers who ask me what's the status of Quincy Mutual. This will create the momentum in the downtown that will be tough to stop."

WEST OF CHESTNUT development includes two buildings, each six stories tall with 169 total units. Shown here is the building on Hancock Street, which includes 65 units. Quincy Mutual and Gate Residential unveiled their plans for the West of Chestnut project Tuesday. The development will also feature 12,000 square feet of ground level retail space.

The second phase of the Quincy Mutual and Gate Residential development will take place in Quincy Mutual's parking lot on the eastern side of Chestnut Street; the Strand Theater was located on that site for many years before it was demolished. The second phase of the project, known as East of Chestnut, will include 220 residential units plus additional retail space.

The two phases of the project have a combined price tag of $100 million.

Parents Seek Analysis On 5th Graders In Middle Schools

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Parents unhappy with last month's meeting of an ad hoc school committee chaired by member David McCarthy and created to address the issue of fifth grade students in two of Quincy's middle schools voiced their disapproval at last Wednesday's regular meeting of the school committee.

Alexis Veith, the mother of a first grader at the Clifford-Marshall School, thanked board members for forming the ad hoc but her praise ended there. "I was disappointed that the facts that were presented to us in the presentation contained no thoughtful analysis to put them in context," she said.

Laura Owens, assistant to Quincy Public Schools Superintendent Richard DeCristofaro, compiled and presented a list during the Oct. 28 ad hoc committee meeting of Massachusetts cities that also have grade 5-8 configurations such as Weymouth, Natick, and Hanover.

Cities such as Wachusett and Milford, she found, have both 5-8 and 6-8 grade configurations.

"The list of five to eight communities was a list in a vacuum," said Veith. "How do these communities actually compare to Quincy in terms of operation, socio-economic status, diversity, etc?"

She said that other cities simply having similar configurations does not lend any credibility to 5-8 middle schools.

She was also unsatisfied with previously shown achievement statistics from Sterling Middle School and Point Webster Middle School based on MCAS scores and honor student status. Highlighting the achievement of a small percentage of the student body didn't accurately represent the success of the student population as a whole, she said.

"We know that Point Webster and Sterling do not achieve as highly as the other middle schools in the city by a large margin," she said. "By omitting what their peer schools in the city are achieving, it seems that this achievement gap is trying to be swept under the rug."

She asked school committee members if anything would be done as a result of the ad hoc to address parent concerns since no solid plan had been created.

She also requested that "concrete steps" be discussed and taken before the winter break, prior to the start of the 2014-2015 school year.

Bringing health class and library research-based classes which are offered to fifth graders at the city's middle schools to fifth graders in the elementary schools would be positive ways to equal the playing field, she said.

"On the surface and at first I thought things were moving in the right direction but at some point during the presentation...it started to become clear that all of this was kind of a show that was put on for my colleagues and I that are opposed to having some of the fifth graders in the city in middle school and some in elementary school," said Courtney Perdios, parent of a first grader at the Clifford Marshall Elementary School.

While she understood the curriculum being taught to fifth graders in both the elementary and middle schools was the same, she felt other differences, such as the fact that middle school fifth graders gain an additional 50 hours of class time due to an alternating half day Tuesday schedule, were drastic and needed to be rectified.

Elementary school fifth graders have half days every Tuesday.

"I think we had a good back and forth on questions and answers," said McCarthy. "[DeCristofaro] is taking a hard look at all those action items that were addressed and he'll probably come back in the near future and give us an update on what's going to happen — if anything is going to happen — in regards to Point and Sterling."

Anne Mahoney, the school committee member who has been most vocal in her opposition to fifth graders in middle school, asked for clarification as to when and if another meeting of the ad hoc committee would take place.

McCarthy said that a follow-up meeting would be scheduled most likely prior to the end of Jan. 2015.

DeCristofaro's Management, Leadership Lauded

School Committee Notebook

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The results of a grading system created by the Department of Elementary and Secondary Eduction (DESE) and used by the city's school committee to evaluate the performance of Richard DeCristofaro, the superintendent of Quincy Public Schools, during the 2013-2014 school year were shared at last Wednesday's meeting of the board.

Committee member Barbara Isola presented her colleagues with the summative evaluation which rated DeCristofaro's performance in key areas including professional practice, student learning goals, and district improvement goals.

His instructional leadership was rated as "proficient," as were his management and operation skills and his ability to create a positive professional culture.

He was rated as "exemplary" in family and community engagement.

DeCristofaro was lauded for his management of 9,500 students across 19 locations in the city and for his management following the retirement of several members of his leadership and principal teams as the 2013-2014 school year came to a close.

"He engaged with parents and the general public on issues large and small," read the report.

All comments were anonymous and provided by committee members. While most were positive, one read "I don't feel like the student learning goals were met."

Performance goals put in place by DeCristofaro for the year included an increase in performance of two percent at every MCAS tested grade level in English language arts, math, and science between 2013 and 2014.

A presentation during a school committee meeting earlier in the month revealed dramatic improvements that were well over the two percent goal. Grade four English Language Learner (ELL) students saw a ten percent increase in correct answers since last year in the math category. Science scores in the overall school population however, remained relatively stable with only a .6 percent decrease in correct answers since last year.

"We can all agree that that was a challenging goal," said Isola.

The report also revealed that some felt the district needed to improve on its accountability and transparency.

One comment indicated that parents at the middle school level needed to be engaged more thoroughly by QPS staff.

DeCristofaro was then described as a "true leader of Quincy Public Schools," in another comment.

He collaborated with the school committee during more than 50 school committee meetings, ensuring that all issues were addressed, said Isola.

She clarified that in the case of the report, "proficient" meant that DeCristofaro had met all goals at a "rigorous expected level of performance." A rating of "exemplary" indicated high performance that could be used as a template or model by other school districts.

His overall performance was rated as "proficient" by the school committee as defined by the DESE.

It was noted that DeCristofaro freely gives out his email address and cell phone number to parents and administrators.

Tree Lighting At New Location: Library Lawn

City To Hold Christmas Festivities Next Weekend

For the 62nd time, the City of Quincy will hold its annual three-day Christmas festivities beginning on Friday, Nov. 28th with the traditional tree lighting celebration to be held at a new location on the lawn of Thomas Crane Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The activities will kick off at 5:00 p.m. and includes the Donna Marie Children's Puppet show, costumed characters, and the combined Quincy/North Quincy Choir. The performances will be held inside of a heated tent that will be set up on the lawn.

At 6 p.m. Friday, Nov. 28, Mayor Thomas P. Koch will turn on the Christmas lights at the library and throughout Quincy Center to mark the beginning of the holiday season. The public is welcome to attend the event that will feature free popcorn and hot chocolate.

The following day, Saturday Nov. 29th will be Santa's Arrival by parachute. Santa and his five elf helpers will be jumping from a plane to arrive and greet boys and girls. Santa will be arriving by plane at 12:30 p.m. at Pageant Field (weather permitting). Pageant Field is located at One Merrymount Parkway, Quincy. Costume characters will join Santa and will be handing out candy canes to those in attendance.

Wrapping up the City of Quincy Christmas celebration weekend will be the 62nd annual Quincy Christmas Parade. The chosen parade theme for this year is "An Old Fashioned Christmas." The parade has over 100 units which include high school and adult marching bands from around the state, Christmas-themed floats, and many more exciting entries. In keeping with the parade theme, the Grand Marshals have been selected remembering the old fashioned values of "The Greatest Generation."

This years Grand Marshals are three Quincy residents who are all veterans of World War II. They are: Robert G. Noble, an Army Air Force veteran, and former Prisoner of War; John M. Gillis, a U.S. Marine veteran; and Francis X. Bellotti, a veteran of the U.S. Navy. The parade will start in Quincy Center at Hannon Parkway and continue north-bound through the city on Hancock Street ending at North Quincy High School.

More details of the city's holiday festivities will be published in next week's Quincy Sun. The Sun will be published Monday and circulated Tuesday - a day early because of the Thanksgiving Day holiday next Thursday, Nov. 27.

those in need."

Donations from the Kettle Campaign fund a variety of local services, including The Salvation Army's preschool program here in Quincy. The Salvation Army expects that the number of people in need across the Commonwealth will be at or near record levels this year. This holiday season is also one of the shortest ever, with fewer days between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

"With the short holiday season it's critical that we get off to a strong start this year," added Captain Nicole Ross. "We are fortunate to live in such a caring and supportive community and we're asking our fellow residents to help us achieve a successful Red Kettle Campaign in Quincy."

The Salvation Army Quincy Corps with the assistance of area business have located kettles in the following locations:

Stop & Shop and Shaw's/Star Markets in the Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, and Hingham area as well as Roche Brothers and Walmart in Quincy. Other locations include the South Shore Plaza and Kmart in Braintree and the Walmart in Weymouth. Online Red Kettle donations can be made at www.salvationarmyma.org/Quincy.

There will also be a Salvation Army kettle outside The Quincy Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Center, on Tuesday, Nov. 25 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and outside Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St. on Friday, Dec. 12th from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Community leaders including elected officials are being invited to help man and fill the kettles on Nov. 25th and Dec. 12th. Those who would like to stop by Nov. 25th or Dec. 12th and ring the bell and make a donation to the Salvation Army should email Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth at thequincysun@verizon.net.

Salvation Army officials stress that any contribution will help — and donations of time are accepted as gratefully as donations of money.

"Reaching out to those in need by volunteering to ring bells is a wonderful way to connect with the community, to give back, to share blessings, and to be blessed in return," said Captain Timothy Ross. To volunteer this Christmas season, contact Captain Timothy Ross at 617-472-2345.

The Red Kettle tradition began in 1891 when Salvation Army Captain Joseph McFee wanted to help feed needy citizens in San Francisco. McFee remembered the ferry landings in Liverpool England, where people would sit with small kettles that travelers would toss spare change into to help the less fortunate. Placing his own kettle on Market Street in Oakland, California, McFee was able to help individuals on Christmas. The idea traveled to Boston in 1897 and the Red Kettle Campaign has been a tradition ever since.

Quincy Community Action Awarded Grant To Assist Struggling Homeowners

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) has been selected to lead a new initiative in Norfolk County working directly with families and individuals facing foreclosure.

The Community Based HomeCorps grant will expand the organization's current work providing advocacy for loan modifications and homelessness prevention services to residents.

"The HomeCorps program assures that QCAP can provide a critical lifeline to homeowners facing foreclosure," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP's Executive Director. "Through this program, we can help educate homeowners about their options and rights, advocate on behalf of our clients with mortgage lenders, and help clients through the transition from homeownership to prevent them from becoming homeless."

The program, known as Community Based HomeCorps, will focus on assisting residents with loan modification related services, including counseling to help homeowners understand their rights and options, and advocacy with mortgage lenders. In addition, QCAP will provide budgeting and financial counseling, homelessness prevention and stabilization services, and will connect residents to other resources, including health care and legal aid. All services will be delivered at no cost to eligible homeowners.

The Community Based HomeCorps program is an extension of the work of the HomeCorps program, launched by the Massachusetts Attorney General in 2012. The HomeCorps program will use funds recovered from the National Mortgage Settlement, the nationwide state-federal settlement over unlawful foreclosures, to accomplish their ultimate goal of keeping people in their homes and preventing homelessness. The statewide program places a total of 19 homeowner advocates in 12 regions to help mitigate foreclosures.

In a competitive process, QCAP was selected by the Massachusetts Attorney General's office and Citizens' Housing and Planning Association (CHAPA) to be the sole HomeCorps agency providing services to residents in Norfolk County. The Program provides comprehensive services throughout the South Shore, offering a range of assistance for homeowners, first time homebuyers, tenants, landlords, and homeless and near homeless families and individuals to secure and stabilize housing.

To date the HomeCorps Program has directly assisted more than 13,300 borrowers in Massachusetts, and helped achieve more than 2,640 permanent loan modifications.

For more information on the Community Based HomeCorps program, call QCAP's Housing Department at 617-657-5376 or visit www.mass.gov/ago/HomeCorps, www.chapa.org/CBHC, and www.qcap.org.

NQHS Class Of '49 Celebrates 65th Reunion and MacGregor's antics in and out of school, saying that the information was confidential because the statute of limitations had yet to expire.

Despite the passage of time, MacGregor was certain of one thing.

"I remember all of my teachers' names," he said proudly.

Wright admitted that he could only remember the names of "the pretty ones," including one teacher he said was named Miss Faulk.

He even remembered that she married a pilot from the Naval Air Station Squantum who used to purposely fly over the school and rev his engine; something that always embarrassed his teacher.

"We'd be sitting in class and look up and she would blush," he said.

The air station is now long gone, having closed in 1953.

"In those days you couldn't teach after you got married," said Wright, adding that things had changed drastically since the late '40s.

"Things are so different now than what they were then," said MacGregor. "All the guys in our class were subject to the draft because there was a draft at that time for Korea, and that's a big difference and they're all volunteers now."

Songs that reached the top of the charts back then included "Buttons and Bows" by Dinah Shore and "Some Enchanted Evening" by Perry Como.

One of Hannon's predecessors as Quincy mayor in 1949 was Charles A. Ross and the president at the time was Harry S. Truman. The city's population was 83,865. Today it's 92,817.

MacGregor added that many of his fellow schoolmates still speak to each other, 65 years after graduating high school.

Cramond said this would be the final reunion of the class of 1949.

"We had a great reunion and the food was delicious," she said.

About $2,000 was donated by those who attended. That money will go directly to a scholarship fund benefitting a North Quincy High School student, said Cramond.

Katherine Quigley Receives Advocacy Award

Katherine Quigley, executive director of the South Shore YMCA's Germantown Neighborhood Center, was recently presented Eastern Bank's 2014 Community Advocacy Award.

Quigley was recognized for her commitment to helping children and families in need and programs she has launched to improve education for children of all ages.

One of the biggest accomplishments that Quigley and her team have recently achieved is the introduction of a new Family Life Long Learning Center. The center includes a GED program and "Career Connections," a program this is focused on helping those with educational or job training skill needs. Currently, the center is focused on helping teens transition to college or the workforce.

"Every year I look back and reflect on all the amazing work and outpouring of pure kindness caring respect from all the staff, board members and volunteers that contribute to giving hope and encouragement to the thousands of families that enter our doors," said Quigley.

"We constantly hear testimonials from teens and families that have shared their stories with us over the years and I know I can speak for everyone when I say it is truly an honor to work with all these wonderful children and their families. Their courage, generosity and spirit is remarkable," she added.

Quigley's team has also consistently provided children with a safe place to play and learn at the Y's camps. Since 2007, camp attendance has grown by 43 percent. More than 250 kids attend the camp programs, and the camp staff is largely populated by young adults who came through the Y's programs as children.

In accordance with the provisions of Chapter 40A, § 11, MGL, the Quincy City Council will hold a public hearing on December 3, 2014 at 7:00 P.M. in Council Chambers, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street., on the application of Avalon Bay Communities, Inc., for a P.U.D. Repairing Cracked Exterior Siding

By Samantha Mazzotta

Q: I noticed recently that something had hit the side of my house and left a crack in the vinyl siding. It looks like just one of the "boards" is damaged, and I don't want water getting inside the walls. Is there a quick way to fix it? -- Maryanne T., Denton, Texas

A: You can put a temporary patch over minimally damaged siding to protect it from the elements, using a matching or near-matching replacement panel purchased from your home-improvement store. It's not an ideal fix, because the seam line will be somewhat obvious and the replacement panel will not match exactly due to the original siding having weathered. It also won't hold for many months, so make plans to have the damaged siding replaced soon.

Besides a replacement panel, you'll need a box cutter, measuring tape, a power drill, a siding riveter and rivets. (In a pinch you can use a staple gun, hot glue, roof patching or nails, but be aware these are not standard siding fasteners.) Set up a sturdy work surface near the repair area to minimize time spent walking back to your workbench.

Measure the damaged area, adding 4-6 inches on either side of the crack. Use this measurement to cut the replacement siding to the same width.

Now, you can just slip the new patch into place over the damaged area. It will stand up slightly from the surrounding siding. To help it sit a little more flush and provide added protection, trim away part of the top and bottom of the patch.

Use the box cutter to trim away the topmost row of holes -- these are punch outs where anchor nails typically go, but you won't be using them. Cut carefully, and then gently snap away the punch outs.

Next, trim away about half of the bottom "lip" of the panel, leaving just a narrow lip to slip around the bottom of the siding it will cover. Again, use the box cutter carefully and be cautious when snapping away the trimmed portion. Here's a video that explains how to do this: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4ch30NCj1b0

Slip the patch into place, tucking the top portion under the siding panel above the damaged spot and pushing the bottom lip into place. Hold the patch in place by drilling a hole through the bottom "lip" of the patch and the bottom of the siding panel it's covering, on either side of the patch about an inch or so in. Then, use the rivet gun to place a rivet in each hole.

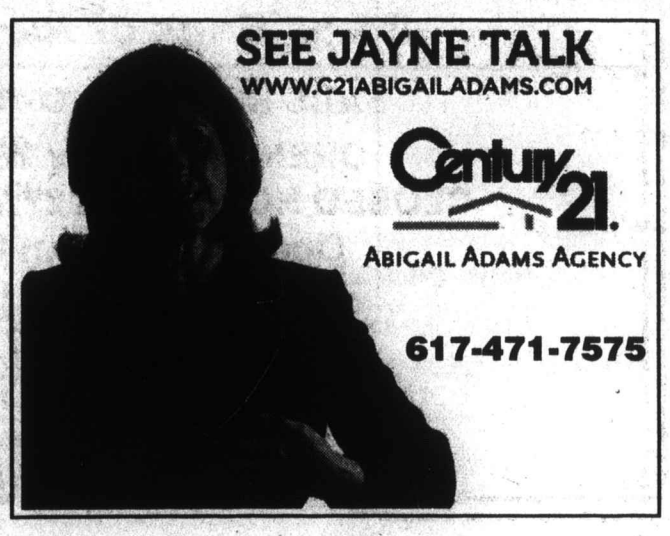

Again, this patch won't hold for too long, so plan on replacing the entire panel as soon as possible.

NeighborWorks Launches 'Home Sweet Home For Vets'

Fundraising Campaign Supports Construction Of 12 New Apartment Homes For Returning Veterans

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. has launched a new fundraising initiative to support the construction of 12 new apartment homes for returning veterans and their families.

Announced Nov. 13 at a Veterans' Day-themed breakfast at the Inn at Bay Pointe, NeighborWorks Southern Mass.' "Home Sweet Home for Veterans" campaign will help fund the construction of 12 new apartments the organization has begun building on East Howard Street in Quincy. The homes will be rented to returning veterans and their families.

"No one that has ever worn the uniform of this great nation should struggle to find a roof over their head," said state Secretary of Veterans' Services Coleman Nee, who joined Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch and NeighborWorks Southern Mass. officials for the announcement. "Massachusetts is the national leader in veterans' services because of so many great organizations like NeighborWorks Southern Mass. By maximizing our state, local and private resources we are able to conceive projects like this that will ensure Massachusetts continues to lead the way and becomes the first state in the nation to end veterans' homelessness."

Attendees also had a chance to hear from David Curtis and Richard Driscoll, two local veterans who currently live in homes built or renovated by NeighborWorks Southern Mass.

"Today's returning veterans have different needs than previous generations," NeighborWorks Southern Mass. Executive Director Robert Corley noted. "Many are older and have families, making it even harder to find a safe, affordable place to call home."

CHRIS HARPER-FAHEY (center) from NeighborWorks America holds her father's burial flag that she presented to officials of NeighborWorks Southern Mass. at the launch of its Home Sweet Homes for Veterans campaign. The flag was her father's burial flag. He was a World War II veteran who worked for 40 years in Veterans Services following his military service during the war. He passed away in 2013 and Chris gifted the flag to the East Howard Street Veterans Homes being built in Quincy. Accepting the flag are David Kilnapp (left), chairman of the board; and Executive Director Robert Corley.

How To Contribute To 'Home Sweet Home'

To make a contribution to the "Home Sweet Home for Veterans" campaign, visit www.nwsoma.org or mail donations made payable to "NeighborWorks Southern Mass." to: Home Sweet Home for Veterans, NeighborWorks Southern Mass., 422 Washington St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Donations may also be made by texting "USAVETS" to 411444.

Veterans' homelessness

The need for more veterans' housing is great, Corley said. According to the National Coalition for the Homeless, 40 percent of all homeless men are veterans and during any given year, 400,000 veterans experience homelessness.

By launching the "Home Sweet Home for Veterans" campaign, Corley said, NeighborWorks Southern Mass. hopes to engage the community in helping to alleviate the shortage of homes for returning veterans.

"Our service men and women sacrifice a lot to protect our freedoms," he said. "When they return home, the least we can do is help them find a decent place to live."

State tax credits

To jumpstart the fundraising campaign, NeighborWorks Southern Mass. hopes to leverage $80,000 in state tax credits the agency received through the state Community Investment Tax Credit Program. Through the program, individuals or businesses that contribute $1,000 or more to the organization will receive a 50 percent state income tax credit plus an additional charitable deduction on their federal tax return. As an example, a donor who contributes $1,000 would be able to claim a $500 credit on their state tax return and an additional $175 charitable deduction on their federal return.

Donors who take advantage of the tax credit program will also be recognized with a commemorative brick at the site of the new veterans' homes.

While the tax credit program is aimed at larger donations, Corley stressed that NeighborWorks Southern Mass. welcomes donations of any amount to the "Home Sweet Home for Veterans" campaign.

"We hope members of the community will say 'thank you' to our veterans by helping us to provide them with a place to call home."

Mountain One Bank was the presenting sponsor for the Home Sweet Home for Veterans launch event. Platinum sponsors included Dedham Savings, Blue Hills Bank and Colonial Federal Savings Bank. Gold sponsors included Walter McKinnon Associates, Weymouth Rotary Club, Bank of Canton and Rockland Trust.

NeighborWorks Southern Mass.'s work on veterans housing issues dates back to 1996, when the organization developed an eight-unit home for veterans in Quincy called the Sheila McIntyre House. Since 2012, the agency has built or renovated four homes on the South Shore for veterans' and their families. The East Howard St. project marks its largest project developed specifically for veterans.

Homebuyer Workshop

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. will offer a two-part workshop for first-time homebuyers, to be held from 5 to 9 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 2 and Thursday, Dec. 4 at the Winter Gardens apartment complex (lower level community room), located at 45 Winter St. in Quincy.

Sponsored by Citizens Bank, the workshop will give participants an opportunity to meet and hear from real estate brokers, insurance agents, attorneys and loan originators. Attendees can also learn about NeighborWorks' down payment assistance programs and speak to a lender about different mortgage options.

The registration fee for the workshops is $20 per person. To register and pay online, visit www.nwsoma.org or call (617) 770-2227 for more information.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On November 7, 2014, at approximately 2:00 P.M., Officers Robert Sweetland, Ron McKim, Brian Mahoney and his K-9 partner Shaggi, along with Sergeant Dan Flaherty, were dispatched to the area of 53 Copeland Street on a report of a "person stabbed." Upon arrival, Officer Sweetland was met by a female well known to the Officers from past incidents and arrests.

While crying and shaken, the female began yelling, "He stabbed me and wouldn't let me go." When asked who stabbed her, she yelled "Gary," who the Officers knew as her long time boyfriend and for his involvement in numerous domestic violence incidents.

Fallon Ambulance arrived on scene and treated the female victim, who sustained a small puncture wound on her left middle finger (inside of hand). Officer Sweetland noted that the victim was carrying a pocketbook that had slice marks in it. The hand and pocketbook were photographed as evidence. The victim told the Officers that her boyfriend Gary was back at their apartment on Roberts Street, adding that he caused damage to numerous items inside the apartment.

As the victim was being treated, she gave her account of what transpired during the day. She said that at approximately 11:00 A.M., she woke up to find the window near her exterior door open. She closed the window and thought nothing of it, until moments later she found her boyfriend in her apartment. They immediately began to argue about an incident that occurred earlier in the morning, where the victim accused the boyfriend of putting a ladder up to her window to gain entry into the apartment. The victim described her boyfriend as "not being himself. He was on something." She tried to keep him calm and this worked briefly. He suddenly became enraged and "put a huge knife up to my throat and said I should just kill you right now." She then tried to leave the apartment, but he refused to leave.

Based on this information, the Officers went to the Roberts Street address, where they surrounded the building. There was a ladder lying on the ground. The Officers knocked on the door numerous times but no one answered, so Officer McKim climbed through an open window that led into the apartment. He then opened the door to let Officer Mahoney in with his dog to search the apartment.

Officer Mahoney yelled numerous times to let any occupants know he was entering with the dog and to come out. There was no response. After a few seconds, the K-9 located the suspect and barked furiously at him while Officer Mahoney yelled at the suspect to show his hands, which he did. Officer McKim then placed the suspect in handcuffs. The suspect said that he was sleeping and did not hear the knocking and dog barking.

After being advised of his Miranda rights, the suspect said he understood and then said he did not want to talk. In the kitchen sink, a large kitchen knife with a black handle was found. Officer Sweetland took possession of the knife and placed it into his locked cruiser. Once at the station, the booking process began, however, the suspect then became uncooperative so the booking stopped. Officer Pantazelos, who was booking the suspect, then observed the suspect spit out two pills from his mouth. They were orange in color.

Meanwhile, Officer Sweetland met with the victim again to inform her that the suspect was under arrest. The victim was now much calmer and was able to continue on with her account of the events. She stated that the suspect threatened her with the knife, so she put her hand up in a defensive position and that is when the knife came in contact with her left hand and caused the puncture wound. She stated again that he put the knife to her throat, adding that he said that she wanted to send him back to jail.

Although she denied this, the suspect would not let her leave the apartment. She also denied letting him in the apartment and said that "he has a million keys to the apartment." The victim said that the suspect passed out so she fled the apartment and ran to her friend's house at on Copeland Street and then notified the police. She described the knife as huge with a black handle, which matched the knife taken as evidence.

Back at the station, the pills were bagged and logged into evidence. The suspect, a 63 year old Quincy resident, was charged with "Assault and Battery by Means of a Dangerous Weapon, to wit a knife, Kidnapping, Assault by Means of a Dangerous Weapon to wit a knife, and Breaking and Entering in the Daytime with Intent to Commit a Felony/put person in fear. The victim said that would go to Quincy District Court to apply for a restraining order. High bail was requested on the suspect due to the violent nature of this incident. Nice Work!

HOLIDAY PARKING: (excerpts from Carinsurance.com) During the holidays, parking is at a premium at stores and malls and this often results in an increase in minor car accidents. It is estimated that one in five car accidents occur in parking lots or parking garages and more than one in 10 accident claims involve parked cars, a statistic that rises during the holidays. Despite the cliché about women being bad drivers, a survey released by CarInsurance.com found that on average, "more men than women have hit carts, poles, cart corrals, cars and pedestrians in parking lots." Women, on the other hand, were more likely to get hit by a car (this includes getting a car door opened into them) in a parking lot. The survey was of 2,000 drivers ages 25 and up (half men, half women) across the nation.

Men may have more problems parking than women

Among people who have been in a parking-lot accident, percent who say this event has happened to them

	Women	Men
I hit another car	33%	37%
I hit a pole	11%	19%
I hit a cart corral	4%	8%
I hit a pedestrian	1%	8%
I hit a cart	5%	12%

Eighty-one Quincy High School students were recently awarded John and Abigail Adams Scholarships.

The scholarship is awarded by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to students who score Advanced and Proficient on the Math and ELA MCAS and their scores place them in the top 25% of the district. The scholarship covers tuition at a Massachusetts state college or university.

The 81 students at Quincy High were given framed certificates to mark their achievement during a ceremony. School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro congratulated the students and shared with them an inspiring story about the second U.S. President, John Adams.

QUINCY CATHOLIC ACADEMY (QCA) recently sponsored a candy drive where students and families donated Halloween candy for Cape Cod Cares for Our Troops Organization. Spearheaded by fourth grader Kate Billard, the candy drive collected enough candy to fill two cars full and were delivered to the Cape Cod 4 Troops based in Brewster. "We are so very proud of Kate and the generosity of all our families," said QCA Principal Cathy Cameron. Cape Cod Cares for Our Troops is a non-profit organization started in 2005 by 12-year-old Dylan DeSilva. Dylan wanted to find a way to honor our troops for their service, dedication and sacrifices to our country. With the help of his family and friends he sends care packages to our Troops in Iraq and Afghanistan on a weekly basis. At the request of our Troops, Dylan also sends items to schools, orphanages, medical and dental clinics in both Iraq and Afghanistan.

Red Raiders Battle But Bow To Hingham, 28-13

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was a tale of two halves.

In the first half, North Quincy's interior defense controlled the game. The Red Raiders held Hingham scoreless, did not permit a first down until the final 30 seconds of the half, and were the foundation of a seven-point lead at intermission.

In the second half, Hingham spread out its running game. The Harbormen ran their sweeps effectively, and scored 21 unanswered points in the third period, including two touchdowns just over a minute apart, to rally past North, 28-13 in a non-league contest Friday on Senior Night at a frigid Veterans Stadium.

"I thought our defense played very well in the first half. We controlled the line of scrimmage, and we didn't let them get off the ball," said North coach Mark Nutley whose club fell to 2-8 with the loss and will finish its season Thanksgiving against Quincy.

In the first half, Hingham ran mainly between the tackles. North gave nothing. Linemen Alex Chen, Conor Pound, Nick Manning and Derek Huynh along with linebackers Marcello Toscanini, Zack Dangora and Dayvon Jones stuffed the run and allowed just 25 yards on the ground over the first two quarters.

Take away two desperation passes in the final seconds before intermission, and Hingham's deepest penetration of the half was the North 41. That drive covered all of eight yards. When Hingham got to the North five late in the dying seconds of the half, Toscanini sacked quarterback Kevin Shoyer for a six-yard loss on the final play before intermission.

Quarterback Andrew Kiley supplied the offense with a fourth-down quarterback sneak from the two, and the Red Raiders were up, 7-0 at the break.

"We not only got good initial contact, we got a lot of people to the ball in the first half," said Nutley.

The Harbormen adjusted after intermission and went outside with the sweep to either side. Senior Ryan Maguire did most of the damage on cutbacks after North's outside defenders shut off the corners. Hingham ran for 249 yards after intermission.

Shoyer scored on a two-yard run with 5:46 left in the third, and Maguire raced in from 49 yards off a reverse just 1:02 later. Shoyer scored from the one with 15 seconds left in the period for a 21-7 lead.

"Our outside linebackers did a good job turning the play inside, but we didn't get enough help from the inside," said Nutley. "We ended up with our safeties making most of the tackles, and that's not what we want."

Kiley was terrific for North. He had 11 completions for 130 yards and a touchdown. He ran one in from the two. He had runs from scrimmage of 26 and 24 yards. He was strong and accurate both from the pocket and and on roll-outs to either side. When given time, he threw with touch and confidence. Take away several drops and he easily could have thrown for 200 yards.

"Andrew throws a nice ball. He had a good night, and we must have had seven drops," said Nutley.

Kiley's short and mid-range game was excellent. He threw crossing routes and deep fades. He spread the ball around to three capable receivers: Eric Cohane-Jones (four catches, 45 yards), Solomon Umoren (three catches, 46 yards, one TD) and Aidan Brown (three catches, 30 yards). If North fans are looking for reason for hope on Thanksgiving, it is with Kiley and the passing game.

"When we handle the rush and give him time to throw, Andrew can make all the passes," said Nutley.

North went up 7-0 late in the second period on 59-yard, 13-play drive. Kiley found Umoren (21 yards) and Cohane-Jones (23 yards) breaking clear across the middle for big gains. He found Cohane-Jones with a perfectly-timed, come-back route for 11 yards on fourth-and-eight to the Hingham 20.

On fourth down from the two, he burrowed in for the TD behind the blocking of Fred Barsamian, Pound and Huynh for as 6-0 lead. Dara Griffin kicked the point for a 7-0 advantage.

"We're fortunate because we have balance in our passing game," said Nutley. "We have three good receivers for Andrew to throw to and he used all three well tonight."

After Hingham went up, 21-7, Kiley brought North close early in the fourth, engineering a 79-yard, 11-play drive to cut lead to 21-13 with 8:56 left. He found Cohane-Jones twice (14 and nine yards) and Brown for 13. Kiley flew around the right side on a sweep for 24 yards. He finished the drive with a four-star, 14-yard fade pass to Umoren in the back corner of the end zone which looked like something shown on television on Sunday afternoons.

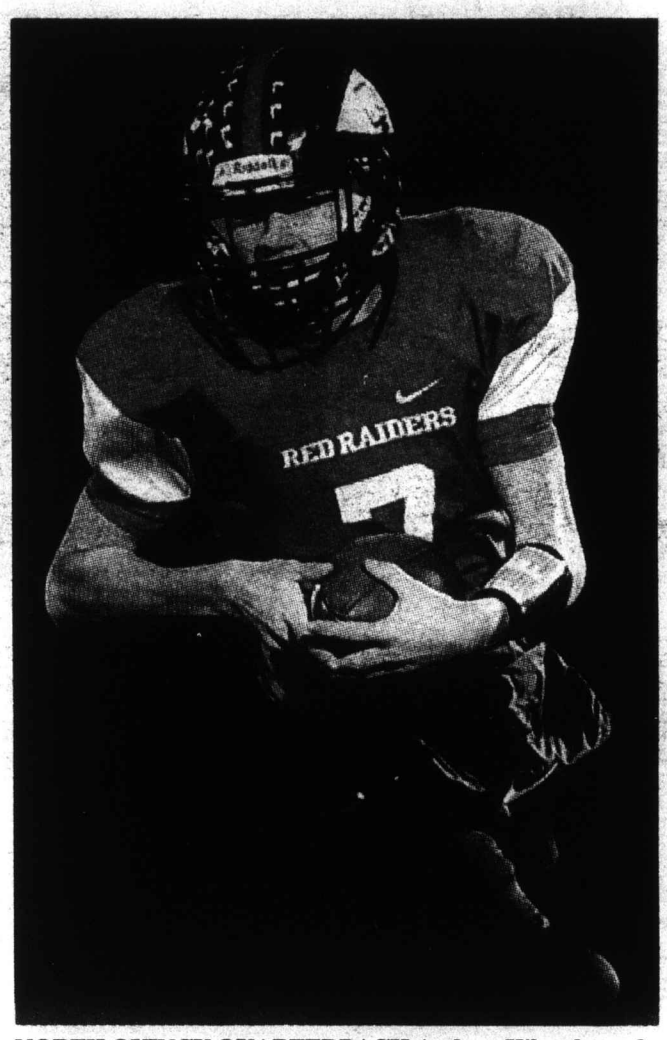

"That fade route was a perfect pass. Andrew put it right there, and Solomon made a nice catch," said Nutley.

Maguire scored on a six-yard run with 3:18 left for a 28-13 Hingham lead which put away the game.

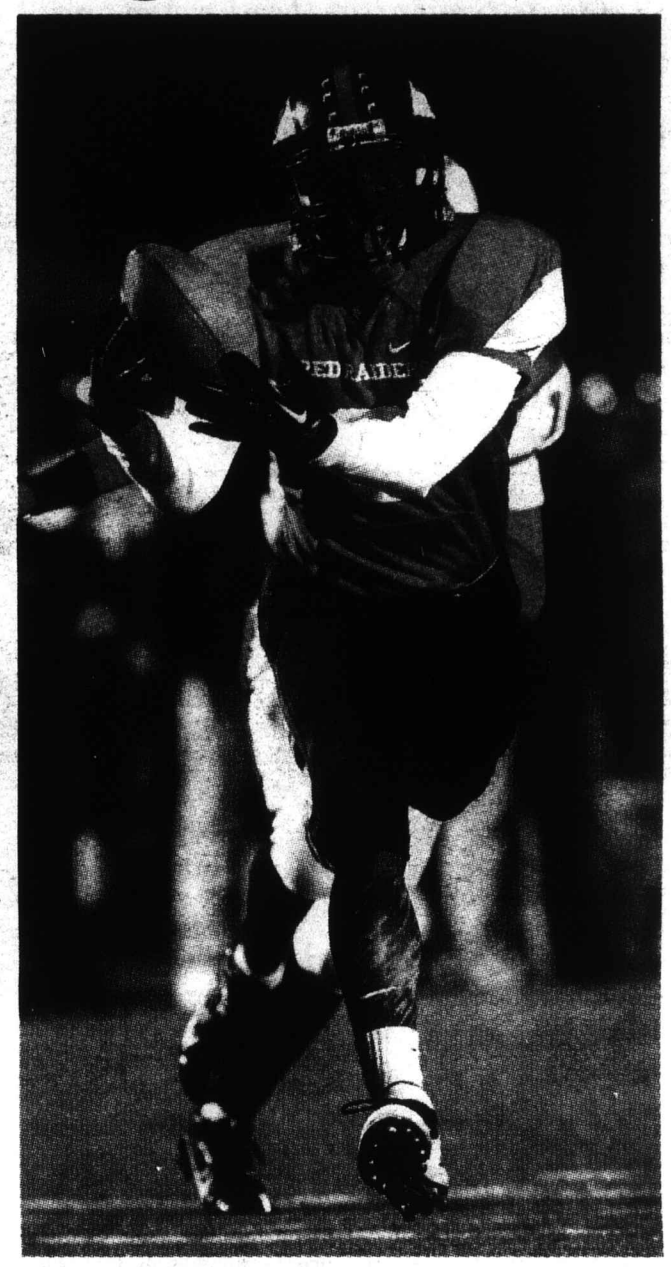

In the end, the bright spots were the inside defense and the passing game. North needs to work on handling the sweep and establishing the run to balance out its offense for the Quincy game.

"We need to run the ball better" said Nutley. "We have a good back (Dayvon Jones). It's a matter of holding our blocks for a half-second longer to get him a hole or blocking the back-side tackle who comes around and makes the tackle. We missed too many assignments."

In a ceremony before the game, a member of the United States Army presented Dangora a plaque for best representing on his team the core values of the army.

NORTH QUINCY QUARTERBACK Andrew Kiley threw for 130 yards and a touchdown and ran for another score from the 2-yard line but the Red Raiders bowed to Hingham 28-13 last Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. North Quincy closes out the season with its traditional game against the Quincy Presidents Thanksgiving Day morning at 10 a.m. next Thursday, Nov. 27. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

SOLOMON UMOREN had three catches, including this 21-yard reception that set up North Quincy's first touchdown Friday night. Umoren also caught at TD pass in the second half against Hingham.

Emily Bryson Secures Top Spot Among NQ Distance Runners

Sister Julia Joins Ranks Among The State's Best

By JOE REARDON

One sister further entrenched herself as her school's greatest distance runner ever and the other ran the race of her life for the second week in a row to join the ranks as one of the best cross country runners in the state.

Emily and Julia Bryson proved to be twin trouble for the Div. 1 field at Saturday's MIAA All-State Cross Country Championships on the race weary Franklin Park layout.

Emily followed up her second-place finish in the Div. 2 race at the EMass Championships with a fourth-place showing at the state meet, battling with a half dozen runners through the Wilderness section of the 3.1-mile course on the way to fourth place in 18:30. Emily's gritty finish mirrored her fourth-place performance a year ago on the Gardner Golf Course.

Julia's race turned into another defining moment to go with her finish at Wrentham a week earlier in the EMass meet where she cracked the top 10 against a deep field to take eighth place. She found herself at the back of huge lead pack and where she settled before moving up over the final mile and a half to take 10th in 19:01.

North Quincy head coach Geoff Hennessy couldn't have asked for more from the twins in the biggest meet of the season. "It's just fantastic," he said. "We're just super pleased. It's the culmination of a great season. They've done everything for four years that we've asked. It's been a learning process. There was gradual improvement year after year and here we are."

Julia's performance was truly sweet after getting knocked out of contention last year when she got tripped up by another runner and finished well back in the pack. "I really wanted to get in the top 15 last, but I didn't have a good race," she said.

The combination of a pedestrian 5:51 opening mile and no runner wanting to force the pace resulted in an enormous pack of nearly 25 runners. With little room to maneuver, Julia was content to bide her time and let the race unfold in front of her.

"It was really hard to pass people the first mile," Julia said. "You had to weave in and out."

The pace quickened the second mile, but not by much, with Julia running comfortably in the second group. She was still within striking distance of the leaders after navigating Bear Cage Hill and heading towards the 2 mile mark before entering the tranquil Wilderness section of the course.

"I could see Emily all the way to the second mile," Julia said. "I was surprised that they were all still packed together."

Julia began to move hard coming out of the Wilderness and passed three runners on the short uphill heading onto the Overlook loop to the finish line. She sprinted home and assured herself a spot in the top 10.

Hennessy wasn't surprised with Julia's sterling performance, especially after she battled her way to a top 10 performance in the EMass race. "Julia suddenly became another player and took a step up," said Hennessy. "She broke 19 minutes (at EMass) and thought, 'I'm a big gun too.' Sometimes it's a confidence factor. Sometimes it's a fitness factor. Julia made a huge leap over the last two weeks and it's great to see."

Emily was in the front row of the pack through the mile and when it was whittled down to a dozen runners at 2 miles. Runner-up Ariel Keklak of Lincoln-Sudbury made the big move into the Wilderness and Emily reacted almost immediately, thinning the pack to herself, Keklak, Kaley Richards of Lowell, Needham's Margie Cullen and Sarah Armstrong and Rebecca Grusby of Newton South. Emily surged hard to drop Cullen, Armstrong and Grusby and held onto fourth over the final 300 meters.

"There was such a big pack," said Emily. "I tried to pick it up a little bit, but I didn't want to lead the rest of the way. It seemed like no one wanted to lead. Once we got into the (Wilderness) we definitely picked up the pace. Right up here (the Overlook) I tried to pick it up again. The last half mile I couldn't respond with that change of pace."

Hennessy was pleased that Emily did as much as she could do to crack the top five. "It was great," he said. "This is what big time cross country looks like. You have a big pack at the mile, a smaller pack at the 2 mile and then it's a jailbreak. Whoever reacts wins. Emily did react. She was right there the whole way."

Hennessy knows he'll be losing two very special athletes in the Brysons come June after the indoor and spring track seasons. "They won't be easy holes to fill," he said. "They won't be filled. Clearly, Emily is the greatest distance runner in the history of North Quincy High. We had wonderful success back in the 1980s and she's surpassed those things. They show up every day to work. They give you good feedback. They've never backed down from a workout. What can I say? There's a million positives for both of them.

"Every kid on the team looks up to them. They're tough to emulate, obviously, because they do so many things the right way."

NORTH QUINCY High School elite runners Julia (center) and Emily Bryson finished in 10th and 4th place respectively at the All-State Cross-Country Championships Saturday. With them is Coach Geoff Hennessy.

One Play Foils Presidents

By BILL GRIFFIN

One play.

A cold afternoon of exciting, roller-coaster football between two fine teams came down to one play. Quincy trailed by seven. The ball was on the Mansfield five. It was fourth down. There were five seconds left in the game.

One play.

Quarterback James Lam started to roll left. He saw the defense stacked against him, pivoted and saved the play. He swung back right and drove for the right sideline. Pass or run? Few do both better. He had less than an instant to decide. He fired a dart to the back of the end zone which missed connecting with Alex Leo by the slimmest of margins.

Game over. One play. Six inches. Football can be a cruel game.

Mansfield survived with a 21-14 decision over the Presidents in the Division 2 South Sectional consolation bracket Saturday at Veterans Stadium in wonderful game that had more twists and turns than a downhill country road in the black of night.

"We always give James the option because he's such a double threat," said Quincy coach Bill Reardon. "They over-loaded left, so he had to come back right. One defender stayed at home, so James couldn't run. He and Alex just missed."

Just a few minutes earlier, any thought of high drama at the end of the game seemed unlikely. Brian Lynch scored on an 11-yard run with 1:41 left to put Mansfield up, 21-14. Two plays later with just over a minute left, Quincy was trapped in a third-and-ten at its 25. Surely, it was over.

"After the game, I told the kids how proud I was of them. They competed until the last play. That's all a coach can ask," said Reardon whose team is 7-3 and will face North Quincy Thanksgiving morning.

Lam squirted free from a blitz and hit Jahvae Handsom-Fields in the flat. Handsom-Fields stepped through two defenders and tight-roped the sideline for a first at the 38. Lam hit Redah Laftih in full stride on a crossing route to the Mansfield 29 with 0:45 left. The Presidents were still breathing.

A defensive holding call in the end zone, which likely prevented Laftih from catching the tying touchdown, moved the ball to the 14. On third, Lam swept right to the five and found the sideline to stop the clock. There were five seconds left. Fourth down. Five yards. One play.

"It came down to a couple of plays which we just didn't make," said Reardon.

After a pair of turnovers stopped two sustained Quincy drives early in the first half, Mansfield went up, 7-0 at intermission on a one-yard run by quarterback Matt Carafa with 38 seconds left in the second period.

"The turnovers gave them an edge in time of possession. I thought we were starting to move on them offensively, but we hurt ourselves with mistakes," said Reardon.

At halftime, Reardon made a decision. Quincy would run the ball. Right at them. Nothing fancy. Just old-fashioned, knock-down football. He went to the power-I, put offensive guard Steve Scolaro in the backfield, and followed a wise, old coaching commandment: When you have a great back, give him the ball.

In the first half, Handsom-Fields carried four times for 17 yards. On one drive in the third, he carried eight times for 45 yards. There were eight plays on the drive. He carried on all of them and went in from the six behind Abraham Hoti, Leo, and Scolaro with 3:52 left in the third. Laftih's kick tied it at 7-7.

"We wanted establish something and run the ball. That's what we talked about at the half," said Reardon. "Jahvae sets up his blocks so well."

Mansfield went up, 14-7 early in the fourth on a 24-yard run by Connor Finnerty.

Midway through the period, Mike Munroe, another monster two-way game on the line, recovered a fumbled punt at the Mansfield 42. Handsom-Fields (88 yards on 15 carries) and Lam (61 yards rushing, five completions for 73 yards) kept the drive alive with clutch plays.

On third-and 14, Handsom-Fields carried four defenders nine yards – no kidding-- to the Mansfield 37. On fourth, Lam found Laftih (four catches, 60 yards) for nine yards and a first. On the next play, Lam read the defense, checked to a quarterback sneak, slipped between Munroe and left guard Nick Fahey, and raced untouched for 19 yards and the TD. Big players make big-time plays.

Laftih's kick was true and tied it at 14-14.

"James is so smart that he always has the option to check at the line of scrimmage. He sees everything and he reads the defense well," said Reardon.

Carafa hit passes of 24, 23, 22 and nine yards on a nine-play drive to give Mansfield a 21-14 lead in the final two minutes and set up the final drama.

"We had good position on a couple of those passes. We were right there. We just didn't make the plays," said Reardon.

Munroe, Isiah Uzamere, Curtis Calley and William Young had huge games up front for the Presidents who out-hit Mansfield despite going with a short roster. Wide receivers J.T. Bain, Andrew Cook and linebacker Jake Bergonzi were out with injuries.

"I thought we won the physical battle," said Reardon. "Mansfield is a good team with a great program. The game came down to two or three plays, and Mansfield made them."

VOICE FOR HEALTH

THE ROADMAP TO HEALTH

If you were to look at a chart of the human nervous system, you would see a virtual roadmap to health. The brain exerts its control over the body by sending electrical messages through the spinal cord, which subdivides into multiple nerves that pass through the vertebrae and extend to every cell, organ, and system in the body. As long as the flow of nervous energy is allowed to run uninterrupted, it will direct the proper function of every bit of tissue it reaches. However, if this energy is impeded by a restriction anywhere along its route, it will disrupt function in much the same way that a blocked highway will limit the flow of traffic.

Your spine protects your nervous system which controls and coordinates all the different functions of your body. Any disruption in nerve communication to your organs and tissues may result in abnormal function. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we help restore normal nerve function and communication, thereby allowing your body to work normally and naturally. At 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, we will inform you about the services we offer and hopefully answer any questions you may have. For gentle and safe chiropractic care, call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. To keep the body working the way nature intended, chiropractic treatment acts to remove nerve blockages and restrictions primarily in the spine, where misaligned vertebrae might restrict energy flow.

Four plays later, Myers RB Tran ran for a 6-yard TD. Kicker Eion Gormley add the 2-point conversion kick as Team Myers took the lead, 14-6.

Local Author to Speak at St. Agatha Church About Miraculous Cure at Medjugorje

On Sunday, Dec. 14, well-known author Arthur Boyle will speak on his experience of being healed at Medjugorje, Bosnia-Herzegovina. He is the author of Six Months to Live: Three Guys on the Ultimate Quest for a Miracle. The event starts at 6:30 p.m. at St. Agatha Church, 432 Adams St., Milton.

In 1999, Boyle was diagnosed with renal cell carcinoma (kidney cancer) that spread to his lungs. The doctors gave him less than 5% chance for survival. At the urging of two dear friends, he went to Medjugorje, an apparition site of the Blessed Virgin Mary that began in 1981. It was in Medjugorje that Boyle believes he was healed by Jesus through the intercession of Mary and by way of the sacrament of reconciliation and the power of forgiveness. His book tells the story of his miraculous recovery.

ARTHUR BOYLE

This event is free and open to the public. However, following Artie's talk there will be an opportunity to make a free-will donation to St. Agatha Parish's project to feed the poor in Burkina Faso, Africa. The church hopes to raise $5,000 to feed 10,000 people, and on April 11, 2015, parishioners will package meals of rice and vitamins through the Helping Hands program sponsored by Catholic Relief Services and Stop Hunger Now.

400 Residential Units Proposed Downtown

these projects built," Quincy Mutual Executive Vice President Jim Moran said.

"For Quincy Mutual this is all about community reinvestment and revitalization of our downtown. Our hope is with the cooperation of civic and business leaders in the city, together the West of Chestnut and East of Chestnut projects will re-energize and jumpstart the overall downtown redevelopment project and help inspire other projects elsewhere in the greater Quincy Center area."

Quincy Mutual and Gate Residential will file for permits this week to begin construction of the West of Chestnut proposal. The project will require approval from the city's Planning Board; a presentation of the proposal is expected to take place before the board on Dec. 10 followed by a public hearing in January.

The companies hope to break ground on West of Chestnut next spring. Kyle Warwick – the principal at Redgate, Gate Residential's parent company – said construction should take 18 months with an expected opening in the summer of 2016. The project will create 150 construction jobs; it hasn't been determined if union or non-union labor will be used.

West of Chestnut will feature two six-story buildings – one on Hancock Street with 65 units and the other on Chestnut Street with 104 units. Those units will range in size from studios to two-bedrooms. Rents, according to Warwick, will be half as expensive as those seen in Boston. Tenants residing in those buildings will have access to a café, club suite, fitness center, yoga studio, and media room, among other amenities.

A new public street – known as Chestnut Way – will run from Chestnut Street to Hancock Street. Located off of that new street will be an outdoor courtyard space, featuring an outdoor kitchen and play lawn, as well park space with trees. Warwick said the space on the ground level is most important to the project.

"The most important aspect is going to be the public realm and what the ground plane feels like and how we set the stage and set the standard for future development to march down Hancock and march down Chestnut," he explained.

"It's the sidewalks. It's the curbs. It's the retail spilling out."

West of Chestnut also includes an underground parking structure, with room for about 90 vehicles. An additional 14 vehicles will be able to park in new spaces above ground.

Local business leaders were present for Tuesday's announcement. Peter Foreman, the president and CEO of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, said projects such as West of Chestnut will lead the area's economic growth.

"The success of the South Shore's economic growth is going to be led through residential development on the South Shore with exactly the type of product you're proposing here," he explained, noting it will target younger professionals.

"QUINCY MUTUAL has invested more than $23 million to date and we're prepared to invest more to get these projects built," Quincy Mutual Executive Vice President Jim Moran said as plans to build 400 residential units and thousands of square feet of new retail space in Quincy Center were unveiled at a press conference Tuesday. At right is a rendering of West of Chestnut, a six-story building that will be built on Hancock Street near the Granite Trust Building.

"We are thrilled to see a proposal take off for this, leading not with commercial development but with residential development and the amenities we think are going to be a gateway to the entire South Shore for broader economic growth."

Dean Rizzo, Foreman's counterpart at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, said Tuesday's announcement means a lot for businesses and employees who call Quincy Center home.

"I am excited to be here today to celebrate this great announcement with you. I'm even more enthused on behalf of the hundreds of companies located in Quincy Center and the thousands of employees that work day-to-day in downtown Quincy," Rizzo said.

"This announcement and future announcements... will be the shot in the arm to keep them going and assure them they made the right investment in the future of Quincy Center."

Quincy Mutual has been located in the city since the company was founded in 1851. K. Douglas Briggs, the company's president and CEO, was away on business Tuesday but said in a prepared statement that what happens in Quincy has always been important to the company.

"Quincy is our hometown," Briggs said. "More than half of our employees are residents of Quincy and adjacent communities, so what happens here has always been important to our company and the community. We are now partnered for West of Chestnut with a developer in which we have great confidence."

In addition to Quincy Mutual and Gate Residential, the project team includes Quincy-based architectural firm Sheskey Architects, interior design firm Duffy Design Group and the retail urban advisory and investment firm Graffito SP, a firm that specializes in cities, food, arts, people, context, creativity and responsibility. The team also features landscape architect Landworks Studio, Inc.

Gate Residential is based in Boston. Its parent company, Redgate, was chosen earlier this year by the mayor to advise the city on downtown redevelopment going forward. Redgate is also developing a mixed-use development in Marina Bay.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) There could be an unexpected change in plans for your upcoming holiday travels. But keep in mind that a little flexibility goes a long way in resolving any disappointments.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A new relationship might not be responding quite as quickly as you'd hoped. Could you be expecting too much too soon? Try to ease up and let things happen at their own pace.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) As we approach the frenetic pace of pre-holiday planning, take time out now to reconnect with the wonderful people who share your life, especially the one who also shares your dreams.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A misunderstanding should be resolved before you get caught up in the flurry of holiday preparations. Set your pride aside and deal with it, regardless of who might have hurt whom first.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Being told that a colleague might have been trying to undercut your effectiveness might or might not be true. Get all the facts before you even think about acting on this so-called information.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's a good idea to start your holiday preparation plans early in order to avoid a time crunch if an unresolved workplace situation causes a problem. That old friend might have some welcome news.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A family member's actions continue to surprise you, but this time with positive results. Could be your wise counsel finally got through. It's like having an early holiday gift, isn't it?
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your reluctance to act in a current situation could be traced to your inner self advising you to take more time to study its complexities before you attempt to deal with it. Good luck.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Soothing hurt feelings before they can ignite an angry outburst is the wise thing to do. And, of course, when it comes to doing the "wisdom thing," you do it so well.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Budget your time so that you can handle both your workplace duties and your personal holiday planning -- including travel arrangements -- without burning out on either end.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might find that you still need to firm up one or two of those still-outstanding decisions so that you finally can move forward as you had planned. Weigh the facts, then act.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You usually don't carry grudges, but you might feel this is one time when you're justified in doing so. But aren't you spending too much energy holding onto it? Let it go and move on.
BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of using your quiet strength to persuade people to follow their better instincts and do the right thing.

'Old Fashioned Christmas' To Feature More Than 100 Units • Steps Off At 12:30 A.M.

By SCOTT JACKSON

The 62nd Annual Quincy Christmas Parade steps off at 12:30 p.m. Sunday. The parade will feature more than 100 units – including bands, floats, and other special units – all decorated to reflect this year's theme, "Old Fashioned Christmas."

For the first time in many years, the parade will include three grand marshals. Each grand marshal is a member of the "Greatest Generation," – local veterans who served during World War II. Robert Noble, an ex-prisoner of war, will represent the Army; John Gillis, a Norfolk County commissioner and former Quincy city clerk, will represent the Marine Corps; and Francis X. Bellotti, a former lieutenant governor and attorney general of Massachusetts, will represent the Navy.

Sunday's parade will step off at 12:30 p.m. at the intersection of Hancock Street and Hannon Parkway. The parade will continue north along Hancock Street for three miles before it ends at North Quincy High School. The parade awards ceremony will be held inside the high school following the parade.

STARRY NIGHT

If any manmade object comes close to approximating the look of lapis lazuli, it is Vincent Van Gogh's famous oil-on-canvas painting "The Starry Night." Both feature an incomparable deep-blue background, upon which shimmering stars reveal their light. Moreover, Old Master painters used to grind up the gemstone and combine it with binding agents to make the blue-pigmented paints that adorned their master works. Aside from being absolutely beautiful, lapis lazuli also counts among the first gemstones to be worn as jewelry. The opaque blue gemstone was traded as long as 4,000 years ago among Mediterranean merchants. Then, as today, this beautiful stone draws the eye and holds it in much the same way that a clear blue sky does.

The majority of gems can be divided into precious and semi-precious categories. The term "precious" is reserved for the most rare and expensive of gems. These include diamonds, emeralds, rubies, pearls and sapphires. Most remaining gems - including varieties of quartz like Amethyst, Citrine and Bloodstone - are semi-precious. You will find a lovely selection of birthstone jewelry, diamond engagement rings, pendants, watches and earrings at our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. Walking In A Firefighter's Boots

To paraphrase American novelist Harper Lee, if you want to understand – and appreciate – the firefighting profession, you need to walk in their boots.

That's exactly what a group of elected officials, city workers and this media member did on a cool but sunny November morning recently at the Quincy Fire Department's training facility at the Fore River Shipyard.

To a man – and the two women – the experience was eye-opening, exhilarating and – for the older ranks - exhausting. For over two hours, we donned protective clothing, helmets and air masks and tanks and performed a myriad of firefighter duties in simulated – and we can't emphasize this enough – controlled tactical exercises.

The "recruits" crawled on their knees in a blackened maze looking for a fire "victim," ascended an aerial ladder, pried open a fire door, sprayed water on a car that was torched and my favorite, utilized the 40-pound hydraulic life-saving "Jaws of Life" tool to rescue a car accident "victim." I also enjoyed "creasing" a car roof with an ax before it was folded back like a can of sardines.

All of the exercises were conducted at the fire department's training facility at the shipyard. It is a valuable resource to the department and the city and firefighters are grateful that the shipyard's owner, automobile dealer and businessman Dan Quirk, allows the department use of the facility at zero cost.

The facility once served as the shipyard's fire department before it closed. Today, the building houses two department mechanics where most of the repairs and upkeep of apparatus are done in-house. The second floor has classroom space featuring a small pipe that can billow theatrical smoke to simulate a real fire. Part of the exercise for the "recruits" was hauling a charged (filled) hose on their knees through the "smoke" to an open window where the hose was discharged outdoors.

The maze was intriguing and admittedly a little intimidating. Before entering the maze, we learned about a "right-hand" search where basically you follow the right side of a building (walls, door frames) with your hand until you reach an opening that is presumably a bedroom. The maze is dark – but not as dark as it is for real recruits. They enter the maze with their air masks completely blacked out so that they can't see a thing in front of them.

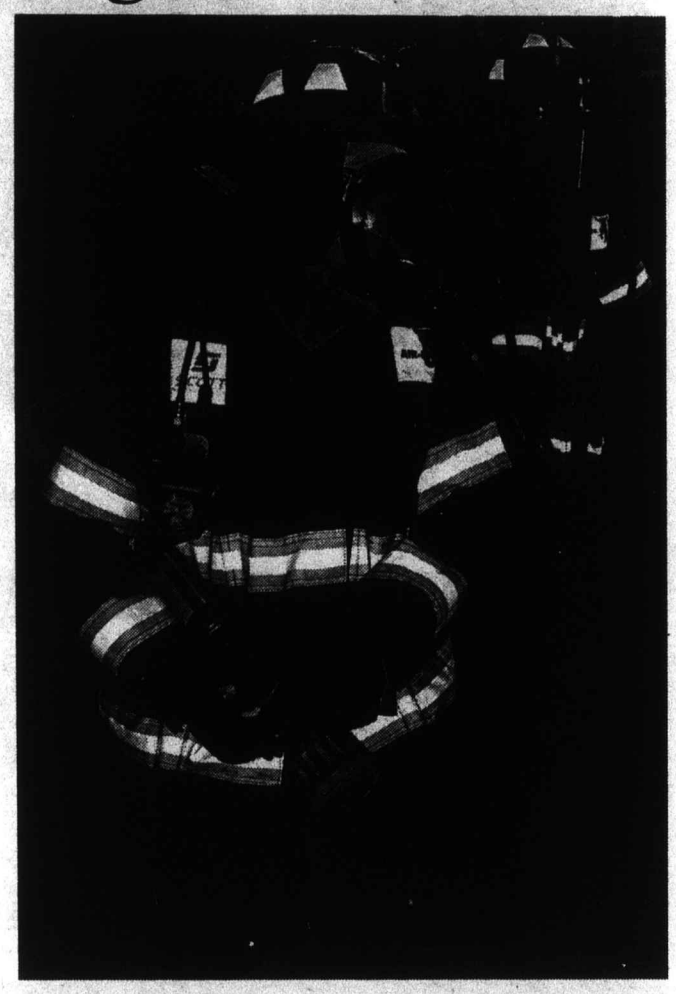

The maze is a tight squeeze with several twists and turns. Behind me was Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin. Recruits are taught to communicate with their fellow firefighters and to follow the right-hand search so that they do not become disoriented in the maze. One way is tapping on their boots or tugging on their pants to ensure they stay together. I led the way in and Kevin led us out of the maze (thanks Kevin!).

Lt. Michael Palaza of Ladder 2 in Wollaston said the training program is intended to give community leaders, decision makers and the media a better understanding of what firefighters do simply by doing it themselves.

"We also want to build relationships," Lt. Palaza, a 13-year veteran of the Quincy Fire Department, said. "At times, we will go before city, state and federal officials and address certain issues whether it be training, equipment or legislation. This program was constructed by the International Association of Firefighters to help in that process of understanding."

The exercise underscores the fact that firefighting is a tough, labor-intensive job and demands teamwork and trust.

"The training exercise spotlights what our job is by doing it," said Capt. Rich Bryan, an 18-year department veteran who serves as the Hazardous Materials Officer and training coordinator.

QUINCY SUN Publisher Robert Bosworth (foreground) and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin (background) were among a host of community leaders who recently participated in a Quincy Fire Department training exercise at the Fore River shipyard. Here Bosworth and Coughlin prepare to enter a smoke-filled room on their knees with a fire hose.

"You can't make a good firefighting movie because you can't see things. We work in a lot of times a zero-visibility arena. You can't make a movie out of that. We smoked that room out to give it some theatrical effect but it just adds to the difficulty of doing it.

"Everybody can tell us that our job is labor intensive and everything is heavy and is hard to pull and move – whether they are hoses full of water or the 40-pound 'Jaws of Life.' To say it's tough or heavy is one thing but then go and pick it up," Bryan said.

The one-day, two-and-a-half hour exercise is a snap shot of the actual 10-week training academy that new recruits undertake. One item that may be added to future training exercises is utilizing a fire extinguisher.

"You get a good sense of heat from fire because you have to get a little bit closer using an extinguisher than you would with a hose," Lt. Palaza said.

The "recruits" had help – but it was from a distance. Each was assigned a fire department "wrangler" who helped teach their recruit about the task at hand. But by design, they did not assist in the actual execution of that task.

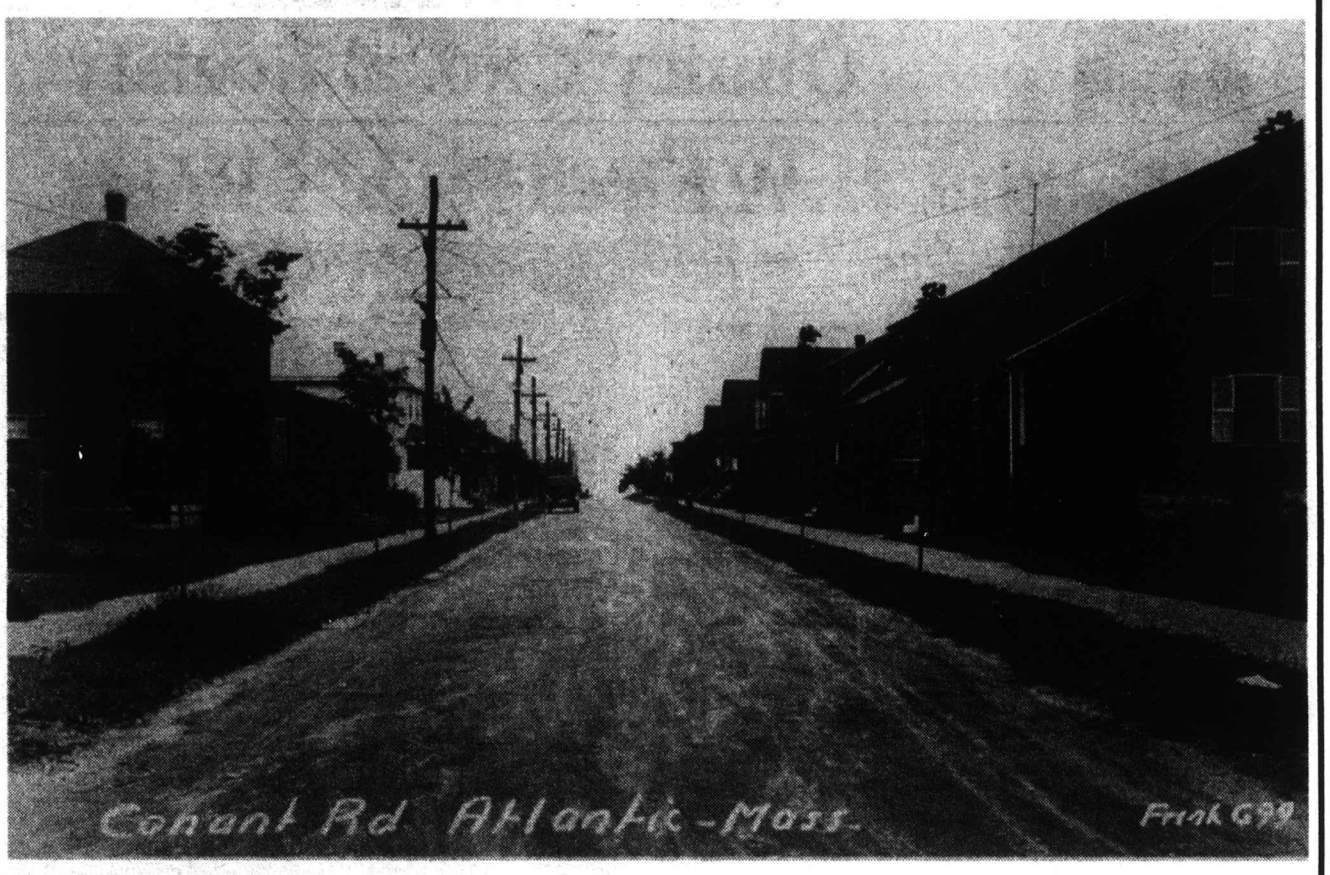

"We instructed the wranglers to let the group do things for themselves," said Capt. Bryan. "They were told that they could tell you something but we didn't want to do it for them because we wanted them to experience it 100 percent.

"All of those evolutions that you went through are exactly what we would put any recruit off the street through. Moving those hose lines – dry and charged – throwing (placing) the ladders against a building, going up the aerials – that's all standard academy practice."

It may have been controlled situations but there was still a rush of adrenaline using hydraulic tools or scaling the ladder. You want to understand the task and perform it well because psychologically you tell yourself that completing the exercise will make a differ-

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1920's real photo postcard is a view of Conant Road in Atlantic looking toward the beach from East Squantum Street. The automobile was probably owned by Henry Frink, the Quincy photographer who published this postcard. It was common practice at the time for photographers to include a personal identifier in their pictures; and most of Frink's photos show this automobile. The young trees shown here have all matured making this street look quite different today. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Benefit Honoring John 'Ras' Kelly Saturday

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Kelly Family is hosting a benefit in honor of the late John S. "Ras" Kelly, Jr., this Saturday, Nov. 29, from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. inside the Commonwealth Restaurant, 79 Parkingway.

The benefit will raise money for food pantries at the Germantown Neighborhood Center and Southwest Community Center as well as a soup kitchen in Negril, Jamaica. Kelly, an x-ray technician at Quincy Medical Center for 43 years and a DJ, loved reggae music and Jamaican culture.

"He was very connected to Jamaica and their culture," said former City Councillor Leo J. Kelly, John Kelly's uncle.

"He was probably one of the most beloved fellows you could meet. Everybody that knew him didn't like him; they loved him. He was very exceptional fellow who took great pride in Quincy Hospital and helping patients through their difficulties.

"He was just a decent, decent fellow."

John Kelly left such a legacy at Quincy Medical Center that the hospital dedicated the waiting area in the radiology department in his memory in May 2013.

Saturday's benefit will include live blues-rock music from the Mike Garvey Band and reggae music from High Hopes. The event will also include hors d'oeuvres, door prizes, and a raffle. The cost is $20 per person.

The event was organized by the Kelly family, including John's father, Jack, siblings Kenny and Maureen Kelly, and cousin Elaine DeLarusso.

For more information, or to donate a raffle item, contact Leo Kelly at 617-773-1534.

400 Attend Sheriff's Summit On Inmate Reentry

Norfolk Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti's recent summit on inmate reentry was well-received by the approximately 400 public safety and social service professionals in attendance.

The day-long summit featured opening speeches by Sheriff Bellotti and Massachusetts Public Safety Secretary Andrea Cabral and included panel discussions on the benefits and challenges of programs designed to stop the revolving door cycle of crime by helping inmates make a successful and law-abiding transition back into their communities after they finish serving their jail sentences.

"The philosophy behind reentry is simple," Bellotti said. "Virtually all of our inmates reenter our communities, so it only makes sense to try to address the issues that contributed to their criminal behavior. If we can do that, we make our communities safer and improve the lives of the offenders simultaneously."

Bellotti has entered into an agreement with a graduate school research team from Northeastern University to statistically evaluate the reentry programs in order to determine which work the best. The first evaluative data is scheduled to be available next year.

"We want to assess each provision of our programs because if they don't contribute to the reduction of crime, they aren't doing what they are intended to do," Sheriff Bellotti said.

He said the recent summit, held in Randolph on Oct. 30, was so well-received that he hopes to host similar ongoing summits in the coming years.

Informal Men's Club Creates Enduring Friendships At Allerton House

Allerton House at Hancock Park in Quincy residents Nick Pepe, Bill Coakely and Lou Volpe, are part of an informal "men's club," meeting often to share stories and mealtime.

In fact, enjoying a meal in the company of good friends is an everyday event for the three men. Rarely a meal goes by without these Allerton House residents dining together and having a lively conversation about sports, current events, shared experiences, or any number of other topics.

"We eat breakfast, lunch and dinner together," says Nick. "It's good to have friends to have meals with. We've gotten to know each other really well." Nick and Lou actually attended high school together, and Bill became a friend after Nick came to the Quincy assisted living residence.

Allerton House at Hancock Park in Quincy is part of the Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group continuum of care in Quincy that includes Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center and the Adult Day Health Center at Hancock Park. No Sugar Cookies

By MARIE

With the holidays just around the corner and some people on limited sugar diets, today's recipe is for a no sugar pastry. What I like most about this cookie is that no sugar substitute is used either.

And these cookies can be made ahead of time and will satisfy your sweet tooth without the added calories.

I usually don't bake many things that require refrigeration over night, but this cookie is worth it.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees
1 cup raisins
1/2 cup chopped apples
1/2 cups dates
1 cup water
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup oats
2 beaten eggs
3/4 cups chopped nuts

Boil the first 4 ingredients for 3 minutes at low heat. Add the butter and cool slightly. Add the remaining ingredients. Mix well and refrigerate overnight.

Drop by spoonfuls on a greased baking sheet and bake for 10-12 minutes. They can be stored in a tin or plastic container.

Pasta And Beans

By SUZIE

I grew up on pasta and beans, and my dad loved it with a bunch of pepper sprinkled on it (which of course would make him sneeze....but we got used to it!) We all loved when our mom prepared this dish. Here is my recipe for it. Not as good as my moms (of course) but tasty just as well!

1 16-oz. can white beans (pea, navy, Great Northern), organic preferred
4 Tbsp. olive oil
1 onion, chopped fine
2 carrots, chopped
2 Tbsp. dried basil
1 tsp. dried oregano
2-3 cloves minced garlic
16-oz. can tomatoes
1 tablespoon tomato paste
1 cup chicken broth
1-2 tsp. salt
1/2 lb. rice elbow macaroni pepper
grated cheese

Directions

Drain beans, Heat olive oil in pan. Add onions, carrots, oregano, garlic and basil. Cook until vegetables are wilted. Add tomatoes, paste, broth, salt, and pepper. Cover and simmer for about 10 minutes, until the vegetables are tender. Add the drained beans and simmer for another 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, cook and drain the macaroni. Toss with 1 Tbsp more olive oil and then mix with the bean sauce. Enjoy and serve with a "sprinkling" of pepper and lots of parmesan.

A Tasty And Colorful Appetizer

By MARIE

Here is a colorful appetizer that my granddaughter Stacy made at a delicious brunch she and husband John had recently.

It is so different and lovely to look at as you will note in this recipe.

4 avocados
8 pineapple slices (fresh)
1 medium zucchini (sliced)
1 medium yellow squash (sliced)
Red bell pepper (cut in strips)
3 tablespoons vegetable oil

Saute the yellow squash, the pepper, and the zucchini until tender. Cut the avocados in half, remove the pit. Place on the grill until grill marks are evident. Grill the pineapple slices the same way.

Place the sautéed vegetables on a platter, and then around the platter, put the avocado and pineapple slices. So pretty and tasty.

Jack Nigro, Josephine Shea Honored For Community Service

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council recently recognized Jack Nigro and Josephine Shea, who retired earlier this year from Quincy's Park and Recreation Board after nearly three decades of combined service on the board.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, who served with both Nigro and Shea on the Park and Recreation Board, presented commendations to them during the council's Nov. 10 meeting.

"I can tell you through my own experience that their institutional knowledge is going to be hard to replace," Croall said. "As a freshman board member they really took me in, gave me the lay of the land, and challenged me – both intellectually and some of the items we had before us on the agenda. Very kind, proactive, and caring folks.

"That's not an easy board assignment. There's quite a commitment that comes along with it. So when I think about Josephine, 14 years of service, and Jack, 13 years of service, that's pretty tremendous. I know

Paul Doherty and Michael Norton were appointed to the Park and Recreation Board by the council in September to replace Nigro and Shea.

Barry Welch, director of the Quincy Recreation Department, said the community could not run without volunteers like Nigro and Shea.

"They were great stewards of our great property. They were great proponents of programs for youth, adults, and families. In addition to thousands of hours they spent at meetings, you could find them, whether it would be a program, whether it would be Cleaner, Greener cooking behind the grill, or doing the other things related to a Park and Recreation Board," Welch said.

"We cannot run the community without such citizen volunteers, but not all are cut from the same cloth. And these are two wonderful, wonderful servants. I would like to acknowledge their tremendous amount of work but most of all I would like to acknowledge their friendship. They were always a pleasure to work with."

Shea told the councillors she was honored to represent them on the board for so many years.

"It was an honor to represent the City Council on the Park and Recreation Board. I hope I served you properly on all of my votes. It was near and dear to me. My first job was at Quincy Recreation and I really enjoyed serving on the board," Shea stated.

"We did a lot of exciting things. When I drive by and I see the track and the stadium and all the great projects that have happened as a result of a dedicated board and City Council, I am really thankful."

Nigro called his work on the board a labor of love.

"I appreciated the years I served on it – it was a labor of love. I hope more people get involved," he said. "It's been a great 13 years. I'm going to miss it, but I'll be in Vegas for six months."

REBUILDING TOOTH ENAMEL

If you experience tooth sensitivity and/or eat a lot of sugar and simple carbohydrates, you may want to consider using tooth products that help reduce (or even reverse) early decay by virtue of a process called "remineralization." This involves delivering extra doses of calcium and phosphate to replace minerals lost in the ongoing battle against bacteria and acids. To maintain the mineral building blocks that are essential to tooth strength, saliva containing calcium and phosphate helps replenish minerals dissolved by acidic plaque or food. This balance may be upset when more minerals are lost than gained and teeth become vulnerable to decay. While fluoride greatly helps saliva's natural remineralization, toothpastes that deliver calcium phosphate may speed up the process. .

If you have questions about tooth sensitivity, or any other dental concerns, we invite you to call 617 479-6220. We provide quality, personal dental care in a comfortable, immaculate and professional environment at 44 Greenleaf Street. From preventive and routine care to elective cosmetic procedures, our staff will make you feel comfortable during your visit. Our emphasis is on prevention. Preventing dental disease is less costly and more rewarding than correcting problems after they occur. Let us help you bring out that natural smile. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com. .

P.S. The remineralizing properties of new toothpastes could be of great benefit to adults suffering from dry mouth.

Fr. Bill's Community Thanksgiving Dinner

Father Bill's & MainSpring (FBMS), a 501c3 non-profit organization dedicated to ending homelessness on the South Shore, will host its annual Community Dinner on Thanksgiving at Christ Episcopal Church in Quincy.

The dinner – prepared and served by FBMS volunteers – is served to guests of Father Bill's Place as well as anyone in the community who would like to attend. The meal begins at noon and includes a traditional seated Thanksgiving dinner, festive decorations and music. FBMS volunteers will also prepare and deliver close to 200 meals across the South Shore to those who are unable to travel.

Turkeys for the meal and meal delivery have been provided by a generous grant from Stop and Shop and the Greater Boston Food Bank. For the fourth consecutive year, Quincy Public School's Career and Technical Education Culinary Arts Program will prepare more than 70 turkeys in the school's state-of-the-art kitchen. Quincy High School (QHS) engages their culinary students in helping those less fortunate, while also learning preparation, cooking and carving skills. The program is led by Keith Segalla, Quincy Public Schools Executive Director of Career & Technical Education and Instructional Technology, and instructors Mark Kelly, Patrick Noe and William Gulvna.

"The strong partnership with Father Bill's & MainSpring is so mutually beneficial to our students and the folks being served at Thanksgiving," said Keith Segalla, Quincy Public Schools. "Being able to prepare a Thanksgiving dinner is a professional and life skill that our culinary students will take with them beyond the classroom and we are grateful for the opportunity to be involved."

"Our community meal has been a tradition at Father Bill's & MainSpring for decades. This effort makes a strong statement that we believe no one should be homeless or hungry, especially on the holidays. Thank you so much to all our community partners who help us make this meal happen. It's a testimony to everyone in our community who cares about those in need," said Father Bill's & MainSpring President and CEO, John Yazwinski.

'Death Of An Empire: Salem' Topic At Historic Society Dec. 11

As the bicentennial of the War of 1812 reaches its conclusion, historian and author Robert Booth will present a talk at Quincy Historical Society that looks ahead a generation to collapse and violence in Salem, Mass.

"Death of an Empire: The Murderous Fall of Salem" will be topic Thursday, Dec. 11 at 7 p.m. at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., Quincy.

Before the war Salem was a great seaport and the richest community in the country. Its prosperity was seriously damaged during the war by the British naval blockade, and the town struggled in the years after the war to regain its stature. But changing conditions—some caused by the war itself—worked against Salem. Within a generation the port was in decline and the city's elites were plagued by hidden scandals and ultimately by murder.

Booth will describe the impact of the war on Salem and then relate the story of decline and violence. The story, while far less well known, rivals that of Salem's witch trials.

This program is presented by the Historical Society in partnership with Adams National Historical Site. Everyone is welcome to attend. There is no charge for admission.

More Life, Safety Deficiencies Found In QHA Units

Director Of Facilities Management Will Be Hired To Run Maintenance, Modernization Departments

By KRIS KALABOKAS

State inspections of Quincy's public housing units are still revealing life and safety deficiencies such as faulty sprinkler heads, plumbing leaks, and inoperable fire doors according to an update provided by a Department of Housing and Economic Development (DHCD) official at last Wednesday's meeting of the Quincy Housing Authority.

DHCD has found "an enormous amount of plumbing issues" including leaking showers, sinks, and faucets, said James Marathas, Director of the Facilities Management Unit of DHCD. "The plumbing has been neglected for a long period of time."

"You have 1,700 units. You're going to get leaks today, tomorrow, and this is definitely a work in progress," he said.

A repair project at Snug Harbor had to be modified following the discovery of additional life and safety hazards. Initially, a lack of heat in the bathrooms was uncovered which resulted in peeling paint and mold.

Kitchen and bathroom exhaust fans were also found to be failing.

During a more recent inspection, it was found that toe kick heaters in kitchens had been removed as they began to fail, leaving a gap under cabinets full of loose wires.

The heaters still in place were inoperable.

Any remaining toe kick heaters will now be removed and all abandoned wiring will be safely covered by baseboards.

"Over the years bandaids have been put on the heating systems, like everything else here," said Marathas.

Exhaust fans located in kitchens will be removed, capped, and insulated to prevent cold air from leaking in through the open vents, he said.

"The reality is, I don't think I've ever inspected another state unit that has this situation where you have the secondary fan in the kitchen plus you have an exhaust hood fan," said Marathas.

Inspections by the state agency will conclude in December with the inspection of the 45 units that make up Crowley Court in Germantown.

"At that point we would be hoping that you are in a position to begin your own inspection process in January," Marathas said.

DHCD has prepared recommendations for the housing authority on how to conduct their own, in-house inspections such as reviewing an equal amount of units per month and completing repairs in those units before proceeding with the next round of monthly inspections.

Inspections of ten percent of Quincy's 930 state-aided public housing units and common areas conducted on March 31, April 1, and April 3 of 2014 revealed subpar living conditions in need of immediate repair.

A report issued on April 30 following a reinspection outlined operational issues as well as physical condition concerns such as exposed electrical wiring, holes in walls, improperly stored combustibles, mold and mildew.

Federal officials from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) stepped in and began inspecting Quincy Housing Authority properties in August following the inspections and troubling findings made by DHCD.

DHCD officials are now concerned with improving the work order system implemented by the QHA. "What we found were a lot of work orders were getting called in from the tenants and then the work orders were not being distributed out and then they weren't coming back and there wasn't clear accountability for the work order," said Marathas, who added that a new system will likely be put in place by the end of the week.

Orders will be assigned to specific staff members in the maintenance department who will fill out a sheet daily recording their work. The sheet will then be turned in at the end of each work day to a manager.

Work completed will be verified by the site foreman. Follow-up inspections will then be done to ensure that work has been completed satisfactorily.

Maintenance staff will also be required to wear uniforms following complaints from tenants that staff were not easily identifiable.

Former maintenance director David Ferris resigned from his position as maintenance manager for the Quincy Housing Authority after reports revealed earlier this year that mismanagement led to unsafe and unsanitary living conditions for housing authority tenants.

Orders sent to the maintenance department dating back to 2008 were found that were either ignored or flagged as low priority by Ferris. He also knowingly signed off on work orders that were never completed according to James Lydon, executive director of the housing authority.

Ferris was put on paid administrative leave July 9. He handed in his resignation on Sept. 12.

Lydon said it was unlikely a new maintenance director would be hired and that all oversight would be conducted by a yet to be hired Director of Facilities Management who would run the maintenance department, modernization department, and in-house inspections.

Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) training will be scheduled for maintenance staff in the near future.

Recent improvements made to housing authority properties include the replacement of eight failed boilers at the 180-unit Riverview property in Germantown.

Marathas said in the interim, tenants were using space heaters which had proven to be more costly than running an efficient heating system.

Unheated units were provided with space heaters by the authority.

Most leaks are "under control" at Snug Harbor, a development with 400 family units in Germantown, said Marathas.

"As the heat was turned on, we have uncovered leaks as a result of those heat systems being turned on," he said. "We're finding out that there's valves leaking; there's all these other system failures that you didn't know about because the heat wasn't running so the water wasn't circulating."

Marathas noted that fire doors at Snug Harbor were inoperable, didn't close fully, or were hanging off of their hinges. The repair of the doors will be funded by DHCD life and safety initiative 2015 monies. Walkway repairs at Snug Harbor will be similarly funded.

One rotted support beam still needs to be replaced at 206 Taffrail Rd., he said.

During HUD inspections at Pagnano Towers, improperly set sprinkler heads were discovered on the first floor. They will be replaced as will sprinkler heads that have been painted over on other floors.

The roof at Sawyer Towers will be painted with a sealant to prevent water from leaking into the community room. The sealing process is expected to prolong the life of the roof for several more years according to Marathas.

HUD will be coming back to reinspect O'Brien Towers and the Drohan Apartments on Jan. 8, 2015.

A no-smoking policy is being considered due to the discovery of heavy smoke damage in several units. "We found a ton of units that are extensively, extensively damaged here at the Quincy Housing Authority through nicotine damage," said Marathas.

Quincy's health department will team up with the authority and create a health initiative in the hopes of combating issues relevant to residents such as hypertension and drug abuse.

They will also discuss prohibiting smoking in all housing authority properties.

Health department officials are expected to go before the housing authority board at their next scheduled meeting on Dec. 17.

Grace McAuliffe, finance director for the authority, raised concerns regarding the organization's 100 percent paper-based payroll system. "I have not seen that in many, many years," she said. "It truly does have to change and it has to change very, very soon."

She called the system "error prone" and extremely time consuming. It takes an entire day, she said, to gather payroll information and have it double-checked for errors.

"We've had some great concern over the payroll since we've gotten here," echoed Marathas. "A lot of the payroll is hand written. A lot of your payroll is not computerized and we're concerned about the accountability of that."

All paper records will have to be entered into an electronic system; a sizable task, said McAuliffe.

"That's not a small project," she said. "I haven't seen this volume of paper running back and forth in quite some time."

She hopes to switch the payroll to the electronic system by the summer.

The newly appointed finance director said the volume of payroll associated paperwork she encountered in her first week on the job was so overwhelming she thought someone was playing a prank on her.

Beginning in December, Eugene Capoccia, executive director of the Leominster housing authority, will mentor the QHA for a full year, said Marathas who called the partnership "a huge asset."

Capoccia educates other housing authorities throughout the country on setting up efficient financial systems, work order systems, and maintenance systems.

"This is all a huge work in progress," said Lydon when asked for details on how the maintenance department would be reorganized. "We have encountered so many problems that I quite frankly have never, ever anticipated when coming to this job."

"I don't have a master plan for this whole thing yet," he said. "I have the best maintenance director in the form of Jim Marathas that I've ever had in my life... we discuss strategy. We discuss what we're going to do. We discuss what issues we're going to handle."

Temple Beth El Project Before Planning Board Dec. 10

53 Residential Units Proposed On Site Of Former Synagogue On Hancock Street

By SCOTT JACKSON

A proposal to tear down the city's lone remaining synagogue and replace it with more than 50 residential units will go before the Planning Board during its next meeting on Dec. 10.

Boston Realty Development, a company headquartered on Greenleaf Street in Quincy Center, has proposed tearing down Temple Beth El. In its place, the company would build a 53-unit building at 999-1003 Hancock St.

One-bedroom units inside the proposed building would be about 800 square feet in size and the two-bedroom units about 1,000 square feet in size. If sold as condos each unit would likely sell for between $300 and $360 per square foot. That would put the price of the one-bedroom units in the $240,000-$288,000 range and the price of the two-bedroom units in the $300,000-$360,000 range. If rented, each unit would fetch approximately $800 per bedroom per month.

Initial plans for the new building included 71 parking spaces; 66 would be located in a parking structure comprising the first two floors of the building with five spots outside the building, the latter for visitors.

The Temple Beth El project is the largest of three residential developments proposed for a quarter-mile stretch of Hancock Street. Boston Property Development is also planning to convert a commercial building at 10 Merrymount Rd. into 23 townhouse condo units. And Plainville-based Edgewood Development has agreed to purchase the former Central Middle School – located at 1022 Hancock St. – and use the building for 39 condos.

The Planning Board had been set to hear the proposal during the board's most recent meeting on Nov. 12, but that hearing was delayed so the applicant could address concerns raised by peer reviewers and several city department heads.

Three other projects were approved that night.

The largest of the three projects approved during the meeting on Nov. 12 was a proposal by Quincy-based Galvin Development to tear down the existing building at 225 W. Squantum St. (also known as 117-121 Montclair Ave.) and replace it with a three-story building. The top two floors of the building will contain nine apartments – seven with two bedrooms and two with one bedroom each – with 4,300 square feet of commercial space on the ground floor.

The existing building, which is located in a Business A zoning district, is home to a realtor and a florist. Developer Sean Galvin said his company is interested in keeping the realtor on site, because it is a low impact business that doesn't generate much foot traffic; a retail tenant, such as the florist, is something they would try to avoid. Galvin also said they have spoken to other potential tenants who are interested in renting the other half of the ground level space.

The new development will include 24 parking spaces, according to attorney Ed Fleming, nine more than are currently on site; a new bicycle storage area will also be included. The location is about a half-mile from the North Quincy MBTA station.

Two residents – Lisa Covais of Pope Street and Kristin Taylor of Holbrook Road – spoke against the proposal during the meeting. Both were concerned approval of the 225 W. Squantum Street development would lead to similar projects nearby and an increase in traffic.

"This building does not fit in the style of the Montclair neighborhood. The typical Montclair home is a bungalow, and I think this will be the biggest thing around. It will dwarf everything else," Covais said.

"The approval of this project opens the door for more similar development in the Montclair Business A area and I'm also opposed to that. The addition of two businesses and nine residential units will increase the automobile traffic on the adjacent streets."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin spoke in favor of the project. He told the Planning Board he hosted a community meeting on the project in October; more than 35 residents attended and only two raised concerns regarding traffic. The type of mixed-use development proposed for the site, Coughlin added, is the type of project the city is looking to build in places such as downtown Quincy and Wollaston Center.

"It's the type of concept I think we've embraced as a city. I think that this particular Business A site is ripe for some type of redevelopment," Coughlin said.

"Quite honestly, although I'm as concerned as anyone because I live in the neighborhood and I understand the traffic concerns, I don't believe that this particular proposal is going to have the adverse implications that some might suggest."

The second project approved Nov. 12 was a proposal by Kai W. Lee to raze the existing house at 1 Edwin St., a lot adjacent to Atlantic Middle School, and replace it with three townhouse condominiums in a three-story building.

The townhouses on site will be smaller than most townhouses built in Quincy, according to attorney Christopher Harrington. He said each unit would be 1,472 square feet. That square footage includes a one-car garage for each unit; residents of the new building will be able to park an additional vehicle in front of their garages.

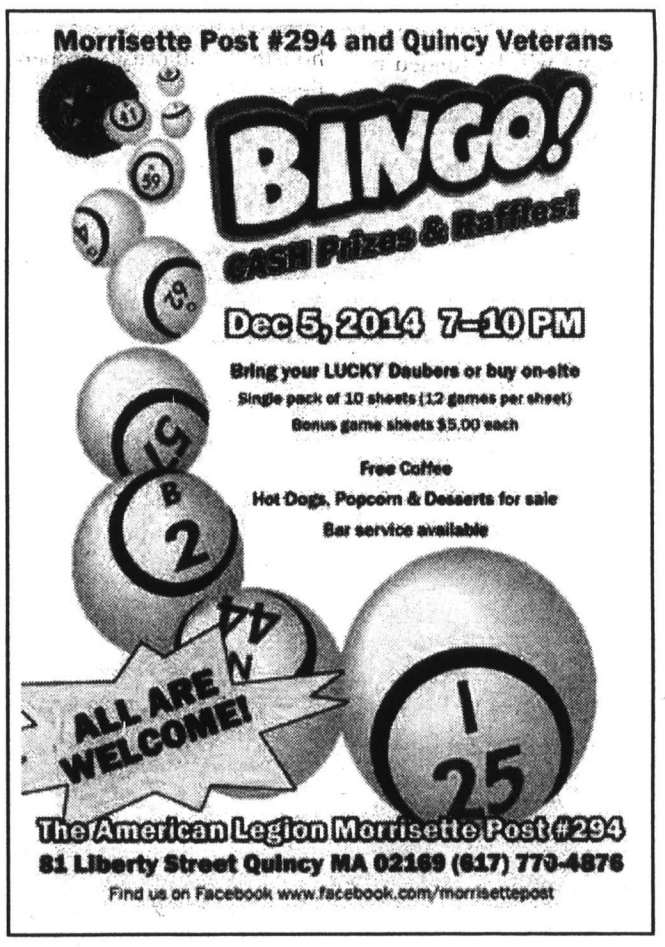

The site is located in a Residential B zoning area, and Harrington said the project was designed to comply with those zoning requirements. A site plan review from the Planning Board was needed because the project includes three units.

Robert Kane, an Edwin Street resident who lives next door to the lot in question, said he and his fellow neighbors supported the project because it is an improvement on the current building.

"We really don't have any problems with this because this property is such a disaster – it's a wreck," Kane said. "Basically, we and the abutters do not have a problem with this because it's a nice looking building."

The final project approved during the Nov. 12 meeting was a proposal by Thomas Meade to tear down the existing building at 74 Crescent St. in West Quincy and replace it with a three-unit, three-story building totaling 1,331 square feet. A hearing on that project had been held during the Planning Board's Oct. 8 meeting.

O'Donnell Appears On Quincy Access TV Show

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell recently appeared as a guest on Joe Catalano's QATV show, Currently in Quincy.

O'Donnell addressed the Quincy real estate market as well as the overall outlook for Norfolk County.

The Register provided a statistical assessment of the present real estate market, including current mortgage activities, real estate sales and the number of deed foreclosures. In addition, he spoke on the many benefits of the Homestead Act, which provides homeowners with limited protection on the value of their primary home against unsecured creditors up to $500,000.

O'Donnell explained how easy it is to access information about your home through on-line research at www.norfolkdeeds.org and also using the Registry's customer service department at 781-461-6101, if you are in need of assistance.

In addition to the discussion on real estate activity and Registry operations, O'Donnell elaborated on the voluntary charitable efforts of the Registry during this holiday season. These activities include the Registry's Annual Holiday Food Drive, Toys for Tots Drive in conjunction with the US Marine Reserves and the continuing efforts on behalf of Cradles to Crayons, a non-profit organization that works with our most vulnerable children. Residents of Quincy are encouraged to visit the Registry website, www.norfolkdeeds.org to learn more about these charitable efforts.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County.

Home Decorating Tips

By BARBARA GRACEFFA

BARBARA GRACEFFA

Question: Do you have any fresh ideas for Christmas decorating? I don't want to put up my large artificial tree this year but still want to "be in the holiday spirit" because my grandchildren will be coming for a visit. Pauline

Dear Pauline,

Find a nice way to display your Christmas cards. Pin them to an artificial wreath or tape them around a mirror. In my home, I use common pins to adhere them to two red velvet ribbons and I hang them vertically in the doorway between my kitchen and living room.

Consider buying a small tree or two. I like the tall artificial "pencil" trees that are very thin and do not take up much space. Buy two different sizes and put just your special ornaments on them. Or you can put all ornaments of a single color on one tree and a second monochromatic look on the other. Or just add lights or candy canes and ribbons.

You can even make a decorating statement with your giftwrap. Wrap all packages in the same paper or same color paper. For a nostalgic look, add a doll or a few pieces of a train set under the tree.

Other ideas include a centerpiece on a mantel or dining room table with cinnamon-scented pine cones in a one or more crystal bowls of different sizes. Hang some ornaments from your chandelier or put them in your house plants for a festive look. Put up some lights around your windows and leave them on all day. Hang one Christmas stocking for each grandchild and add some small gifts, gift cards, or candy inside them.

Finally, get inspired by others' decorations. Visit Pinterest or one of many other websites. Pick up some December home magazines. Or better yet, go on a holiday home tour. Check out http://centersandsquares.com/house-tours-in-massachusetts/ for tours of Beacon Hill or local tours in Braintree, Hingham, Plymouth, or South Boston.

Walking In A Quincy Firefighter's Boots

ence - even if it's just a drill.

"Safety was paramount," Capt. Bryan said. "Someone was always with you and we operate the same way on the fire ground. We are all each other's safety officer on the scene."

The Quincy Fire Department responds to an average 10,000 calls annually. They include fires, medical emergencies, motor vehicle accidents, public assist, fire alarms, storm responses and mutual aid. Needless to say, they put their own lives at risk to save others.

Lt. Palaza called the training exercise "a win-win" for the department as well as the "recruits."

"This was a win-win for everyone. A firefighter who helped out said that it was helpful for him because when one trains, you are actually sharpening your own skills. He said it was just as beneficial to participate as a firefighter. The class helped educate ourselves as well as the people who attended."

Capt. Bryan added: "We appreciate everyone's time and everybody seemed to have a good time which was the ultimate goal."

Here is the list of participants in "Fire Ops 101" and their wranglers:

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest (wrangler Lt. Matt Walsh); Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall (FF Glen Doyle); Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin (FF Mike Dwyer); Councillor Doug Gutro (FF Chris Murphy), Human Resources Director Helen Murphy (FF Jim McCarthy), Larry Liuzzo, assistant to Mayor Thomas Koch with Tim Barron, son of Fire Chief Joseph Barron (FF Pat Bryan); Sen. John Keenan (brother and FF Matt Keenan), Rep. Tackey Chan and Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey (Lt. Keith Lentinni); Register of Probate Pat McDermott (FF Tom Gannon); and Quincy Sun Publisher Bob Bosworth (FF Jay Tierney).

Firefighters who also participated in the training exercise included: Capt. George Wirtz, safety officer; Lt. Tim Marks, Maze officer; FF Paul Daley, Engine Operations; FF Gerry Murphy and FF Mark Whouley, Ladder Operations; FF Michael Worley, department photographer; Department Mechanics Mike O'Connor and Kevin Mellor, logistics/equipment management; Capt. Bryan, overview and safety; Lt. Palaza, overview and safety; FF Tom Bowes, overview and safety; and Chief Joseph Barron and Local President Paul Moody, welcoming address.

We also want to acknowledge Mark Crosby and Martin Dunham from Quincy Access TV who videotaped the exercise. QATV will air the training program on Channel 8 at a future date.

Special thanks also to Mike Cronin for hosting the "debriefing" at Cronin's following the exercise.

One final thought: Ask anyone who participated in the training and he or she will rave about the activity as well-prepared, well-run and memorable. It's not every day community members can "work" like firefighters. But the lasting impression is how dangerous firefighting is. And how fortunate Quincy is to have well trained, professional firefighters who help keep this community safe.

'Attitude Is Everything' Bracelets Honor Joanne Minton; Benefit Families Struggling Financially

By DAN MINTON
Quincy Police Lieutenant

In honor of Joanne Minton, who recently lost her inspirational battle with cancer, the Minton family and friends will be selling bracelets for $5.00, with Joanne's motto, "Attitude is Everything."

Cancer patients and their families are overwhelmed emotionally. As painful as this is, in time they can also be financially devastated, so all proceeds will go to a family or families in our community who could use some help.

Donations are not limited to $5. Thank you for all your support and for helping a family in need.

These bracelets are excellent reminders to anyone struggling over life issues, such as addictions, sickness, interpersonal relations, difficulty in school or just trying to adapt to a present situation.

parade – "Old Fashioned Christmas" – was submitted by Hudson Street resident Thomas O'Connor and selected by the Quincy Christmas Parade Committee. As the winner of the theme contest, O'Connor will get to ride one of the many antique automobiles in the parade.

Keeping in tune with that theme, Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes and Norfolk County Register of Probate Patrick McDermott will be taking part in the parade this year, riding on a float while singing classic Christmas music.

Bands participating in the parade include:

Boston Police Gaelic Column of Pipes and Drums; Immaculate Heart of Mary High School Band; Waltham American Legion Band; Acton-Boxborough High School Band; Plymouth High School Band; Joseph Case Cardinals High School Band; Weymouth High School Band; Somerset-Berkeley High School Band; New Bedford High School Band; Quincy/North Quincy High School Band; Boston Windjammers Band; and David Prouty High School Band.

The nine high school bands will perform in front of City Hall, where they will be judged on their performance.

Companies and organizations sponsoring floats include:

Stop & Shop; Quincy Mutual; Skills for Living; Quincy Catholic Academy; Quincy After School; Quincy Park Conservancy; Braintree Moose Lodge; Mass. Bay Credit Union; Quincy Toastmasters; Bethany Congregational Church; Quincy High School; Quincy Checker Cab; Jack Conway; St. Agatha School; and Woodward School.

Other units participating include:

Quincy Police motorcycles and color guard; Boston Police paddy wagon; Costumed characters; Morrisette Legion Post color guard; Morrisette Post Legion Auxiliary; Sons of the American Legion; Plymouth American Legion; Silver Dolphins Drill Team; Wally the Green Monster; Hallamore Clydesdales; Cycling Murrays; Salvation Army; Allepo Clowns; Fallon Ambulance; Toys for Tots; Quincy and North Quincy homecoming kings and queens; McGruff the Crime Dog; Worcester Power and Light Music; Smoking Joe Fire Engine; and Quincy Fire Department color guard and vehicles, including Santa Claus.

acters, and enjoy performances by the combined Quincy/North Quincy High School Choir and strolling Victorian carolers inside of a heated tent on the library lawn.

On Saturday, Nov. 29, Santa, along with five of his elves, will come down from the North Pole and make his grand entrance into Quincy by parachute, landing in Pageant Field at One Merrymount Pkwy. at 12:30 p.m. (weather permitting). Santa, along with costumed characters, will hand out candy canes to good boys and girls.

The 62nd annual Quincy Christmas Parade will cap off the Christmas festivities on Sunday, Nov. 30 at 12:30 p.m. This year's theme is "An Old Fashioned Christmas." Over 100 groups will participate including high school and adult marching bands from Quincy and throughout Massachusetts. There will also be fun, Christmas-themed floats.

Veterans of World War II and Quincy residents Robert G. Noble, an Army Air Force veteran and former POW; John M. Gillis, a U.S. Marine veteran; and Francis X. Bellotti, a U.S. Navy veteran, will be the parade Grand Marshals.

The parade will begin in Quincy Center at the intersection of Hancock Street and the Walter J. Hannon Pkwy., continue up Hancock Street, and conclude at North Quincy High School.

Marines Collecting 'Toys For Tots'

U.S. Marines will continue the tradition of collecting "Toys for Tots" along the Quincy Christmas Parade route Sunday, Nov. 30 which begins at 12:30 p.m.

The custom of collecting the distributing toys for needy children began on a nation-wide basis 60 years ago.

On Sunday, local Marine reservists will walk along the approximate 3-mile parade route placing toys in the vehicles provided.

In the Quincy area, the Toys for Tots program is directed by the 1st Battalion, 25th Marines with the cooperation of civilians and former Marines.

To donate to the Toys for Tots program, the public is invited to bring new, unwrapped, non-violent toys to the parade where they will be picked up by the Marines and placed in trucks passing along the three-mile Hancock Street parade route.

Letters To Santa Mailbox

Children will have the chance to send a Christmas letter to the North Pole this year as Santa Claus' mailbox will be on display in Quincy throughout the holiday season.

Santa's mailbox will first appear this Friday, Nov. 28, from 5-7 p.m. at the Quincy Christmas Tree Lighting held on the grounds of the Thomas Crane Public Library on Washington Street. Children will have the opportunity to write a letter to Santa at the tree lighting and put it in his special mailbox. Pens, paper, and an envelope will be provided at a letter writing station.

The mailbox will then make its way to City Hall Plaza for the rest of the holiday season, starting Sunday for the 62nd annual Quincy Christmas Parade. Santa's mailbox will remain there until Monday, Dec. 22.

Neighborhood Center Seeks Food Contributions

Meagan's Place, the food pantry at the Germantown Neighborhood Center, is humming with activity for neighbors benefitting from the Thanksgiving Dinner program. At this season of celebration and plenty, it is difficult for most of us to imagination that so many depend upon the Center and programs like it to provide a holiday meal for their families.

"The need is overwhelming. We have over 400 families registered for Thanksgiving dinner baskets this week. But what people don't always realize is that it's not just families who are in desperate need of assistance. We have, right now, 74 single seniors, 51 single adults and 49 senior families who are also coming to pick up food. And we're running out!" said Executive Director Kathy Quigley. "Keeping Meagan's Place stocked is quite an undertaking."

Contributions come in the form of food drives coordinated by business and community partners. "We are so grateful to State Street, Boston Financial, Community Life Church and so many other local organizations and residents who coordinate food drives. They make a huge difference and we really depend upon them to keep the pantry going," Quigley said.

The need for contributions of food and monetary donations does not end on Thanksgiving. Many neighbors have also registered for Christmas Dinner food baskets.

Contributions of food can be delivered to the Center at 366 Palmer St. in Quincy between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Monetary donations can be made by check to the Germantown Neighborhood Center/SSYMCA.

North Quincy Perfect Seasons In 1966, 1992

North Quincy has twice entered the Thanksgiving Day game with a perfect season on the line: 1966 and 1992.

Ken McPhee had a role in both. On the 1966 squad, he was a starting guard. He was the head coach of the 1992 team.

The 1966 team, coached by Carl Leone, had a 9-0 record, won the Greater Boston League title, shared the Class A crown with Arlington and shut out Quincy, 8-0.

The 1992 team had an 11-0 record, won the Old Colony League title, beat Arlington in the Div. 1B Super Bowl and shut out Quincy, 20-0.

1970 Quincy Team Undefeated

Quincy's 1970 team, coached by Hank Conroy, had a spotless 9-0 record.

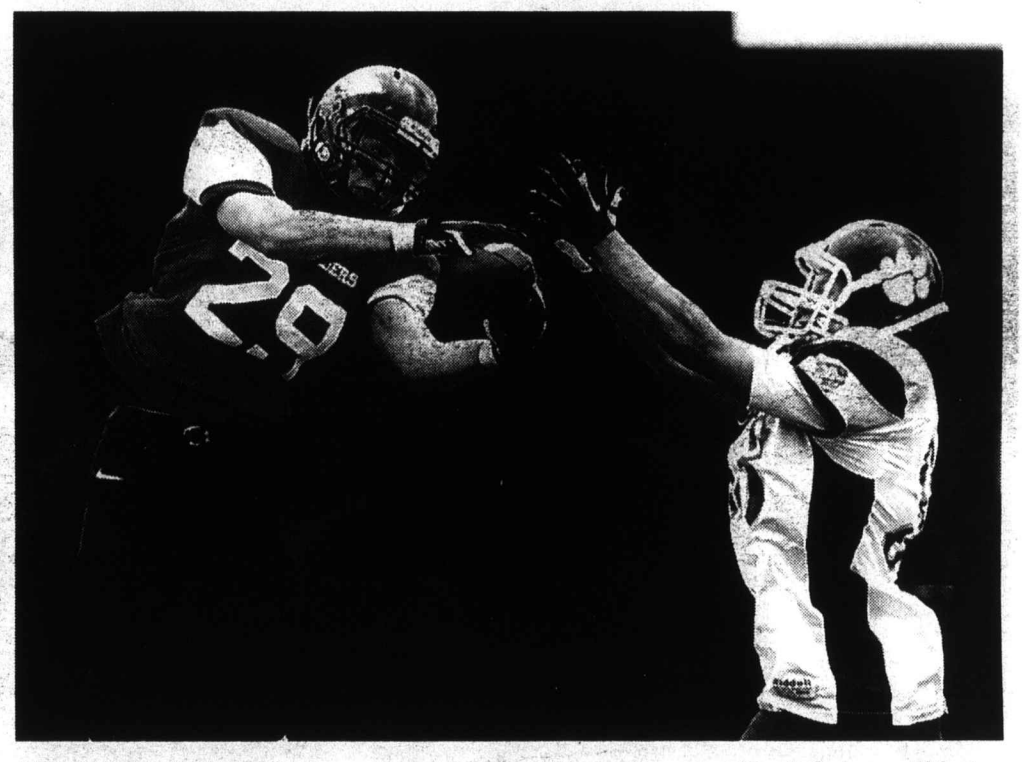

The Presidents defeated North Quincy that year, 16-6, and won the Greater Boston League title.

Raiders Hopes To Feast On Thanksgiving Upset

North Quincy Aims To Throw Presidents For A Loss

BY BILL GRIFFIN

For North Quincy coach Mark Nutley, the Thanksgiving roots run strong and deep.

He played with Quincy coach Bill Reardon for the Presidents in the 1990s. He was an assistant to Bob Noble at Quincy. He was an assistant to Ken McPhee and and Jim Connor at North. He has coached and played in the rivalry for the better part of 20 years. He knows the story and he knows the characters.

And he loves it.

"It means as much every year. It never changes," said Nutley. "I know all these guys on both sides. I played with them and coached with them. I look at some of the faces and I hope I see them for the next 20 or 30 years on Thanksgiving."

Nutley brings a 2-8 team into his second Quincy game Thursday morning in the 82nd meeting between the two teams at 10:00 at Veterans Stadium. The Red Raiders have a chance. Why? Two things. Strange things happen on Thanksgiving. And they can throw the ball.

"We've been telling our kids about Thanksgiving upsets all week," said Reardon.

"Look back to last year (a 14-0 Quincy win)," said Nutley. "Quincy was the heavy favorite, but we came out, stopped them and drove the ball down the field. We were at their ten. A holding penalty set us back. If we score then, it might have been a different game."

Nutley and the Red Raiders hope for a clear, mild, windless day and a fast track. North wants to throw the ball. If Quincy has shown a weakness, it has been against the pass, and senior quarterback Andrew Kiley has thrown well in recent weeks, particularly against Hingham when he was 12-20 for 170 yards and a touchdown.

"Andrew throws a beautiful ball," said Nutley. "All season I've been telling him to just let it go, and that's what he did a against Hingham. He trusted himself and that's a good thing going into Thanksgiving."

There has never been any question about about Kiley's athleticism or the strength and accuracy of his arm. He worked well outside the pocket against Hingham. He had runs of 24 and 26 yards, but more impressively, when he scrambled, he did not run to escape. He ran to buy time and locate open receivers downfield. He kept his head up and saw the field. It is a big step for a quarterback to take, and Kiley took it.

"I know Quincy's front will bring a lot of pressure, so I have to look on a broken play as an opportunity to find a receiver," said Kiley. "I think over the last few games I built up my confidence finding the open receiver when I scramble."

His receivers are dependable and dangerous. Wideouts Eric Cohane-Jones, Solomon Umoren, and Aidan Brown combined for 10 catches against Hingham. All are return men who run well after the catch. Running back Dayvon Jones and tight end Zack Dangora can also catch the ball. The targets are there.

"I like our balance. Teams can't focus on just one receiver," said Nyutley.

The question is the protection. Quincy has a powerful, veteran line and excellent linebackers that they can send at Kiley. North protected Kiley better against Hingham than in previous weeks, but it is something the Red Raiders must focus on for Thanksgiving.

"We'll work on blitz pickups more than anything else in practice all week," said Nutley. "We want to extend plays for Andrew."

Like any coach in late November, Nutley would like to establish the run.

PLEASE DON'T STAY SEATED

You might think that warehouse workers would be at greater risk of developing back pain than people sitting at their desks in offices; yet, sitting for long periods of time may pose an even greater risk for developing back pain than lifting heavy objects. In fact, epidemiological studies suggest that back pain is more prevalent among office workers than workers engaged in heavy labor due to the fact that sitting places a great deal of stress on the spine. It is also known that stressful events may be more responsible for back pain than physical injury. If you sit for long periods of time and/or have endured significant psychological stress, the chiropractor may help you overcome these stresses.

Presidents Bring Experience To Turkey Game Table

Quincy Strong On Both Sides Of Ball

By BILL GRIFFIN

For Quincy coach Bill Reardon, the excitement builds a bit more gradually as the years pass.

It begins when Quincy's first season – its initial 10 games – finishes and the run-up to the second season against North on Thanksgiving starts. There are requests for interviews and his time. Newspapers and Cable TV call. The buzz grows around the school and the city. The practices become more intense. There is the rally at school the day before the game.

The old fire returns which dates back to his playing days when he was knocking people around as a defensive back for the Presidents. He has been a player, an assistant and a head coach at Quincy. When Thanksgiving arrives, Reardon is ready.

"As I get a little more experienced, the emotions build and come out a little later as the game gets close," said Reardon. "But when it's time for the game, it's as strong as ever. It's my favorite time of year, my favorite holiday. And that's because of the football game."

Reardon, who is 3-3 on Thanksgiving including a 14-0 win last year, brings an experienced, talented club into the 82nd meeting with North Quincy. The Presidents are 7-3 and, without too much tinkering with play here or there, could easily be 10-0.

"They're very good," said North coach Mark Nutley. "They have an experienced quarterback, an excellent halfback and their line is big and strong. They've had a great year."

Senior quarterback James Lam, who was chosen by the coaches as the Most Valuable Player in the Patriot League this season, starts his third Quincy vs. North game. He has rushed for 584 yards on 104 carries and seven touchdowns. He is 52-115 through the air for 857 yards, 12 touchdowns and three two-point conversions. That's 19 touchdowns and 1,441 yards in total offense from one player.

He can shred a defense in several ways. He is is big, fast and can throw bullets. He brings experience and intelligence to the game. Stop him? Good luck.

"It all begins with containing Lam," said North linebacker Zack Dangora.

"We can't let him get out of control. That's the first key to the game," said North quarterback Andrew Kiley.

It is unwise to just focus on Lam because of junior halfback Jahvae Handsom-Fields who rushed for 958 yards on 162 carries for 13 touchdowns and two two-point conversions in eight games. He is a rare blend of speed and power, a runner who can carry or outrun defenders. North showed a vulnerability to the sweep in the second half against Hingham. If this happens against Handsom-Fields, the Red Raiders will have problems.

He is also a standout defensive back and is, arguably, Quincy's best two-way player.

"We have to run the ball some," said Nutley. "Dayvon is a good back. We need to hold our blocks just a bit longer and get some movement on people."

North's line of Conor Pound, Seamus Broughton, Derek Huynh, Nick Manning and Fred Barsamian have played well. Most of them go both ways which is tough duty up front. It is no accident that North has been ahead, tied or in the game at halftime every week except for the Middleboro contest. The problems have come in the second half. Fatigue is one reason, but with adrenaline pumping for Thanksgiving against Quincy, it may not be an issue against the Presidents.

"It's been the third quarter. That's the period that gets us every week. We almost always play a good first half. We need to play better in the second half," said Nutley.

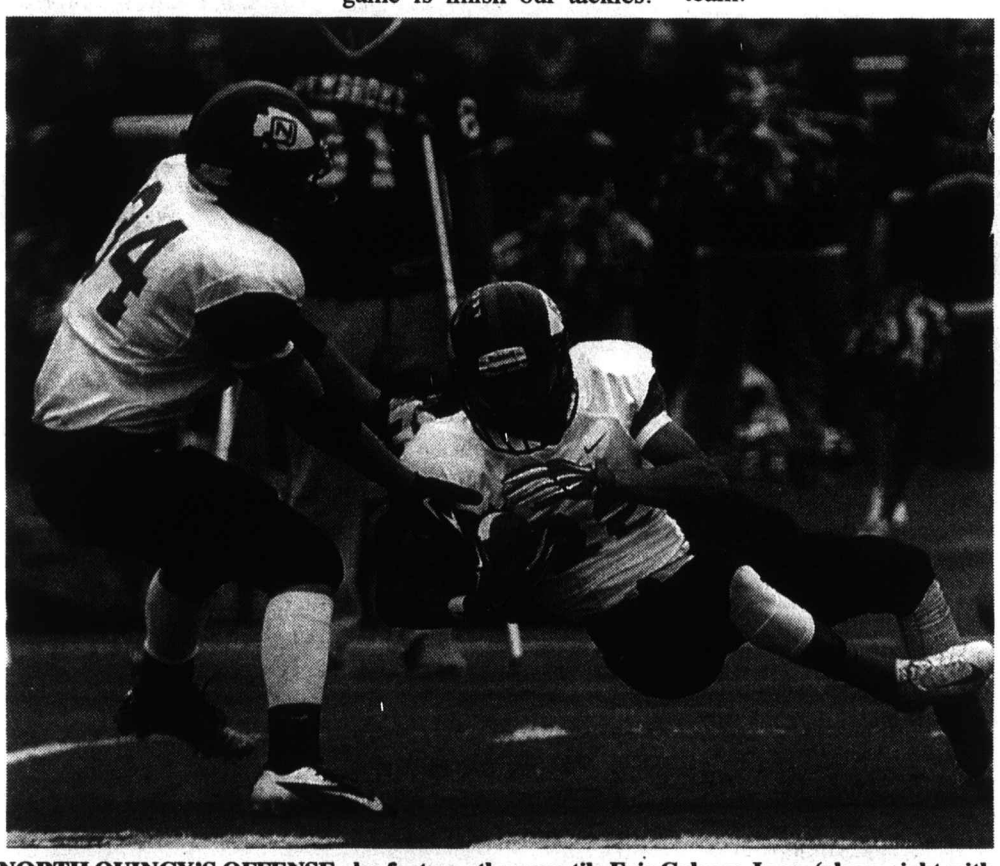

Alex Chen is a fine defensive end and Marcello Toscanini has had a huge year at linebacker. Dangora and Jones are solid linebackers which is important because North can't afford missed tackles against James Lam and Jahvae Handsom-Fields. Dara Griffin has developed into a dependable place-kicker.

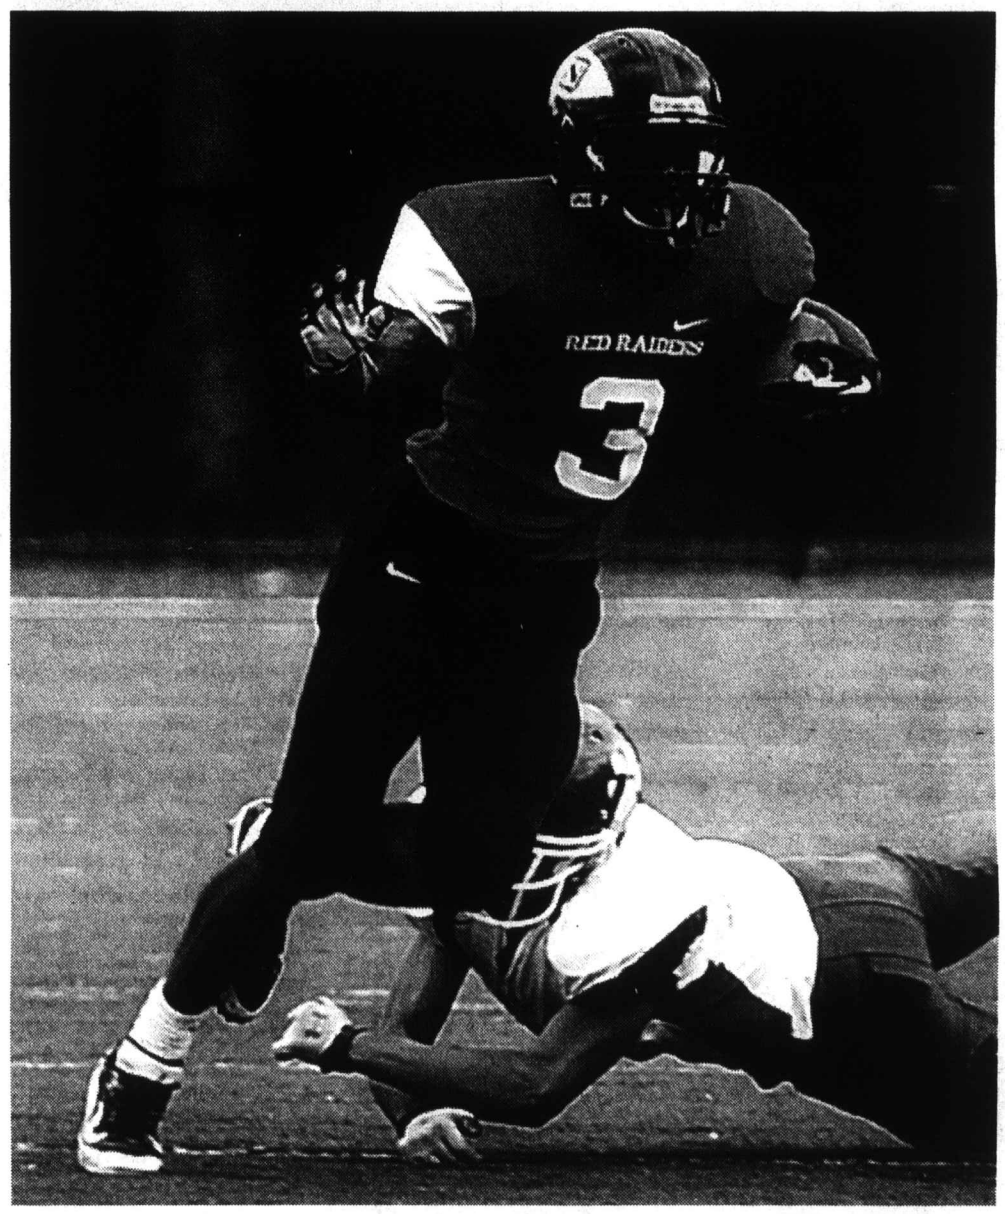

"For us the key to the game is finish our tackles. It's basic football. We have to block and tackle well. If we do, we' have a good chance," said Nutley.

Manning and Kiley were voted by the coaches to the Patriot League All Star team.

NORTH QUINCY'S OFFENSE also features the versatile Eric Cohane-Jones (above right with teammate Marcello Tonscanini) and Solomon Umoren (right).

"Jahvae is just a good football player. He has great instincts. He gives us balance on offense and keeps teams away from concentrating just on James," said Reardon.

If Quincy has had a problem, it has been defending the pass. In their three losses, the Presidents have been tied or ahead in the fourth period when they have been hurt by the pass. Without Handsom-Fields, Lam carried Quincy to a 14-14 tie into the fourth against Duxbury before the Dragons passing attack took control.

Quincy was ahead in the final two minutes against Needham when a long pass forced overtime. Mansfield scored its winning touchdown in the last two minutes on a drive which had passes of 24, 23, and 22 yards. This is an area the Presidents need to improve for Thanksgiving.

"It's the key to the game, how we handle the pass," said Reardon. "On a lot of the passes, we've been in position. We just haven't made the play. We have to do a better job of playing the ball in the air."

It is especially important because Kiley is throwing the ball well for North. He is a Patriot League All Star. He is poised and confident in the pocket and has the rare ability to both scramble and keep his eyes focused downfield looking for open receivers. Wideouts Eric-Cohane Jones, Solomon Umoren, and Aidan Brown are solid receivers who also run well after the catch. Dangora can catch the ball at tight end. Dayvon Jones is a receiving threat out of the backfield.

"It all starts with Andrew," said Reardon. "He's tall and he throws a good ball. We have all the respect in the world for him. He has good receivers. The key for us is to keep him in the pocket and put some pressure on him."

Quincy is excellent up front on both sides of the ball. The offensive line of Curtis Calley, Steve Scolaro, Mike Munroe, William Young, and Abraham Hoti has cleared gaping holes against quality teams. All are seniors except Munroe. There is experience, strength, and talent here.

"I'll miss them when they graduate. That's for sure," smiled Reardon. "They've done a great job as a unit for us for three years."

Calley, Munroe, Young and Hoti also anchor the defensive front. Junior Isiah Uzamere has come on with monster games against Braintree and Mansfield. Jake Bergonzi is a blue-chip linebacker, and Quincy has depth at the position with Alex Leo and Garrett Cronin.

"Isiah was definitely our best player against Braintree and, arguably, against Mansfield as well," said Reardon.

The offense will be bolstered by the likely return of wide receivers J.T. Bain and Andrew Cook who missed the Mansfield game with injuries. Reda Laftih had four catches for 60 yards against Mansfield and is also an accurate place-kicker

"I say the same things before every game. Avoid penalties, turnovers and missed tackles," said Reardon. "If we do that, we should be in good shape. But we have to do a better job against the passing game."

Lam, Hoti, Handsom-Fields and Munroe made the Patriot League All Star team for Quincy.

Seniors Bring Memories, Dreams To THE GAME

By BILL GRIFFIN

The best part of Thanksgiving is the stories. Six seniors – three from Quincy and three from North Quincy – will bring their memories and dreams into Thursday morning's 82nd meeting between the two schools at Veterans Stadium.

• Quincy quarterback James Lam remembers starting this game as a sophomore. He remembers the nerves and the excitement and the crowd. He remembers his brother Jackson. Jackson was a senior. James remembers looking at his brother and feeling a sense of calm and confidence. Jackson played left guard and won the Defensive Player of the Game award at linebacker.

"I was really nervous, afraid to make a mistake, but seeing my brother made me feel better," said Lam, who was named the Patriot League Most Valuable Player this season. "If we won, it would be the icing on the cake for what has been a great season. It's not easy to win three in a row against a team like North."

• North Quincy linebacker Zack Dangora knows this could well be his last game of football. Not just his last against Quincy. His last football game. Period. He has never played on a team that beat Quincy, and he thinks about what it would feel like if the underdog Red Raiders won. It would be a grand moment in what he says is the most important game of his life.

"It's definitely different than last year because this is my last game," said Dangora. "I've looked up to kids who played in this game for as long as a I can remember. As underdogs, it would be a huge victory."

George Burke To Attend 71st Consecutive Q-NQ Game

Attorney George G. Burke will be attending his 71st straight North Quincy - Quincy football game on Thanksgiving Thursday - a new record for consecutive games attended.

"Trigger" Burker is in the Quincy High School Football, Baseball and Basketball Halls of Fame. He also built the fitness center at Quincy High School at a cost of $100,000 and it is used continuously by the students.

Atty. Burke has sent 150 students to the University of Massachusetts (his alma mater) from Quincy High School and North Quincy High School.

• Quincy linebacker Jake Bergonzi thinks about growing up in North Quincy. He remembers going to games on Thanksgiving and rooting for North. He remembers playing youth football for the Apaches and listening to coaches tell him he had to work hard. He had to grow tough and strong so he could play for North on Thanksgiving. He will play for Quincy. He will play against great friends, neighborhood friends who will be rivals for one day.

"Words can't describe it," said Bergonzi. "All I heard about when I was growing up was playing for North in this game. I know all the North kids. They're my friends. That's what I like about the rivalry. Because of where I grew up, on the North side, it means that much more."

• North Quincy quarterback Andrew Kiley thinks about how the numbers have tilted in Quincy's favor since the new high school opened. He knows that Quincy has 30 more players on its roster. He thinks about how hard all the two-way players on his team have worked. He knows North's margin for error is slim. He thinks about how wonderful it would be if, for one morning, North could do what few expect.

"We don't have the numbers that Quincy does," said Kiley. "If one or two players go down, we're in trouble. Most of our players go both ways. We have to stay healthy. But if we won? It would be the greatest feeling in the world because the expectations are just not there. It definitely means a little extra."

• Quincy lineman William Young knows how much three consecutive wins on Thanksgiving would mean. It would mean that he never lost to North. It has been a series of streaks over the past 15 years. Quincy won ten straight. North won three straight. Quincy has won two straight. On his watch and in his own words, Young would like to "just keep the train rolling."

"The atmosphere and crowd will be unbelievable," said Young. "So, we have to stay disciplined. We have to know our assignments and execute them. Whoever wins the battle in the trenches will win the game."

• North Quincy defensive end Alex Chen remembers standing on the sideline his freshman year. It was 2011 and the last time North won. He remembers the North fans pouring onto the field, the post-game celebration and the joy of being a small part of a big experience. He would like to feel like that one more time and he believes his team can win a great victory.

"I believe we can win," he said. "The best part about it is that it would shock the city."

Quincy at 7-3 is the clear favorite over North at 2-8. None of the six players thought this was important.

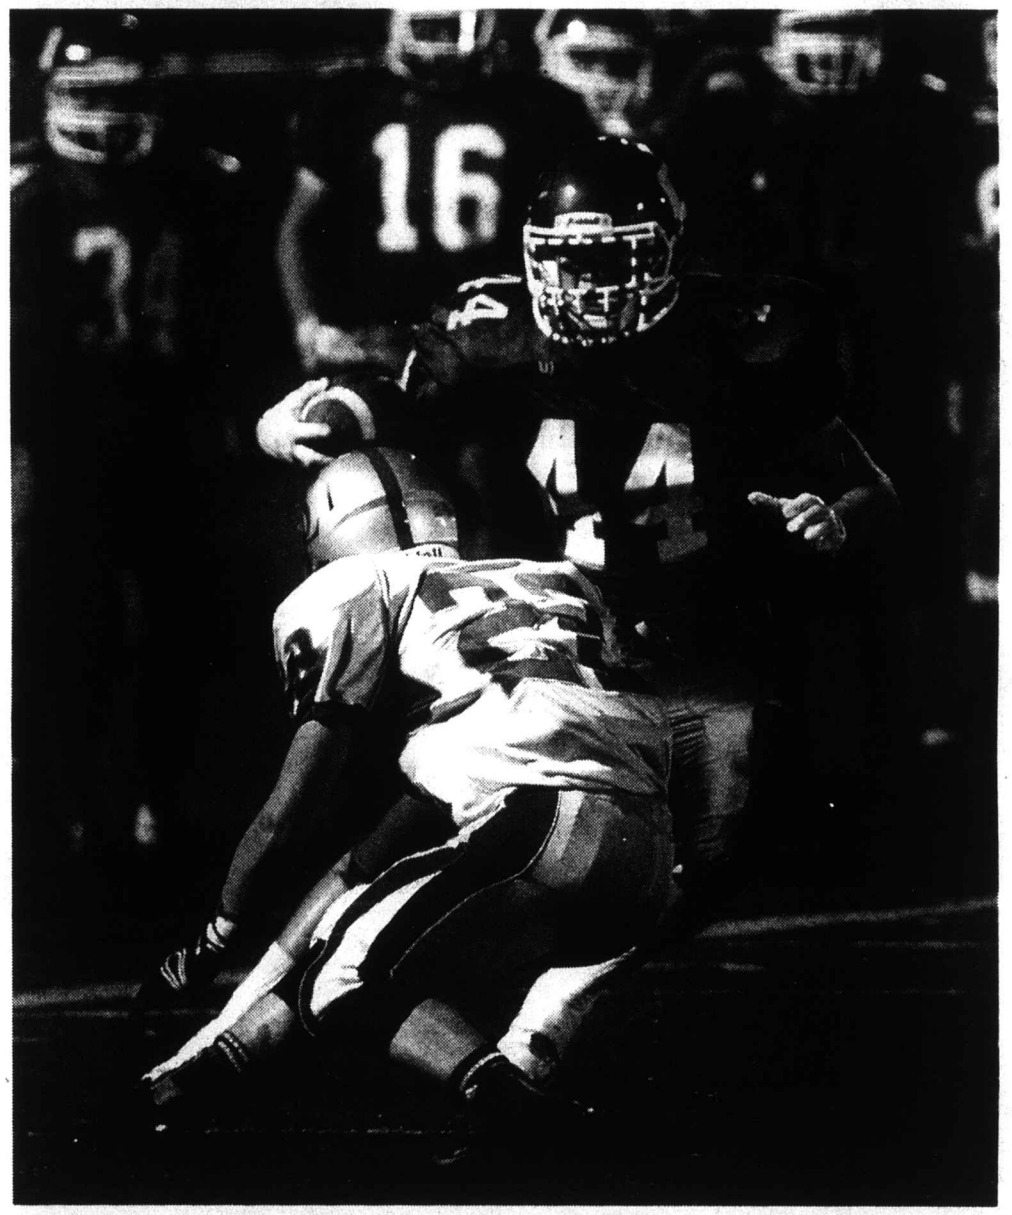

"It's not a game decided by talent, but by who wants it the most on that day," said Lam.

"Remember last year (a 14-0 Quincy win)," said Bergonzi. "We were the heavy favorite. They came out and drove the ball down the field on us. They almost scored and if they had, it might have been a different game. We have to be ready."

"I like being the underdog," smiled Dangora. "If we did beat them, it would make it that more special."

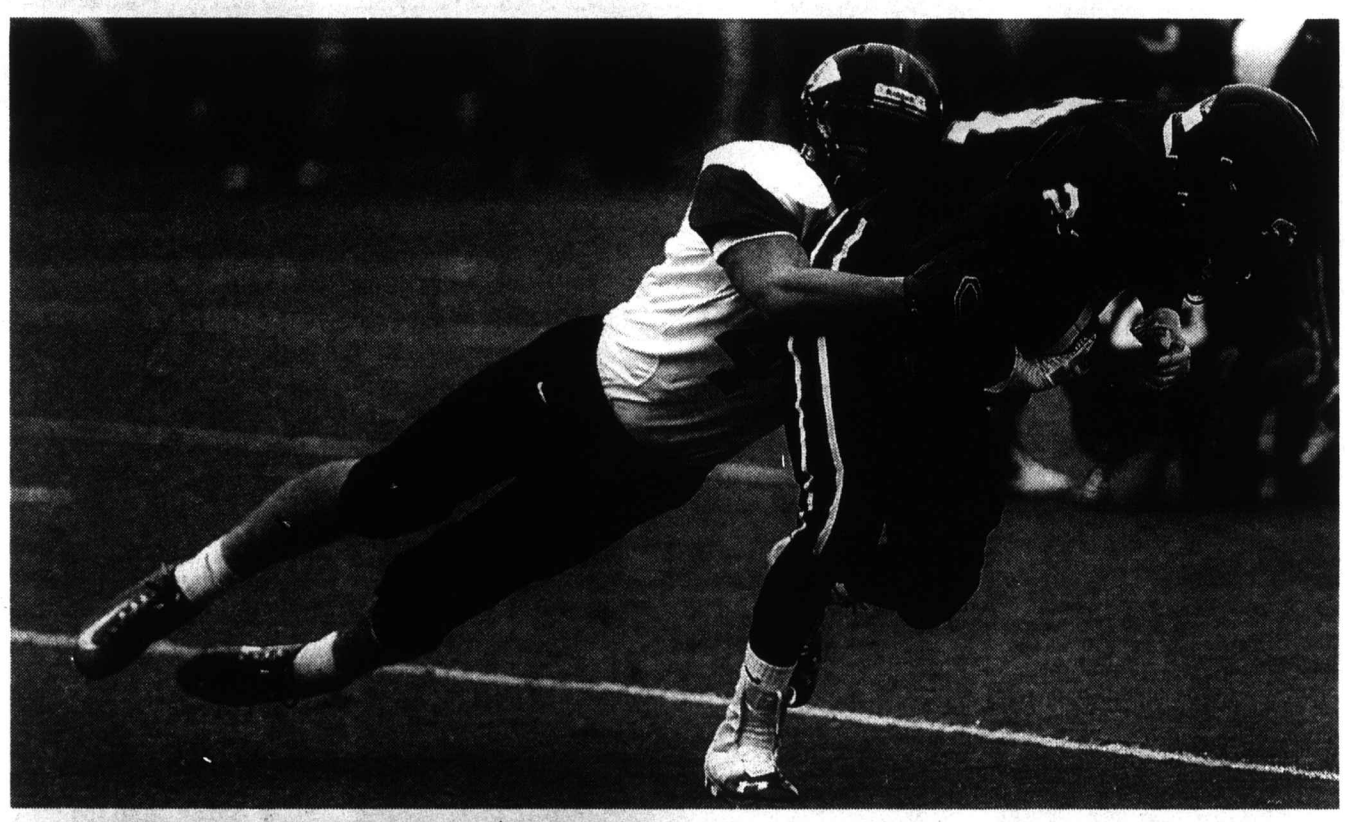

It is interesting that several of the players talked about the last year North won, 27-17 in 2011. They were only freshmen. They only watched, but they remembered well.

"I remember seeing the seniors with tears in their eyes and understanding how important the game was," said Young.

QUINCY'S JAKE BERGONZI (above #44) and North Quincy's Zack Dangora (below left, #44) seen in action earlier this season will be among the seniors on both squads who will suit up for their final high school football games Thanksgiving Day morning at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

"I remember how badly the seniors felt and thinking that I didn't want to feel like that after a North game," added Lam.

"I was standing on the sidelines and I couldn't believe the excitement," said Chen. "Everybody was laughing, smiling, cheering. I'll never forget it."

One of the best parts of the game is that it gives the players a sense of playing something beyond themselves or their school. It is a game that involves the whole city.

"When we won my freshman year, I remember the alumni coming out of the stands and arranging a group picture. It ran on the front page of The Quincy Sun. I still have it," said Chen.

"This game isn't just for us, it's for all the alumni who came before us, especially my brother," said Lam.

"The game is worth all the hype. It's bigger than just us. It's about the alumni and listening to the stories they tell us," said Young.

Each player has strong and fond memories of going to his first North vs. Quincy game on Thanksgiving.

"I think I was in the sixth or seventh grade," said Lam. "The crowd was huge and I couldn't believe how big the players were. They seemed like giants. I never thought I would be out there playing in a game like that."

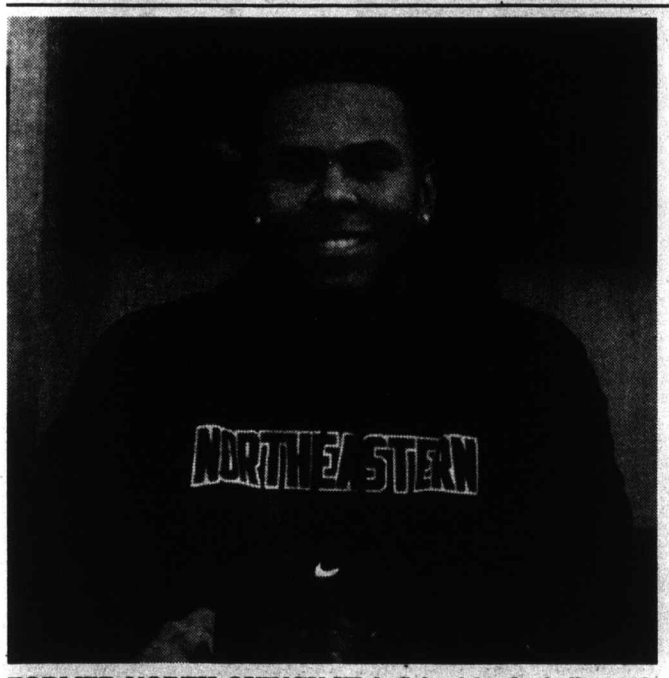

"My brother went to BC High, so my family always went to the BC High-Catholic Memorial game," said Kiley. "I went for the first time in the eight grade, and it was awesome. I couldn't believe how focused the crowd was. At a lot of games, the conversation turns to other things. At the North-Quincy game, the only thing people talked about was the game. All eyes were on the game."

"My mother took me before I could walk," smiled Bergonzi. "Thanksgiving was always the same: The game and turkey dinner. I was on the North side growing up which still makes this a little strange."

"I went with my grandfather and brother every year since the sixth grade," said Dangora. "I watched the players and saw all the excitement. I remember thinking: I want to play in that game some day."

"I think I started going in the fifth grade," said Young. "It made me imagine so many things. I imagined the players must feel like superstars playing in front of that crowd who was so big and loud. I couldn't imagine the whole atmosphere. I think it was the most people I had ever seen in one place. All I could do was imagine I could play in a game like that."

"I never went until I played my freshman year, and we won," smiled Chen. "I remember the walk back along Hancock Street, the victory walk with all those people cheering for us. It was a great feeling."

Q-NQ Alumni Flag Football Game Rekindles Memories

By BILL GRIFFIN

Preserve your memories. They are wise words from Simon and Garfunkel who sang songs in a time shortly after dinosaurs roamed the earth. More impressive than their wisdom was the fact that people were playing football at Veterans Stadium Saturday who were old enough to remember Simon and Garfunkel.

For one blessed afternoon at the second annual North Quincy vs. Quincy Alumni Flag Football Game, people from the city proved that you can come home again. The players ranged from 20-60. They came from Maine to Florida. They had brown hair, gray hair and no hair at all. They were trim and fast. They had waistlines that had thickened though the years. They sprinted and ran and jogged and walked and limped and, sometimes, they sat.

Cheerleaders danced and sang. The sun kissed the afternoon. Friends who see each other once a week and once a year shook hands. Aching limbs and joints stretched and groaned. Old passions rose up as the game played out to an exciting finish.

Quincy won, 21-12 and evened the series at 1-1. The event raised $10,000 to aid the football programs at each school. And all who were there shook down the memories from the sky, memories from Thanksgivings past which will always touch them

In a shady, quiet corner of the Stadium, Bob Pound sold vintage North Quincy football jerseys which reached back to the 1970s. There were cutoff models in tribute to the Brian Bosworth Era of the 1980s. The jerseys cost $10. Sales were brisk.

"It was coach (Mark) Nutley's idea. People identify with the jerseys from their era and pick them up," said Pound. "I think we'll have them out for Turkey Day."

Pound's son Connor will play for North Thursday. Father and son are both linemen. Bob's senior year on Thanksgiving was 1981, a 7-0 North victory on a run by Joe Dudek. Dudek went on to break the NCAA rushing record at Plymouth State and play for the Denver Broncos.

"I was real happy we won because I was offsides on another TD run Joe had, an 80-yarder, and it was called back. I didn't want coach (Ken) McPhee to even see me," said Pound.

The idea of raising money to help the football teams brought back a moment from the past.

"When I played for Atlantic Middle School, I shared a helmet with Paul Martin. They think they have problems now," he said with a smile.

Paul Martin, the man who shared a helmet with Pound more than 30 years in the past, played on the offensive line for Quincy Saturday. It is one of countless stories about how this rivalry intersects lives as much as it does games.

"I grew up in North Quincy. I remember sharing that helmet. Those were fun times playing football," he said.

Martin was there Saturday with mates Bill Walsh, Mike Shaughnessy and Steve Aluisy from the team that played Pound and Dudek on Thanksgiving.

"Don't worry about spelling Aluisy. People have been messing that up for 35 years," smiled Martin. "The best part of this game is that it never lets you forget where you came from. It makes us one city and connects us right down to the kids who will play on Thursday."

He was right. Quincy quarterback James Lam and North QB Andrew Kiley watched the game with teammates. Nutley and Quincy coach Bill Reardon refereed. If there ever was a day when past, present and future crossed lines, this was it.

There was a six-piece band who was brilliant. All the selections were excellent, but their version of "Dirty Water" at halftime should have been played at Fenway Park in July after the Red Sox scored six in the ninth to beat the Yankees.

Under chilly pre-game clouds, they called themselves The Frozen Children. After the sun came out and warmed the day, they switched to The Bleacher Creatures. Take your pick.

"We did practice together a couple of times, but to be honest, I think we drank beer more than we practiced," said Rob Buttomer who graduated from Quincy, class of 1988.

Chris Bertoni (North, 2003), Dave Magnell (Quincy 1985), Steve Freel (Quincy, 1988), Greg Tragellis (North, 2004) and Mike Angelo (neither school, Quincy fan) joined Buttomer in the band. Bobby Magnell (Quincy 2008) helped with the sound.

"The best part of today is seeing people you haven't seen in years. I must have had a 100 people call out to me and I don't know who half of them are," said Buttomer.

When Buttomer was a senior, a winless Quincy team battled North to a 6-6 tie.

"We were 27-point underdogs. We were 0-9-1 that year. It was a tough, tough year, but Thanksgiving made up for it," said Frank Calabro who was a captain for the Presidents on that team.

Paul Doherty, who turns 58 this week, walked the North sideline and waited for a chance. He was a kicker and guard for the 1973 team North team which lost 14-13 to Quincy. The only thing he had in mind Saturday was kicking.

"I've already heard about how old I am because I'm the only one wearing real football pants," he smiled. "I haven't missed many Thanksgiving games. My classmates and I pick the same spot and we meet there every year."

His chance came when North scored late in the second half. A holder spotted the ball for him. His approach was old-school, straight-on like Lou Groza, Pat Summerall, Gino Cappelletti. There was none of this new-fangled, soccer-style stuff. He struck the ball solidly. It started straight, but leaked out just wide to the left.

"It felt good when I kicked it. It would have felt a lot better if I made it," said Doherty.

Kerrie Doherty cheered for Quincy just as she did for the 1985 team which won on Thanksgiving. For Doherty, the day had all the feel of a reunion, only much, much better."

"First there's no pressure," she said. "You don't have to worry about losing weight to fit into a dress because we're all wearing big coats. Second, it's a family day. Not only do you see old friends, you see their families.

"You see people who you've kept up with and people who you haven't seen in years. There are players out there in their 60s and kids who just graduated. It's a great day."

She and her friends sang the school song, danced, and waved pom-poms. There was a request for moves from their youth, perhaps a human pyramid.

"Not from us" was her quick response.

After Quincy raced out to a 15-0 lead, quarterback Chris Bregoli began North's comeback with a long touchdown pass to Frank McNamara who traveled from Washington, D.C. for the game. Same pass, different year.

"I hit Frank with a touchdown pass on Thanksgiving when were both seniors, and we beat Quincy, 21-6 in 1998," said Bregoli.

It is a day Bregoli and North fans remember fondly because of what followed. Quincy won the next 10 games on Thanksgiving.

"North wouldn't have another winning quarterback until 2009," said Bregoli.

Ian Jorgensen walked the Quincy side and talked of his Thanksgiving Day of 2003 when he played defensive end and Quincy won, 20-7. The Presidents made the playoffs at 7-1-1 and would not make them again until this year.

"I remember it well. I lined up against my brother Alex and we went at it an every play. It was like what we used to do in the backyard," he said. "We grew up in Wollaston. I went to Quincy and Alex went to North. On Thanksgiving, we played opposite each other. It was fun."

Quincy lost to Mansfield in the first round of the 2003 playoffs on a frigid day.

"It was so cold, you'd spit out your mouthpiece and it would freeze before it hit the ground," said linebacker D.J. Andrews. "On my four Thanksgivings against North, we won four times and only gave up seven points. I always remember that."

Public address announcer Mike Flavin had the most sane advice of the day. After the National Anthem, the players raced out on to the field. He said in a loud voice.

"Now, don't get hurt!"

For North cheerleader Nancy Peduzzi McNulty, the day was like her own personal time machine.

"I felt like I went back in time to Thanksgiving 1983," she said. "I had my outfit laid out the night before. I had the same butterflies before the game. It made me remember how we used to get ready for the game: The pep rally, the spirit around school, and decorating the players houses."

North did successfully hold and raise cheerleaders without need of medical attention. Before the game, several teammates lofted Liz Tufts into the air.

"I did most of the holding and my wrist really hurts," said Jodi Mackie.

Joey Holleran looked back into the sun and caught a long touchdown pass from Sean Dolbeare to help bring North within 15-12 late in the game.

"All I had to do was put up my hands. The pass was perfect," he said. "The best part about this game is I wouldn't see 90 per cent of the people who are here if he I didn't play. Plus the party at The Commonwealth after the game is pretty good too."

Kevin O'Connell ran for a touchdown and threw a TD pass to Scott Kelly for Quincy. Justin Thorley ran back an interception for Quincy's third touchdown.

"That rushing touchdown matched my varsity total for four years," smiled O'Connell

"Our class has stayed pretty close. This game gives us a chance to see the older and younger guys," said Kelly who played with O'Connell in 2001.

The action was spirited from the start, but the atmosphere was friendly. Players, fans, cheerleaders, and referees freely mixed. Pictures were posed and taken. The were laughs and smiles and jokes. Until it got close. When North drew with 15-12 with 3:00 left, the old fires flared. Players shouted, coaches complained about the clock, and the game grew fast and loud. This was still Quincy against North Quincy.

"If we had pads and helmets on, there might have done some damage," smiled Holleran.

When it was over, there were handshakes with old and true friends, talk of the night at The Commonwealth, and a strong sense of an afternoon well spent and played.

"I'm already in pain. I'll probably spend four hours in the pool at the Weymouth Health Club tomorrow, but it was worth it," said Paul Martin.

That it was.

On Thursday, November 13, 2014 at approximately 2:48 a.m, Officer Sean McCormack was dispatched to Cross Street for a possible overdose.

Upon arrival, the Officer met the female caller at the door to the apartment. She motioned for the Officer to follow as she ran into the bedroom, where a male was on the floor. The caller frantically stated that she was attempting to perform CPR on the male. Officer McCormack saw that the male's skin tone was blue and he was not breathing. There was a rubber band commonly used by drug users next to the male and there was a blood trail on his left forearm suggesting that the male recently used drugs.

The Officer administered one dose of nasal Narcan which caused the male to begin shallow breathing but was still unresponsive. Officer McCormack administered a second dose of nasal Narcan, but the male remained unresponsive.

At this time, Quincy Fire Engine 5 arrived on scene and took over the resuscitating efforts of the male. Fallon Ambulance Paramedics arrived and began using the Ambu bag on the male to assist him in breathing. Soon after, the male's skin color returned to normal and a few moments later he became responsive.

At first, the male was agitated and began to resist treatment, then calmed down. The male was then transported to Quincy Medical Center for further treatment. The Officer then interviewed the caller, who said that she received a call from the male's mother stating that he was talking of "hurting himself." The caller said that the male took a mixture of cocaine and heroin and then became unresponsive. She added that the male told her that he planned on having himself sectioned (put into a treatment program) tomorrow and just wanted one more fix before doing so. Two needles were removed from the scene.

Just as Officer McCormack was clearing the scene, Communications informed him that there was an active restraining order against the male which was served to him by the Quincy Police. The Officer spoke with the caller, who said she was aware of the order and that it was still active. She admitted that she allowed the male to stay with her because he had no where else to go. She was informed that the order stated he must stay away from the Cross Street address and by being there, he was in violation of the order. Secondly, by allowing him to be there, she too was technically in violation of the order.

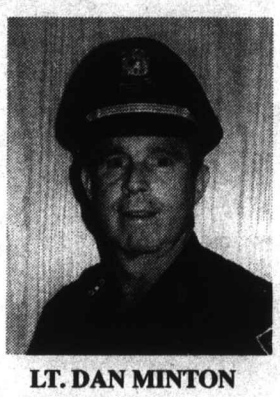

While receiving medical care at Quincy Medical Center, the male, a 33 year old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for violation of the restraining order. Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE: On Friday, November 14, 2014, Officer Ryan Donnelly was assigned to the Quincy Police Anti-crime unit in a plain clothes capacity in Quincy Center. At approximately 2:00 p.m., while conducting surveillance at the Quincy Center MBTA station, the Officer noticed a group of seven males in their late teens to early twenties standing in a group.

A Job Well Done

LT. DAN MINTON

After a few minutes, male suspect "#1 walked up to male suspect #2 and together they walked down the pathway behind City Hall parallel to the train tracks. Officer Donnelly unobtrusively followed the two down the path and observed suspect #1 take a $20 bill out of his right front pants pocket and give it to suspect #2. Suspect #2 then took a plastic bag out of his right front pocket, open it and give suspect #1 a smaller plastic bag with marijuana in it.

At this point, Officer Donnelly was right next to the two suspects and showed them his Police badge and announced that he was a Police Officer. The Officer took a hold of suspect #2, handcuffed him and took possession of the marijuana in his hand. He then told suspect #1 to turn around and place his hands on his head. Officer Donnelly contacted Quincy Police Communications to get back up. Within moments, Anti Crime Officer Mike Brandolini, Officer Kristen Bowes, Lieutenants Minton and Sorgi arrived on location. Both suspects were searched. Suspect #2 had four individually wrapped bags of marijuana and a $20 bill on him from the sale with suspect #1. There was one bag of marijuana seized from the hand of suspect #1.

Officer Bowes transported suspect #2, an 18 year old Dorchester resident, to the Quincy Police Station to be booked for "Distribution of Class D Drug." Officer Donnelly told suspect #1, a juvenile to call his parents and let them know that he was being transported home to them. Nice Work!

HEALTH INSURANCE SCAM: (excerpts from FTC) For many, it is that time of year to be able to switch health coverage. As you select your health insurance plan, watch out for scams. Whether you are on Medicare, selecting a plan through the Affordable Care Act (ACA), or have private insurance, here are some tips to help you more safely navigate the open enrollment season.

A variety of scams take advantage of Medicare recipients. Here are a few:

-An "official Medicare agent" knocks on your door selling Medicare insurance that can save you money. It's a scam. There are no Medicare sales representatives. It's probably someone who wants to use your information to commit fraud or identity theft.

-Someone calls and says you must join their prescription plan or else you'll lose your Medicare coverage. Don't believe it. The Medicare prescription drug plan (also known as Part D) is voluntary.

-Someone calls claiming that you need to give your Medicare number in order for you to keep your Medicare coverage under ACA. It's a scam. Don't give your personal information over the phone. If you need help with Medicare, call 1-800-MEDICARE or go to medicare.gov.

AFFORDABLE CARE ACT: If you are shopping in the Health Insurance Marketplace, only shop at HealthCare.gov. People who try to sign you up elsewhere may be scammers. If you're overwhelmed, you can find free official helpers at HealthCare.gov. Official helpers will never ask for money or try to sell you a particular plan.

Another important tip: the government will not call to sell you health insurance. No one from the government will ask you to verify your Social Security number or bank information over the phone.

PRIVATE INSURANCE: If you're looking for health insurance, make sure that's what you're buying. Be on the lookout for medical discount plans. They're not the same as health insurance, even though they sometimes pretend to be. Many of these plans are scams that don't deliver on the services promised. Others are just a way for identity thieves to get your personal information. Your state insurance commissioner's office can tell you if a plan isn't insurance and whether the seller is licensed in your state.

REPORT HEALTH CARE SCAMS: If you think you may be a victim of a health care scam, report it to the FTC. If the scam is Medicare-related, report it at medicare.gov.

If you gave out personal information, then call your banks, credit card providers, health insurance company, and credit reporting agencies immediately. The FTC's website has more information on health care scams and medical identity theft.

The Harrises have spent years on the road and have had stage experience with performers such as Pete Seeger, Jay Leno, and Harry Belafonte.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN

"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer 3 consecutive days, and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. Thanks to St. Anthony & St. Joseph. St. Jude 11/26

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) That change in holiday travel plans might be more vexing than you'd expected. But try to take it in stride. Also, it couldn't hurt to use that Aries charm to coax out some helpful cooperation.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your Bovine determination helps you deal with an unforeseen complication. And, as usual, you prove that when it comes to a challenge, you have what it takes to take it on.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Although a romantic theme dominates much of the week, all those warm and fuzzy feelings don't interfere with the more pragmatic matters you need to take care of.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Best not to ignore those doubts about an upcoming decision. Instead, recheck the facts you were given to make sure nothing important was left out. A weekend surprise awaits you.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) No time for a catnap -- yet. You might still have to straighten out one or two factors so that you can finally assure yourself of the truth about a troubling workplace situation. Stay with it.
VIRGO (August 23 September 22) News from an old friend could lead to an unexpected (but nonetheless welcome) reunion with someone who had once been very special in your life. Be open to the possibilities.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It might be time for a family council. The sooner those problems are resolved, the sooner you can move ahead with your holiday preparations. Don't let the opportunity pass you by.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Take some time out to give more attention to a personal relationship that seems to be suffering from a sense of emotional neglect. Provide that much-needed reassurance.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Cheer up. That unusual circumstance that might faze most people can be handled pretty well by the savvy Sagittarian. Look at it as an opportunity rather than an obstacle.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Someone you believe has hurt you in the past might now need your help. Reaching out could be difficult. But the generous Goat will be able to do the right thing, as always.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Prioritizing is an important part of your pre-holiday scheduling. Try to give time both to your workday responsibilities and those personal matters you might have neglected.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) With the vestiges of your anger about that painful incident fading, you can now focus all your energy on the more positive aspects of your life, including that personal situation.
BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of bringing your own strong sense of reassurance to others and encouraging them to hope.

Quincy Players Lead Aggie Volleyball

FOUR PLAYERS from Quincy recently helped the Norfolk County Agricultural High School volleyball team reach the Central Sectional final of the MIAA Division 3 state tournament. From left are Sidney MacPherson (junior), Brenna Burke (junior), Amy Thompson (senior) and Courtney Murray (senior). All four were starters and played pivotal roles in this season's accomplishments. Norfolk Aggie finished the season 22-4. The team won the Mayflower League Championship and the state Vocational Championship defeating Tri-County out of Franklin. In the Central Sectional Final, they bowed to Sutton High School. Coach Allison Murphy stated that captains Amy Thompson and Courtney Murray both showed superb leadership all season. They have been on varsity for four years and have put in a lot of hard work in the off season helping Aggie volleyball become a force to be reckoned with. Brenna Burke and Sydney MacPherson still have another year and Coach Murphy said she looks forward to them leading Aggie to another dominant season. Photo Courtesy Robert Thompson

Thanksgiving

is a tradition that dates back to our earliest roots as a Nation.
At this time of year, we reflect and give thanks for the many blessings bestowed on this country.

I would like to take a moment to pause and express my gratitude to the people of this City for the opportunity to serve as mayor of the greatest City in the Commonwealth.

I thank our veterans for protecting our freedoms.
I thank our spiritual leaders for the nourishment they provide for the soul. I thank the heads of organizations and agencies serving those in need.

I thank our City employees for teaching our kids, protecting our streets and delivering outstanding services to our residents. I thank people who volunteer their time helping our neighbors and our community.
I thank our business and labor leaders for their commitment to our City.

I thank God for the gifts of life, family and friendship.

Thank you, Quincy.

It's Beginning To Look A Lot Like Christmas

SANTA WAS AGAIN the main attraction at Sunday's 62nd annual Quincy Christmas Parade waving to thousands of spectators. Mr. Claus rode the 3-mile parade route on a Quincy fire truck accompanied by Quincy firefighter Joseph Ceurvels, Jr.

THE PARADE honored the "Greatest Generation" - local veterans of World War II including Bob Noble (above), an Army Air Force veteran and ex-POW shown here waving from a convertible.

AN ARRAY of high school bands – some decked out in holiday attire - marched in this year's parade.

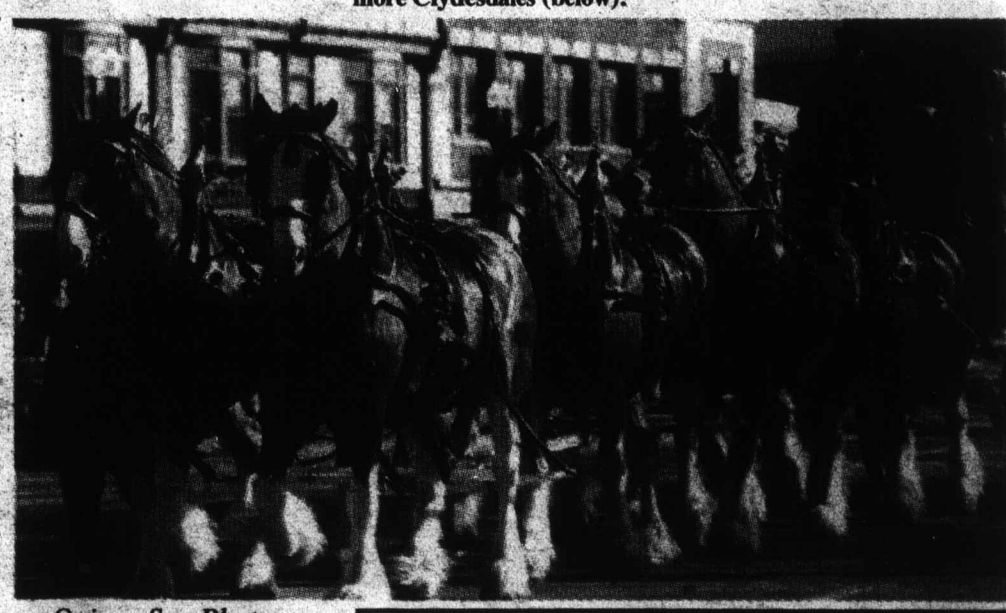

'AN OLD FASHIONED Christmas' was the theme of this year's parade. This float entry by Stop & Shop - a main sponsor of the parade - received the Mayor's Trophy for the Best Quincy Float in the commercial float category.

THE PARADE featured new attractions - like this walking fire juggler (above) - and returning favorites including the Hallamore Clydesdales (below).

CYCLING MURRAYS clad in red and green elf outfits roll along Hancock Street - on one and two wheels. Parade story, more photos on Pages 14, 16, 17 and 39.

Helping Hands Stepping Up For Holiday Aid

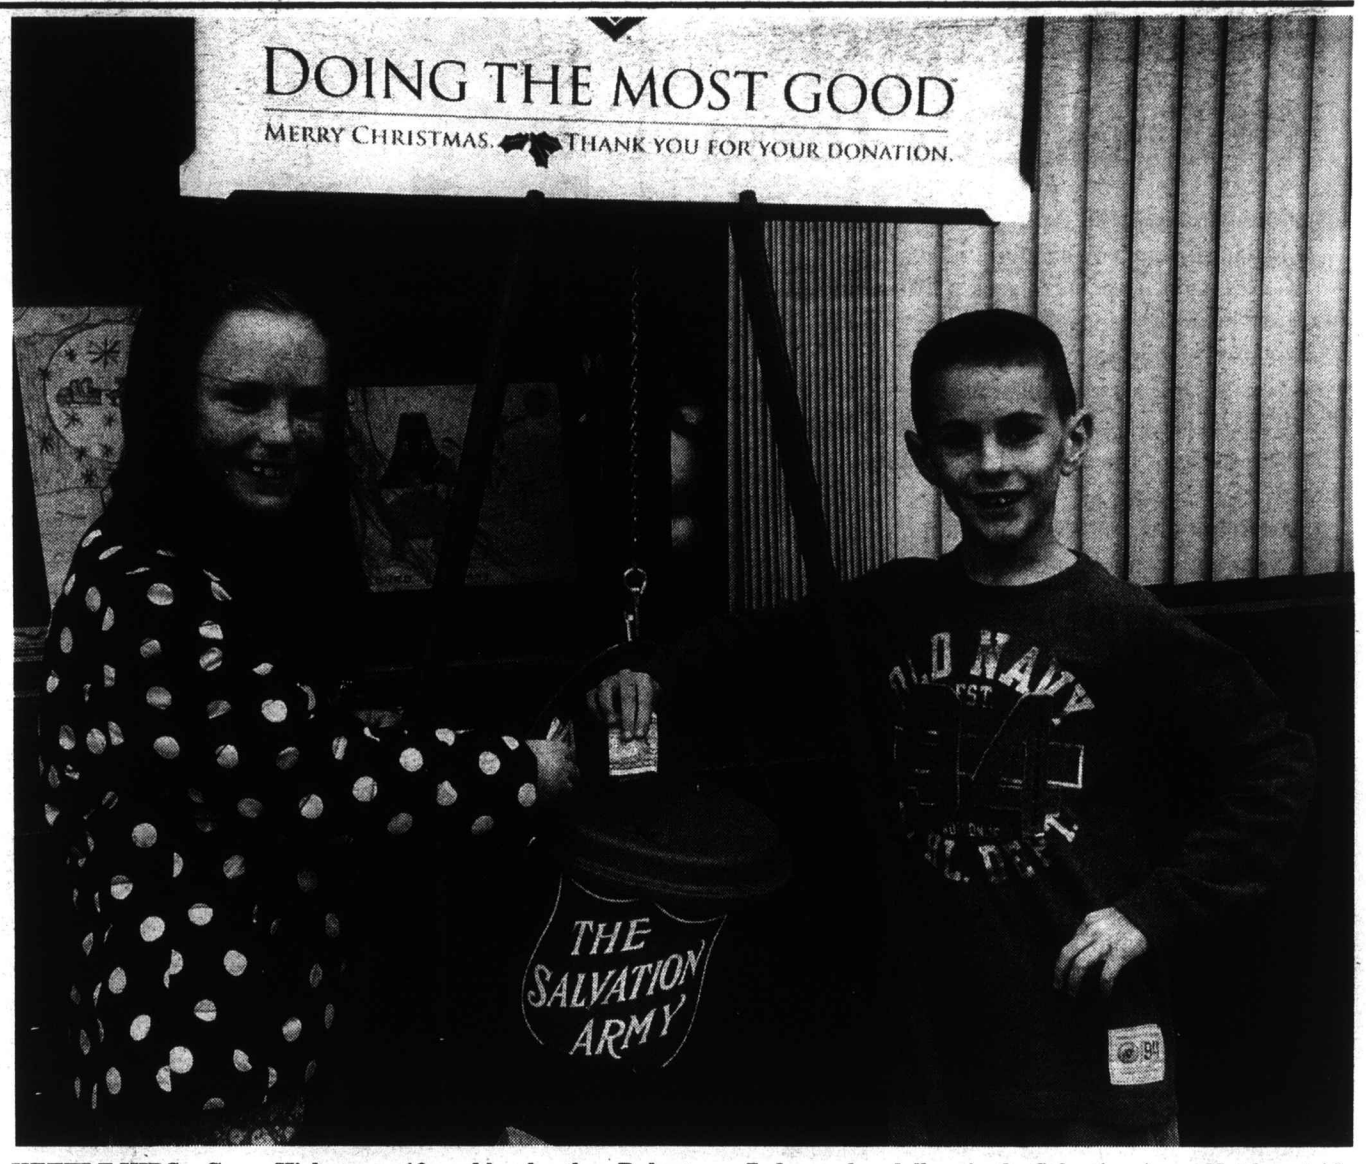

Charities Seeking Community Assistance

By SCOTT JACKSON

The holiday season, for many, is a time to celebrate and spend time with loved ones. It is, however, also a time to give back to those in need, and many local charities are asking residents to do just that.

Quincy's charities expect to help more needy individuals this holiday season than in years past. They assist individuals and families in a myriad of ways, providing food, clothing, toys, shelter, and other services. Those organizations are in need of help through monetary or in-kind donations. Many of them also rely on volunteers and need extra help this time of year.

Pearl Harbor Remembrance Sunday

Noon Ceremony At Mount Wollaston Cemetery

By SCOTT JACKSON

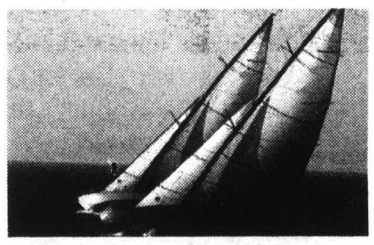

The city will mark the 73rd anniversary of the Attack on Pearl Harbor during a solemn ceremony beginning at noon on Sunday, Dec. 7 at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. The ceremony will take place at the World War II Monument inside the cemetery, which bears the names of the 255 Quincy residents killed during the war.

Marc Connolly, the commandant of the William R. Caddy Detachment of the Marine Corps League, is the guest speaker for the ceremony. He will offer a Marine's perspective of the Attack on Pearl Harbor. Also scheduled to speak are Mayor Thomas Koch, Sen. John Keenan, and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, chairwoman of the council's veterans committee.

Lawrence Norton, president of the Pearl Harbor Committee, will give the welcome and read a roll call of Departed Brothers. The Rev. John Carl Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church and a former Navy lieutenant, will provide the invocation. George F. Nicholson, the city's director of veterans services, will introduce guests. Heikki Pakkala, the Quincy Veterans Council assistant chaplain, will provide the benediction.

The Dec. 7, 1941, attack by the Japanese on Pearl Harbor, located on the Hawaiian island of Oahu, killed 2,402 American service members and civilians, and wounded 1,282. The United States declared war on Japan one day later following President Franklin D. Roosevelt's "Infamy" speech. Days later the country declared war on Germany and Italy, after those countries declared war on the U.S.

Finally ... you get to do what you want to do

The question now – what's the best way to pay for it?

Maybe you're simplifying your life. Maybe you're complicating it. Either way, you're at the point where some new doors are opening. You have resources. You have options. What you want is a lender you can talk to – someone you like, whose judgment you trust and respect – to help make the financing happen intelligently. At Colonial Federal, we specialize in working with people like you. Here you deal directly with lenders who actually like coming up with good ways to make things happen. Including sometimes being able to make customized loans. Sound interesting? Like to talk? Call Angela Blanchard, Vice-President/Retail Lending, at 617-471-0750 or apply online at colonialfed.com.

BASIC BLACK

In fashion, black never goes out of style. The lustrous, opaque black material known as "jet" has been popular for thousands of years. It found its widest use during the mid-nineteenth century when Victorian jet jewelry was called "mourning jewelry." However, that is hardly the context in which jet and other black stones, such as onyx, are viewed today. For instance, a black beaded necklace can project just enough mystery to draw particular attention to an evening dress, or a black onyx pin complemented with diamonds may be just demure enough for the office. Similarly, the tasteful elegance of a strand of black jade beads or black enamel rings speaks of dressiness by virtue of its simplicity.

There is something so alluring about black jewelry. This mysterious, dark hue not only looks great in jewelry designs, but its neutral color will go well with any other colors in your wardrobe. Select the perfect jewelry to suit your taste at our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. We feature a wonderful selection of bracelets, brooches, rings, necklaces, pendants, and watches. Koch Expects To Seek 5th Term

You can just about pencil in Mayor Thomas Koch as a candidate for re-election next year.

Koch says he expects to seek a fifth term in 2015. The mayor also squashed rumors that he's taking a job in the Baker administration.

"I expect to be a candidate for re-election in 2015 but I will not make a final decision announcement until after the beginning of the new year," he said last week.

KOCH

Speculation about Koch not running next year and instead joining Governor-elect Charlie Baker in his administration in January were rampant after Baker won the gubernatorial election Nov. 4. Koch – a Democrat who is elected in non-partisan in city elections – backed the Republican Baker in the final election against Democrat Martha Coakley.

But Koch's support will not result in a state post in the next governor's administration, he says.

"Charlie Baker and I have never discussed a position for me in his administration," Koch told The Sun. "He and I have discussed a lot of state issues that Quincy is facing, a lot of challenges that we are facing. That's been the point of discussion each and every time.

"I am not interested in joining the Baker administration because my heart is in Quincy. I am not interested in walking way from my post as mayor. I still have fire in the belly. I still love my job.

"I think we're making great progress and there's more to be done."

Koch is at the half-way mark of his fourth two-year term as the city's chief executive. He was elected in 2007 unseating then Mayor William Phelan. He was re-elected in 2009 in a mayoral rematch with Phelan and two years later defeated School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney. Koch was unopposed in winning a fourth term in 2013.

Potential challengers in 2015 include Mahoney and Councillor Doug Gutro. Mahoney told the Sun a few weeks ago that she is strongly considering a second bid for mayor next year. Gutro has said he will make a decision about his political future after the first of the year.

Next year will mark the first time the city elects a mayor to a four-year term. Voters approved doubling the term from two to four years by a citizens' initiative petition in 2013.

So, the winner of next fall's mayor's race will receive a four-year term to run the city.

Having a four-year term for mayor will create a lot of soul searching for potential candidates. Run next year or wait four more years for the 2019 election cycle.

Gone will be the days when someone can challenge a mayor every two years.

Koch sounds very much like he'll make his re-election candidacy official next month. His reasons for running again include a myriad of items on his agenda, including upgrading city infrastructure, improving school and other municipal buildings, beautifying and creating more public space as well as expanding repairs on streets and sidewalks and addressing veterans services and public safety.

"We've been working real hard on a lot of infrastructure issues. We've made tremendous progress on our city buildings, namely the schools. We've made progress in a number of areas regarding flooding and draining improvements and seawall work and Quincy Center infrastructure improvements but much remains to be done and I don't think I've finished the job at this point. For those reasons, I probably will seek re-election," he said.

Koch is also encouraged by Quincy Mutual's plan to build two six-story buildings featuring 400 residential units and thousands of square feet in retail space near Hancock and Chestnut Streets. This area had been slated for another development before StreetWorks – Quincy's master developer – and the city severed ties earlier this year.

"The announcement of the new downtown project by Quincy Mutual Group two weeks ago is a positive one. Those things just don't happen. There's been a lot of work and I expect there will be subsequent, meaningful announcements coming in early 2015 with real timetables for construction. So I am excited about that and I want to see some of that through."

Koch said he believes the Quincy Mutual project will act as a catalyst for future downtown development over the next two years.

"There will be other projects that we will be talking about publicly other than Quincy Mutual that will be more directly involved with our public lands and we'll be dealing with some infrastructure challenges – namely parking. We no longer have a master developer so the city will be dealing with several developers although we have a consultant to assist us to continue to move our vision forward.

"The players have changed, (but) the plan is still a mixed use development. It may not be as designed or envisioned by StreetWorks but nonetheless there is tremendous interest and I expect a lot of construction over the next two years for Quincy Center that will fulfill a big part of our vision."

Koch said the city is ripe for residential development.

"I can say the market for residential property is extremely hot. Residential property values in the city are up 7 and a half percent in a year. We enjoy the economic growth being on the Red Line next to Boston so therefore there is tremendous interest in residential.

"There is tremendous interest in the retail aspect. The commercial is still a little bit flat in the marketplace. We're not going to drive something that is not conducive to the marketplace and right now residential and retail there's a tremendous interest in Quincy Center.

"I've been visited by a number of investors, a number of developers. There are those who are looking for a fire sale and those who come in may want to cut a deal and my recommendation is to go and buy some property and become a player. There are some real players who bought up some property who are putting their plans together.

"We've shared our vision," the mayor continued. "We've told them what we want to see. They will get back to us because they are capitalized and they are for real."

Koch said two city-owned parcels – the John Hancock Municipal Parking Area and the Ross Parking Garage – are future development sites.

The mayor is also buoyed by an improving economy. He said the first few years of his administration occurred during one of the deepest recessions since the Great Depression.

"I think we're out of the (financial) depth of where we were. The climb has been slower. I think we're making progress and I think Quincy is doing better than many cities our size. Those first few years slowed us down as an administration, moving forward an agenda and a vision. Some of those things that we're getting to – like those other school buildings – I would have liked to get to them sooner but financially there was no way to do it.

"We have eight fire houses that all need work and we're doing analysis on some of those. The police station (building) is a mess. We have some DPW challenges in terms of garage space and getting equipment out from the weather."

Koch also said he wants to place more emphasis on street and sidewalk repairs in the next fiscal year budget.

"We do get our allocation of Chapter 90 money from the state which our legislators have always fought more but (Gov. Patrick) has only released a portion of it. That's hurt us. This new governor has indicated he will release the full amount of Chapter 90 money but even with the full amount the challenges we have with almost 300 miles of roadway just doesn't cut it so we have to do more in-house."

Asked what issues would take center stage in the mayor's race next year, Koch replied: "Quality schools, a safe city, beautiful public spaces, continue to improve our infrastructure. There's no secrets to it. The downtown piece has been the more challenging one and as I've said a million times, if it had been easy it would have been done a long time ago. These things are complicated and challenging but we're now making headway on that. We shifted horses a bit - that's fine. It was time to do that.

"I am certainly not going to be talking about a bunch of wild and crazy ideas. I think we have enough on our plate and we need to continue to chip away at it.

"It's been a honor and privilege to serve as mayor of the city. I expect to be a candidate for re-election," he added.

A WELL-KNOWN retired educator is considering a run for School Committee next year.

SANTORO

Frank Santoro, who served eight years on the Quincy School Committee from 1986 to 1993 including two years as a vice chairman, says he is looking at seeking one of the three seats up next fall. Incumbents whose terms expire next year are Dave McCarthy, Paul Bregoli and Kathryn Hubley.

Santoro, whose career in education spans more than 40 years, is well-known throughout the city and is an ardent supporter of high school sports at his alma mater, North Quincy High, and at Quincy High School where he served as principal for nine years before retiring last year.

He says he is interested in running for school committee regardless of whether there is an open seat or not.

COUNCILLOR MIKE McFarland recently held a reception signaling a run for re-election next fall. McFarland will be seeking his sixth term. He served eight years on the School Committee prior to winning one of the three councillor at-large seats in 2005.

McFARLAND

MAYOR KOCH is expecting good things from the Baker administration.

"I expect better management, more efficiencies in state government. More commitment to local aid and some of the issues that we face at the local level and I expect when I pick up the phone he's gong to pick up the phone and call me back and deal with whatever the issue of the day may be.

"I have high hopes for the Baker administration."

Koch admits he took some heat from local Democrats for crossing party lines to support the Republican Baker.

"I didn't have to get involved endorsing Baker for governor. I know because a number of people have approached me who are Democrats and have said how could you do such a thing? Party is not everything to me and I don't get elected through the party process. I am elected non-partisan.

"I am one to not sit on the sidelines. If I think an endorsement that I make can help the city, I will do that. I don't want to look back and think I should have done this or I should have done that.

"I'm not always going to be right and I respect other people's opinions. When I've had these discussions with people I say I respect your opinion. I just ask that you respect mine."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN 1896 view of the estate of John R. Graham on the corner of Washington and Stewart Streets in the Edison Park section of Quincy Point. One of Quincy's wealthiest 19th century businessmen, Graham was widely known for the high quality handmade men's boots that were produced in his plants in Quincy Point. Then, when electricity became available in Quincy in 1888, he became president of the Quincy and Boston Street Railway Company that quickly expanded throughout the region. He was also known as one of the founders of what is now the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. He later went to Maine to develop a statewide trolley system there but died soon after arriving. Today, his home has been converted into several apartments but has changed little on the exterior. His large stable on the right has also been converted into apartments and is on what is now Graham Terrace. A small commercial building has been built on the corner on the right, and a house has been built on the left of Graham's mansion. Perhaps to boast his wealth, the tallest private monument at Mount Wollaston Cemetery is on Graham's family lot. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Fore River Bridge Widening Sought To Help Shipyard

A new move is underway to widen the span of the Fore River Bridge to at least 300 feet to allow General Dynamics-Quincy Division to bid on contracts for supersized ships.

Mayor - Senator James R. McIntyre has filed a bill which would direct the state Department of Public Works to modify the present structure to "provide a horizontal opening of not less than 300 feet."

The present bridge, dating back to the early 1030's, has a horizontal clearance of only 175 feet between abutments on the water line.

NEW HOUGHS NECK CENTER SPANS GENERATION GAP

In two short weeks of operation the Sgt. Lawrence Grehan Youth Center in Houghs Neck has built a major bridge across the generation gap. An improved relationship between youths and adults may be one of the major dividends emerging from the new center.

The center's ad hoc director, Fr. Eugene Boyle of Blessed Sacrament Church, recognizes that the center is not the final answer, but it is, he rates, an important step.

Believes Quincy Medical Center Doesn't Have To Close

I don't believe that Quincy Medical Center has to close.

A long string of decisions made by politicians and executives has led us down this path to market medicine, where greed supplants need.

Cerberus Capital Management should absorb the debt its faulty business plan incurred and sell the hospital back to the City for $1. The private sector has failed, just as it did in 1919 when the City first took over the hospital. Let's hire competent management and join with others engaged in the colossal struggle to make health care a right, not a commodity.

Right now in the US, you can get as much health care as you can afford. Repealing Chapter 495 of the Acts of 1991, the deregulation of hospital finance, and Chapter 58 of the Acts of 2006, the health insurance industry preservation and empowering act, would be good places to start here in Massachusetts. These and other bipartisan initiatives shifted the onus onto individuals, families and communities while opening the door ever wider to profiteers. A single-payer financing method modeled on Medicare would go a long way toward stabilizing necessary care in each community as well as stopping medical bankruptcies. The Department of Public Health must be given back the power to block the closure of needed services and necessary facilities.

The marvelous turnout at the Nov. 17th City Council hearing reflects people's sharp concern over this impending catastrophe. The DPH hearing on Dec. 2nd, moved into a larger space at Quincy High School, will provide an opportunity for all to be heard and, hopefully, the forging of a direction forward to save vital services in the community, ideally keeping the city's hospital intact.

Be prepared to speak up and speak out, either at the mic or in writing.

The South Shore Coalition for Human Rights is planning an independent forum and strategy session for Friday evening, Dec. 12th at 7 p.m. at the United First Parish Church in Quincy Square.

Experts on the impact of hospital closures have been invited and all will have a chance to express their thoughts on how to save acute care here.

Koch's 'Great Call'

At a time when there is a lot of questioning of the Mayor's judgement, I think he should be commended on his support of Charlie Baker for Governor.

In a time when few politicians would ever break away from their party and follow their true instincts in a political election, Mayor Koch once again shows he is a man of integrity. This endorsement of Baker by our mayor can only be a good thing for our city and we should recognize that is was a "great call."

10-Year-Old Cast As A Baby Mouse

Grace Hickey Performing In Boston Ballet's 'Nutcracker'

By KRIS KALABOKAS

In the role of Baby Mouse this year for the Boston Ballet's performance of "The Nutcracker" is 10-year-old Grace Hickey of Quincy.

The fifth grader who goes to the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School spent her weekends in October and November practicing for her 14 performances of "The Nutcracker" at the Boston Ballet Dance School.

She's been a student at the school for five years, said her mother Karen Hickey.

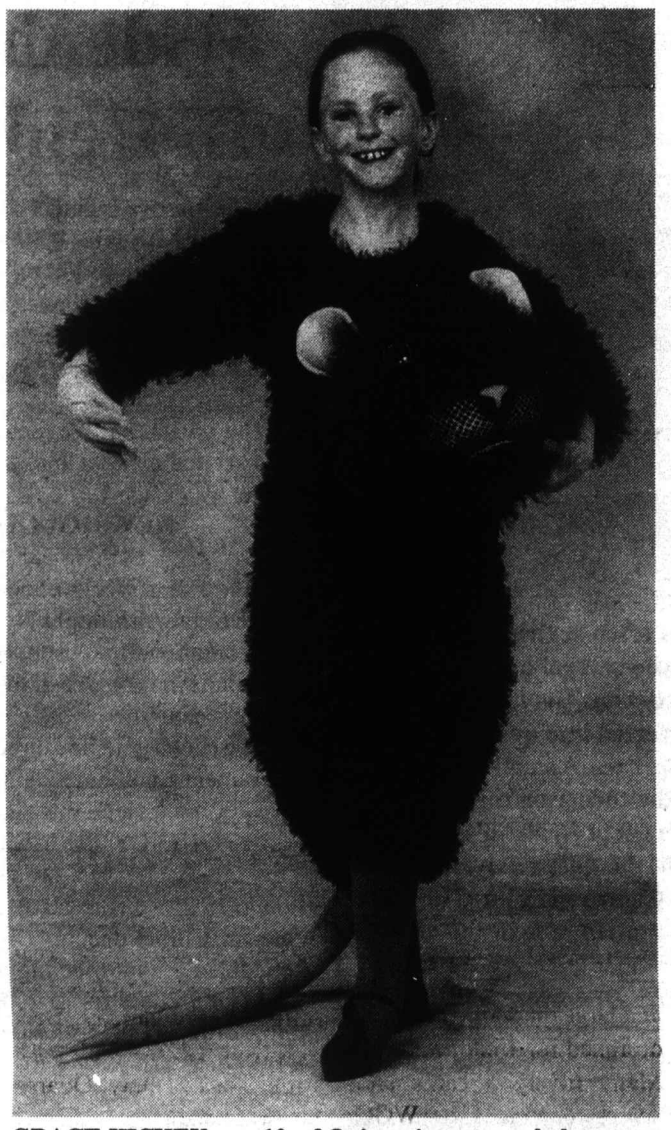

Grace has performed in "The Nutcracker" for the past three years; last year she played the part of Urchin and the year prior she was cast for the first time as Baby Mouse.

Grace is just one of nine children playing the role of Baby Mouse.

The young dancers alternate their schedules throughout the season but Grace wishes she could take the stage for every performance, she said.

The mice make their appearance during the ballet's battle scene in which an army of gingerbread soldiers square off with mice led by the Mouse King. The life-sized nutcracker then appears and defeats the Mouse King after main character Clara distracts him by throwing her slipper.

As the performance dates drew near, the practice schedule amped up. "It's a big commitment and you can't miss any of the practices," said Karen who added that Grace began preparing for her role on Oct. 18.

When asked if she gets nervous dancing in front of hundreds of people Grace said "not at all. I'm just so excited."

Even though her mouse costume is heavy, hot, and completely covers her head she doesn't mind. "It's really fun," she said. "I like putting on the costume."

Grace has been enthusiastic about performing, particularly classical ballet, ever since she was a young child when her grandmother introduced her to dance and encouraged her to hone her talent.

"She loves 'The Nutcracker,'" said her mother.

Performances of Mikko Nissinen's "The Nutcracker" begin Nov. 28 and run through Dec. 31 at the Boston Opera House.

Caroline, Caitlin Connelly In South Shore Ballet's 'Nutcracker'

Quincy sisters Caroline and Caitlin Connelly are among the more than 75 dancers who will be performing in the South Shore Ballet Theatre's production of "The Nutcracker.

Performances are scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 13 and Sunday, Dec. 14 at 1 and 6 p.m. at Derby Academy in Hingham.

Tickets are on sale at tututix.com.

Dancers will bring to life the story of Clara, a young girl swept up in a battle with a mouse king and then transported to the magical Land of the Sweets. Set to Tchaikovsky's beloved score, the ballet includes performances by the Sugar Plum Fairy, the mysterious Drosselmeyer and a dazzling array of dancing peppermints, chocolates and marzipan.

Hanover's South Shore Ballet Theatre (SSBT), was founded in 2008 by Marthavan McKeon, a 25-year veteran ballet instructor (including 10 years with the Boston Ballet School) and former soloist with the Atlanta Ballet. McKeon heads a faculty that includes former Boston Ballet soloists and faculty Leslie Woodies and Stephanie Moy, and former American Ballet Theatre dancer Nan Keating, who was principal of Boston Ballet School's (now-defunct) Norwell studio and before that of the Children's Ballet Workshop, precursor to the Boston Ballet School.

Roasted Chicken Over Vegetables

By MARIE

I recently cooked roasted chicken, and followed a new recipe that made the entree with all the vegetable in one pan. How nice is that?

Everything is placed uncooked and comes out so delicious and the flavors are much stronger done together.

Roasted Chicken & Vegetables
6 chicken leg quarters
2 pounds red potatoes (cut into 1 inch pieces)
1 package fresh spinach
1 large onion cut into 1 inch pieces
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 cloves garlic (minced)
salt and pepper to taste
1 teaspoon Bell's seasoning (or thyme)
3/4 teaspoon paprika

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Place potatoes, spinach and onion in a greased shallow roasting pan. Add the oil, garlic, salt, thyme and toss to combine.

Arrange the chicken over the vegetables,sprinkle with the paprika, salt and pepper.

Roast uncovered for 55-60 minutes or until the chicken and potatoes are tender.

P.S. I skinned the chicken, but either way works.

Quinoa Stuffed Peppers

By SUZIE

Stuffed peppers are usually filled with beef, rice, or a combination of both. Here is a favorite of mine and I am sure it will soon be one of yours as well that includes no meat but incorporates beans and quinoa for protein. Nice and light too!

CHEESY BEANY QUINOA STUFFED PEPPERS

1 cup uncooked quinoa
2 cups chicken or veggie broth
6 large bell peppers, any color cut in half and free of seeds.
1 15-ounce can black beans, drained...
4 cups grated raw goat cheddar cheese, 2 cups for stuffing, 2 cups for topping
3 to 4 green onions, finely sliced
1/4 cup tomato sauce
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1 teaspoon chili powder
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 cup loosely packed chopped fresh cilantro (optional)
1 teaspoon sea salt, pepper

Simply cook the quinoa in the broth for 15 minutes until done. Set aside to cool a bit. Stir in everything else (saving 2 cups of the cheese to top) together and simply stuff the peppers evenly with the mixture and place in baking pan that has been greased with olive oil with just 1/4 cup of water (or broth) placed in as well. Top with cheese and bake covered in foil at 375 for about 30 minutes then take off the foil, and return to oven for another 20 minutes or so until cheese is bubbly and peppers are cooked. ENJOY!!!

Can be served with salsa and sour cream for extra goodness.

READERS FORUM

A Structural Problem In Local Governance

It was stated in the Readers Forum awhile ago that there should be a new slate of mayor and councillors. I disagree.

There is a structural problem in governance wherein the voice of the people is not being heard.

City government does well on big projects such as building schools and developing downtown Quincy. Where government fails is not listening enough to the local concerns of its citizens.

There is a Constituent Services on the city's website. It works well when it comes to solving ongoing problems such as street signage and fixing potholes. Where it fails is when the given city department fails to address new issues that arise.

I have tried to have senior citizen traffic crossing signs installed to no avail. Lengthen the time that yellow lights stay on to give drivers adequate time to stop for a red light. No action. Storm drains polluting Wollaston Beach. Nada.

The current mechanism is for a citizen to bring his/her concern to the ward councillor. Then the councillor will submit a petition to the appropriate City Council Committee where it vanishes. The relevant committee should be held accountable for its actions. The committee should vote yea or nay with its reasons published within thirty days of the submission of the petition.

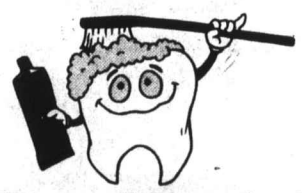

Right now, the attitude is that committees can't do anything for political reasons. If a committee does not respond within thirty days, the petition should be automatically submitted as a motion to the City Council for a vote with a simple majority signifying approval or disapproval.

If approved, the motion is sent to the mayor who has thirty days to respond. If the mayor ignores or vetoes the motion, the motion should be voted upon again by the City Council.

If a two-thirds majority approves, the order to act is to be sent to the city official responsible.

If the city official fails to act within thirty days, he or she is to appear before the council to explain the situation. This, at long last, will give the City Council power and not simply be a reactive force.

Consultants Upbeat On Downtown's Future

• Proximity To Boston, Suburbs; Access To Public Transportation Boost Outlook
• Parking Identified As Major Challenge • 121A Agreements Called Unsustainable

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy's proximity to Boston and surrounding suburbs, access to public transportation, and historic sites are among the factors that boosts the city's chances of redeveloping the downtown.

The City Council heard Monday night from the real estate consultants advising Mayor Thomas Koch on how Quincy should move forward with downtown redevelopment with previous master developer StreetWorks out of the picture. Pamela McKinney, of Byrne McKinney & Associates, a subcontractor brought on by Redgate Real Estate Advisors, said the positives for Quincy outweigh the negatives.

"What's critical for everybody to understand about downtown Quincy is you have many, many opportunities – many more positives if you will – than challenges in my view and I've been around the block many times and seen places that were not as promising as this," McKinney explained.

"You have proximity to Boston and the suburbs, where demand is driven from. You have tremendous public transit accessibility. You already have a concentration of population and employment, which are going to serve as residents and consumers and employees of existing and future development. You have very significant historic resources, unlike most cities of your size.

"And importantly, you have an authentic, evolved, organically grown downtown already. I can't tell you how many communities that I go to who are trying to create that downtown out of nothing – they're trying to invent it – and you already have an authentic downtown."

The redevelopment of Quincy Center, however, is not without its challenges. McKinney identified the project's history, nearby competition, and the economics of new construction as challenges the city is facing.

"That's not to say there aren't challenges," she said. "You have the history of the project and the loss of your master developer and the market's perception of that to overcome. There is of course, as there almost always is, competition from other places to contend with.

"And importantly, we have a situation where what I call the economics for new development – the rationale for an investor, a cost that's low enough for the rents to support – are very thin."

McKinney then provided a breakdown of each of the three major real estate markets – residential, retail, and office, targeted for the downtown.

In terms of residential development, McKinney referred to Quincy as a value market providing alternatives to costlier alternatives in Boston and Cambridge while still having access to the Red Line and several major highways. But those lower rents make it harder for high-rise construction to take place without incentives; stick construction, using wood, would still be feasible.

"The economics, because the rents are lower and the sale prices are lower but it still costs the same to build a project, tend to be on the thin side," McKinney said. "But even with that, we would say residential development is feasible in today's market. Certainly it's feasible for certain kinds of construction, stick built construction. The economics for high-rise, steel and concrete construction, are challenging but with the right set of incentives we think that type of development could be possible."

Those incentives would have to reduce the costs of development, enhance the marketability of the completed project, or reduce operational costs, such as taxes and maintenance.

When asked by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin about the construction of affordable housing in Quincy Center, McKinney said it would be important to have a diverse housing market, and not just high priced units. Such a mix would also be important in terms of the amount of residential units leased to tenants compared to those sold as condos.

In terms of retail development, McKinney said the market in Quincy primarily caters to the city's residents and those who work in the city. Going forward, she explained that it would be important to identify tenants for large retail projects before work commences.

"Those sorts of new construction projects really are not ones anyone would undertake speculatively," McKinney said, referring to shopping centers. "Developers don't build it on the theory that if we build it, they will come. The ability to attract new construction is highly dependent on your ability to identify an end user in advance of construction. Otherwise, the potential for financing is very, very limited."

While both residential and retail development is feasible, McKinney said it wouldn't be the case for development of new office space without financial incentives. She did note, however, new office space in Quincy Center could appeal to businesses motived by something other than pure economics.

"If you had a user that was motivated by something other than pure profit minded, economic concerns – a headquarter user that has a particular affinity for downtown Quincy or Quincy in general or if you had a user that had a particular desire to be in Quincy because their consumer market was there and they were going to make money out of their business – you might find a way to entice someone to make what I would call a non-economic choice," McKinney explained.

Lisa Serafin, a principal at Redgate, identified parking as a challenge the city faces. The city has identified two five-acre parking areas in Quincy Center – the Hancock lot and Ross parking garage – as potential areas for development. Under the previous agreement with Street-Works, those spaces would have been replaced by underground parking facilities. Requiring a future developer to do so would be a non-starter, according to Serafin.

"Below grade parking, it's fair to say, is a non-starter. It's just not the way the development is going to be supported here," she said. "We need to think about above grade parking to support both the existing activities and future activities."

Alternatives, she explained, could include a new standalone structure, which would likely have to be built at the city's expense. Another possibility would be for developers to place parking on the ground floor of new buildings.

Serafin also referred to 121A agreements reached between Quincy and Street-Works, which set the basis for how much the developer would pay in property taxes, as unsustainable.

The city, she further noted, will need to play an active role in the development going forward, comparing the city's new role with that of a master developer. In a future meeting set for January, Serafin and McKinney will provide further details of any actions the city needs to take as well as a roadmap for development plans.

Councillor Doug Gutro, the chairman of the council's downtown and economic growth committee, said the discussion on the city's new role moving forward will be an important one.

"That's a discussion I'm interested in hearing – how we get there and what the model is and where we know its worked effectively in the past," Gutro said. "We're test-driving a new governance structure, it looks like, and hoping that everything is going to work well. That's a new challenge and new overlay for us to learn about and figure out how best to do it, so your advice to us on that is important."

Gutro also said he remains optimistic about the redevelopment.

"In some ways for some of us, it's almost like we've seen this movie before and I'm hoping for a different ending," he stated. "But I have enormous hope in the downtown. I believe we're a city that poised to do big things and I'm hoping with the restart we have the opportunity to do that."

Redgate is receiving $300,000 from the city to serve as a consultant; that money was drawn from an escrow account Street-Works paid into when it missed key deadlines set in its agreement with the city.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci questioned Redgate's role as a downtown consultant because a subsidiary, Gate Residential, is developing the West of Chestnut project along with Quincy Mutual.

"It just doesn't pass the smell test to me at the outset," he said.

James Fatseas, Koch's executive secretary, said it was not a conflict because neither Redgate nor Gate Residential would be allowed to develop the city-owned Hancock lot or Ross parking garage, per terms of the contract between the consultant and city.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee asked why the city would need a consultant in the first place; noting State Street South and Crown Colony were both developed without one. Instead, he said the city should focus on basic services as a way to entice new growth.

"I think the city's experience of being in the development business has not boded well and I'm very skeptical going forward of whether it's going to be able to achieve those objectives," McNamee said. "I want to take a little bit more of a laissez faire attitude and I want to concentrate on basic, core city services. A clean city. A safe city. A city that when you come and go at dawn and dusk you don't feel threatened. There's no loitering. No drug dealing.

"That's what I'm interested in. Then I think we'll have a new and bright downtown."

Gutro Faults Koch On Cost Of Elevation Certificates

By SCOTT JACKSON

Councillor Doug Gutro reimbursed the city Monday for the cost of having a surveyor file an elevation certificate for his home, saying he did not wish to benefit from what he views as a flawed policy.

During Monday's meeting, the City Council accepted a gift from Gutro for $350, the cost Woodard & Curran charges the city for each elevation certificate it files on behalf of homeowners. Woodard & Curran has been completing the surveys for homeowners while awaiting FEMA's decision on a letter of map revision (LOMR) challenging the new maps.

Gutro has maintained Mayor Thomas Koch should have appealed the maps last year instead of waiting for the LOMR to be filed. Woodard & Curran has completed roughly 1,400 elevation certificates, at a cost of approximately $490,000 to the city. An additional 200 residents have requested surveys on their properties. Some 4,600 properties within Quincy lie in a flood plain; Gutro said if the owner of each opted to seek an elevation certificate taxpayers would have been forced to foot the $1.6 million bill.

"The City Council was not consulted on this strategy nor were we asked to approve an appropriation to pay for it," Gutro stated. "Just as the decision not to appeal in the first place was made unilaterally by the administration, so too was the decision to put taxpayers on the hook for up to $1.6 million for elevation certificates. In my judgment, it's a staggering sum for any community to shoulder."

Gutro also compared the amount spent by Quincy on elevation certificates to the amount other communities paid when they opted to appeal the maps outright. Boston, Gutro stated, paid $100,000 while Chelsea and Marshfield paid $35,000 each.

"While I don't fault anyone in a flood zone who has taken up the administration's offer to pay for their elevation certificate, I do not wish to benefit from a flawed policy that I believe was a kneejerk reaction to the hardship caused by the administration's failure to appeal the flood insurance maps in the first place," Gutro said.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci asked James Fatseas, the mayor's executive secretary, if the $490,000 cost Gutro stated was accurate and also which piece of legislation by the council authorized such an expenditure. Fatseas said the number was in the right ballpark and said he would need more time to answer the latter question.

In addition, Council President Joseph Finn asked city auditor Susan O'Connor for a report on all expenses related to the LOMR process.

McNamee Seeks Memorial For Joseph Koch

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee introduced a resolution Monday night, asking the city's School Committee and Park and Recreation Board to dedicate public space to the late Joseph W. Koch. The resolution passed unanimously.

Mr. Koch, a longtime employee in the Park Department and the Department of Public Works, died Aug. 20. McNamee's resolution said his work can be seen throughout city parks and that he saved the city's taxpayer's thousands of dollars.

"Whereas, on Aug. 20, 2014, the city of Quincy lost a son and an outstanding civic servant with the passing of Joseph W. Koch," McNamee's resolution stated.

"And whereas Joseph 'Joe' Koch was a veteran of the United States Army and a 1974 graduate of North Quincy High School; and whereas, Joe served the city for 37 years as a foreman, arborist, and heavy equipment operator; and whereas, Joe's contributions can be visible throughout our city at our parks and public open spaces; and whereas, his tireless efforts resulted in taxpayer savings of hundreds of thousands of dollars and improved operational efficiencies; and whereas, the City Council again extends its deepest sympathy, especially during this holiday season, to the family of Joe.

"Now be it therefore resolved by the Quincy City Council that the Quincy School Committee and the Park and Recreation Board identify a suitable memorial to honor the memory and contributions of a favorite son, Joseph W. Koch."

Judge Orders City To Pay $724,000 To Woodward School

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The City of Quincy has been ordered by a court to pay almost $724,000 for mismanaging a trust fund established by John Adams in 1822.

Probate Court Judge James Menno ordered that Quincy pay $475,426 to the Woodward School for Girls and $248,548 to the Adams Temple and School Fund.

The Nov. 14 ruling stipulates that the city also pay 12 percent interest on the $723,974 total.

James DeGiacomo, the Boston lawyer who began managing the trust fund in 2011, said that with accrued interest, the city owes close to $1 million.

"Interest is very substantial in these cases," he said.

He began managing the trust fund following a decision by Norfolk County Probate Court Judge Robert Langlois who decided to take control of the fund away from the city.

The city was found to have been mismanaging the fund for 50 years in 2011 during a probate court ruling. The ruling stated the city kept poor records regarding the trust and had even used some of the trust money to pay city workers.

DeGiacomo said the $723,974 figure was calculated based on "the sale of real estate at under fair market value," by the city. "The decision of the court was precisely what was requested," he added.

The original $3 million penalty against the city dished out in July 2011 by the Supreme Judicial Court was reduced as it was determined the figure was reached using outdated investment information received by Quincy in 1973.

The trust fund was established following the donation of land by Adams in 1822 which he specified be used solely for the benefit of education.

The Woodward School for Girls became a beneficiary of the fund in 1953.

DeGiacomo sued the Quincy Historical Society earlier this year in a separate case regarding the trust fund alleging the organization had been using the Adams Academy building while paying what he regarded to be insufficient rent. The historical society has been paying $100 a month in rent since 1972 after signing a 50-year lease.

The Adams Academy building is built on land donated by Adams and was built with funds gathered from the trust fund.

The case is pending in Supreme Judicial Court, said DeGiacomo.

"Both cases are active," he said. "It will all come to a head at some point."

Then, at a certain point during the ceremony, these volunteers are asked to carry out their part of the decorating. Towards the end of the service, the church's Christmas tree is lit for the first time.

Helping Hands Stepping Up For Holiday Assistance

Here's a list of some local organizations, what they need, and how the public can get involved and help out neighbors in need.

Interfaith Social Services
105 Adams St.
617-773-6203

Interfaith Social Services provides assistance to residents living in nearly a dozen South Shore communities, including Quincy. The organization runs a food pantry, a thrift shop, counseling center, homelessness prevention services, and a career closet program, which gives low-income individuals clothes for interviews.

All those programs are reliant on one thing: Volunteers from the community.

"One of the things all food pantries need is food, but it's no good without volunteers," said ISS Executive Director Rick Doane.

"Our whole business model is based on volunteers."

Some 125 volunteers, many of them Quincy residents, help out on a weekly basis, Doane said, but more are needed. Several local businesses, such as Blue Cross Blue Shield, Arbella, and Boston Financial Data Services even send groups of employees to help out. The volunteers assist in all aspects of Interfaith's services, from answering phones to distributing items in the food pantry.

This holiday season, like all holiday seasons, Doane said Interfaith Social Services is in need of three items: Food, toys, and money, the latter of which goes to helping families out with utility bills.

Interfaith Social Services distributed 800 turkeys for Thanksgiving this year. The organization expects to provide gifts to 600 children for Christmas, through its Help for the Holidays program. The program allows local residents to sponsor a family, providing gifts to the children.

Individuals can also donate new, unwrapped toys for younger children and gift cards for tweens. Doane said children around 11 years old are the hardest to provide gifts for because they've outgrown toys.

"In that tween age range we never really get any gifts for them," he stated. "They just want to get a gift card to a place like GameStop."

For more information on Interfaith Social Services, visit their website at interfaithsocialservices.org, contact them by phone at 617-773-6203, or visit their headquarters at 105 Adams St.

Father Bill's and MainSpring
38 Broad St.
1-855-HELPFBM
(1-855-435-7326)

Father Bill's shelter on Broad Street has been busy this year, housing upwards of 130 individuals on a nightly basis. The shelter has 95 beds, 75 of which it receives federal funding for.

"We continually see more people coming to our door," FBMS president and CEO John Yazwinski said.

The organization has been housing more individuals in the 18- to 22- year old age range, including high school seniors. People in that age range who seek shelter, Yazwinski said often have just left foster care or left home because they no longer felt safe there.

Because of the influx of individuals seeking help, Father Bill's is looking for basic items to help the people it serves.

"We're always looking for churches, schools, businesses or individuals to do drives for us to collect items such as socks, toiletries, blankets, and towels," Yazwinski explained.

Father Bill's and MainSpring also needs cash donations to help out with the many programs it offers.

"Eighty-nine cents of every dollar goes to people we assist," Yazwinski said.

The organization has a wish list of holiday items it's looking for. Among the items on this list are onesies for infants and babies; winter wear for babies, infants, and children; toys for children and babies such as cars and trucks, dolls, action figures, and building toy sets; comforter sets for twin, full and queen sized beds; pots and pans; family movie packs; hats and gloves; pillows; bath gift sets for both men and women; and duffle bags/backpacks.

Gift cards are always in demand as well, particularly for large retailers such as Walmart or Target, pharmacies like CVS or Walgreens, or for grocery stores. MBTA Charlie Cards or Brockton Area Transit (BAT) Cards are also preferable. Gift wrapping supplies are also needed.

New for this year, Father Bill's and MainSpring has created an Amazon wish list. It can be viewed online at bit.ly/FBMSWishList.

More information on Father Bill's and MainSpring is available online at helpfbms.org. They can also be contacted toll free at 1-855-HELPFBM (1-855-435-7326) or in person at their 38 Broad St. office.

DOVE
617-770-4065

For the holidays, DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) organizes an adopt-a-family program. The program provides families in DOVE's emergency program or community based programs with items on their wish list. Each wish list contains household necessities and fun items like toys. DOVE anticipates having about 150 families participate in the adopt-a-family program this year, a slight increase over prior years.

"It's a little more than a typical year," said DOVE Executive Director Sue Chandler. "We have more clients and their needs are greater."

Information on the adopt-a-family program can be found online at dovema.org. Interested donors can also contact DOVE's donation team directly by email at dove.elfteam@gmail.com.

In addition to gifts for families, the organization is always looking for basic necessities such as towels, pillows, twin-sized bedding, and blankets.

"DOVE is always looking for supplies year round," Chandler said.

Gift cards –for retailers such as Walmart or Target as well as those for grocery stores and hardware stores – and MBTA Charlie Cards are also among items DOVE distributes to its clients.

DOVE can be contacted by phone at 617-770-4065 or online at dovema.org.

Salvation Army
6 Baxter St.
617-472-2345

Once again, the Salvation Army is offering its Christmas assistance program to children and families. Under the program, children receive toys and families receive baskets of food. More than 1,100 people benefited from the Christmas assistance program last year, and even more are expected to receive gifts or food through the program this year.

"We're still getting calls from people asking about the Christmas assistance," Captain Tim Ross said.

In addition, the Salvation Army will be visiting local nursing homes this Christmas, giving gifts to each resident. Nearly 1,000 nursing home residents received a gift last year.

The Salvation Army also continues to offer its year-round programs, including emergency assistance programs, which provide money for rent or utilities to those in need, as well as a food pantry.

The Salvation Army is in need of new toys, hats, gloves, scarves, and food items as well as monetary donations. Those looking to donate can do so at the Salvation Army's Quincy headquarters at 6 Baxter St.

The Salvation Army's Red Kettle Campaign is underway. Bell ringers can be seen at various locations throughout Quincy during the month of December. The campaign raised $123,000 last year in Quincy and is on pace to top that this year, in part because of the number of donations received during the annual Quincy Christmas Parade Sunday.

"We're a little ahead because of the generosity of people at the parade. We're grateful for those who donated," Ross said. "We could always use volunteers who can ring the bell for a few hours at a time."

Ross hopes this year's Red Kettle Campaign raises $130,000. The money goes to fund programs the Salvation Army runs year round; 82 cents of each dollar donated goes directly to those programs.

The Quincy Salvation Army can be reached by phone at 617-472-2345 or online at salvationarmyma.org/Quincy.

Quincy Crisis Center
282 Billings Rd.
(617) 847-6967

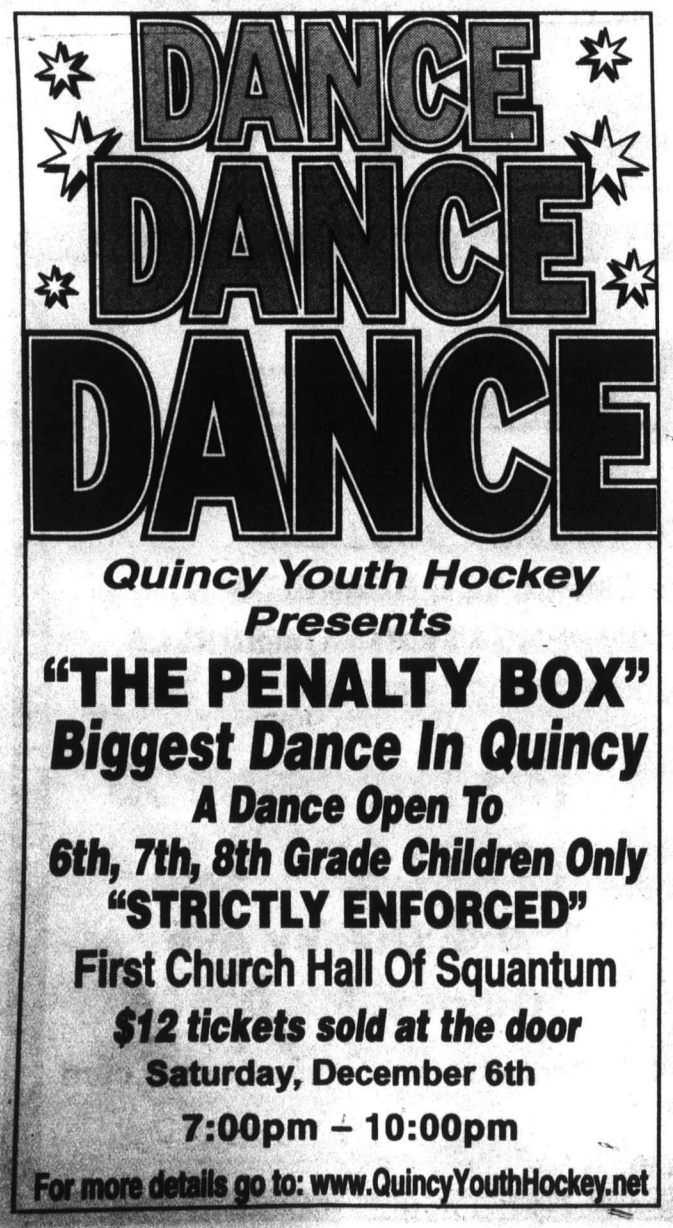

Each year the Quincy Crisis Center, a part of the Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion, provides holiday meals for Quincy residents in need.

The organization expects to provide food to between 240 and 260 families on Thanksgiving and roughly the same number on Christmas. The Quincy Crisis Center provides families with all the fixings for a proper holiday meal, as well as an additional three to five days worth of food.

"Often times for families if their kids are home from school during the holidays they need help with the food," said the Rev. David Wooster, executive director for the Quincy Crisis Center.

This year, there is a particular need for turkeys and ham. The Quincy Crisis Center received fewer turkey and hams from the Boston Food Bank than they have in recent years, as the price of meat has increased. Christmas food donations are needed by Dec. 11.

Quincy Crisis Center also provides gifts to children under 16. Individuals and businesses in the community can sponsor a child to provide gifts to for the holidays. Each child receives new toys, a new book, a new article of clothing, and winter gear including a hat, mittens, and scarf. Sponsored gifts are needed by Dec. 10. The Quincy Crisis Center anticipates providing gifts for up to 400 children this year.

QCC is also in need of volunteers. The organizations rely on volunteers to deliver meals, cook food, and help out in the pantry among other tasks.

Donations of food and household items can be dropped during normal business hours at Quincy Crisis Center's offices at 282 Billings Rd. More information, and a link to make monetary contributions, can be found online at sangercenter.org. The organization can be reached via telephone at 617-847-6967.

Quincy Community Action Programs
617-479-8181

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) anticipates providing gifts to 650 children this year.

"We provide holiday gifts to children from low income families. We're always looking for donors who sponsor the children and give gifts to them," said Susan Harrington, the organization's director of development and marketing.

Harrington said individuals could sign up to sponsor a child or children. Businesses can also agree to set up 'gift trees,' allowing employees to chose children to sponsor.

QCAP will also be providing families with meals on Thanksgiving and again on Christmas or Hanukkah. A total of 1,200 households will receive such meals this year. Donations of non-perishable food items are always accepted by QCAP for their food pantries.

"Winter in general is a big time of need," Harrington said.

Volunteers are also needed at QCAP. They do everything from help out in food pantries, pick up food from grocery stores, and answer phones. Volunteers who can speak multiple languages are especially needed. It might seem early, but QCAP is even looking for volunteers for tax preparation services it offers in January. Residents who volunteer for that program can do different things, including tax preparation and setting up schedules.

"Whatever your skills are, we'll find a match for it," Harrington said.

More information on QCAP is available online at qcap.org. They can also be reached by phone at 617-479-8181.

Germantown Neighborhood Center
336 Palmer St.
617-376-1384

Through its holiday assistance program, the Germantown Neighborhood Center donates winter coats, clothes, pajamas, and gifts to hundreds of children in Quincy, referred to the organization by organizations such as the Manet Community Health Center, Quincy Public School, and the Quincy Commission on the Family.

Each family is also provided with a week's worth of groceries, helping families provide food to the children over winter break when school is closed.

More information on the holiday assistance program can be found online at ssymca.org/Germantown or by calling 617-376-1384. Donations of non-perishable food items, toiletries, and cleaning supplies can also be made at the neighborhood center's food pantry, located at 336 Palmer St. Monetary donations are accepted as well.

The Germantown Neighborhood Center is also hosting a toy drive, in partnership with the Quincy Police and Fire Departments, this Saturday, Dec. 6 beginning at 10 a.m. at Walmart, 301 Falls Dr., Quincy.

The neighborhood center is a holding a number of events in the coming weeks. The intergenerational holiday event, where children will regale senior citizens with poetry, song, and dance, is set for Dec. 9 from noon to 2p.m. at O'Brien Towers; the Annual Women's Christmas Dinner is that same night at 6 p.m. at the neighborhood center; and Breakfast with Santa, sponsored by Victor and Octavio Carvalho, will take place Dec. 13 at 9 a.m. in the Quincy Marriott.

Quincy Animal Shelter
617-376-1349

The Quincy Animal Shelter will be holding its annual Santa Paws event over the next two weekends.

Pet owners can bring their animals to meet Santa and take pictures with him; each person will receive a four-by-six holiday photo card and a CD with photos that can be shared with family and friends.

"It's a blast," said Breanne Harris, president of the animal shelter's board of directors. "You can take pictures of Santa with your whole family."

Santa Paws will take place from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 6 and 13, at Unleashed in the Hingham Shipyard. From 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 7 and 14, Santa Paws will be at Pet Supplies Plus, 625 Southern Artery, Quincy.

Santa Paws costs $20, with all proceeds benefiting the Quincy Animal Shelter.

Information for people looking to volunteer at the shelter can be found online at quincyanimalshelter.org. The shelter is located at 56 Broad St. and can be contacted at 617-376-1349.

Toys for Tots

Several local groups are collecting toys for the Toys for Tots program.

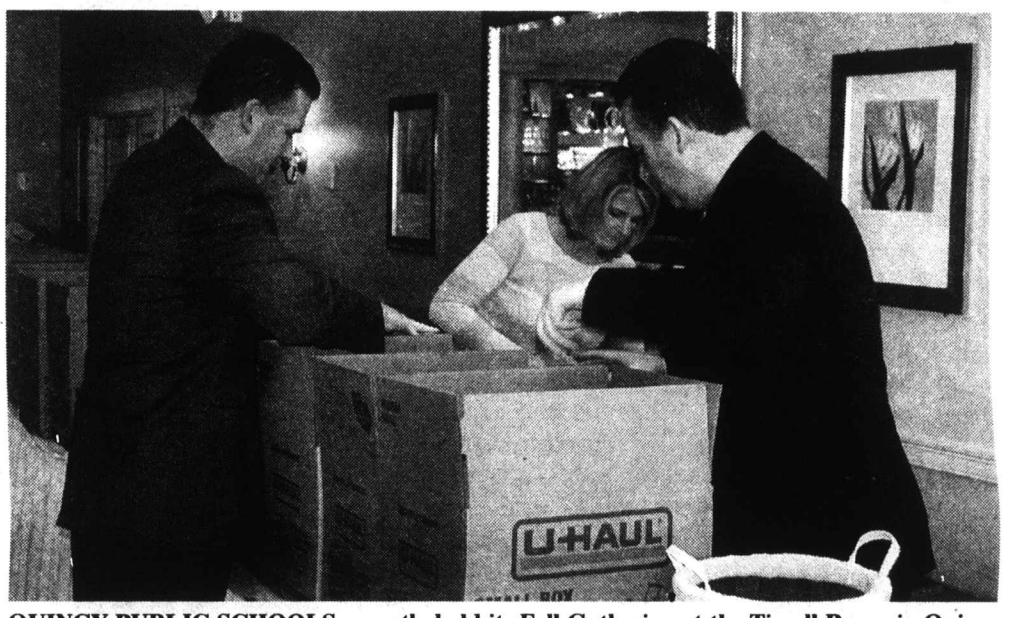

Quincy's Board of Assessors will be collecting toys through the Toys for Tots program through Dec. 17. The board has set up a donation box inside the lobby of the City Hall annex at 1305 Hancock St. More than 100 toys were donated at City Hall last year; the drive was so successful the drop-off dates were expanded this year.

A Toys for Tots drive is also ongoing at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St. in Dedham. Donations are being accepted there on weekdays from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Toys will be accepted at that location through noon on Dec. 18.

Commonwealth Building, Inc. is also hosting a Toys for Tots drive at its location at 265 Willard St. in Quincy. Toys can be dropped off there between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. through Dec. 12.

The U.S. Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots program seeks to help less fortunate children throughout the country experience the joy of Christmas while playing an active role in the development of children.

All gifts donated to Toys for Tots should be new and unwrapped. A wide variety of toys are accepted through the Toys for Tots program; toys that resemble weapons and donations are not accepted. More information on the program can be found online at toysfortots.org.

Young And Old Enjoy An 'Old Fashioned Christmas'

62nd Annual Quincy Christmas Parade Draws Thousands

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Thousands of people, young and old, turned out for Quincy's 62nd annual Christmas parade on Sunday themed "Old Fashioned Christmas."

The parade stepped off at 12:30 p.m. and began in Quincy Center at the intersection of Hancock Street and the Walter J. Hannon Parkway, continued up Hancock Street, and concluded at North Quincy High School.

Over 100 groups participated including high school and adult marching bands from Quincy and throughout Massachusetts.

The high school bands stopped and played in front of City Hall where they were judged on their performance and music composition. The winners were then presented with awards at North Quincy High School.

Floats were also judged and given awards at the high school.

The parade's three grand marshals, all Quincy residents who are members of "The Greatest Generation" and WWII veterans were; Robert G. Noble, Army Air Force veteran and former POW; John M. Gillis, U.S. Marine Corps veteran; and Francis X. Bellotti, U.S. Navy veteran.

The "Old Fashioned Christmas" theme was submitted by contest winner Thomas O'Connor of Hudson Street and was selected by the Quincy Christmas Parade Committee.

Costumed characters including Wally the Green Monster, Snoopy, a gingerbread man, and The Grinch stopped and took photos with children and even some excited adults.

The crowd cheered as a fire juggler carefully tossed flaming batons in the air and eight Hallamore Clydesdales made their yearly appearance, pulling a wagon built in 1899.

Members of the Cycling Murrays skillfully maneuvered, spun, and wove around on unicycles, bicycles, and a unique four-wheeled quadricycle.

North Quincy High School's homecoming king Matthew Alexander and queen Molly Minton waved to the crowd as did Quincy High School homecoming king Robert Salvucci and queen Kimberly Andrews.

The Boston Police Gaelic Column of Pipes and Drums entertained onlookers with renditions of "God Bless America" and "Yankee Doodle Dandy."

Toys for needy children were collected by Toys for Tots and the Salvation Army by representatives as they marched along the almost 3-mile-long parade route.

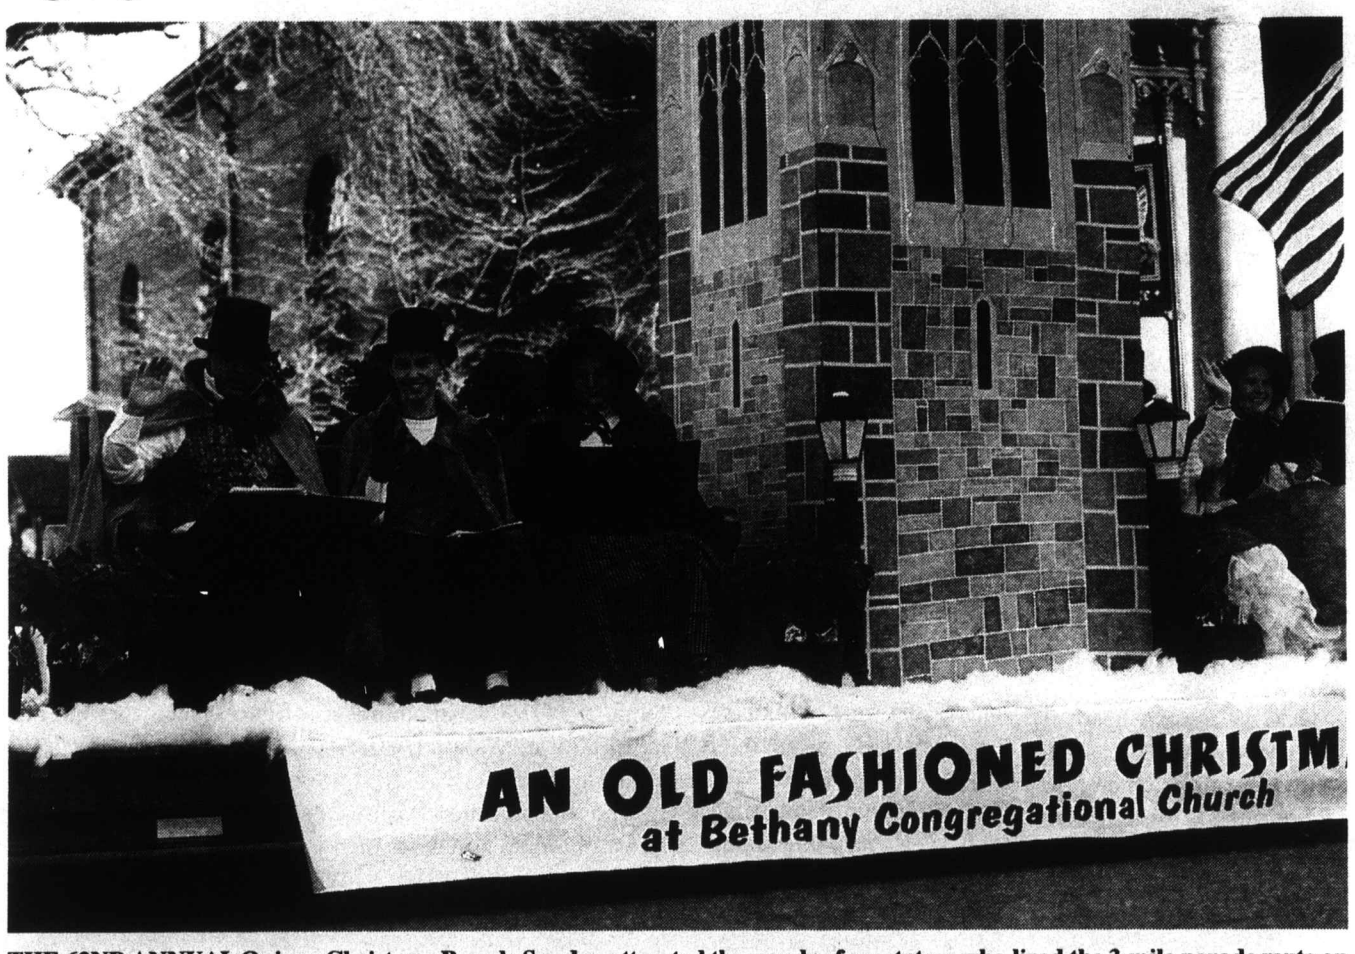

For the grand finale, Santa rode in and greeted children from the top of a fire engine as he does every year with Quincy Firefighter Joseph Ceurvels, Jr. by his side.

Donna Wise of Braintree, along with her husband Charlie and two daughters, 9-year-old Sabrina and 11-year-old Sofie, watched the procession after they attended the worship service at the United First Parish Church, conveniently located on Hancock Street.

"We come every year," said Donna.

Sofie said her favorite

Real Estate Activity In Norfolk County Remains Stable, O'Donnell Says

Taking a monthly snapshot of October 2014 in comparison to October 2013, Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reports real estate activity in Norfolk County has remained relatively stable.

O'Donnell cited the average sales price for both commercial and residential real estate has decreased by only a little more than 1% from $642,120 to $632,815 in year to year numbers. Additionally, O'Donnell noted that total sales comparing October 2014 to the previous October rose to $567 million from $560 million, an increase of just over 1%.

Another solid indicator noted by the Register was that during the same period of time deed recordings increased by 4% to 1,502 from 1,438.

Mortgage activity in October from year to year decreased by just 2%. Total mortgage lending, however, rose by a whopping 39% increase, mainly due to a small number of high dollar mortgages recorded against property in the towns of Norwood and Westwood, noted the Register.

Homestead recording activity in October, 2014 decreased by 3% year to year. A total of 935 Homesteads were recorded in October, 2014 compared to 964 in October, 2013. Information regarding the Homestead Act, which provides homeowners with limited protection on their primary home against unsecured creditors, can be found on the Registry's website at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

"If there is one note of caution in this steady real estate market," O'Donnell said, "it is the 36% increase in foreclosures in comparing the two previous Octobers. This Foreclosure number is a sobering reminder that some of our neighbors continue to face economic hardship. The Registry of Deeds is committed to working closely with our partners, South Shore Home Consortium and Neighbor Works Southern Mass, to help identify services and counseling for those Norfolk County homeowners who have recently received a Notice of Foreclosure from a lender."

"Looking at these overall real estate numbers, Norfolk County is a very desirable and attractive place to live, work and raise a family," O'Donnell added.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information.

Lam, Handsom-Fields Lead Presidents Over Raiders

Quincy Quarterback Sets New Career TD Passing Mark; Running Back Goes Over 1,000 Yards

By BILL GRIFFIN

Great. The word is used too easily, too loosely, too frequently. It is thrown about with such little care that the word loses its value. It is used to describe the ordinary, the competent, the merely good. It falls into the language more often and more effortlessly than snowflakes in January, and this lessens its meaning, its specialness in describing what it should: the exceptional.

82nd City Football Championship:
Quincy 33
North Quincy 6

Greatness is much talked about, but seldom witnessed. When it is, it should be celebrated. Two great football players from Quincy carved out a special chapter in the 82nd meeting of the storied rivalry with North Quincy Thursday at Veterans Stadium. Not good, not very good, not excellent, not terrific. Great.

Senior quarterback James Lam was almost flawless, 9-11 for 177 yards and three touchdowns, and junior tailback Jahvae Handsom-Fields rushed for 156 yards and two touchdowns to carry the Presidents past North by air and by land, 33-6, for Quincy's third consecutive win in the city rivalry on Thanksgiving.

Each player and his team stepped into history with the victory. Lam established the all-time record for passing touchdowns in Quincy history with 35, breaking the previous mark held by Chris Noble. Handsom-Fields went over the 1,000-yard mark in rushing in just nine games for the season. He broke the 2,000-yard barrier for his two-year varsity career. Quincy finished at 8-3 for the season, its first eight-win campaign since 1990.

"I wanted the kids to have something special because they've worked so hard, and this is it," said coach Bill Reardon. "What you want most on Thanksgiving is an experienced quarterback, and James was so mature, so in charge today. Jahvae has everything a great back needs: Speed, power, and balance."

In the signature game of his varsity career, in his third start against North on Thanksgiving, Lam directed the football game the way Keith Lockhart directs the Boston Pops. He controlled everything. Quincy's plan was to balance Handsom-Fields' running by attacking the flats with the short pass. Lam's speed and tailback-like running threat held the defense, and he rolled out all day, left and right, finding openings and delivering strikes to both sidelines.

If the Red Raiders came up, Lam threw. If they stayed back, he ran. He floated the ball. He threw bullets. He spread the ball to five different receivers.

Six of his completions came on roll-outs, including a four-yard TD to Armani Cardoso for a 13-0 lead late in the first. When North spread out, J.T. Bain flew open over the middle for scoring hits of 50 and 40 yards. It was more than the ability to run fast or throw hard. Lam knew how to run the game. He had punts of 50, 45 and 35 yards. The results? Balance? Quincy ran for 184 yards and threw for 177. Victories? Lam won all three starts on Thanksgiving.

"It's my last high school football game and it means everything to me," he said. "Credit my teammates. The offensive line gave me time, the receivers were open, and J.T. is such an huge target, I couldn't miss him."

"James is going to make some college coach very happy next year," said North coach Mark Nutley.

Handsom-Fields was electric. This is a player with a track-like speed, a player who runs dashes and relays during the spring. However, what is striking about his development as a junior is his strength, toughness, and power. Against North, he ran between the tackles, mainly off the right side behind Mike Munroe, William Young, Curtis Calley and Jake Bergonzi, and he buried people.

He ran through people, over people and under peo-

STUDENT ATHLETES OF THE MONTH

Anxhela Hoti
Volleyball - Quincy H.S.

"Anxhela is one of the hardest working athletes I have had the pleasure to work with over the past nine years. Her diligence and positive attitude make her a great teammate."

-Jacqui Niosi

This is Anxhela's 1st year as a varsity player, on the Quincy High School's Girls Volleyball Team. She currently has 126 kills and 61 blocks and plays the position of middle hitter.

When not on the court, she is also a member of QHS Student Council, Operation Days Work, and Drama Club.

Anxhela plans on attending a 4-year college and studying medicine. She currently has a GPA 4.64 and is ranked 10th in her class.

Cornelius Koch
Football - North Quincy H.S.

"Cornelius gives 100% effort, whether it is in the classroom or on the field. I have been lucky enough as a coach to have worked with Corn in both football and lacrosse, and have seen how he has grown into a tremendous young man."

-Mark Nutley

Cornelius has been a great leader over the past 4 years at North Quincy High. Outside of being a standout member of our football program, Cornelius also plays for our varsity basketball team and is a captain on the varsity lacrosse team. Off the field he is the president of the NQ chapter of S.A.A.D. (Students Against Destructive Decisions), volunteering many hours of his time to the betterment of our school community. Cornelius hopes to play lacrosse next year at St. Michael's College, St. Joseph's College of Maine, or for Mass. Maritime Academy.

ple. When there was contact, he gave more than he received. Quincy's first touchdown tells well how good he is. On fourth-and-one from the North 16, the Presidents called Handsom-Fields on a dive. He was hit by two defenders five yards in the backfield. His shoulders were perpendicular to the ground. But he would not go down. He righted himself, tore free, reversed field, and swept in untouched off the left wing. Great stuff. Not good. Great.

"He is a beast. I call him our Marshawn Lynch," said Lam.

"He loves the weight room. He lifts and lifts," said Reardon. "He has the balance, the leverage that good backs have. That set the perfect tone for us. The favorite on Thanksgiving has to jump on top. If the underdog gets out fast, the sideline comes alive and all that Thanksgiving magic can happen."

Quincy needed Lam and Handsom-Fields because North moved the ball. The Red Raiders never punted. They were inside the Quincy 30 four times. Senior quarterback Andrew Kiley ignited the offense with 12 completions for 126 yards and a touchdown. He had 12 carries for 39 yards, including three first-down runs of 15, four, and five yards when he lowered his shoulder on tough inside plays on North's drive to the Quincy four in the final seconds of the half with the Red Raiders down, 19-6.

SIDELINE CELEBRATION – Quincy Head Football Coach Bill Reardon is doused with water by Presidents Armani Cardoso (rear), Kenny Garcia Rosario (#34) and Reda Laftih (#21) as the final seconds tick off the clock at the 82nd city football championship Thanksgiving morning at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Quincy defeated North Quincy, 33-6. Quincy players also enjoying the celebration include Declan Mayo (far left, #74) and Abraham Hoti (#70).

"Andrew had a good day. We moved the ball, and he was the big reason," said Nutley. "Our problem was they won the battle up front. We got close, but we couldn't punch it in because we had trouble running the ball."

Senior Eric Cohane-Jones rose to the moment in the final game of his high school career. He had three catches for 48 yards, including a 14-yard TD pass early in the second period, and kickoff returns of 57 and 25 yards. He also was North's most effective player in the secondary on defense.

"I hold him all week that we needed big plays from him and he made them. Our scoring drive was all his," said Nutley.

Quincy's defense countered by doing what they have done best all season. Give yards, not points. Make the big play.

"Whenever we make plays on defense or make a goal-line stand, we win," said Reardon whose team forced four turnovers.

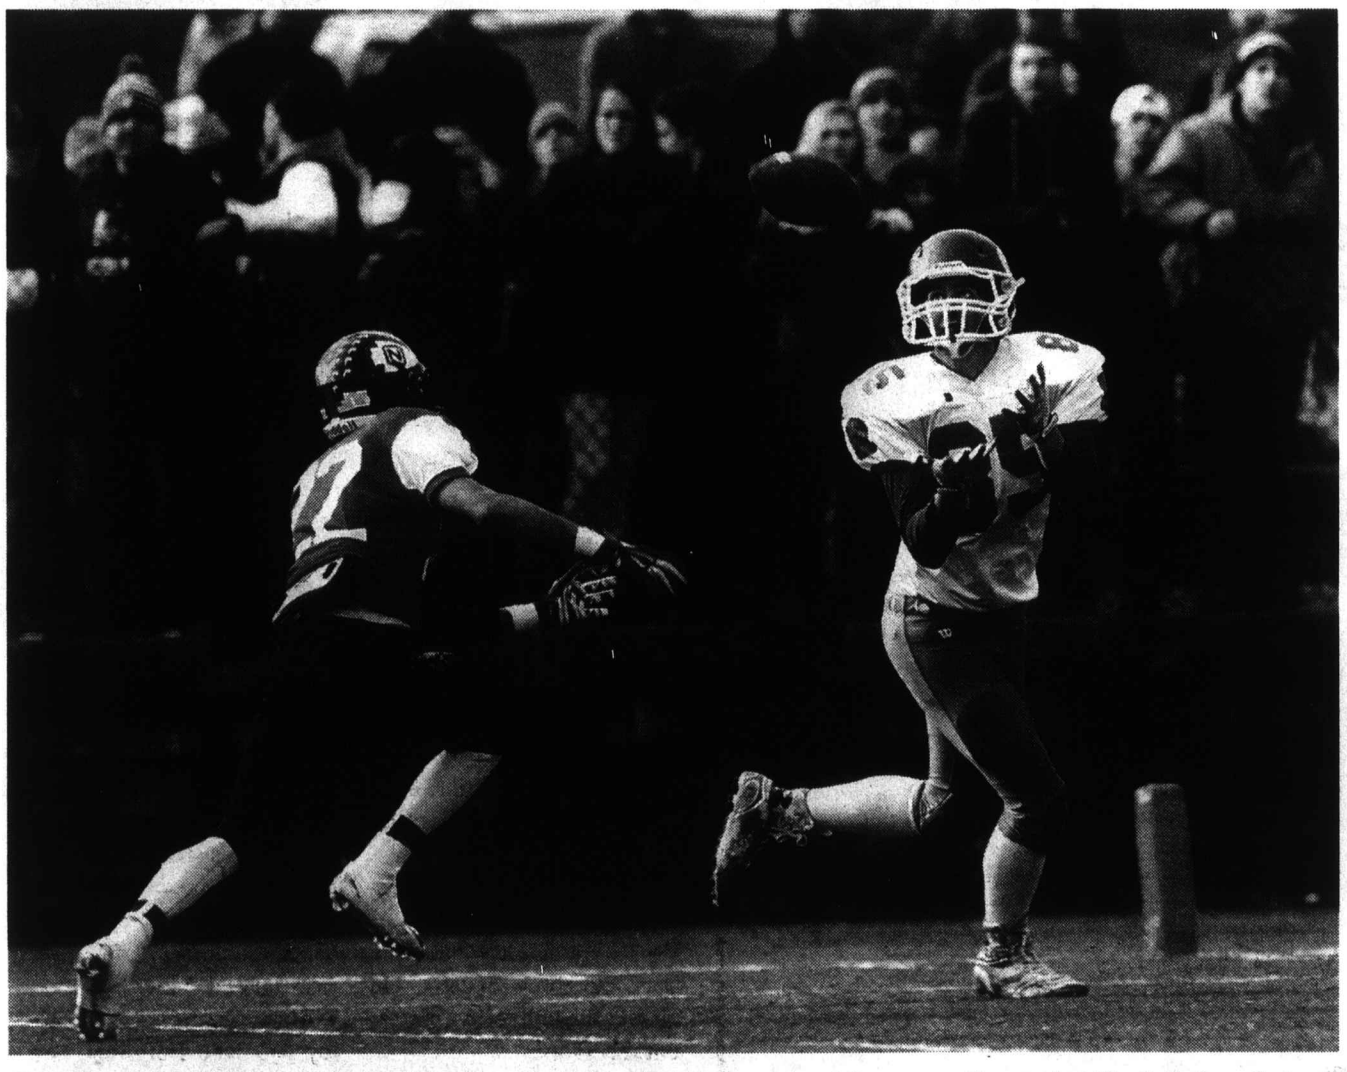

There are several examples.

• Reda Laftih kept it a two-touchdown game at the half (19-6) when he caught and tackled Dayvon Jones on the Quincy four. Kiley and Jones had connected on a screen in the right flat which looked wide open for the TD until Laftih closed it down. Laftih also had an interception at his 20 which shut off North's last offensive threat late in the third and set up Quincy's clinching scores. He also converted on three extra points and had two catches for 31 yards.

• On fourth down from the Quincy four, on the last play of the half with North down by 13, Kiley stood in the pocket, waited and had Solomon Umoren (three catches, 60 yards) breaking free on a fade route. Just as Kiley stepped to deliver, Garrett Cronin, Munroe and Young sacked him to finish the half and the threat. Big play, goal-line stand. Calley, Jake Bergonzi, Isiah Uzamere (three fine games to finish the season) and Nya Domkan also applied consistent pressure on Kiley and helped shut down the North run game on 47 yards.

• North moved to the Quincy 22 on its first possession thanks to a 34-yard connection between Kiley and Umoren. On third down down, Handsom-Fields RECORD RECEPTION – Quincy wide receiver J.T. Bain eyes his second touchdown reception against North Quincy that gave Quincy quarterback James Lam three for the game and number 35 of his career – a new record at Quincy High School. Lam's 35 touchdown passes in a career broke the mark of 34 set by former standout Chris Noble who graduated in 1989.

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

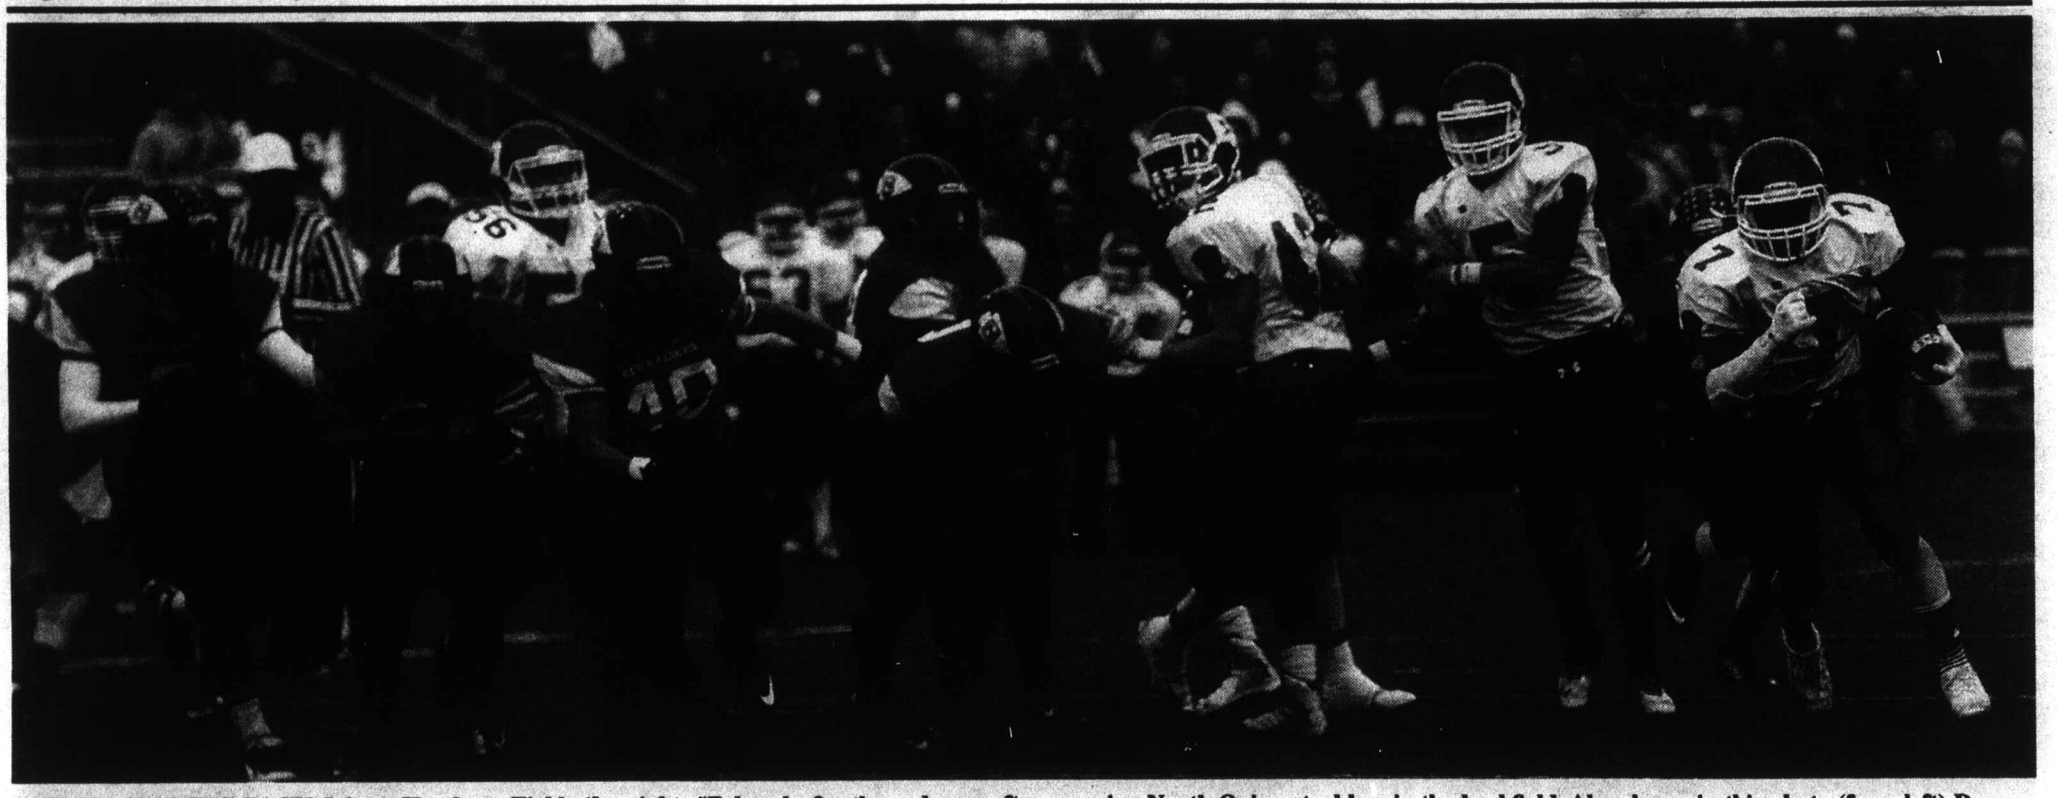

BEFORE YOU PICK UP THAT SHOVEL

Whether you are shoveling snow in the winter or dirt in the summer, heavy lifting has the potential to injure your back, and worse. Each year, more than 10,000 children and adults go the hospital for treatment of back injuries, broken bones, and head injuries. According to research conducted over a 17-year period, overworked muscles, falling, and being hit with the shovel were the most common reasons for getting hurt. These mishaps led to muscle, ligament, tendon, and other soft tissue injuries that commonly led to lower-back damage. With this in mind, snow shovelers should approach the task as they would any form of strenuous exercise. Always warm up first, and lift with the legs and not the back.

We are armed with the knowledge of spinal mechanics and we take an active role in preventing injury through education. For gentle and safe, drug-free chiropractic care, we invite you to call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are a team of health care professionals who want to make a difference in the lives of people around the world. We recommend a chiropractic checkup for all members of the family. At 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, we want to educate you so that you can make choices you feel good about, are comfortable with, and can be committed to. tipped away a certain touchdown from Cohane-Jones. On fourth down, he intercepted a pass. In the third period, he caught Kiley on a fourth-down run shy of the first down.

• Kenny Garcia Rosario made a saving tackle at the Quincy 15 after a 57-yard kickoff return by Cohane-Jones, recovered a fumble to set up Lam's record-breaking touchdown in the fourth, and also ran for 21 yards on five carries.

"I liked the game our safties played. Jahvae and Aramani Cardoso (also an interception) played solid games," said Reardon.

Quincy went up 7-0 on Handsom-Fields memorable 16-yard journey which was set up by a 25-yard kickoff return by Cronin. The Presidents made it 13-0 late in the first when Lam rolled and hit Cardoso from four yards out.

Kiley found Cohane-Jones from 14 yards to draw North within 13-6 early in the second. Cohane-Jones set up the Red Raiders at the 15 with his long kickoff return. Quincy upped it to 19-6 early in the second on Lam's 50-yard strike to Bain.

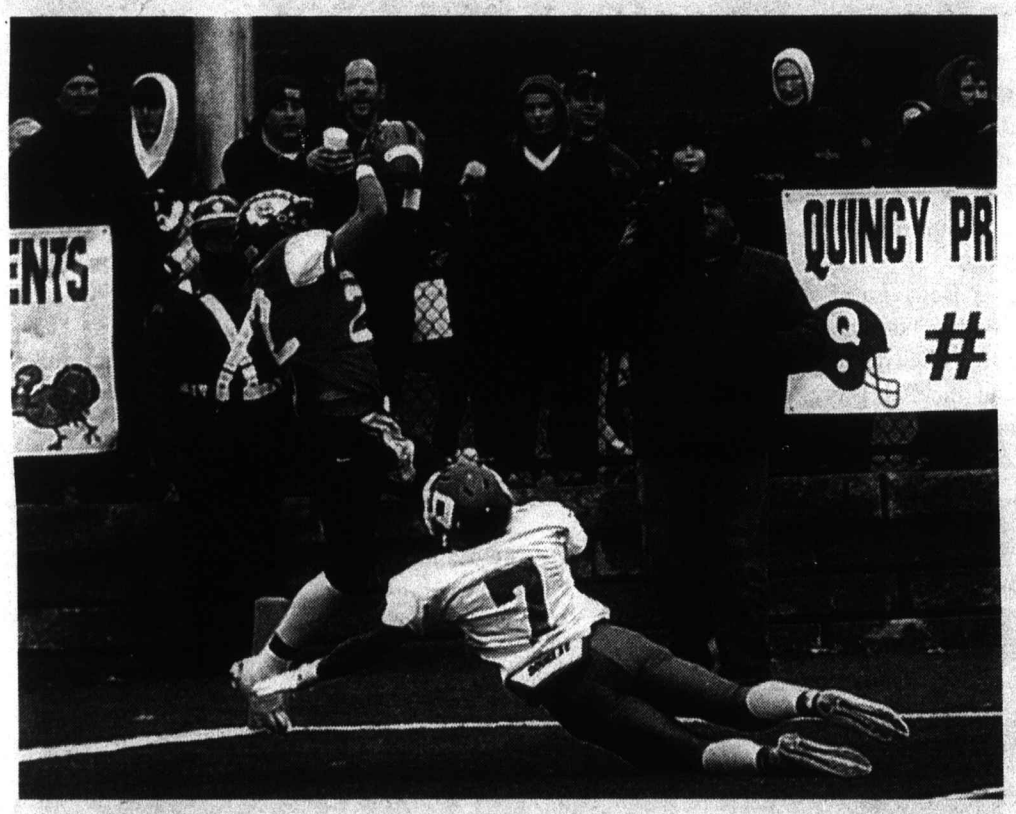

Handsom-Fields scored from the 10 early in the fourth for a 26-6 lead. Lam finished it with the record-breaker, a 40-yarder which caught Bain perfectly in stride for the touchdown.

"It was just a straight go-route and J.T. got wide open. The record means a lot to me, but it wasn't really a day for records," said Lam.

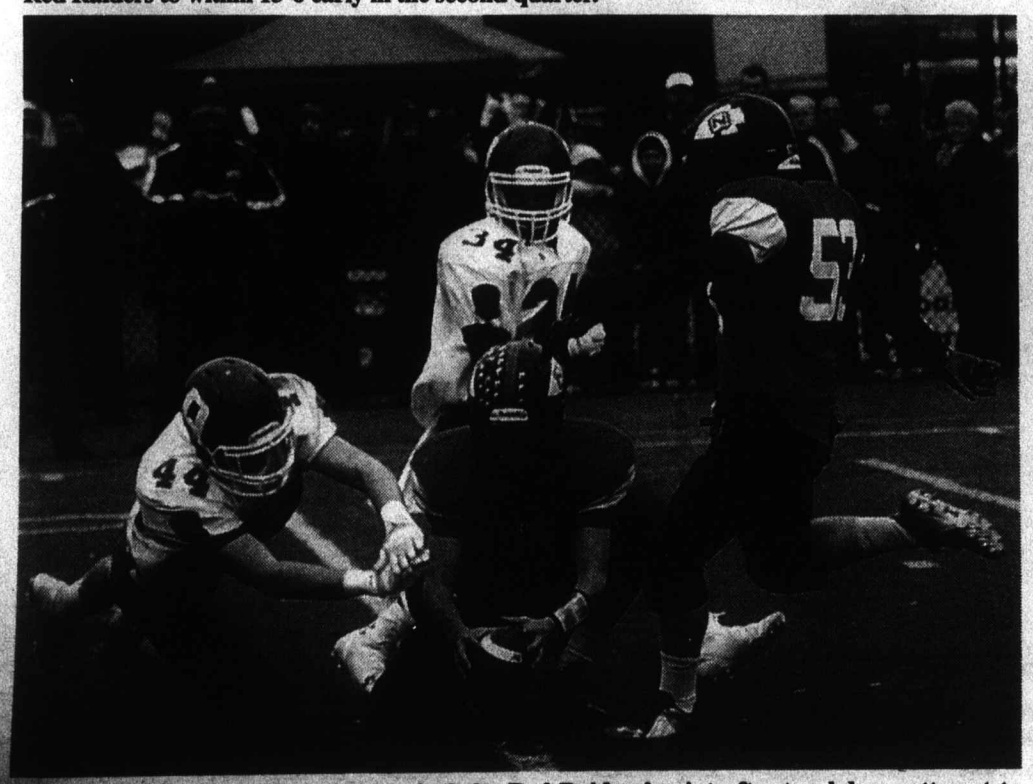

When it was over, Reardon spoke of his team which is largely a senior group. They strung together three straight winning seasons on varsity. They went from 6-5 to 7-4 to 8-3. They were not a lucky team this year. If they have Handsom-Fields for Duxbury, it's a different game. The Needham loss came down to two points and overtime. The Mansfield loss came down to the last play of the game.

It would have been easy to grow discouraged or phone in the end of the season. They never did. It is tribute to the way Reardon coaches them, the senior leadership, especially Lam and Young, and their character. They played hard from the first play against Malden Catholic to the last play against North. It is difficult to ask for more.

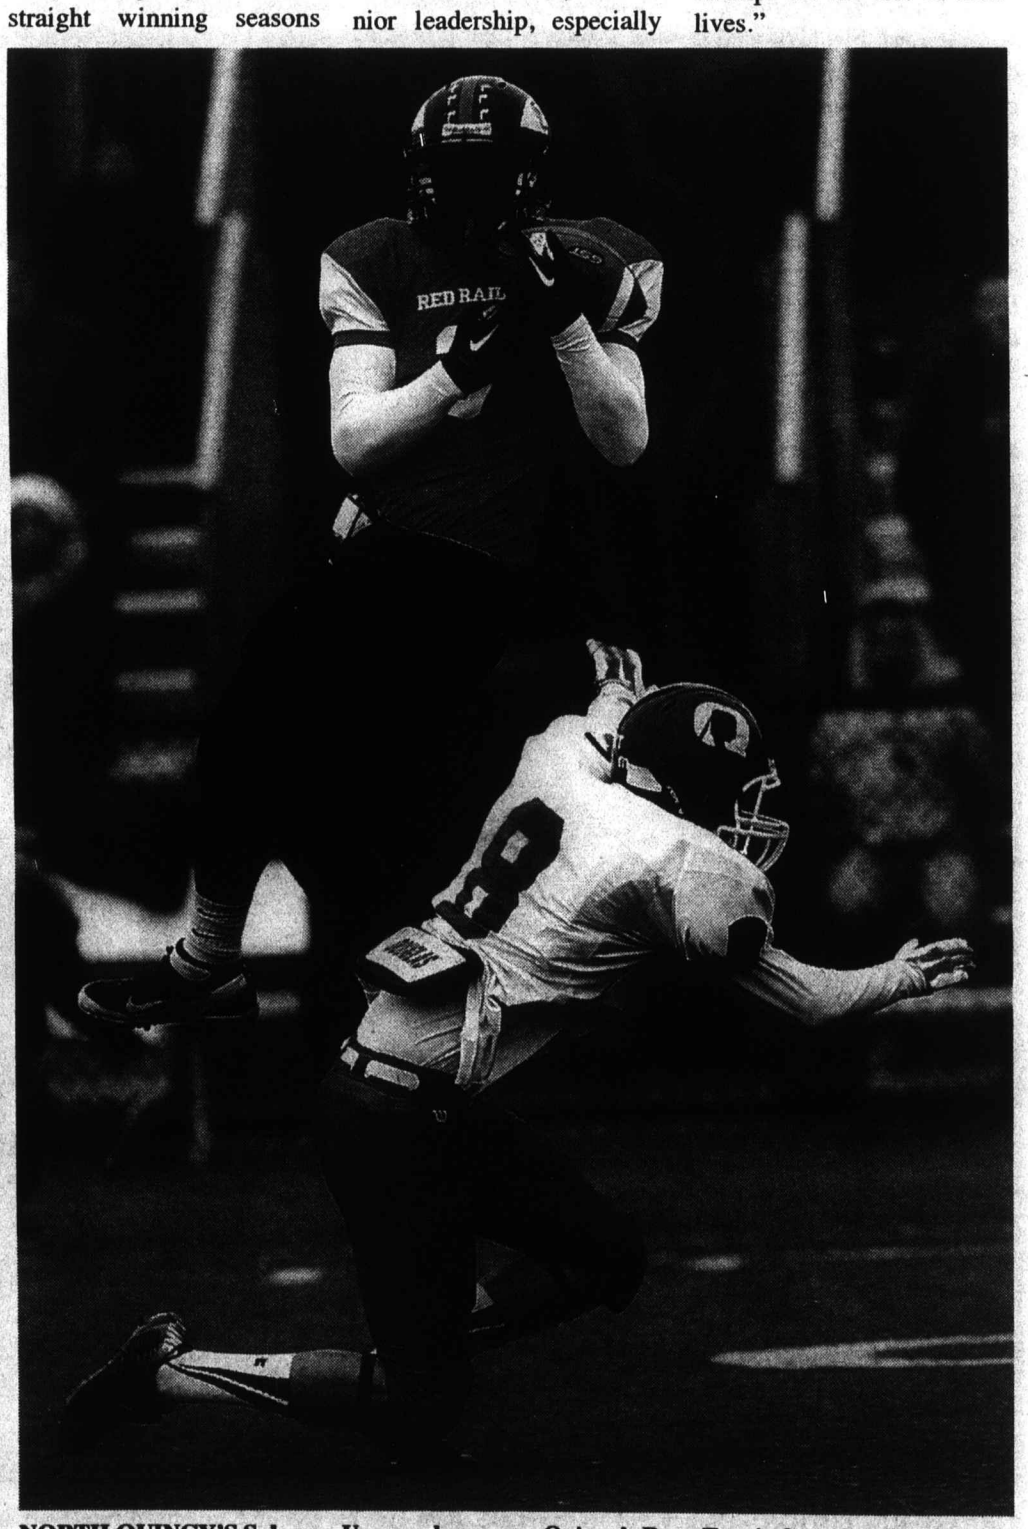

"Luck may not have always been with us this year, but that's football. No excuses," said Reardon. "I wanted this game for them badly because they are a close, special group of kids. They'll always have this day. They'll always be city champs for the rest of their lives."

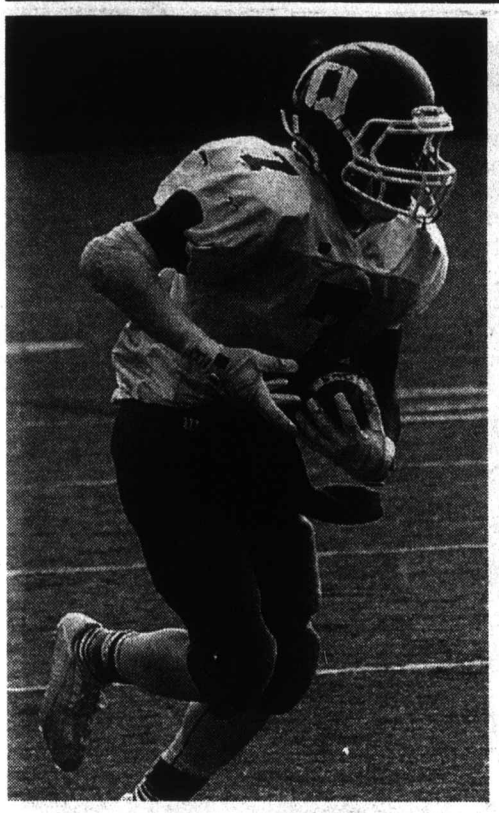

NORTH QUINCY'S Eric Cohane-Jones catches a 14-yard pass from Andrew Kiley to draw the Red Raiders to within 13-6 early in the second quarter.

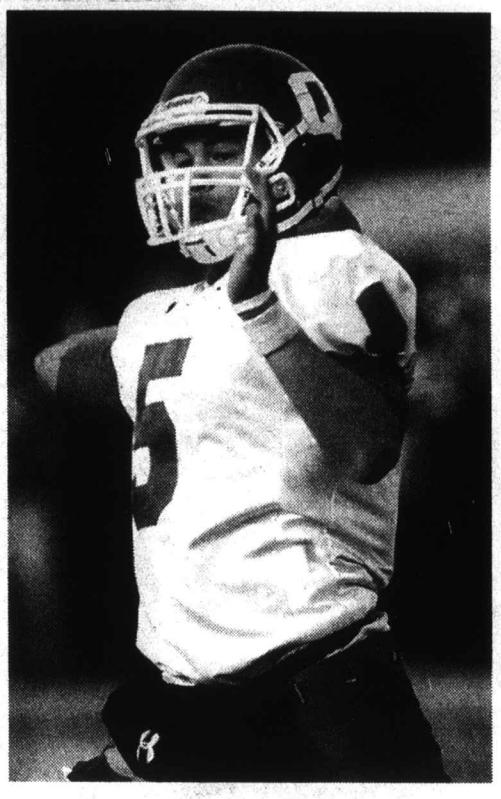

BUT QUINCY'S Jake Bergonzi blocked the Red Raiders' point after touchdown attempt to keep it a 13-6 game and swing the momentum back to the Presidents.

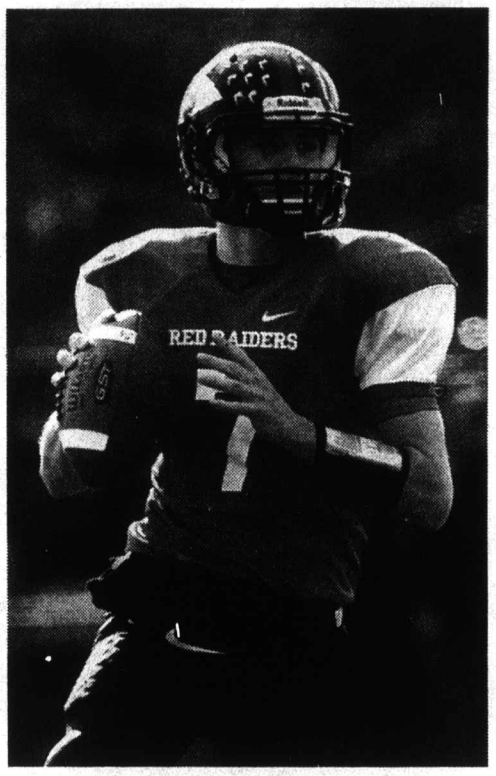

NORTH QUINCY'S Solomon Umoren leaps over Quincy's Ryan Turpin for a dazzling 34-yard catch early in the first quarter. But the Presidents' defense held North Quincy without a point at the 22-yard line, thanks to defensive back Jahvae Handsom-Fields who knocked one pass away on third down and intercepted the next throw on fourth down.

Quincy Sun 82nd City Football Championship Players Of The Game

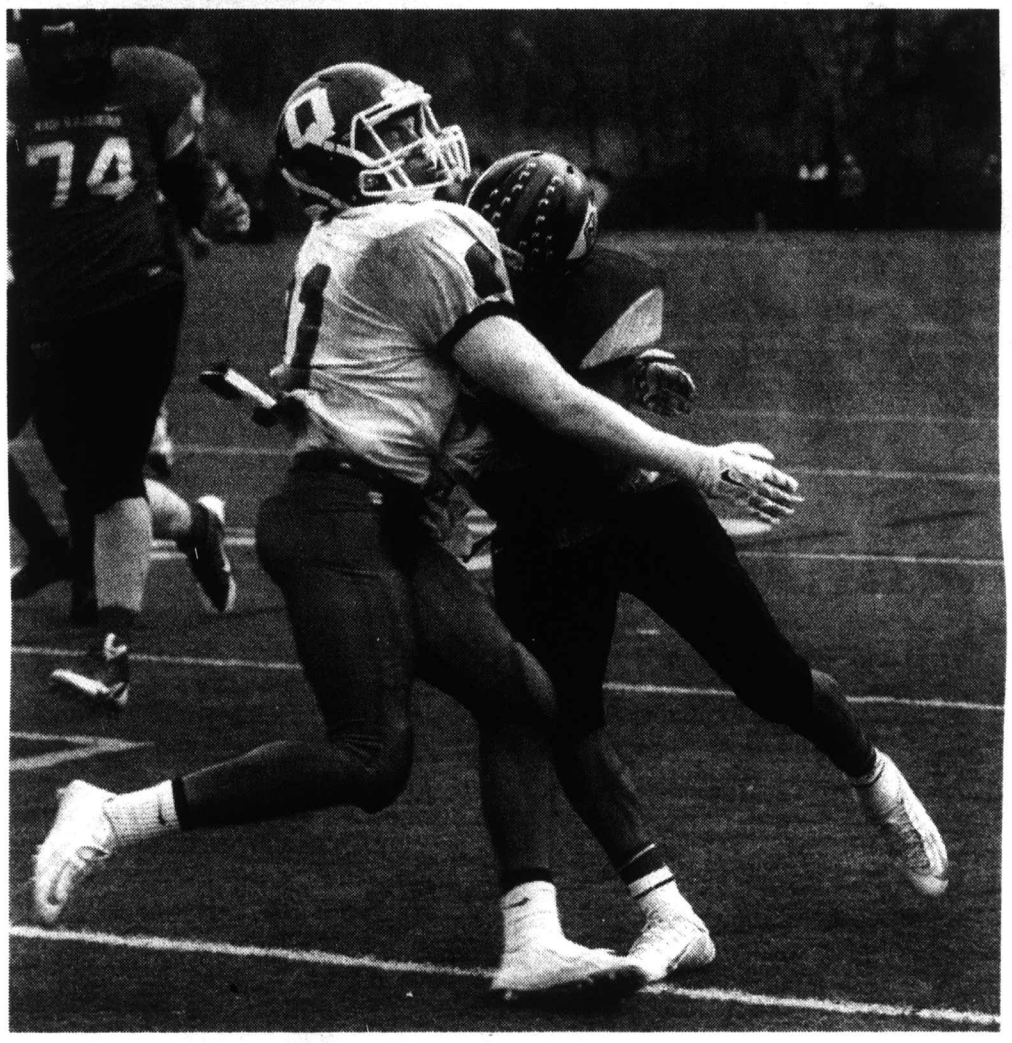

By BILL GRIFFIN

Quincy offensive players – James Lam and Jahvae Handsome Fields. You try to choose between the two. Scour your memory for a Thanksgiving performance which can match these two on the same field at the same time. Lam was 9-11 for 177 yards and three TDs. Handsom-Fields ran for 156 in 14 carries (better than 11.0 per carry) and two touchdowns. Handsom-Fields also played a fine game on defense. Lam had punts of 50, 45 and 35 yards. This is an impossible choice. They are a special pair.

North Quincy offensive player – Senior quarterback Andrew Kiley handled the pressure of delivering most of the offense when Quincy shut down North's running game. He responded with 10 completions for 126 yards and a touchdown. He ran 12 times for 39 yards, including three first-down runs on a drive which nearly brought the Red Raiders within a touchdown at the half. He did all this is the face of a fierce Quincy rush. North was able to move inside the 30 four times because of Kiley. A job well done.

Quincy defensive player – In a game in which Quincy gave yards and depended on the big play to stop North, senior Reda Laftih made two of the biggest. His tackle of Dayvon Jones at the Quincy four just before halftime saved a touchdown and kept the Presidents ahead, 19-6. He made an interception late in the third to stop North's final serious threat and set up Quincy's big finish. Laftih also converted three extra points.

North Quincy defensive player – Senior lineman Nick Manning. Despite working against a powerful, veteran line, Manning consistently got penetration into the Quincy backfield and disrupted running plays. In the third period, he threw Jahvae Handsom-Fields for a six-yard loss on a third-and-seven which turned the ball over and set up the Red Raiders in good field position.

QUINCY PRESIDENTS celebrate their 33-6 victory over North Quincy with the city football championship trophy in the south endzone at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

RECORD DAY – Quincy Quarterback James Lam (#5) receives the game ball from Coach Bill Reardon to mark a record-setting day for the senior captain. Lam tossed three touchdown passes - including a pair to wide receiver J.T. Bain - for 35 in his career to establish a new record at Quincy High. Lam's 35 touchdown passes broke the mark set 26 years ago by Chris Noble who had 34 for his career.

Lam Sets TD Record But Team Always Came First

'Winning On Thanksgiving Will Always Mean The Most To Me,' Says Quincy Senior Quarterback

By BILL GRIFFIN

It is a long road from sophomore to senior year on Thanksgiving.

When his sophomore year began, James Lam thought he would sit and learn and play for the JVs. Nice and easy. Take your time and get yourself ready. Then Andrew Schaff injured his knee and it was Lam's team. Just like that. In an instant, he was the varsity starter. For sure, he could throw and run, but he knew nothing of varsity speed, varsity hitting.

Step up and learn as you play. There would be no easy introduction, no smooth transition into varsity. Lam was the quarterback. That's football. Next man up.

As a sophomore, he entered Thanksgiving with a 5-5 team that hadn't beaten North in three years. Quincy had a chance at a winning record for the first time in nearly a decade. The sun was bright. The crowd was big. His nerves were bigger.

"I had a hard time calming myself down. All I could think was don't make a mistake," he said.

He looked at his brother Jackson at left guard and he felt good. He looked behind him, saw Jalen Green, and felt very good. Green would rush for over 200 yards and Quincy would roll, 30-14. Welcome to Thanksgiving.

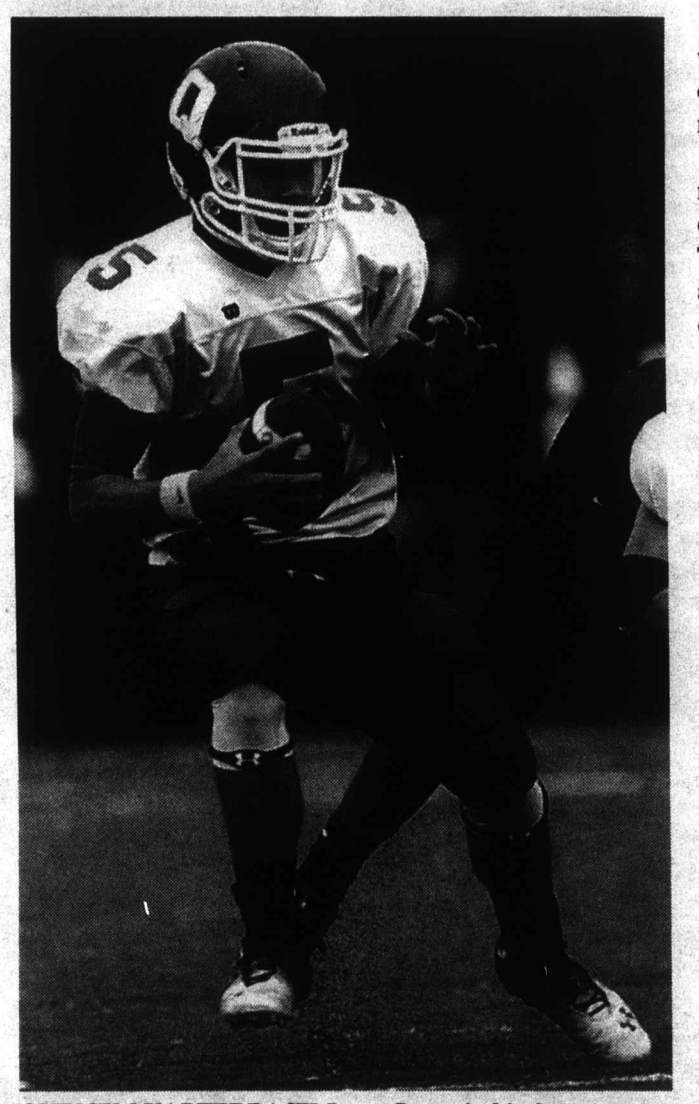

"I concentrated and thought if I just got the ball to Jalen, everything would be all right," said Lam.

In his junior year, he managed a team with a monster defense to a 14-0 win over North and a 7-4 season. He had two full years of varsity behind him and he knew well of Thanksgiving. He had grown as a player and a leader. He ran like a tailback, dropped 50-yard passes on a dime, and checked off plays at the line of scrimmage. He was the quarterback. No question.

By senior year on Thanksgiving, it had all come full circle. There was confidence and poise and control. Other players looked to Lam for support. He seamlessly guided an offense that was almost perfectly balanced (184 yards rushing, 177 passing) and put on a passing show (9-11, three touchdowns) that covered throws from four to 50 yards and should be put on an instructional DVD for how to play the position.

"It's completely different as a senior," said Lam. "I felt so much more confident. I was excited but not nervous. I want to thank the seniors I played with as a sophomore and a junior for helping me elevate my game and build my confidence. I owe it to them."

When it was over, he had guided Quincy to three straight winning seasons (6-5, 7-4, 8-3). That's 21-12 over three years and it could have been a lot better with a little good fortune. In his junior year, Quincy lost three games by one point. In his senior year, the Presidents lost in overtime to Needham and on the last play of the game against Mansfield.

QUINCY QUARTERBACK James Lam - in his three years as a starter - led the Presidents to three winning records (21-12) and established a new school record with 35 career touchdown passes.

Lam led Quincy to a place it hadn't been since 1990. He broke the school record for touchdowns passes held by Chris Noble with his 35th scoring strike on the last pass of his varsity career, a 40-yard dart to J.T. Bain which made the final, 33-6. Try and write a better ending. One more thing. He was 3-0 on Thanksgiving as a starting quarterback, and the moon may fall from the sky before it happens again. In three games on Thanksgiving, his offense scored 77 points.

"The final touchdown was a called play from the coaches so I could get the record," said Lam.

When asked what meant more to him, the TD record or the unbeaten legacy on Thanksgiving, Lam smiled as if the question really didn't need to be asked.

"Thanksgiving. I will always remember being the winning quarterback on Thanksgiving. It's not even close," said Lam. "It's not easy going up against North every year. I know these kids. I grew up with them. I know how tough they are. They never stop coming after you. It's not easy to beat them once, let alone three times.

"I saw how it felt to lose to North. My brother only beat them once. When he lost, he would come home and not even touch the turkey. We'll talk about all that tonight"

Behind the dead-solid perfect performance on center stage last Thursday were countless hours of hard work. It is always so.

"James became a great quarterback because he wasn't satisfied with just being a starter," said coach Bill Reardon. "James didn't play defense. When we practiced defense, he would set up and do quarterback drills on his own. He worked and worked at being better."

It is impossible to talk to Lam for more the 30 seconds without hearing him praise his teammates. He worked with Green and Jahvae Handsom-Fields, two of the best tailbacks in school history. He enjoyed the view.

"With Jalen it was all acceleration. He would cut off a dime and he would be gone," said Lam, "Jahvae is really fast, but what he does best is just keep churning and churning. He never stops. The play is never finished."

He spoke of his offensive line of Abraham Hoti, Steve Scolaro, Mike Munroe, William Young, Curtis Calley and Jake Bergonzi.

"I wasn't hit today, not once when I went back to the pass. The offensive line did that, not me" he said. "And a lot of times, after I handed the ball off to Jahvae, I looked back and saw open spaces to run. That's the offensive line."

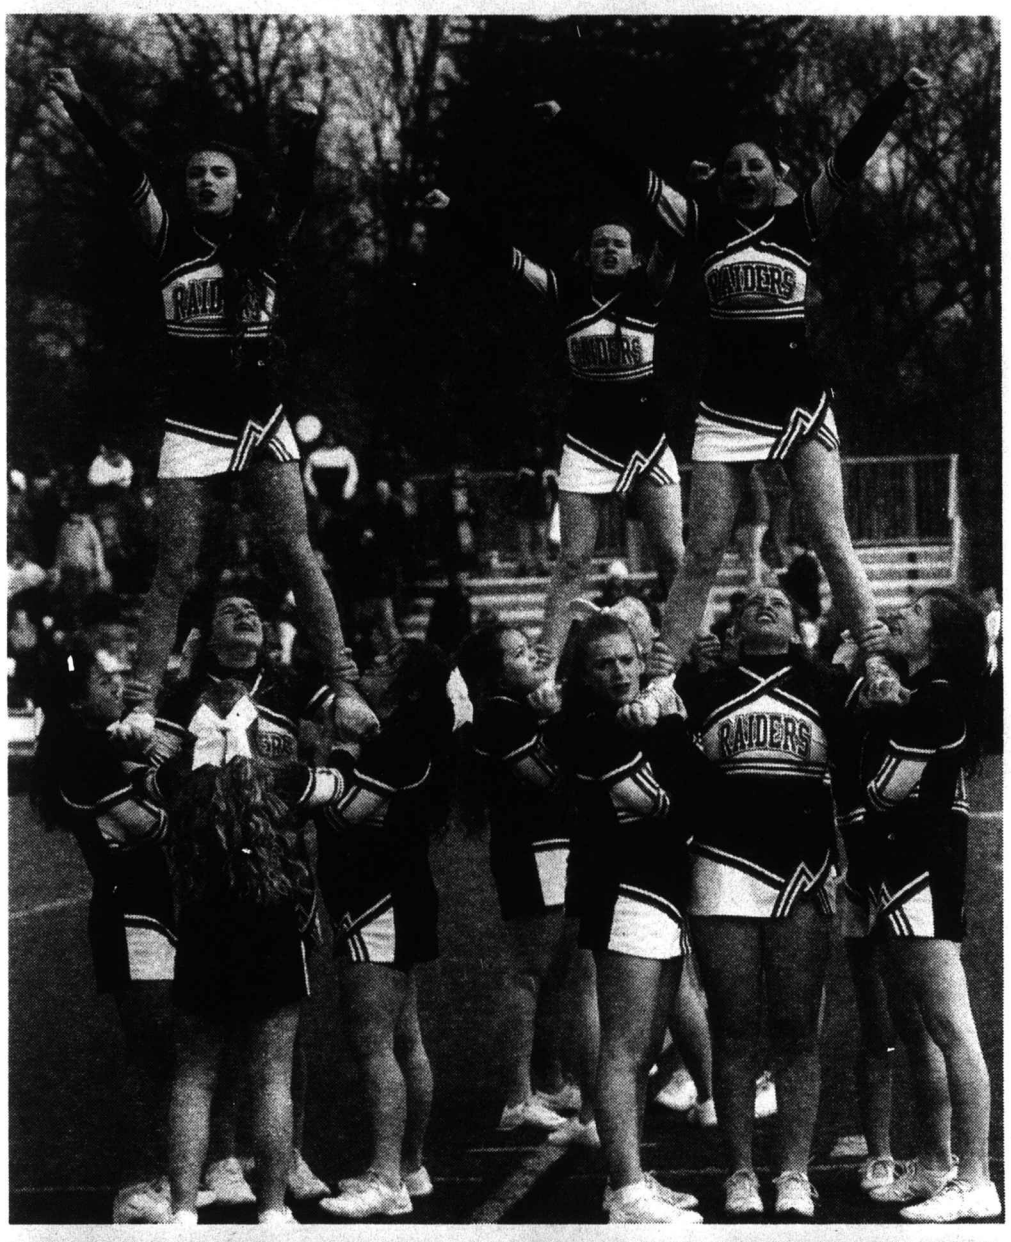

A fine scene was played out in the far end zone after it was over. Lam's brother Jackson stood on the fringe of the crowd. Reardon held the golden trophy, stood with a wide smile on his face, and called out to his quarterback after Lam had finished talking to reporters.

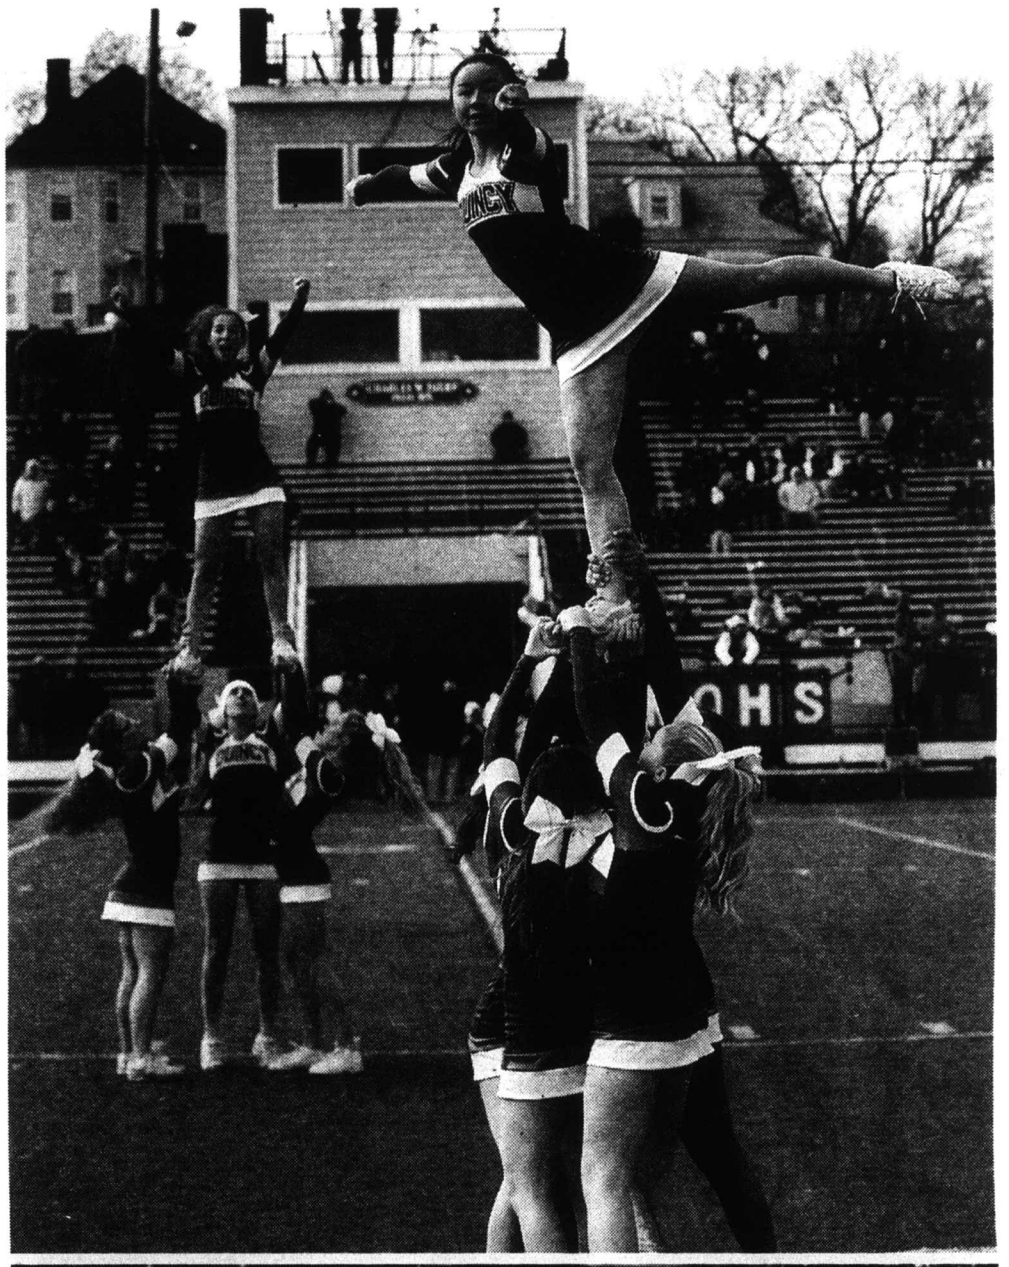

"Hey superstar. Get over here."

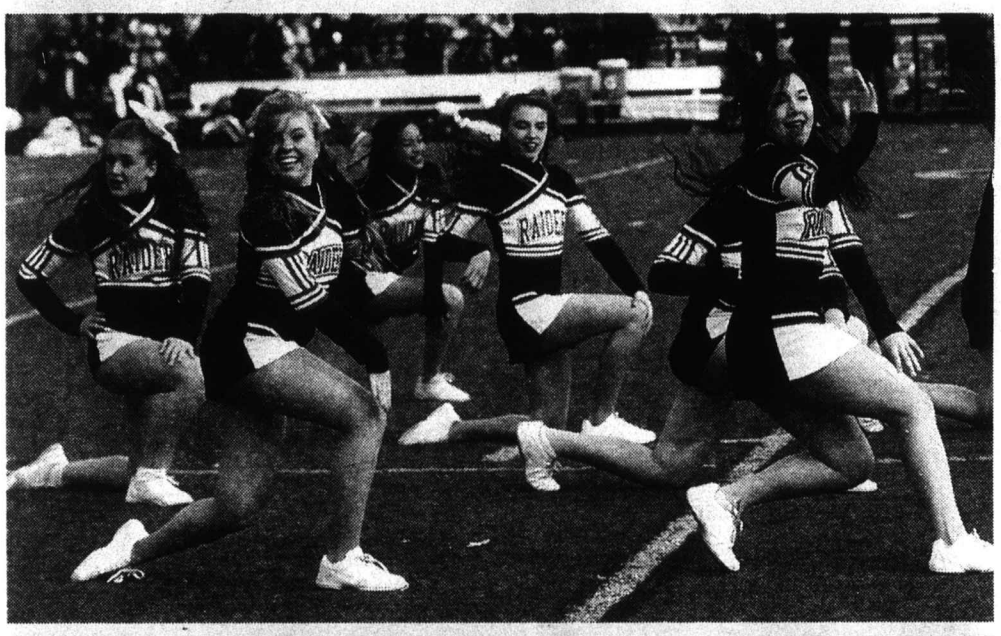

Lam smiled, walked over to thank his coach, and touched the trophy that meant so much with him.

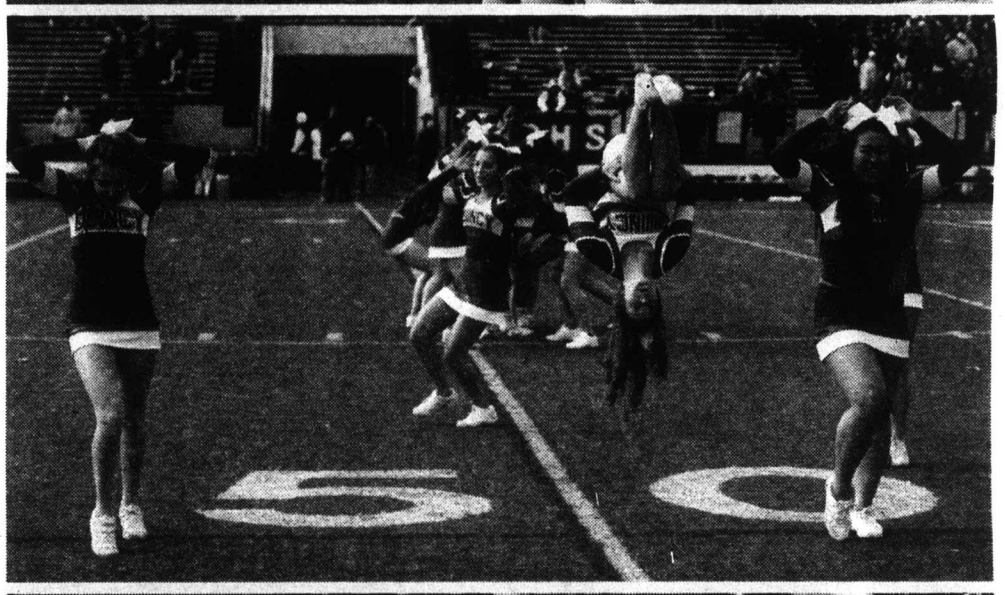

"This is what will always mean the most to me: Winning on Thanksgiving."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, November 17, 2014, at approximately 10:15 a.m., Officer Mike Brandolini was working in Quincy Square as part of the Anti Crime Unit. While on foot patrol, he stopped in the Family Dollar store at 1445 Hancock Street. He was approached by a store employee who stated that her personal cell phone had been stolen the day before. Officer Brandolini inquired if the incident may have been recorded on security video and learned that it had been.

Upon viewing the video, Officer Brandolini noted that the larceny occurred on the 16th at approximately 1:30 p.m. He immediately recognized the male and female suspect from past interactions in the Square. The video showed the two suspects at the check out counter, in the process of purchasing store merchandise. The female suspect was in front and the male suspect was standing approximately five feet behind her. The employee who lost her phone was the cashier working the check out register. She said that she was stocking shelves very near to the checkout counter and temporarily placed her personal cell phone on the work counter directly where the male suspect was standing.

While watching the video, Officer Brandolini witnessed the male suspect look down at the counter and then extend his hand to the precise area where the employee left the phone. With the phone in hand, the male suspect glanced around as if checking to see if anyone saw him. He quickly placed the phone into his right coat pocket. The female with the male suspect was ahead of him and preoccupied making a purchase. She couldn't see the theft occurring, nor did she take any action to act as a lookout, so she was dropped as a suspect. The couple then left the store. No other store patrons were recorded in the area or were present in line. Seconds after the couple left the store, the victim returned to her work area and discovered that her phone was missing, so she extended her search and then contacted another employee to review the video footage.

The victim described the stolen phone as a Samsung Galaxy, with a value of $118.00, which was confirmed by a Metro PCS store employee. With this information, Officer Brandolini notified Quincy Square Anti Crime Unit Officers Steve DesRoche and Ryan Donnelly to be on the look out for the male suspect and his female companion. The officers canvassed the downtown area and minutes later Officer Brandolini learned that the male suspect was in the Thomas Crane Public Library at 40 Washington Street. Upon arrival at the library, Officer Brandolini approached the male suspect and informed him of his Miranda Rights. After stating that he understood his Miranda Rights, the suspect was asked if he had the phone that he was observed stealing at Family Dollar the day before. The male suspect removed the phone from his coat pocket and handed it to the Officer, who then verified the make as a Samsung Galaxy.

LT. DAN MINTON

The suspect, a 27-year-old Quincy resident, was then placed into custody for Larceny from a Building and transported to the station for booking. The victim was reunited with her phone a few hours later. Nice Work!

PET SCAM: A new online financial scam is aimed at animal lovers and it comes in different approaches. According to the Federal Trade Commission, online thieves are posting compassionate appeals on behalf of dogs and other pets who need loving homes. Many of the ads include very sad stories, often with photos, that would make any normal person want to save a neglected or abused animal. The goal is to get a rational person to act on emotion. Once a customer agrees to pay for the pet, which is usually a low entry price, there is often a series of payments that the customer will have to make. For example, there will be the initial cost of paying for the "required" shots and medical care prior to delivery. Once that payment is received, there will be additional charges for crating, shipping and inspection costs. Again, these usually are not high expenses, but once you get hooked in on the original payment, it adds up. As you continue to pay for charges that actually make sense, at some point the reality sets in that there is no pet coming! There are so many fake emails ranging from requests for money to bogus investment opportunities and most of these are easy to detect. The difference in the case of animals in need is the emotional component and the scammers know this. To avoid becoming a victim;

Do not make money transfers – they cannot be refunded. If the scammer instructs you to send money via Western Union, MoneyGram or a similar service, your money could end up outside the U.S.. Remember, there are plenty of animals locally that could be helped by you.

Investigate - Ask for the seller's name, address and phone number. Google is a great amateur investigator tool. Search the person's name to see if there is a history of scams or complaints. Simply add the word, "scam" after the name, address or phone number.

Track the image - The FTC recommends right clicking on the photo of the pet and selecting "copy image location," "copy image address" or "properties." Copy the link into your browser. If the image shows up in an older listing, it's most likely a scam.

Best action – Go to the local animal shelter, where an estimated 2.7 million pets in shelters go un-adopted each year. If you really want to help a puppy or kitten in need, make an in-person visit to the shelter in your town.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Make your holiday preparations one step at a time in order to avoid being overwhelmed and leaving things undone. That confusing family situation continues to work itself out.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Ease this year's holiday money pressures by letting your thrifty side guide you as you look for those perfect gifts that typically reflect your good taste and love of beauty.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You'll have a good handle on potential holiday problems if you delegate tasks to family members, friends or co-workers -- most of whom will be more than happy to help out.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Right now you are especially vulnerable to holiday scams that seek to take advantage of your generosity. Best advice: Check them out before you send out your checks.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) The upcoming holiday season gives the Big Cat much to purr about. Relationships grow stronger, and new opportunities loom on the horizon, just waiting to be pounced on.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A changing situation brings conflicting advice about how to go forward with your holiday plans. Your best bet: Make the decision you feel most comfortable with.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Holiday plans get back on track after some confusion about the direction you expected to take. A potentially troublesome money matter needs your immediate attention.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your holiday preparations are on track. But you need to confront a personal situation while you can still keep it from overwhelming everything else.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Tight financial matters ease a bit during this holiday season. But the sagacious Sagittarian is well-advised to keep a tight hold on the reins while shopping for gifts.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't put off making decisions about this year's holiday celebrations, despite the negative comments you've been getting from several quarters. Do it NOW!
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) The holidays will bring new friends and new opportunities. Meanwhile, be careful to use your energy wisely as you go about making holiday preparations.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) There's good news coming from a most unlikely source. And it could turn out to be one of the best holiday gifts you have had in years. Remember to stay positive.
BORN THIS WEEK: You are respected for your honesty and loyalty. You make friends slowly -- but with rare exceptions, they're in your life forever.

QHS Students Prepare 60 Turkeys For Meal

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The 60 turkeys prepared by students in the Quincy Public School's Career and Technical Education Culinary Arts Program at Quincy High School Nov. 25 to be served during the annual Father Bill's & MainSpring Community Dinner on Thanksgiving at Christ Episcopal Church in Quincy fed 200 people during the sit down meal and an additional 300 ill or elderly people who had prepared meals delivered to their homes by Father Bill's volunteers.

Those in need were invited to sit down to a traditional Thanksgiving dinner at noon in the church.

The turkeys for the meal and delivery were donated by the Greater Boston Food Bank. A generous grant from Stop & Shop also assisted in purchasing the Thanksgiving birds.

Baking Instructor William Gluvna, who has worked at Quincy High School for 30 years, said that Father Bill's has been using the school's kitchen to prepare the meals for four years.

There are roughly 150 kids in the culinary program, he said. Most had the chance during their school day to help prepare the turkeys.

Mark Kelly, a culinary instructor at Quincy High School, said that students learn how to carve and break down raw and cooked turkeys all the while helping those in need.

"They learn how to break down a turkey which will also translate into any other bird like chickens, ducks, quail," he said.

John Yazwinski, CEO and President of Father Bill's, said that prior to using the Quincy High School kitchen, the preparation of food took place in smaller restaurant kitchens throughout the city.

"It was hard to coordinate previously," he said, adding that the partnership between the non-profit and the school was a "win-win for everybody."

Seventy-three years ago Sunday, when the Japanese launched a surprise attack on the U.S. naval base at Pearl Harbor, Quincy resident William J. Keith was there.

That morning, the West Virginia was moored in Battleship Row, next to the USS Tennessee and diagonally behind the USS Arizona. Keith, who joined the Navy on Aug. 20, 1940, was a hospital corpsman. Council Approves COLA Base Increase

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council recently improved increasing the cost of living adjustment (COLA) base for retired city employees by $1,000 effective July 1, 2015.

In Massachusetts, retired public employees who receive a pension can receive a cost of living adjustment of up to 3 percent annually. In most retirement systems throughout the state, the COLA is based on only the first $12,000 received from a pension annually, which means a retiree with a $12,000 annual pension and a retiree with a $50,000 annual pension will receive the same cost of living adjustment.

Legislation approved on Beacon Hill in recent years allows local retirement boards to increase the base from $12,000 by increments of $1,000, with the approval of local legislative bodies. Quincy's City Council approved such an increase Dec. 1 in a 7-2 vote.

Ed Masterson, the executive director of the city's retirement board, told the council that raising the COLA base could provide retirees who earn $13,000 or more an additional $30 in the first year, provided the board votes in favor of another 3 percent cost of living adjustment. Raising the COLA base from $12,000 to $13,000, Masterson added, will require the city to increase the amount it appropriates towards pensions each year by $276,000 beginning in fiscal year 2016.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee both voted against increasing the COLA base. McNamee cited the city's future unfunded pension liability.

"I think it's a mistake to do this without a discussion of where we are without a discussion of the unfunded pension liability," he said.

"It's December, I want to be Santa Claus. I really do. But I have to be responsible and I don't want to kick the can down the road and create a situation where we're incrementally increasing the obligations of our pension fund and, I think, very realistically and probabilistically impairing the pensions that everyone in this room someday may or may not enjoy."

2-Alarm Fire Damages Lunt Street Home

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Five engines and two ladder trucks responded to a fire at 43 Lunt St. on Saturday night that reached two alarms and caused $150,000 in damage, according to the Quincy Fire Department.

The fire was called in at approximately 8:57 p.m. by a neighbor one street over on Vane Street who noticed heavy smoke billowing from the back, second floor porch and extending into the attic eaves of the multi-family home, said Capt. Roger Kineavy.

"They brought in a line through the front door," he said.

Ladder 5 then cut a hole in the roof to allow for ventilation.

Kineavy said damage to the home was estimated at $100,000 with an additional $50,000 in property losses reported.

The fire is still under investigation however "it was likely an accident," he said.

The fire was "knocked down quickly," he added but firefighters remained at the scene for two hours.

No injuries were reported however the home has been rendered uninhabitable due to smoke and fire damage, he said.

Star Of Sea Church Proposal Withdrawn

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Hal March Associates Design & Development of Squantum has retracted its proposal to acquire the Mary Star of the Sea Church citing opposition from Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston leaders (RCAB).

The developer had plans to repurpose the property by turning the church into a congregate senior housing facility, replacing the rectory with residential units, and keeping the sanctuary intact for religious use, meetings, and as a community center and was going to host an open community forum at the Squantum Elementary School regarding the project on Wednesday.

"We were encouraged by the good faith generated in the neighborhood for our proposal inspired by the 'Save the Church, Sell the Rectory' lawn signs," said Hal March in a statement. "As a Squantum resident and abutter, we had been concerned for the demise of Mary Star of the Sea as a landmark of the former congregation's relationship with the RCAB divestment and of the potential negative impact to the neighborhood."

March's statement read that he and his company have been transparent and open in earning community support but that as of this morning, "the RCAB would not entertain any offer that would reuse the church for any religious purpose."

A diamond pendant is probably one of the most striking pieces of jewelry that a woman can wear. Nothing else quite matches the allure of a diamond resting elegantly on the neck. One of the more exciting aspects of purchasing a diamond pendant is that a woman can select a shape that is not so readily found in a solitaire ring. For instance, marquise and pear shapes are often used because their elongated shape helps extend the visual appearance of the neck. With this in mind, it is also important to choose a chain of proper length. It is also essential to take into consideration the height and build of the wearer, as well as the style of her dress.

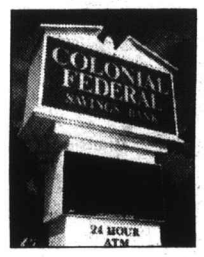

If you're interested in a diamond pendant, you will find a lovely selection at our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. Our diamond collection contains virtually any shape and size imaginable. MARC CONNOLLY, Commandant, Caddy Detachment - Marine Corps League, was the guest speaker at Sunday's Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day ceremony at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. "While the Attack on Pearl Harbor occurred 73 years ago," Connolly said, "it remains important for us to commemorate that fateful day – each year – to honor those who served, those who fought, and those who died in service to their country." Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth naval base and remembers a scramble to reach the deck of the ship.

"I was five decks down below and the ship was sinking. Everybody was trying to go up one ladder; some fell backwards. You got up and most of the harbor was on fire," Keith recalled recently.

After making it to the deck of the West Virginia, Keith made it to safety by heading aboard the Tennessee. Had he gone the other way, into the harbor, he may not have been so lucky.

"I went over on the Tennessee – it was only a couple feet away from land so I was able to get off the ship," he said. "If you went the other way you would've been burned to death."

After making it to land, Keith began treating injured personnel. Many of those he treated were burn victims.

The Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor killed 2,403 sailors, soldiers, marines, and civilians; 1,177 were killed on the Arizona, many after a bomb struck an ammunition room. One hundred six crewmembers aboard the West Virginia were killed that morning.

All eight battleships stationed in Pearl Harbor that morning were damaged, and four were sunk, including the West Virginia, which sustained as many as nine hits from bombs and torpedoes. The West Virginia and five of the other battleships were repaired and brought back into service during the war.

Keith continued to serve after Pearl Harbor, stationed on the USS Chester (CA-27), a heavy cruiser. The Chester was part of a task force that took part in raids on the Marshall and Gilbert Islands in early 1942; eight aboard were killed when a bomb struck the ship. Just a few months later, the Chester took part in the five-day Battle of the Coral Sea.

Keith was discharged from the service on March 15, 1945; later that same year he married his wife, Barbara. For his service in the war, William was awarded the Combat Action Ribbon, Navy Good Conduct Medal, the American Defense Service Medal, the World War II Victory Medal, and the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal. He received the commendations more than 65 years after being discharged with the help of then U.S. Sen. Scott Brown.

William and Barbara have six children – including two sons who served in the Vietnam War – and raised another two as their own. They have 20 grandchildren, 17 great-grandchildren with two more on the way, and four great great-grandchildren.

The Keiths lived in Marshfield for many years, where William served as the head custodian for the town's school department, before moving to Quincy two years ago. William would often speak to school groups about Pearl Harbor while working for the school department.

William and Barbara have returned to Pearl Harbor six times, most recently for their 60th wedding anniversary in 2005. They hope to return once more next year for their 70th anniversary.

"It's very, very emotional," Barbara said. "While they're telling the story of Pearl Harbor, underneath you can just barely hear the names of everyone that was killed. That gave me chills."

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Dec. 28, 1793, Thomas Paine is arrested in France for treason. Though the charges against him were never detailed, he had been tried in absentia on Dec. 26 and convicted. Before moving to France, Paine was an instrumental figure in the American Revolution as the author of Common Sense.

• On Dec. 24, 1801, British inventor Richard Trevithick takes his friends for a test ride on his "Puffing Devil," or "Puffer," the first steam-powered passenger vehicle. The Puffer could be put to work in mines, on farms, in factories, on ships and in locomotives of all kinds.

• On Dec. 27, 1831, British naturalist Charles Darwin sets out from Plymouth, England, aboard the HMS Beagle on a five-year surveying expedition of the southern Atlantic and Pacific oceans to gather knowledge of the flora, fauna and geology. This information proved invaluable in the development of his theory of evolution.

• On Dec. 22, 1849, writer Fyodor Dostoevsky is led before a firing squad but receives a last-minute reprieve and is sent to a Siberian labor camp, where he worked for four years. In 1866, he published "Crime and Punishment."

• On Dec. 25, 1941, "White Christmas," written by Irving Berlin, receives its world premiere on the NBC radio program, "The Kraft Music Hall." The song went on to become one of the most commercially successful singles of all time.

• On Dec. 26, 1966, Jimi Hendrix writes the lyrics to "Purple Haze" -- the song that would give him his breakthrough hit in the United States. "Purple Haze" actually had relatively little commercial success as a single. It was Hendrix's legendary, guitar-burning live performance at the Monterey Pop Festival that established him as a star.

• On Dec. 23, 1982, the Missouri Department of Health and the federal Centers for Disease Control inform residents of Times Beach, Missouri, that their town was contaminated when the chemical dioxin was sprayed on its unpaved roads, and that the town will have to be evacuated and demolished. In 1985, the city was officially unincorporated.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1947 postcard view of the corner of Revere Road and Hancock Street looking south in Quincy Center. On the corner was the Quincy Maytag Store later home for many years to Bernie's Formal Shop. Other longtime stores along here were Sherwin-Williams Paints, Gofkauf's, Murphy's Restaurant, and Colman's Sporting Goods. Today, the stores up to the sidewalk clock have been demolished to make way for the Walter J. Hannon Parkway which runs west to east through downtown Quincy. It travels across Hancock Street at grade connecting Granite Street to the Southern Artery. It is now one of the busiest and most convenient streets in the downtown. First proposed in the 1940's it took more than 60 years to get this roadway built. In the late 1970's state highway engineers presented a plan for a depressed roadway to run under Hancock Street which the merchants along here vehemently opposed. They felt it would cutoff their businesses during years of construction and forever from the downtown. This and other opposition blocked progress on construction of the road for over 15 years. Finally in the 1990's it was revived by the Quincy 2000 Corporation and it gained support but it still took several more years to complete. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

No Vacancy Clause In Condominium Law

The City Council received a proposed condominium conversion control ordinance minus a vacancy rate factor that some view as critical to its success.

Councillor Stephen J. McGrath, who chaired the special committee that studied the condo conversion problem, sad that the vacancy rule was left out as part of a compromise between the tenant and landlord factions on the committee.

"It was a concession by the tenants," he said. "In return, the landlords made the concession of giving nine months notice to tenants and two years notice to the elderly and the handicapped."

SNOW STORM COSTS CITY $60,000

The weekend storm that dropped upwards of a foot of snow on Quincy cost the city some $60,000, almost half the snow budget for the coming year.

"In view of the money and manpower problems that the Public Works Department has faced, I think they did an excellent job," said Mayor Arthur H. Tobin.

"But it might have been a better and less expensive if the DPW had had more cooperation from the public; many of whom probably voted for the budget slashing Proposition 2 ½."

"We had a severe problem with parked cars," said Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti. "We've always had the problem but it seems to get worse."

Special Field Trip For Q-NQ High School Choral Singers

I would like to thank the Quincy and North Quincy High School Choral Director, Mr. Tim Carew for arranging a field trip for the choirs to Boston Symphony Hall Nov. 20th to the High School Open Rehearsal. More than 50 choir members attended this special program for High School Students.

The High School Open Rehearsals offer students the insiders' view of the BSO' concerts, according to the program notes. Prior to the rehearsal, the students had an opportunity to ask questions of Yo-Yo Ma, a world renowned cellist and the newly appointed BSO's conductor, Maestro Andris Nelsons, from Riga, Latvia.

Maestro Nelson enlightened to the students the importance of music in our lives, and with his wonderful sense of humor and warmth, he added, " I start my day with a hardy bowl of oatmeal."

The audience mostly of the young musicians and singers from all across the State listened to every word Yo-Yo Ma and Andris Nelsons shared with the students.

The program included a world premiere of well-known Latvian composer, Eriks Esenvalds' Lake Awake at Dawn, sung by Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

This rehearsal was very special, and perhaps stands the reason why Mr. Carew had selected it for his students because, it not only featured Yo-Yo Ma but also included Choral Scherzo with Tanglewood Festival Chorus performing Boston's own composer, John Harbison's work, "Koussevitzki Said." The rehearsal was extra special, In that the composer himself was listening from the first balcony and exchanging notes with Maestro Nelsons. He, (the Maestro) even turned to the students and asked: "Did you understand the words of the chorus, were they clear? The answer from the students was "No." The chorus adhered to the advice!

"Koussevitzki Said" was commissioned by BSO to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the Tanglewood Music Festival. Koussevitzky was the legendary music director at the time of Tanglewood's beginnings." (Excerpts from the program notes) The famous Tanglewood Music Shed was design by world renowned architect, Eero Saarinen from Finland.

The interaction between the orchestra, chorus, the soloist and the conductor made the rehearsal special and memorable experience, commented many of the students, one student whispered excitedly, "Yo-Yo Ma blew me away." That is enough of a testimony to repeat the experience.

Mr. Carew had primed his students prior to the concert. They knew what to expect and how to enjoy the experience fully. To take more than 50 students to Boston takes many hours of arranging and planning to make it such as success. I would like express my gratitude to be invited to be part of this wonderful experience.

The public has an opportunity to hear these fine Quincy and North Quincy singers on Dec. 22nd at Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St, Quincy, at 3:30 p.m.

New Book Spotlights 'Local Legends'

By KRIS KALABOKAS

"Legendary Locals of Quincy," a 125-page book highlighting some of Quincy's most notable citizens, entrepreneurs, and politicians alongside lesser known, yet equally as influential city natives, is a handy go-to-guide for those wanting to brush up on their local history.

The book is dedicated in part to one of Quincy's foremost experts on local history: Edward Fitzgerald, executive director of the Quincy Historical Society, who is himself featured and described by author Jack Encarnacao as a man who works "tirelessly to keep Quincy's History alive, relevant, and vibrant."

"LEGENDARY LOCALS OF QUINCY," is a recently released 125-page book highlighting some of Quincy's most notable citizens, entrepreneurs, and politicians.

The first chapter, "City of Presidents," focuses on the Adamses, arguably Quincy's most famous family. Encarnacao gives a brief biography of each family member, turning "Legendary Locals of Quincy" into an easily accessible reference book.

"I automatically had more names than I knew what to do with," said Encarnacao, adding that Quincy was home to several giants of industry including William Rosenberg who opened the Open Kettle in 1948 on Southern Artery. Rosenberg renamed the shop Dunkin' Donuts two years later and following the successful expansion of his business became known as the "father of franchising."

Avedis Zildjian III, in the early 1900s, moved his family's cymbal-making business which began in Constantinople in 1623, into a building in North Quincy. The company has been lauded as "America's longest continually operating business," according to Encarnacao.

What he found most interesting and surprising during his research was that Quincy's first school superintendent, Francis W. Parker, created what was called the "Quincy Method" of teaching which strayed from traditional teaching methods that focused on rote memorization and followed Parker's more individualized and personalized teaching system.

Parker's method led to him being called "the father of progressive education," notes Encarnacao, who credited Quincy City Clerk Joe Shea with helping him with much of his research.

The book's fifth chapter focuses on the politics of the city starting with an overview of Quincy's first mayor, Charles H. Porter, elected in 1888. He served two, one-year terms before retiring. His successors have recognizable names often seen throughout the city on buildings and street signs. Thomas S. Burgin, the youngest mayor in Quincy's history who was elected in 1935 at age 33, is credited by Encarnacao as being "a dignified presence in the city." Burgin Parkway is named in his honor.

William T. Shea, Quincy's first Irish American mayor, who served between 1908 and 1911, once said "I believe playgrounds should be flooded for skating." As a result, the Shea Memorial Skating Rink on Willard Street was dedicated to him in the 1950s.

"It's an intensely political city," said Encarnacao, who had to regrettably omit several people from his book due to space limitations or the unavailability of clear photographs or drawn depictions.

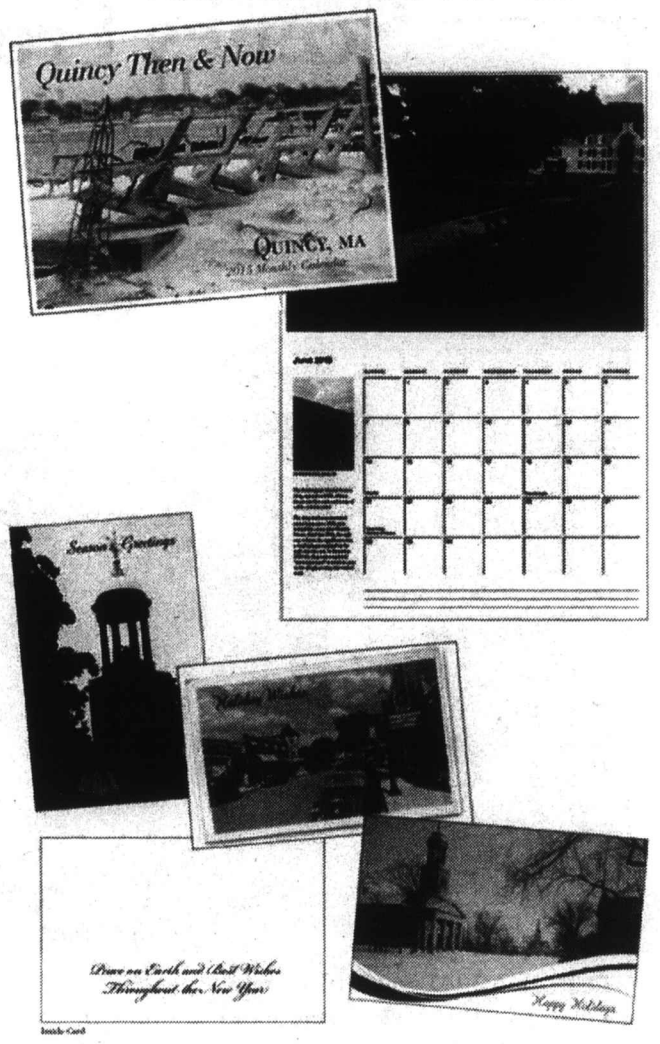

George G. Burke, former Norfolk County District Attorney and former state representative, was one "local legeend" who was not included in the book.

As district attorney, Burke established school-based drug education programs and is currently a generous donor to the Quincy School - Community Partnership.

Encarnacao spent 10 years as a reporter covering local news for The Patriot Ledger, an experience that immersed him in the lore and history of the city, he said.

He was contacted by Arcadia Publishing, a company that specializes in releasing books highlighting the history and notable citizens of cities throughout the United States.

Writing the book took two years and included extensive research. "I started by racking my own brain," he said of the process.

'Fall Of Salem' Program Tonight At Historical Society

As the bicentennial of the War of 1812 reaches its conclusion, historian and author Robert Booth will present a talk at Quincy Historical Society that looks ahead a generation to collapse and violence in Salem, Massachusetts.

The program, entitled "Death of an Empire: The Murderous Fall of Salem" will take place at the Quincy Historical Society, 26 Adams St., Quincy, tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m.

Before the war Salem was a great seaport and the richest community in the country. Its prosperity was seriously damaged during the war by the British naval blockade, and the town struggled in the years after the war to regain its stature. But changing conditions—some caused by the war itself—worked against Salem. Within a generation the port was in decline and the city's elites were plagued by hidden scandals and ultimately by murder.

Booth will describe the impact of the war on Salem and then relate the story of decline and violence. The story, while far less well known, rivals that of Salem's witch trials.

This program is presented by the Historical Society in partnership with Adams National Historical Site. Everyone is welcome to attend.

There is no charge for admission.

Quincy Catholic Academy Food Drive Benefits Pantry

Quincy Catholic Academy (QCA) recently sponsored a Thanksgiving food drive to benefit the food pantry at St. Joseph Parish.

QCA students and families generously donated non-perishable items such as pasta, sauce, fruit juices, cereal, canned vegetables, canned fruit, tuna, and baked beans.

St. Joseph Rectory in Quincy offers a food pantry open to those in need of emergency staples. The food pantry is open every Wednesday evening from 7 to 8 p.m. and provides meats, juices, cookies, snacks, many paper products, breakfast treats, coffee, tea, and much more to meet all needs.

Donations are always accepted on the first Sunday of every month at the Parish, as well as during the week at the rectory.

Ann's Delicious Meatloaf

By MARIE

There are so many different ways to make a meatloaf – which is one of my family's favorites.

My niece Ann made a delicious one at a dinner one night, and just by using a couple of different ingredients, it was amazing. When I cooked it, I made a smaller version, but today's recipe was the one she made.

2 pounds ground turkey
1 small onion (cut)
1 tablespoon oil
2 eggs slightly beaten
3 tablespoons tomato sauce
2 cups oats
1/4 cup soy sauce (low sodium)
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1/4 cup chopped parsley
1 small red pepper (cut small)

In the oil, sauté the onion and pepper. Place in a bowl, add all of the other ingredients first and then add the meat, and mix well.

Form it into a roll and bake on a sightly greased cookie sheet at 350 degree oven for 45 minutes to an hour.

When I made it I used muffins tins and filled them to the top. I used cup cake liners, but they can be slightly greased as well.

Vegetable Fritters For Breakfast

By SUZIE

It's always nice to add veggies to your morning routine. Here is a nice and easy breakfast that you can even make the night before and reheat in the morning. Even good cold! These are even great as a side dish or bring for lunch and serve with a salad and/or soup.

INGREDIENTS:

1/2 cup oat flour (you can buy this just about anywhere now, if you do not have it, you can just use regular oats but put in your blender or food processor and process into a flour!)

½ teaspoon aluminum free baking powder
3/4 teaspoon sea salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1/4 tsp garlic powder
1 egg
¼ cup milk of choice (I use almond milk)
1/2 cup grated carrots
1/2 chopped spinach
1 cup grated zucchini
2 green onions, sliced thin
3 tablespoons virgin coconut oil

Directions: In a mixing bowl, stir together the flour, baking powder, salt, garlic powder and pepper. In another bowl, beat together the egg, milk, spinach, carrots, zucchini, and onions. Add this to the dry ingredients and stir until combined. Using a large skillet, heat 1/2 the oil over medium heat. Pour the batter by tablespoons into the pan, making a few pancakes at a time. Cook about 2 minutes on each side and golden brown. Add the remaining oil to the pan as needed. Enjoy!!!!

Eggless, Milkless, Chocolate Cake

By MARIE

I have printed today's recipe for an eggless, milk less chocolate cake a couple of times – and a few people I have met recently told me that they had lost their recipe and would I re-print it.

It is the most chocolately cake ever and also the easiest, tastiest ever, as you will find out when you try this cake recipe.

The recipe was given to me by mother.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees

EGGLESS, MILKLESS CHOCOLATE CAKE

1/4 cup unsweetened cocoa
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon white vinegar 1 1/2 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 cup vegetable oil
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup cold water

In a bowl, add the flour, sugar, salt, baking soda and the cocoa. Add the rest of the ingredients and mix well until smooth. Bake in a slightly greased cake pan for 35 minutes.

Council Votes 8-1 For Avalon Quincy Project

By SCOTT JACKSON

Following seven months of meetings and public hearings, the City Council has given its approval to a 396-unit apartment complex on Quarry Street.

The apartment complex, known as Avalon Quincy, will be located adjacent to HighPoint. The new development is located at 109-127 Quarry Street, on a 25-acre parcel. The council, acting in its capacity as Quincy's special permit granting authority (SPGA) approved the project in an 8-1 vote Dec. 3.

The Avalon Quincy site was initially included in the HighPoint proposal; HighPoint's developer had a permit to build 10 buildings containing 1,040 units on site, but only five buildings with 520 units were ultimately built. Avalon Quincy will use utilities, roads and parking lots already constructed on site as part of the HighPoint work. Four of the new development's five buildings already have foundations as well.

The new buildings will be wood framed. Two of the buildings, both six stories tall, will have parking on the ground level. The remaining three buildings are each five stories tall. Avalon Quincy's developer, AvalonBay Communities, initially planned for three six-story buildings and two five-story ones. In order to alleviate concerns raised by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin in an Oct. 22 meeting on the project, AvalonBay agreed to reduce the height of building five – one of two buildings facing Hospital Hill – from six to five stories. The reduction in building height will result in two fewer apartments being constructed.

Coughlin, who represents the Avalon Quincy site and adjoining neighborhoods, cast the lone vote against the project. He expressed a number of concerns, including the impact on traffic nearby and need for hoe ramming on site to prepare a foundation for one of the five buildings; residents living near the site had complained about blasting and hoe ramming during construction of HighPoint. The councillor said he appreciated AvalonBay's agreement to reduce the height of one of the buildings facing Hospital Hill, but was disappointed the adjacent building would remain at six stories.

"Although I appreciate the effort to lower the height of one building, I remain in part disappointed that I could not secure such a reduction in height for both buildings four and five, as this was a visceral concern voiced by some of the closest abutters to the site whom I represent as a ward councillor," Coughlin said.

"Keep in mind a proposal floated for the build out of the balance of the site by Roseland Properties called Vista Ridge consisted of all five-story buildings at this site. My preference would have been five five-story buildings."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, whose district includes neighborhoods near the site, supported the project. He credited AvalonBay's director of development, Lars Unhjem, for addressing concerns raised during the previous meeting in October. Since that meeting, AvalonBay has begun to undertake a more comprehensive traffic study and has also agreed to $350,000 worth of mitigation work at Furnace Brook Parkway's intersections with Quarry and Adams Streets.

"I'll be supporting this project tonight," Palmucci said. "I'm on the record in previous hearings expressing my deep concern over some of the issues, some of the criteria we have to consider relative to this. In the interim, I've received a lot of feedback from AvalonBay and their experts, the peer review experts that help the city.

"I too am appreciative of the work Lars has done on this project. Everything I've seen has shown a good faith effort to be diligent and to work hard to mitigate the negative impacts this project may bring to our community."

Palmucci went on to cite the criteria used to vet projects it considers as the SPGA. He noted, among other factors, the 396 units will help fill the city's long term need for more housing and that the developer will pay $3.2 million into Quincy's affordable housing trust fund.

Coughlin was able to get AvalonBay to agree to a number of conditions that will appear in the final permit for the project.

Among them are requirements for AvalonBay to begin construction within one year and complete the work within three years; the developer will hire a mitigation manager to ensure all such projects are completed in a timely fashion; a project monitoring committee, consisting of the mitigation manager and other AvalonBay representatives, several city department heads, the Ward 3 and 4 councillors or their designees, and community members from both Ward 3 and Ward 4; limits on construction hours and restrictions keeping construction vehicles off side roads; a 24-hour hotline for residents, a website for the project, and updates on QATV; on site security personnel; and a prohibition of blasting on site.

The council will vote on the final permit during its Dec. 15 meeting.

Germantown Neighborhood Center Honors Arthur Keough For 25 Years of Dedication

Longtime Coordinator Of Local Food Drives

The Saturday before Thanksgiving, the Germantown Neighborhood Center received a box truck overflowing with an abundance of fresh and canned food goods, all due to the efforts of Arthur Keough.

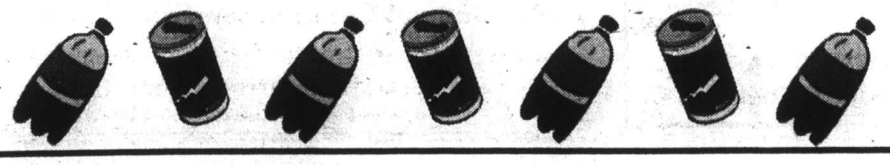

This year marked Keough's 25th consecutive year of coordinating local food drives and the truck was filled the truck to capacity. Keough has many years of community service to his credit in leadership roles in multiple Quincy organizations.

To thank Keough for his quarter century of dedicated service to the Germantown Neighborhood Center, four high school students read a poem called "Volunteers Cast A Lovely Shadow" by Lesley Dunn. Samiya Harris, Semi Harris, Korea Burton and Kania Grant are participants in the Center's Teen Success and Youth in Government programs.

One line that particularly exemplifies Keough's generosity is "We are the sun, you are the rays, warming life in so many ways." This is an intergenerational effort as his son Chris and grandson Tim also help. They, as well as daughter-in-law Sarah, grandson Larry and granddaughter Beth were in attendance to celebrate Keough's generosity of spirit.

"Mr. Keough goes above and beyond, every year, to help us with our Thanksgiving food program. His efforts give a huge jump start in filling our shelves. We truly appreciate everything he does to help," said Executive Director Kathy Quigley.

Mayor, DPH Commissioner Meet On QMC Closure

city's concern that Quincy would be left without an emergency room once the hospital closes.

"Public Health Commissioner Cheryl Bartlett visited with the mayor, the state delegation, and Councillor Hughes yesterday at the request of the city and the state delegation," Walker said Tuesday.

"We outlined in detail the city's concern and position. It was a very productive meeting. We talked in detail about the city's priority that a 24-hour emergency department remains open in the city of Quincy."

Steward Health Care, the for-profit company that bought Quincy Medical Center out of bankruptcy in 2011, announced plans last month to close the hospital Dec. 31 and replace it with new, standalone facilities. The company later said it would keep Quincy Medical open as late as Feb. 4, 2015, to comply with state law requiring 90 days notice to the state Department of Public Health (DPH), but that it could close Dec. 31, depending on patient volume. The DPH is currently reviewing the planned closure of the hospital and has until Dec. 17 to act.

Attorney General Martha Coakley's office is also vetting the plan to close the hospital, specifically to see if it runs afoul of the 2011 agreement that allowed Steward to purchase Quincy Medical Center. Among other provisions, that agreement required the hospital to stay open a minimum of six-and-a-half years after the purchase was approved and provide 18 months notice of a closing. Coakley is in her final month as attorney general; Maura Healey, who previously worked under Coakley, will be sworn in in January.

Koch, on Dec. 4, announced the city had retained the law firm of Eckert Seamans to weigh the city's options going forward, such as seeking a temporary restraining order or injunction to stop the closure or asking Gov. Deval Patrick to keep it open by declaring a public health emergency.

Walker said Tuesday the firm has been in contact with the attorney general and is considering all options the city might take going forward.

"We're not at the point where those options can or should be discussed, but suffice to say they are leaving no door unopened," he stated.

Among those may be a deed from 1999, with which the city sold the hospital to a non-profit owner. The deed required the new owner to keep medical services running at the hospital.

Eckert Seamans will be paid from the Legal Department's budget; the city has $95,000 budgeted for outside counsel in the current fiscal year budget. Walker said the cost of retaining Eckert Seamans is not yet known, but the mayor would seek City Council approval for additional spending if needed.

The law firm previously worked with the city in its case against Honeywell.

Koch retained Eckert Seamans two days after a Dec. 2 hearing on the pending closure, which will affect 545 workers at the hospital. Some 300 residents attended that meeting to voice their concerns about Steward's plan to close Quincy Medical Center.

Despite promises by Steward to open urgent care facilities, two specialty clinics, and radiology centers throughout the city once the hospital closes its doors, residents, elected officials, and hospital employees said they were concerned with not only the closing of the hospital but with the lack of information and transparency provided by the company. More than 40 people spoke at the hearing that night.

"This isn't a transition plan; there's no information," Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said. "I need a lot more information."

Councillor Doug Gutro echoed his colleague's concern.

"Transparency has not been a hallmark of Steward," he said.

At the Dec. 2 hearing, Steward officials outlined their plans for health care facilities in Quincy once the 124-year-old Quincy Medical Center closes.

Those plans include two or three urgent care clinics, which are scheduled to open by Jan. 1. A clinic at 54 Miller Street in South Quincy will provide a full range of outpatient services, 24 hours a day, and is slated to open in mid December according to Dr. Mark Girard, president of Steward Hospitals. A radiology clinic will also be opened there, as well as at Carney Hospital in Dorchester. Additionally, Steward is in talks with Doctor's Express to form an affiliation and expand the hours of service at its location at 485 Granite Street in Braintree.

Manet Community Health Center's North Quincy facility, at 110 West Squantum Street, may also be home to an urgent care clinic in the future.

Steward is also aiming to open a specialty clinic at 700 Congress Street in Crown Colony. Services such as primary care, cardiology, endocrinology, and podiatry will be made available and there is a possibility general surgery procedures and geriatric services will be offered. A second specialty clinic will be located at the Manet Community Health Center on West Squantum Street.

Girard added that physicians with offices on the Quincy Medical Center campus will be "relocated within the community."

A large point of contention for many who attended the Dec. 2 hearing is the fate of the Quincy Community Based Outpatient Clinic located inside the hospital, which is operated by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs. Girard said space available at 275 Hancock Street could possibly accommodate the clinic.

"We are working diligently to get the VA relocated in Quincy," QMC President Donna Rubinate added.

Transportation will be provided within what is being called the "Quincy Community Care Network" between Manet locations, clinics, urgent care facilities, and two Steward-owned hospitals: Carney Hospital in Dorchester and St. Elizabeth's Medical Center in Brighton.

Steward did not unveil plans to locate a new emergency department within the city during the Dec. 2 meeting.

Residents, according to Girard, have been accessing Quincy Medical Center predominantly for outpatient services that do not require an overnight stay or admittance. Only 34 percent of Quincy residents access the emergency room; the rest go to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth or choose teaching hospitals in Boston. Of that 34 percent, 80 percent are released the same day. Those patients, he said, could be "more appropriately managed in an easily accessible outpatient facility."

Despite claims by Steward that company officials have been meeting regularly with community leaders for a year now, City Council President Joseph Finn said he has asked Steward representatives to go before the city council several times without success. Laforest also said she was unaware of any kind of outreach on behalf of Steward.

"I haven't seen that," she said. "I haven't been invited. I haven't been briefed."

Hundreds will be without work following the closure, but employees are being offered "significant resources" useful in finding union and non-union positions at other Steward-affiliated medical centers according to David Morales, chief strategy officer at Steward.

Girard said that he believes a "large percentage" of the current Quincy Medical Center employees will be matched with similar positions at other hospitals within the Steward network.

Some nurses who spoke at the hearing, however, said that many of the job listings are for part-time or per diem work and there are not enough full-time positions to go around.

"I think since Steward has taken over they've been pushing multiple doctor groups out and putting us in a position where we couldn't sustain any longer," said Kristina Penzo, who works in the hospital's emergency room.

"Since they came in and took over they've been shutting down certain areas of the hospital."

Penzo added that neither she nor any of her colleagues have been offered any jobs at Steward's proposed urgent care clinics or specialty clinics.

"They haven't offered us any open positions or told us where it is going to be lo-

His Election Dream

I have a dream that in our next election, the people of Quincy will wake up and send Mayor Tom Koch and his nine yes-men out of office.

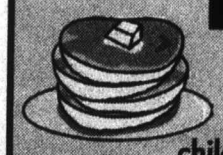

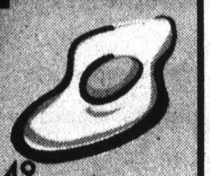

Our taxes have gone up every year the mayor has been in office. They could not repair the hundred streets and sidewalks that are in dire need of repair. But they are great at demolition.

They have taken millions off the tax rolls. The mayor asked for a $30,000 pay raise. You talk about sticking it to us – the taxpayers. The poor man had to settle for a lousy $23,000. Koch and the city council had a deal going to give him $25,000 and he will give them a $5,000 raise.

Mayor, Public Health Commissioner Meet On QMC Closure

cated," Penzo said. "We're up and running ER nurses. Why are we not being told about this?"

"I had a heart attack in the middle of our ER while I was at work and I got shipped into Boston," added Christine Smith, who has worked in the emergency room for 11 years. "I came back to Quincy for all my post care and in the middle of my cardiac rehab [Steward] closed the cardiac rehab."

She was then told to go to South Shore or Milton Hospital.

Following the closing of Quincy Medical Center, Quincy will be the largest city — with a population of more than 93,000 — in New England without its own hospital.

Quincy Medical Center has been losing millions per year as patients flock to larger teaching hospitals outside of the city, which House Majority Leader Ron Mariano said would inevitably lead to further closings of community hospitals throughout the state.

"This system that we have in place is not going to work," he stated.

DPH officials said that following the hearing, the department will determine within 15 days – by Dec. 17 – whether the services provided by Quincy Medical Center are essential to the city and its citizens. If the findings of the department determine that closing the hospital would lead to difficulty accessing medical care, it will require the hospital to submit a plan detailing how it will assist patients with receiving care.

Girard explained the hospital's financial woes to those in attendance.

"Over the last 20 years, Quincy Medical Center has faced financial hardships," he said. "That had led to city and statewide bailouts totaling about $100 million followed by federal bankruptcy in 2011."

He added that Steward had invested $100 million in the hospital to "improve access, improve quality, and improve patient safety" and had updated the facility by building a new lobby, parking lot, renovating patient rooms, and building a new geriatric psychiatry unit.

"Despite the improvement in quality and patient safety," he said," Quincy has had some financial struggles and is approaching losing $20 million a year."

Close to 70 percent of patients who go to Quincy Medical Center are on Medicare or Medicaid, which have both recently seen funding cuts and have contributed to the hospital's financial losses according to Girard. "These funding cuts have a disproportionate impact on hospitals like Quincy Medical Center," he said. "It's actually one of the lowest paid facilities in the commonwealth."

"Regretfully, there's larger forces at play here that prevent us from operating Quincy Medical Center any further so throughout this whole process we have really focused on what is best for our patients and our employees," said Rubinate.

Julie Pinkham, executive director of the Massachusetts Nurses Association and a Houghs Neck resident, was one of many who said a city the size of Quincy needs a hospital equipped to handle emergencies.

"Quincy should have a hospital; it's 100,000 residents," she said, adding that patients will now travel further to hospitals outside of Quincy for care at a higher cost with no outcome improvements and longer emergency room wait times.

"People will suffer delays in care. There is a possibility that lives will be lost."

North Quincy High Students On WGBH 'Quiz Show'

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A team of North Quincy High School students will be representing their school on season 6 of WGBH's High School Quiz Show hosted by local radio and television personality Billy Costa.

Third year coach and North Quincy High School history teacher Danielle Fernandez said that the team made up of junior Zak Erickson, senior Joe Nelson, senior Sam Grossfeld, junior Gary Hu, and senior alternate Olivia McEvoy, was "hand picked" by teachers at the beginning of the school year based on their individual talents and areas of knowledge.

Erickson and Nelson competed last year. Nelson's sister, Cindy Nelson, competed on the show in 2013; a winning year for North Quincy as they beat out all other Massachusetts teams and the New Hampshire quiz show champions.

Nelson said that competing on the show had almost become "a family tradition."

In all, 16 teams from throughout Massachusetts will compete head to head in categories such as math, science, history, sports, and pop culture.

Grossfeld is savvy with pop culture and sports trivia while Hu is an expert with math and science.

McEvoy, said Fernandez, has excellent general knowledge skills and has an infectious and positive attitude that greatly benefits the team.

The first taping of the competition will take place on Jan. 24, 2015, something Grossfeld said only makes him a little nervous.

"I feel prepared," he said.

The 7 a.m. practice rounds moderated by Fernandez, he said, helped with more than just preparing for the show.

"It got your brain working a little bit more," he said, adding that he felt the early morning sessions actually improved his overall performance in school.

Nelson said he didn't mind being at school so early in the morning because the building was quiet and peaceful; the perfect environment for focusing, he said.

The team initially began meeting up for practice once a week but as the competition draws nearer they've begun gathering twice a week.

Staff members Peggy Farren, school psychologist, and Northeastern University student teacher Tim Novak as well as the team's other coach Mera Kriz, who teaches grade 11 history, have also been helping the team prepare, said Fernandez.

Some of the kids, she said, were initially shy or nervous about appearing in front of a live studio audience however Farren helped ease those fears.

The North Quincy High School team beat out almost 120 other high schools during the "Super Sunday" qualifying round on Nov. 16 at WGBH's studios in Brookline. The 16 teams with the highest scores following the elimination process were chosen to appear on the show.

Speed with buzzing in to answer, said Fernandez, was just as important as smarts during the qualifying round. Test administrators counted every second when tallying up scores and determining the winning schools.

Team members studied with the help of books and software recommended by WGBH and provided through a State Street grant.

North Quincy High School will compete against the Boston University Academy, the Advanced Match and Science Academy of Marlborough, Hingham High School, and many others for the title.

The winners will receive a High School Quiz Show trophy, commemorative plaques for each team member and coaches, and $1,000.

They'll also go on to compete against the winners of New Hampshire's Granite State Challenge during the Governor's Cup Challenge.

High School Quiz Show will premier on WGBH 2 on Saturday, Feb. 7 at 6 p.m.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL History Bowl Team of sophomore Owen Doherty, junior Chris Llaga, senior Dan O'Hara, senior Jake Traynor and junior Megan Fox placed ninth in the state competition held recently in Everett and qualified for the National History Bowl. Jake Traynor also qualified for the National History Bee for his individual performance. Both events will take place next April in Washington, D.C. Parker School Presented $25,000 On Ellen TV Show

Check From Wells Fargo To Purchase Technology

By KRIS KALABOKAS

F.W. Parker Elementary School first grade teacher Julie White-Patel received the surprise of a lifetime when she was presented a $25,000 check for the school on the Ellen show by Ellen DeGeneres herself in front of a live studio audience last week.

White-Patel said that she was watching an episode of Ellen last summer which featured a school receiving a similar gift and decided to complete an online survey regarding her school's technology needs.

One school was to be selected, she thought, for an online feature about pairing private donors with schools.

"I love Parker," she said, "and it never hurts to try."

Four months passed after she completed the survey without a word from the show.

"I never expected to hear anything," she said.

Then, a few weeks ago, she was informed that a production team would be visiting the school to film a day in the life of segment featuring her and her students.

She was told the filming, which occurred just two weeks before her wedding, would most likely be used for the online feature.

As a thank you from show staff, she was then invited to the Ellen show set in California for a taping last Wednesday. She flew out at the urging of Dr. Maryanne Palmer, Parker's principal, who told her to enjoy the trip as she hadn't even had time to celebrate her honeymoon.

White-Patel had no idea she would be plucked from the audience to receive the gift. She was only told that there was a chance staff would pull her aside following filming to ask her how her experience watching the show was.

Palmer and Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro were notified in advance that the school may receive a gift but had no idea that Wells Fargo, a consumer and commercial finance firm, would be generous enough to donate $25,000 to go towards the purchase of new technology for the school.

Last Wednesday night, students and staff were invited to watch remotely from the school's auditorium as Ellen called a surprised White-Patel from the audience to the stage during the taping.

The last thing she ever expected was to hear her name called. "I'm surprised I didn't fall out of my chair!" she said.

She went on to tell Ellen and the audience that many of her students come from economically depressed backgrounds.

Low-income students make up 74 percent of the school population.

Most of the student body — 80 percent — are either Chinese immigrants or Chinese-American. Of those students, 69 percent are English Second Language students and 48 percent are still in the process of becoming proficient in English.

Some don't have winter essentials such as hats, scarves, and mittens necessary for chilly New England winters.

Most kids walk to school even during the coldest months as Parker doesn't have dedicated bus service.

Some kids, she said, were hungry. She recalled to Ellen the story of a young boy who came to school and told her that his stomach was hurting. When asked what he had eaten for dinner the night before he replied that he hadn't eaten anything at all.

Despite that, "the children come to school ready to learn," said Palmer.

White-Patel said she spends thousands of her own dollars at the beginning of the year buying school supplies, snacks, and even shoes in one case for her struggling students.

Each of the school's 300 students received a backpack stuffed with school supplies, warm winter accessories, and a plush pony courtesy of Wells Fargo.

"They were ecstatic," said Palmer.

"This gift from Wells Fargo has the potential to be transformative for Parker's students, given the opportunity for innovation that state-of-the-art classroom technology will provide for the staff," said DeCristofaro.

White-Patel said she recently realized her school was lagging in the technology department when at a literacy conference she and her colleagues saw that they were the only ones there representing a school without SMART Board or tablet capabilities.

She also said the school's computers were out of date and crashed frequently.

Palmer will work with her staff and the school community to put together a wish list of technology, she said.

As for meeting DeGeneres, White-Patel was starstruck as she's a huge fan. she said that she was just as personable and funny in face-to-face as she is on camera.

DeGeneres thanked White-Patel for her dedication to her students.

"I'm speechless," she said of the whole ordeal.

Her students are "so proud and so happy" following their appearance on television, she added.

Both Palmer and White-Patel said they hope the viewing audience understands how much Parker's teachers not only love their profession, but truly do everything they can for their students.

"There are so many teachers at Parker who care about their kids," said Palmer.

2009 QHS Graduate Is A Petty Officer 3rd Class

Chelsea Powell Serving With Navy Maritime Patrol Squadron

A 2009 Quincy High School graduate and Quincy native is serving with Patrol Squadron Sixteen (VP-16), also known as the "War Eagles."

Petty Officer 3rd Class Chelsea Powell is a yeoman with VP-16, a Jacksonville-based squadron that operates the Navy's newly-designed maritime patrol aircraft, the P-8A Poseidon. Each aircraft has an aircrew of nine, is nearly 130 feet long, may weigh up to 188,200 lbs. (max gross) and can travel over 560 miles per hour and nearly 1,380 miles on a tank of gas.

As a yeoman, Powell's job duties are to perform administrative and clerical work for the squadron.

"I take care of all the squadron's paperwork, from processing security clearances to doing the awards for our members," said Powell.

The Navy's replacement platform for the P-3C, the P-8A Poseidon, is designed to secure the Navy's future in long-range maritime patrol capability, while transforming how the Navy's maritime patrol and reconnaissance force will man, train, operate and deploy.

"It's awesome! It's basically a 737 commercial jet that can hunt for submarines in the ocean," said Powell.

The P-8A provides more combat capability from a smaller force and less infrastructure while focusing on worldwide responsiveness and interoperability with traditional manned forces and evolving unmanned sensors.

Powell also said she is proud of the work she is doing as part of the squadron's 260-member team, helping to protect America on the world's oceans.

"Everyday brings a new experience here. My job is not just admin work, we don't just sit in a cubicle like a lot of the other yeoman type jobs in the Navy. We actually get to fly in the plane and go to different places while on deployment. We also get to work on the flight line sometimes and help out with the launch and recovery of the planes." said Powell.

The P-8A leverages the experience and technology of the P-3C's capabilities and assets to meet the Navy's needs of developing and fielding a maritime aircraft equipped with significant growth potential, including an extended global reach, greater payload capacity, higher operating altitude, and the open systems architecture.

The War Eagles were the first squadron to deploy with the new P-8A platform. One of their first major missions had international attention as they participated in the international search effort for Malaysia Airlines flight MH370 in the southern Indian Ocean.

"It was really cool to be a part of that mission, being right there and being able to directly contribute to the search was phenomenal," said Powell.

Sailors' jobs are highly varied in VP-16. Approximately 60 officers, 200 enlisted men and women make up and keep all parts of the squadron running smoothly — this includes everything from maintaining aircraft airframes and engines, to processing paperwork, handling weaponry, and flying the aircraft.

"Every day I feel an extraordinary amount of pride to serve alongside our great Nation's most inspiring men and women," said Cmdr. Daniel Papp, VP-16's commanding officer. "Our team is filled with hardworking and highly qualified professionals who hold uncommon levels of responsibility and accountability in support of our mission: To provide maritime patrol services to the fleet in support of national interests. Their work ethic, commitment, enthusiasm, and esprit de corps are second to none!"

As a member of one of the U.S. Navy's newest maritime patrol aircraft platforms, Powell and other VP-16 sailors are proud to be part of a warfighting team that readily defends America at all times.

Social Security Benefits Children All Year Long

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

With holidays and vacations, December is often considered a time to focus on the children in our lives. Whether we're taking the kids to visit Santa, buying Hanukkah gifts, or volunteering for a toy drive, children are at the heart of the holiday season. We at Social Security definitely know a thing or two about helping children.

Social Security Online Services Convenient ★ Secure
www.socialsecurity.gov

Did you know that we issue Social Security numbers for children, typically during the first weeks or months of their life? You can learn about Social Security numbers for children by reading our publication, Social Security Numbers For Children, available at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs. A child needs a Social Security number if he or she is going to have a bank account, if a relative is buying savings bonds for the child, if the child will have medical coverage, or if the child will receive government services. You'll also need a Social Security number for a child to claim him or her on your tax returns. Typically, the hospital will ask if you want to apply for a Social Security number for your newborn as part of the birth registration process. This is the easiest and fastest way to apply.

If you wait to apply, you will have to visit a Social Security office and you must:

- Complete an Application For a Social Security Card (Form SS-5).
- Show us original documents proving your child's U.S. citizenship, age, and identity.
- Show us documents proving your identity.

Remember, a child age 12 or older requesting an original Social Security number must appear in person for the interview, even though a parent or guardian will sign the application on the child's behalf.

You can imagine the many diverse needs that children around the world have. The children of some countries aren't as fortunate, and don't have the strong social safety net that we have in the United States. We work hard at Social Security to protect the needs of children, particularly if one or both of their parents are disabled, retired, or deceased. These benefits for children provide necessities, and help many minors complete high school. You can learn more by reading our publication, Benefits For Children, available at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs.

Children with disabilities are among our most vulnerable citizens. Social Security is dedicated to helping those with qualifying disabilities and their families through the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program. To qualify for SSI:

The child must have a physical or mental condition, or a combination of conditions, resulting in "marked and severe functional limitations." This means that the condition(s) must severely limit your child's activities.

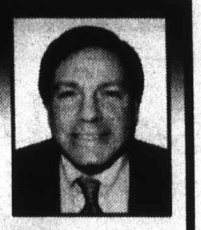

The child's condition(s) must be severe, last for at least 12 months, or be expected to result in death.

If your child's condition(s) does not result in "marked and severe limitations", or does not result in those limitations for at least 12 months, your child will not qualify for SSI.

The child must not be working and earning more than $1,090 a month in 2015. (This amount usually changes every year.) If he or she is working and earning that much money, your child will not be eligible for disability benefits.

Learn the details about benefits for children by reading our publication, Benefits for Children with Disabilities, available at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

OPEN AND SHUT CASES

Some patients experience abnormal occlusal (bite-related) conditions that occur when the upper and lower teeth do not make contact at the same time. In some cases, one tooth may contact its opposing counterpart before the rest of the teeth in the dental arch. When this happens, it can result in non-uniform stresses in the mouth while chewing, which can be problematic. Another condition involving abnormal occlusion (malocclusion) is tooth-grinding (bruxism). Approximately one-third of all adults grind and clench their teeth, which causes excessive tooth wear. Yet, because many tooth-grinders are unaware of their conditions, the problem persists. If the dentist finds evidence of any of these problems, they can be brought to the patient's attention and addressed.

If you have concerns or questions about the well being of your teeth and gums, call us at 617 479-6220. Please don't let unwarranted fears keep you from maintaining your dental health. The key to dental health is routine preventive care. Most insurance companies allow two cleanings per year. Have you had yours this year? We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. In some cases, all it takes to correct a problematic bite is to grind down a protruding portion of tooth.

After waving to well wishes from the fire engine, he greeted some of the folks attending the ceremony including Gregory Campbell and his grandmother, Mary Campbell. The illuminated elm tree is the centerpiece of Flags for Veterans Island. A plaque with Joseph Koch's name was erected near the tree. Each year, the tree will be lit in honor of a special Quincy resident.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

ASSESSING YOUR FITNESS LEVEL

It is recommended that previously sedentary individuals consult with a doctor before embarking on an exercise program. Those following this common-sense advice may also want to include a consultation with a chiropractor. As experts in biomechanics, chiropractors can evaluate individuals' exercise goals in light of their strength and flexibility limits. A comprehensive chiropractic evaluation helps prevent injuries caused by exceeding sensible activity limits that overwork joints, tendons, and ligaments. Most sports-related injuries are caused by pushing too hard and too soon in an effort to attain performance goals. The chiropractor can offer training suggestions and perform periodic re-evaluations to monitor progress toward fitness and competition goals. In the event of injury, chiropractors can also provide effective treatment.

The benefits of chiropractic can help people of all ages from infants to the elderly. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we draw upon a wealth of knowledge and experience with treating and preventing back pain and back injuries. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Joint flexibility is an important factor when it comes to being able to exercise regularly at desired levels of performance.

NORTH QUINCY GRADUATE and Tilton (N.H.) School postgraduate Anthony Green, joined by his parents Tony and Lisa Green, recently signed his National Letter of Intent to attend Northeastern University on a basketball scholarship.

The Rapid Rise Of Anthony Green

NQHS basketball standout, Now A Postgraduate At Tilton School, Accepts Scholarship From Northeastern

Anthony Green was midway into his senior season when he began to catch the attention of college recruiters. The North Quincy Red Raiders were undefeated and well on their way to a Patriot League title and another deep run in the MIAA Tournament, led by a stingy defense anchored by their 6-9 rim protector.

By the end of the season, his game had escalated as fast as his profile and Green, still 17, announced he would enroll at Tilton (N.H.) School as a postgraduate. In October, before he even suited up for the powerhouse prep Rams, he decided to accept a scholarship offer from Northeastern University.

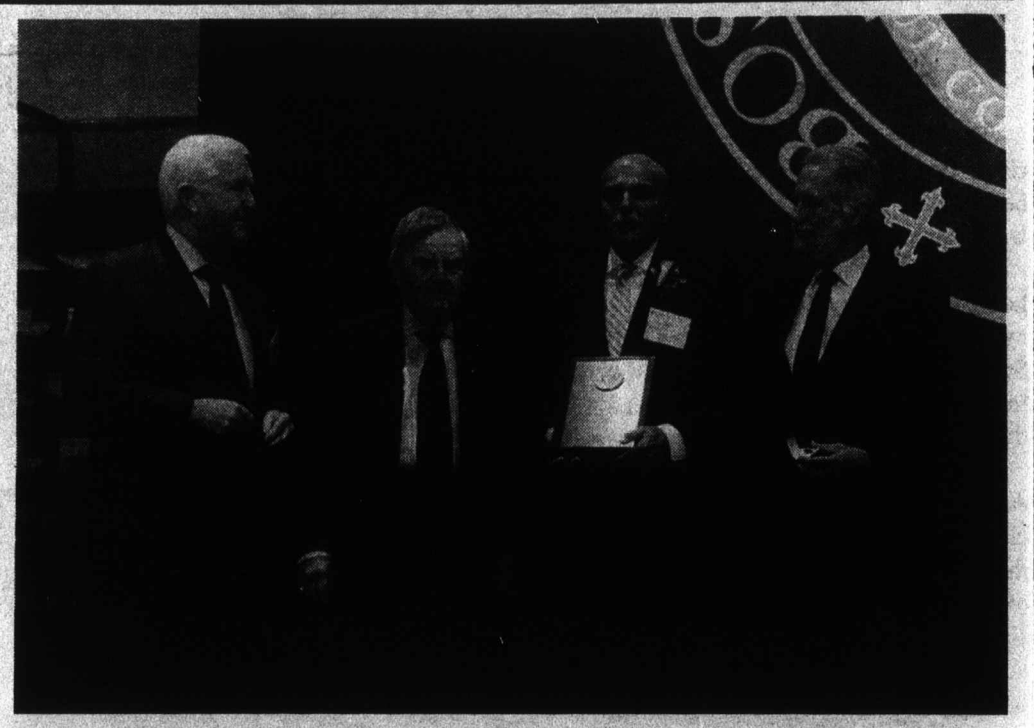

"I'm proud to say I have verbally committed to play basketball at Northeastern University," Green announced via Twitter on Oct. 7. He made it official on Nov. 14 when he signed his National Letter of Intent, much to the delight of Huskies' head coach Bill Coen, his parents Tony and Lisa Green, and a number of others who were influential in Green's rapid rise.

"His development has just been off the charts," said North Quincy coach Kevin Barrett, who remembers Green as a gangly freshman with limited basketball experience. "When he realized how good he could be, he really started working hard and the sky was the limit. We started seeing that development his sophomore year. Certainly junior season was a steady progression, culminating with our tourney run, when he averaged seven blocks a game."

In recruiting circles, Green was commonly described as "a late bloomer" with a "good frame" and lots of "upside." That's a long way from "can't miss", but by the time the Red Raiders were awarded the top seed in the Division I South Sectional, Barrett was receiving inquiries from a host of suitors – ranging from national Division I programs to Division II colleges throughout New England.

Tilton's Marcus O'Neil saw the same potential and recruited Green as hard as anyone. The veteran coach's pitch to the Green family was compelling: A chance to further mature and develop and prepare himself for the academic and athletic rigors of college. "He's all business on the court and in the classroom, a true gentleman with a bright future," said O'Neil, who in his 10 years at Tilton has coached and mentored roughly 100 high-major basketball recruits.

The Rams are off to a 4-0 start, with Green playing a major role on a team that includes a hahdful of Division I prospects. He's also settling into the non-basketball aspects of his life as a postgraduate who has already finalized his college plans. "I have already made close friends with my teammates, and I really like the teachers at Tilton," Green said during a ceremony where he and classmate Terance Mann (Florida State) inked their letters of intent. "I just want to keep improving so I am ready for Northeastern."

BC High Confers Its Highest Honor On Quincy's John S. Normant

William Kemeza, President of Boston College High School, recently presented the St. Ignatius Award, the highest honor bestowed on a graduate of BC High, to John S. Normant of Quincy, a 1964 graduate of BC High.

The award was presented to Normant before more than 1,600 BC High students, faculty, staff, past recipients and invited guests. His humble account of how his mentors influenced him inspired the students to watch, listen and learn from others how to be 'men for others.'

In his more than 45 years teaching math in the Boston system and at BC High, Normant has sought to help as many students as possible, especially those who needed it most. If a student needed school supplies, John would provide them. His support went beyond the classroom by his full participation in the community of BC High, attending Good Friday Walks, school concerts, plays and as many athletic events as allowed while coaching track three seasons.

As a track coach, Normant has devoted thousands of hours helping young men have the most positive team experience possible. His student-athletes learn how to compete with class, humility and pride. John teaches not only about dedication and commitment, but also about respect. His true gift is humility, never seeking to share the accomplishments of his athletes, but always crediting their success to their hard work.

In addition to his profound impact on his students, John has also had a similar effect on his community by serving on the Parish Pastoral Council and as a Eucharistic Minister at St. Bartholomew's Parish in Needham. He has served as President of the Needham Track Club for almost two decades. In 2004 he was named the MA State Coaches' Indoor Coach of the Year, and in 2009 was awarded the Boston Globe Outdoor Division 1 Coach of the Year. He is a member of the Boston College Varsity Club, the MA State Track Coaches' Association, the BC High Athletic Hall of Fame, and the MA State Track Coaches' Hall of Fame.

"John has dedicated his life," said Kemeza in presenting the award, "to serving God and his people through his commitment to supporting and recognizing the accomplishments of his students. With his prodigious dedication to his students, both on and off the field, and his devotion to his family, John Normant is truly a "Man for Others."

November Real Estate Activity 'Mixed Bag'

O'Donnell's Monthly Report

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reports a mixed bag regarding real estate activity in the county for November.

"November 2014 saw reduced real estate transactional activities such as deeds recording; however it was balanced off by a small but encouraging growth in mortgage financing," O'Donnell said.

Additionally, the total volume of commercial and residential real estate prices showed dramatic increases in November 2014 compared to November 2013. However, these numbers, stated O'Donnell, were skewed due to the impact of a one-time sale of the Fore River Energy Center in Weymouth for $265 million.

O'Donnell also reported that the total number of deeds recorded declined in November 2014 by 11% compared to November of last year. In that month, only 1,208 deeds were recorded in contrast to 1,352 during same period of time in 2013. The numbers reflected a continuing offsetting pattern of modest gains and decreases throughout the 2014 calendar year.

One bright spot in the registry's monthly numbers was the 4% increase in mortgage activity after several months of steady decline. A total of 2,099 mortgages were recorded in November of this year compared to 2,013 mortgages during the same period last year. Mortgage indebtedness also saw a healthy 23% increase in year over year numbers, demonstrating a rise in real estate borrowing.

However, homestead recordings in November 2014 decreased by 7% year over year. A total of 843 Homesteads were recorded this November, compared to 907 in November 2013. Information regarding the Homestead Act, which provides limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000, can be found on the Registry's website at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

"The total number of deeds foreclosure recording were slightly up in November 2014 to 15 as compared to 13 recordings during the same period in 2013," O'Donnell said. "The Registry continues to work with its partners South Shore Consortium and Neighbor Works Southern Mass to help Norfolk County homeowners who have received a Notice of Foreclosure from a lender."

Register O'Donnell concluded: "While I am surprised at the reduction in commercial and residential sales, I am nevertheless somewhat cautiously optimistic that an improving economy spurred by reduced energy prices will create a more inviting real estate market for buyers. It is encouraging to see an uptick in first mortgages and mortgage refinancing."

Quincy Planners Attend Regional Conference

The New England region of the National Community Development Association (NCDA) recently held its annual business meeting and Fall conference in Manchester, N.H.

In his capacity as chairman of NCDA's regional board of directors, Quincy's Community Development Director, Sean Glennon, organized the conference and served as master of ceremonies throughout the two-day event, which featured sessions on federal program updates; connecting community plans; best practices for program managers; and a plenary on the 40th anniversary of the Community Development Block Grant program.

As board chairman, Glennon has been responsible for setting policy for the organization; providing leadership and support to the organization's membership; and coordinating semi-annual regional meetings. With his term now over, Glennon will serve the region as Immediate Past Chair for one year, and will remain on the regional executive committee during that time. He continues to serve as both a member of the regional and national board of directors of NCDA, and is also co-Chair of the organization's national technology committee.

Also featured at the conference was Quincy Assistant Planner Melissa (Horr) Pond, who served on a panel discussing best practices for program management. Pond's presentation focused on monitoring public service programs.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

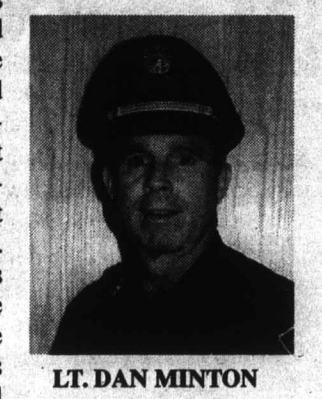

On Saturday November 29, 2014, at approximately 11:55 p.m., Officers Jamie Curran and Andrew Keenan were dispatched to a Fenno Street apartment on a call of a possible domestic disturbance. The caller reported that she could hear arguing and yelling coming from inside an adjacent apartment.

Upon arrival, the Officers were greeted by the caller, who pointed out the apartment. The Officers could hear very loud yelling coming from inside the apartment and it sounded as if someone was crying. The Officers knocked on the door and were invited into the apartment by a male, who said that he was having an argument with his girlfriend of two years. The Officers immediately separated the boyfriend and girlfriend in order to determine what happened. It was apparent to both Officers that the boyfriend was the agitator. He was yelling and highly insulting towards the girlfriend and once he realized that the Officers were not leaving, he became verbally assaultive towards them.

After finishing the interview, the Officers determined that the couple went to the Boston Seaport District for a night of drinking. The boyfriend said that they eventually took a cab trying to get back to Fenno Street, however, at some point the cab driver stopped to let them out in Milton. He said that he paid the cab driver and they stepped out. As the cab drove off, they realized that they were not anywhere close to home, so they started to walk home to Fenno Street. As they started to walk, the girlfriend became upset with him because she now realized how far away they were from home. They started arguing and went their own ways, but eventually ended up back at their apartment, where the yelling started back up.

The boyfriend started insulting the Police Officers, repeatedly stating, "You should be doing your job instead of harassing me." The Officers noted that both the boyfriend and girlfriend were intoxicated. The boyfriend continued yelling insults at the girlfriend and then repeatedly said to the Officers, "I'm allowed to argue with my girlfriend." He had to be told many times to lower his voice. The girlfriend then began yelling back at the boyfriend. After a brief calm, the girlfriend told the Officers that "the argument is not over and when you leave we will resolve it." Officer Keenan again told the two to keep their voices down, but then the girlfriend told the Officers, "We have a right to argue if we want because it's a free country." She then said that she could not believe that Officers were at the apartment – that they should be more concerned with the fact that she was "ripped off by a cab driver in Milton." At this point, the boyfriend began agreeing with the girlfriend and they both berated the Officers.

The Officers suggested that it would be best if the girlfriend left her boyfriend's apartment for the night and they would get her a cab. She briefly seemed to understand and stated that she would prefer to call for a cab herself. At this point, Officer Curran noticed a lamp on the ground that appeared to have been thrown. There was also a set of keys embedded into the wall of the apartment. When asked, the boyfriend stated that he was upset when he came home and threw the keys at the wall and pushed the lamp over. Both denied any physical abuse occurred.

LT. DAN MINTON

Once a decision was made to get a cab for the girlfriend, the arguing tapered off but started up again when the girlfriend insisted on using Uber to get back to her house in Hingham. As she was leaving the apartment, the boyfriend started up again, yelling at the Officers, "You can't do this because she has rights." He repeatedly stated that the Police should not have been called for arguing. As the girlfriend was walking out the door, the boyfriend said he was coming with her because he was afraid that the Officers "would rape her." He was instructed to remain in his home to prevent any further disruption to the neighbors.

Once outside, the girlfriend arranged for an Uber cab to pick her up and then refused to answer any questions about when the cab would be there. This was tying up two Officers for an extended period of time.

Minutes later, the girlfriend began to walk towards the front of the building and got into the back of a vehicle. As the Officers spoke briefly with the Uber driver, the girlfriend began to yell and curse at the driver. The driver then told the girlfriend to exit the cab because he did not feel comfortable driving her if she was going to verbally assault him. She jumped out of the cab and continued her ranting at the driver. She was unsteady on her feet as she began walking down the street, she said, "Fine - I will walk to Hingham." Due to the cold temperature and her intoxicated condition, the Officers told her that they could drive her to the Quincy Police Station to await a ride home. When she refused this offer, the Officers said that they could call a taxi. This sent her off again and she let out a barrage of insults at the Officers, calling them "F@#$%^& F@#$%^&, A@#$%^&* and D#$%^& B@#$."

At this point, the boyfriend came outside and began yelling at the Officers, demanding that the girlfriend stay with him. He was instructed to go back inside his apartment. The girlfriend then started yelling at the Officers and tried to run back inside the apartment. The Officers took hold of her arms and escorted her into the back of the Police cruiser. The boyfriend then ran out of the building and attempted to grab his girlfriend to set her free. He was strongly advised of the consequences of his actions and went back inside his apartment. The girlfriend then repeatedly yelled out that the Officers had assaulted her.

Due to this claim, Officer Keenan radioed Sergeant Allison for assistance. He arrived on scene shortly after and he too attempted to calm her down, but she kept saying that she was assaulted and knew her rights. Sergeant Allison made one final offer to get her a cab to take her home to Hingham and she replied, "Just take me to jail." Due to her intoxicated state, the girlfriend, age 23, was placed into protective custody and transported to the Police station. Nice Work! (and patience!)

REQUEST FOR IMMEDIATE ACTION -TIME SENSITIVE MATERIAL ENCLOSED – 2ND ATTEMPT – WARNING FINE FOR INTERFERING WITH DELIVERY OF THIS LETTER – are all terms on an envelope that are intended to catch your attention so that you will open the letter. This is the first step into leading you into a scam. Once you look at the contents, it should be clear that there is no urgency (your factory warranty is expiring) or time sensitive material enclosed. You will see that there is very little factual information that the scammer has about you and whatever product that they are trying to get you to purchase warranty protection for. The "2nd attempt" implies urgency as does the "warning fine for interfering." Scammers use these ruses because they work and are profitable. Each year during December QPCC highlights Christmas customs from a different global destination, so its diverse congregation can learn about other country's traditions. This year Italian customs, both ancient and modern will be celebrated.

"Bambinelli Sunday" was begun in Rome on the Third Sunday of Advent by Pope John Paul II. Children were invited to bring the Christ Child figurine from their family Nativity scene to St. Peter's Square where the small statues of baby Jesus received a special blessing. The intention of this special observance was to make a connection between the celebration of the birth of Christ at home and at church.

Everyone is welcome to bring a Christ Child figurine from home for the blessing. Christ Child ornaments will be available for any who do not have a figurine to bring, but would like to participate.

This year's Sunday School Christmas Pageant will also be held Dec. 14. The short play tells the story of how St. Francis created the first living nativity for the townspeople of Greccio in 1223.

After worship you are invited to social hour in the fellowship hall. Coffee and light refreshments will be served. While there, sign the Birthday and Thinking of You cards. This will also be followed by the Advent workshop where you can make your own manger.

Heart To Heart Tree at Quincy Community United Methodist Church

Spun glass heart ornaments, which can be given to a loved one this holiday season, are available at the Quincy Community United Methodist Church through Dec. 24.

The ornaments are on the Heart to Heart Tree, which can be found on the second floor of the church outside the sanctuary. A donation of $2 per heart ornament is requested.

"Originally the heart ornaments were meant to be given to people who are experiencing a difficult holiday season as a way of letting them know someone cares," said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, the church's pastor and the inventor of the Heart to Heart Tree.

"Although most of the hearts are still given to people who are hurting, some individuals have given them to people who have made a difference in their lives, such as mentors, friends, family members and neighbors. It's a way of expressing feelings. A way of saying 'thank you' as well as 'I care.'"

Quincy Community United Methodist Church is located at 40 Beale St., diagonally across from the Wollaston MBTA station. The building is handicapped accessible at the front doors nearest the flagpole. For more information, contact the church office at 617-773-3319.

CODDINGTON BUILDING

Historic Renovation Of Coddington Building Completed

Nauset Construction has completed interior and exterior renovations to the Coddington Building, transforming the former school into first class office space designed to seamlessly integrate the City of Quincy's school and IT operations.

The project also allowed the City to preserve a landmark listed with the State National Registers of Historic Places.

"The project team of Wessling Architects and Nauset Construction worked collaboratively with the City to deliver an exceptional building that combines historic grandeur with 21st century amenities," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

Originally constructed in 1909, the Coddington Building was designed by Charles Brigham, architect for the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, and the building has served as an educational facility from grade school to college throughout the years.

"Coddington Building is an outstanding adaptive reuse of a historically significant building," said Stephen Wessling, CEO of Wessling Architects, which provided historic preservation, building envelope restoration and interior design services for the project. "The original design lent itself well to office use while we were able to preserve the architectural beauty of the original structure for future generations."

Following a complete interior renovation, the newly restored 40,000 square feet of office space is now home to the City school department, administrative offices, city and school Information Technology (IT) departments, city planning and printing departments and a new meeting space for the public. Exterior work included a new slate roof, copper gutters, new galvanized metal fascia, soffit and dentils to match the original design as well as new energy efficient aluminum windows. In addition, the property was upgraded with new utility services, landscaping, site paving and exterior lighting improvements.

"Nauset Construction's experience with historic restoration projects, combined with the preservation and design expertise of Wessling Architects, enabled this project team to comply with the stringent requirements of the various historical societies and allow the City of Quincy to preserve a piece of its rich architectural history while creating first class office space," said Anthony Papantonis, president of Nauset Construction Corporation.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your love of the holidays creates a special bond between you and the people in your life. Use this as a way of building stronger relationships that will carry over well beyond this time.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A new approach could go a long way toward resolving a painful estrangement, especially at this holiday time. And since your aspects favor friendship this week, why not go ahead and try it?
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your positives continue to dominate, and any negative factors that squeeze in can be dealt with easily. The secret is to tackle them at once and not allow them to benefit by your neglect.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Good news: A colleague's remarks could help you move toward ultimately resolving that persistent workplace situation. Meanwhile, enjoy the holidays with loved ones.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) No one reflects the bright holiday more than all you Leos and Leonas who love the shimmer and glimmer of the season. P.S.: There just might be a very special something from Santa.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Celebrate the holidays by being more receptive to new experiences. Overriding the Virgo reluctance to try new things could be the best gift you've given yourself in a long while.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Good news about a loved one makes the holidays even more festive. Expect some unexpected gifts, so be prepared with a few nicely wrapped packages of goodies to offer in return.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The holiday season provides an opportunity to meet new people, some of whom you might even consider "worthy" enough to join the Scorpio's select group of friends.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You always bring your own wonderful sparkle and light to the holidays, and don't be surprised if this year someone special reaches out to respond to your warmth in kind.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Togetherness is the dominant theme for the Goat's holiday celebrations this year. That means reaching out to bring everyone you care for into your very own special circle of light.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A reminder of a very special moment from the past makes the holidays more memorable for the romantic Aquarian. New friendships hold the promise of a romantic future as well.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Getting into the swim of things for all you party-loving Pisceans is easy enough this holiday season. And, of course, you can expect to impress people wherever you go.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your dedication brings you the success you strive for, and your generosity impels you to reach out and help others on their way up.

Monument at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, which bears the names of the 255 Quincy residents killed in the war.

Marc Connolly, the commandant of the William R. Caddy Detachment of the Marine Corps League, was the special speaker at Sunday's ceremony. He recalled the words of Franklin D. Roosevelt's 'Infamy Speech' given one day after the attack before Congress declared war on Japan.

"President Roosevelt said of Pearl Harbor, 'yesterday, Dec. 7, 1941, a date which will live in infamy,' and he concluded by saying 'I ask that Congress declare, that since the unprovoked and dastardly attack by Japan… a state of war has existed between the United States and the Japanese empire,'" Connolly said.

"That was a dastardly attack because it resulted in 3,581 American causalities, including 2,403 killed and 1,178 wounded. For the U.S. Navy, their casualties were 2,008 dead and 710 wounded. For the U.S. Marine Corps, their casualties were 109 dead and 69 wounded. For the U.S. Army and its air forces, their casualties were 218 dead and 364 wounded. And the civilian loss of life, the casualties were 68 dead and 35 wounded."

"While the Attack on Pearl Harbor occurred 73 years ago," Connolly later added, "it remains important for us to commemorate that fateful day – each year – to honor those who served, those who fought, and those who died in service to their country.

"Remember the Arizona. Remember Pearl Harbor. Remember Dec. 7."

Connolly had begun his remarks by recounting the Attack on Pearl Harbor from the perspective of the marines stationed there.

"The dawn of Dec. 7, 1941, could not have been more peaceful for the American sailors and marines stationed on Oahu in the Hawaiian Islands. Dec. 7 started out like most other Sundays at Pearl Harbor Naval Base, with some sleeping late, some eating breakfast, some preparing for shore liberty while others reported for duty and prepared for morning colors," Connolly said.

"Hardly a man looked up when the enemy airplanes swooped in at approximately 0748 until the death and destruction had commenced. Most were stunned until the general quarters alarms went off, 'all hands, general quarters, we're under attack, this is no drill!'

"They came out of the north in their disciplined formations, these Japanese navy dive-bombers, torpedo planes, and carrier fighter Zeroes, all with deadly intent and purpose. The main body of warplanes made directly for the battleships, neatly tied up on line in the harbor while the rest of the enemy aircraft went after the rows of American airplanes, clustered in tight formations wingtip-to-wingtip on the airfields located around the harbor.

"From everywhere it seemed explosives showered down on the U.S. Pacific Fleet while the enemy fighter planes fanned out to strafe the nearby airfields and base facilities. After a brief period of noticeable confusion the well-trained marine barracks guards at the navy yard brought their rifles and machine guns into action with nominal effectiveness against an overwhelming enemy air assault.

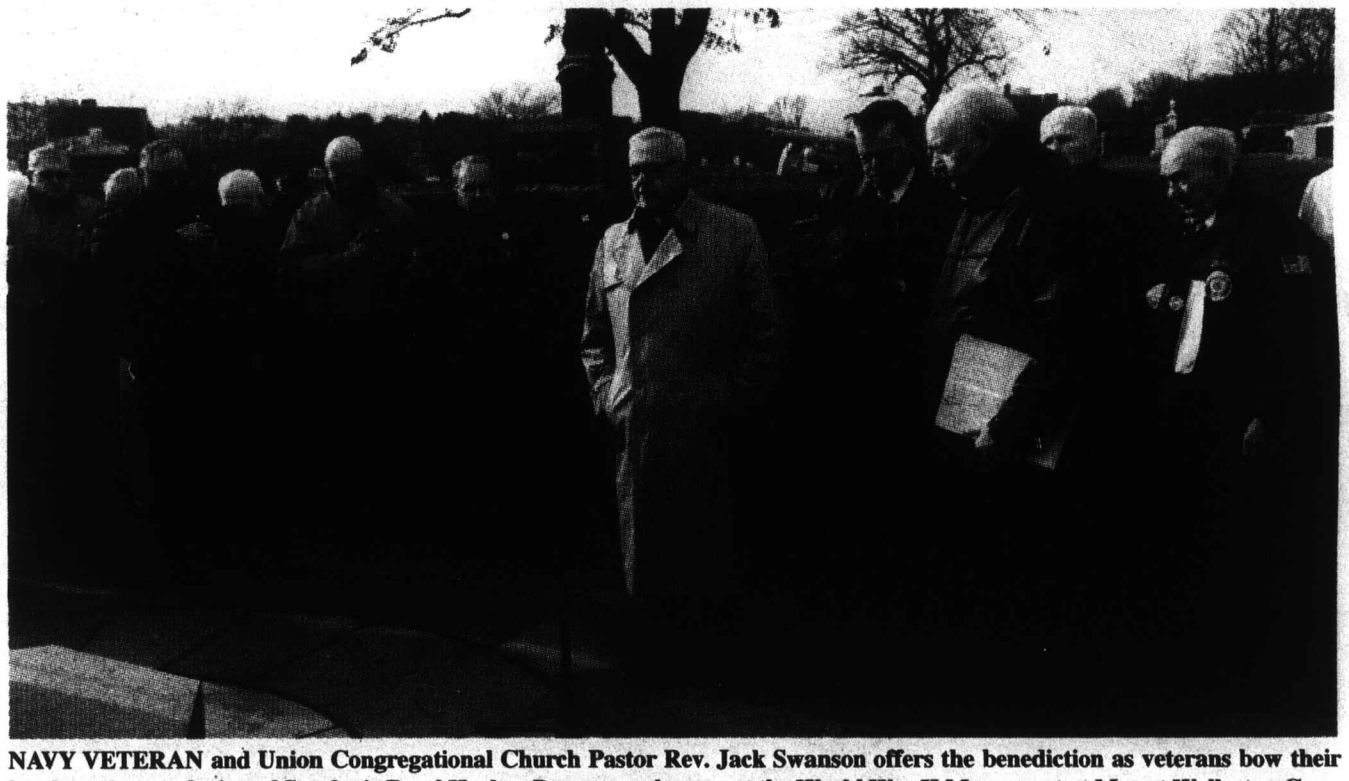

"At Ford Island Naval Air Station, the 1st and 3rd Marine Air Defense Battalions were quickly called out to man the anti-aircraft guns and bring fire upon the swarms of Japanese warplanes while the 2nd Engineer Battalion trucks were dispatched to the island's storage bunkers for ammunition resupply. Altogether, the air defense marines claimed three kills and shared one kill with the ship's gunners.

"At the Marine Corps Air Station at Ewa Field, the men of Marine Air Group 21 – or MAG 21 – were also caught utterly unprepared by the first wave of enemy airplanes. Not a single marine aircraft would be launched into the sky during the first attack; the MAG 21 marines quickly reorganized their defenses and used their heavy machine guns to claim one enemy dive-bomber shot down.

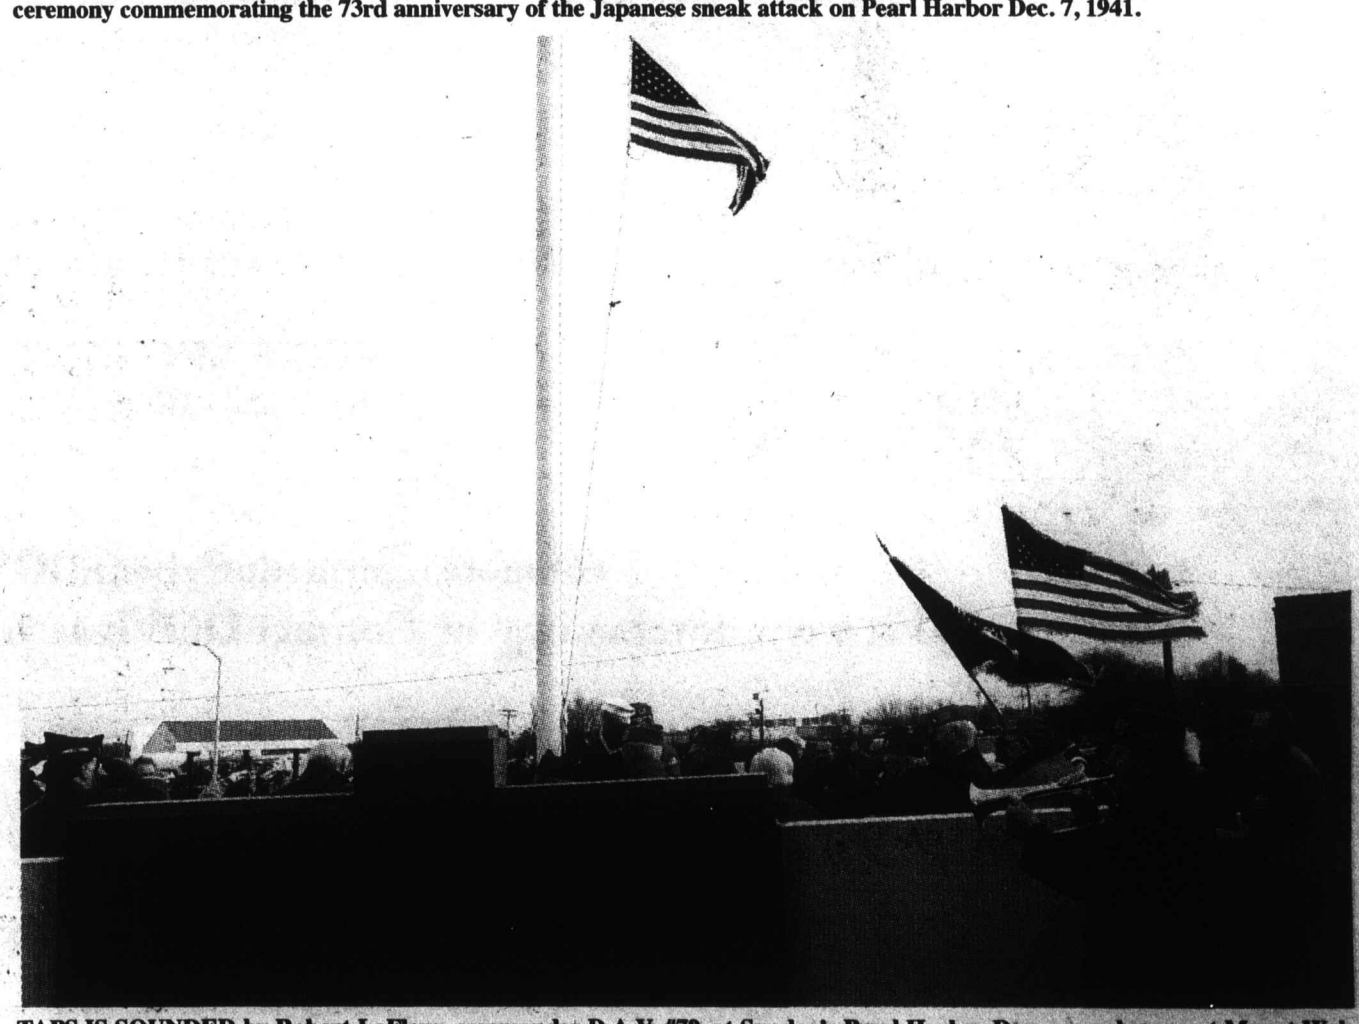

"By the time the second attack wave commenced at approximately 0900 the American forces at Pearl Harbor were beginning to reorganize their resistance, make repairs, rearm, resupply, and even managed to launch a few aircraft. This time, the Japanese warplanes faced a more determined American defense. With Pearl Harbor's air defenses armed and ready, this second wave of Japanese aircraft accomplished much less than the first attack wave and suffered more downed aircraft."

THAT'S A WRAP – Central Middle School students proudly display the gifts they donated and wrapped on Friday that were dropped off at the Germantown Neighborhood Center. Social Studies teachers throughout the school hosted wrapping parties for their classes and asked students to bring in one gift to be given to a child in need. Students also brought in paper, tape, ribbons, and labels as well as food and drinks to celebrate the day. Bill Pavao, the grade eight U.S. history teacher who came up with the idea to host wrapping parties after contacting the Germantown Neighborhood Center 10 years ago, said that he was amazed to see 400 gifts wrapped and donated at the end of the school day. Council Unanimously OKs Mayor Koch's Tax Rates

Quincy homeowners will see their property taxes increase by nearly $200 on average in 2015, the largest such tax hike since 2009.

In a series of votes Monday night, the City Council unanimously approved tax rates for the new year, as recommended by Mayor Thomas Koch, and also appropriated $3 million in free cash to avoid a larger increase in property taxes.

Members of the public have an opportunity to comment on a proposal to construct two six-story buildings in Quincy Center – with 169 apartments and 12,000 square feet of street-level retail space between them – during the Planning Board's next meeting on Jan. 21.

The Quincy Mutual Group and Gate Residential hope to break ground on the project, known as West of Chestnut, in March. Construction is anticipated to take 18 months, with an opening planned in the summer of 2016. They are aiming to build the project in the wedge-shaped block bounded by Hancock and Chestnut Streets and Cottage Avenue. The city's previous downtown developer, Street-Works, started work on its Merchants Row project there in 2013 before halting construction; Mayor Thomas Koch subsequently terminated the city's agreement with Street-Works.

City Pressing To Keep Hospital ER Open

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city's legal team will make a full-court press to keep the emergency room at Quincy Medical Center open past Dec. 31 and is prepared to take legal action independent of state regulators, if necessary.

Mayor Thomas Koch retained the law firm of Eckert Seamans earlier this month to represent the city as Steward Health Care, Quincy Medical Center's for-profit owner, prepares to close the 124-year old hospital on Whitwell Street at the end of December. In its place, Steward has opened a 24-hour urgent care clinic on Miller Street, but has made no plans for an emergency department in the city, despite saying they would do so when the hospital's pending closure was announced Nov. 6.

Peter Carr, the attorney in charge of Eckert Seaman's Boston office, appeared before the City Council Monday night to provide an update on the city's plan moving forward. Carr said the timing of Steward's announcement of the pending closure put the city in a difficult position; because of that, the legal team is focused on keeping the emergency room up and running past Dec. 31.

"They put us in a very difficult position by unilaterally dictating the timetable here, which has necessitated at the mayor's direction really trying to laser focus on what we're trying to accomplish in a very short period time, particularly in respect to the emergency department services," Carr explained.

"That has been our priority now for the last five to seven days since we've been engaged in the beginning of December."

The goal is to keep the existing emergency room open for the immediate future, which would allow Steward to identify a long-term solution and provide outreach to residents on where they should go to seek emergency medical care.

"It's been there for over 100 years and people know where to find it," Carr said of Quincy Medical Center. "People drop people off at the emergency room and God forbid it wasn't there and they dropped [someone] off at an empty building."

Carr met with Steward's representatives at a meeting arranged by then Department of Public Health Commissioner Cheryl Bartlett. (Bartlett, who announced her intention to step down earlier this year, has since left the department.)

"It was quite adversarial. I was clear and direct about what the demands of the city were, what we expect Steward to deliver if we were going to reach a resolution," Carr said of that meeting with Steward's lawyers.

"We obviously have a disagreement. We don't see eye-to-eye on many things, but we're hopeful they got our message loud and clear."

The Department of Public Health had until yesterday (Wednesday) to determine if Quincy Medical Center could close on Dec. 31 as Steward announced. State law requires hospital operators to provide notice of a pending closure 90 days in advance to the DPH; Steward provided less than 60 days notice.

Attorney General Martha Coakley is also reviewing the closure. Before Steward was able to purchase Quincy Medical Center out of bankruptcy in 2011, the company reached a lengthy agreement with Coakley. Among other provisions included in the agreement, Steward was required to maintain an acute care hospital in the city with the same level of service for at least six-and-a-half years and provide 18 months notice of a pending closure. Coakley's term as attorney general is nearly over; one of her former top deputies, Maura Healey, will take over next month.

On Dec. 11, Carr and City Solicitor Jim Timmins met with Coakley's first assistant, a bureau chief, and two assistant attorneys general to discuss the city's concerns. The city's team met with Coakley's team because the 2011 enforcement agreement allows the attorney general to take any action, including injunctive relief, deemed appropriate by the courts.

"The enforcement agreement contains many teeth in the camp of the attorney general," Carr said. "Which is why we went up and had a meeting with them to find out when and where and if they were going to bear some of those teeth."

Coakley's office, according to Carr, will be in discussions with Steward and make a set of demands.

"My understanding is that they have or will be engaging Steward and that there are certain demands that I understand they will be making of Steward – some of them are consistent with what they mayor's view is in respect to some immediate help," Carr said, while also noting it would not be an impendent if Coakley doesn't act.

Steward's lawyers, Carr added, have also been in touch with him and want to continue the discussion going forward. There is no firm deadline for when the city may seek legal action if no resolution can be reached, but Carr said he wouldn't wait until the last minute to do so.

"It's not going to be a situation where we are running into a courtroom on Dec. 30. I won't permit that to happen," he stated. "We are right now in a position where we are prepared to file well before that."

Sen. John Keenan, who has attended every meeting on the closure held amongst city officials, also addressed the council Monday night. Keenan told the councillors he recently visited the East Boston Neighborhood Health Center, home to own of three standalone emergency rooms in the state.

"It is unmistakably an emergency department. It is something almost like you'd see on a TV set when you walk through those doors – there it is. You would think that you're in a hospital," Keenan said.

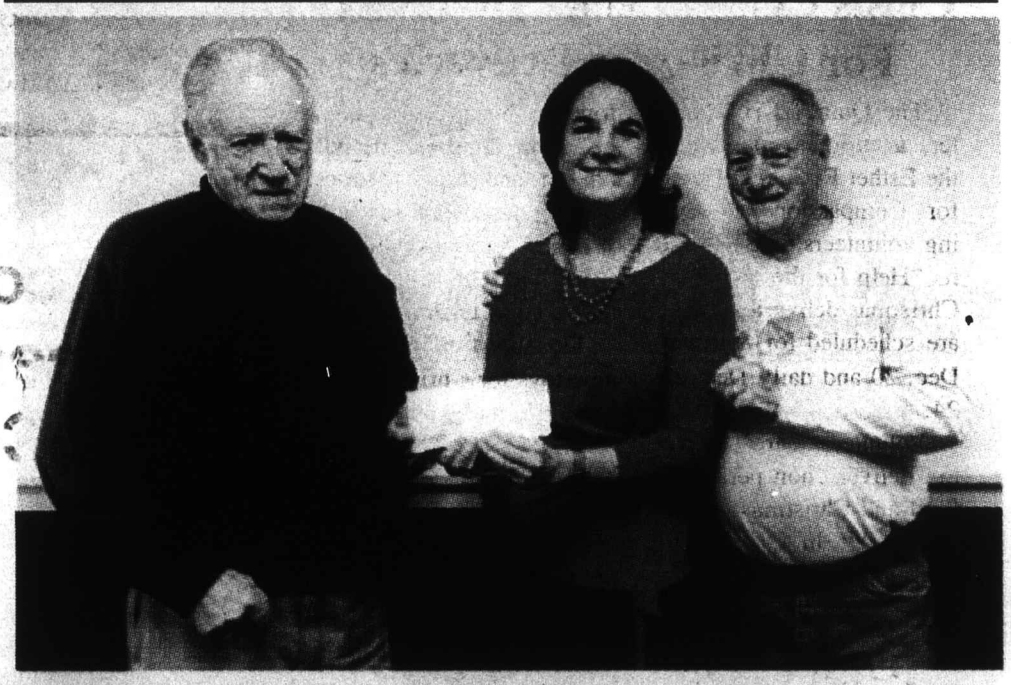

"What that emphasized to me is that the undertaking of a satellite emergency facility off premises is a pretty serious undertaking, not

The Planning Board gave the go-ahead for a project that will replace Temple Beth El with a 53-unit residential building.

Boston Property Development, headquartered on Greenleaf Street in Quincy, will tear down the synagogue and construct the residential building in its place at 1003 Hancock Street in Quincy Center.

The new building will be six stories tall – four stories of living space sitting atop two levels of podium parking. The planned building consists of one- and two-bedroom units; the 17 one-bedroom units between 700 and 800 square feet and the 36 two-bedroom units in the range of 900-1,250 square foot range, according to Jon Hanson, the developer's vice president of design and construction.

Currently, the plan is to rent those units as apartments. They could be sold as condominiums, however, depending on market conditions.

Included in the developer's plans are a number of amenities. Among them are a wading pool on the roof,

Croall Seeks Street, Sidewalk Repairs

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall wants the city to emphasize road and sidewalk repair in the new year.

At Monday's City Council meeting, Croall introduced a resolution asking Mayor Thomas Koch's administration to consider the need to repair roads and sidewalks in the budget for fiscal year 2016, which begins July 1, 2015, and to study the feasibility of a using bond for those repairs. The council approved the resolution in a 9-0 vote.

"I hear from residents on a very recurring basis the need for repairing roadways as well as our sidewalks. I was hoping to introduce this resolution and set the stage for a productive conversation around getting realistic about the road situation next year," Croall said.

"Improving the core infrastructure is certainly positively impacting our constituents' quality of life. I can't name one person out there who had either a bad sidewalk or bad roadway that isn't the utmost appreciative of the services being performed in the neighborhood."

While money for sidewalk repair is often included in the city's budget, Quincy has been reliant on Chapter 90 funds from the state to pay for road repair. But the state doesn't always release that money early enough in the construction season.

"I do believe Chapter 90 is a wonderful thing for the city and I'd be remiss if I didn't acknowledge the hard work of our local state officials," Croall said. "But in my experience over the last couple years, when we actually take receipt of this payment we're pretty late in the game from a construction standpoint. I have to wonder if we had some sort of other mechanism in place, what that would like look in terms of accomplishing to overall goal of infrastructure repair in any given fiscal year."

In recent years, the city has received roughly $2 million annually in Chapter 90 funds. Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi said money only allows a handful of paving projects, because each street costs $350,000 to $500,000.

"The biggest impediment is financing," he said. "The need is there, we just need to find a way but it's more difficult because the cost is greater."

COLORED GEMSTONE ENGAGEMENT RINGS

One of the hottest trends in engagement rings involves the use of colored gemstones, although actually this trend is hardly new. Colored gemstones were chosen almost exclusively for engagement rings for most of the 18th and 19th centuries in Europe. More recently, Princess Diana's blue sapphire engagement ring was passed down by her son to Kate Middleton. Aside from being entirely appropriate, colored gemstones can be chosen for their meaning. For instance, a red gemstone (ruby or red diamond) symbolizes energy, passion, strength, love, and power, while green (emerald, jade, or green sapphire) represents balance, money, fertility, luck, harmony, and long life. For marrying couples wishing to give as much meaning as possible to their impending unions, colored gemstones ring true.

Gems are a special subgroup of minerals, usually rarer, clearer and more visually appealing than other minerals. There is no set rule as to which minerals are definitively gems; it is more a matter of custom. You will find a lovely selection of gemstones, diamond engagement rings, pendants, watches, cameos, and earrings at our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. For more information, please call 617-773-3636.

Remembering Henry

This is the time of year that many folks fondly remember my father.

Sure, there are many other days someone will mention Henry's name and relay a happy story or memory about him. And we get a lot of letters and notes mailed to us here at the office telling us that my dad would be so proud knowing his Sun is still in circulation.

We're proud of that too, of course.

But when December rolls around, it seems Henry is on a lot of people's minds.

Certainly when the Salvation Army Community Leader kettle is set up in front of City Hall.

The community leader was Henry's idea 17 years ago in 1997.

At that time, Henry was a member of the Quincy Salvation Advisory Board. And 1996 wasn't a particularly good year for the Salvation Army's Christmas Kettle campaign in Quincy. For whatever reason – the weather, the economy, take your pick – the kettle campaign in 1996 was down $30,000 compared to the prior year. Money that didn't exist to help some of the neediest families in Quincy.

What to do?

So Henry came up with the idea for the Community Leader kettle. He asked local elected officials, business leaders and other city activists to volunteer an hour of their time and ring the bell for the Salvation Army.

In the first story that Henry wrote about the Kettle in December, 1997, Major Robert Klenk, then the Corps Officer at the Quincy Salvation Army, said simply but straight to the point: "Working together, we can make a difference."

The kettle was first located outside Ryder's Curtain and Drapery Store in Quincy Center. It had a small overhang that protruded above the sidewalk to keep bell ringers dry in the event of inclement weather. And there's been some bad weather days over the years. Rain, snow, sub-freezing temperatures.

One nasty winter day some years ago, rain and sleet threatened to cancel the bell ringing. A tent was set up in front of City Hall (where the kettle moved after Ryder's closed). But a big gust of wind practically blew the tent down Hancock Street.

Fortunately, the last few years have cooperated weather-wise. And the kettle has been set up at other locations, including 1400 Hancock Street and outside The Quincy Sun office at 1372 Hancock St. to attract foot traffic in other areas of the square.

But regardless of its location, folks always mention Henry. The time they stood outside with him in a driving rain storm. Or on a terribly cold day. They enjoyed Henry's company and he'd stay at those kettles all day long, to say hello and to say thank you.

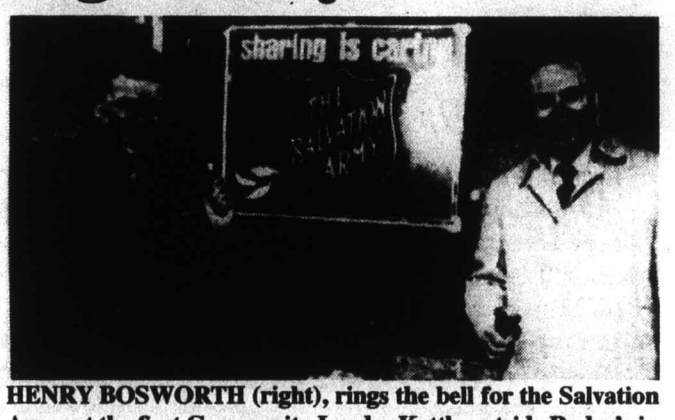

Now they say they miss Henry and another story begins.

For some it's hard to believe that this year's campaign is the sixth one without Henry. He passed away in February, 2009.

But he would be very proud of those who continue to volunteer their time to ring the bell and help fill the kettle year in and year out. This year's campaign raised $6,899 – and that's $2,400 more than last year. It also included the first "Christmas in July" kettle that was manned on a pleasant summer day outside the Sun office. There are plans to do that again next year and some other ideas are in the works to help make next year's campaign even more successful.

In all, "Henry's Kettle" has raised $62,257. The joy in that figure comes from knowing the money is going right back into the community to helping those who need assistance with fuel bills, food and other basic necessities all year round.

The Community Leader kettle isn't the only example of volunteers teaming up to help the Salvation Army. I also want to recognize all the other volunteers like the veterans and local high school students and service club members and others who donate their time to ring the bell at Salvation Army kettles positioned throughout the city.

Hats off also to Mark and Isobel Bertman who for many years have donated money received for new watch batteries to the Quincy Salvation Army. Their efforts have raised thousands of dollars over the years, too.

Of course, none of this is possible without the generosity of so many. Whatever you put in those kettles is greatly appreciated.

And if you have ever wondered what the familiar red kettle means to some folks, just spend a little time near one of them. You'll see folks stopping at the kettle, digging through their purse or wallet or a pocket, just to put a dollar or a few coins in the kettle. Many will mention how the Salvation Army helped them at a dire time of need. And they want to give back so that someone else can receive that same assistance.

Thank you everyone who came out to help at this year's kettle.

And for remembering Henry.

AWARD TRANSITION – We want to announce to our readers that after much consideration, the Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award is changing.

The Sun will no longer present the Citizenship Award after a nomination process involving our readers. Instead, the newspaper will award four memorial scholarships in Henry's name.

We know we are departing from tradition here and some folks may be disappointed.

But we think the scholarships provide a wonderful opportunity to remember Henry while helping students with their college costs.

The Henry Award (formerly the Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year) was established in 1985 to honor a citizen for outstanding community service. Over the years, 31 very worthy individuals have received the award including longtime volunteers, business leaders and teachers.

Beginning next spring, The Quincy Sun will award four scholarships in memory of Henry Bosworth. Two will be presented to Quincy High School graduates and two will go to North Quincy High School graduates. Two of the four scholarships will help graduates who plan to study and have a career in journalism or media. The other two scholarships will be awarded to graduates who have demonstrated outstanding citizenship and leadership while making a positive difference at their school and in the community.

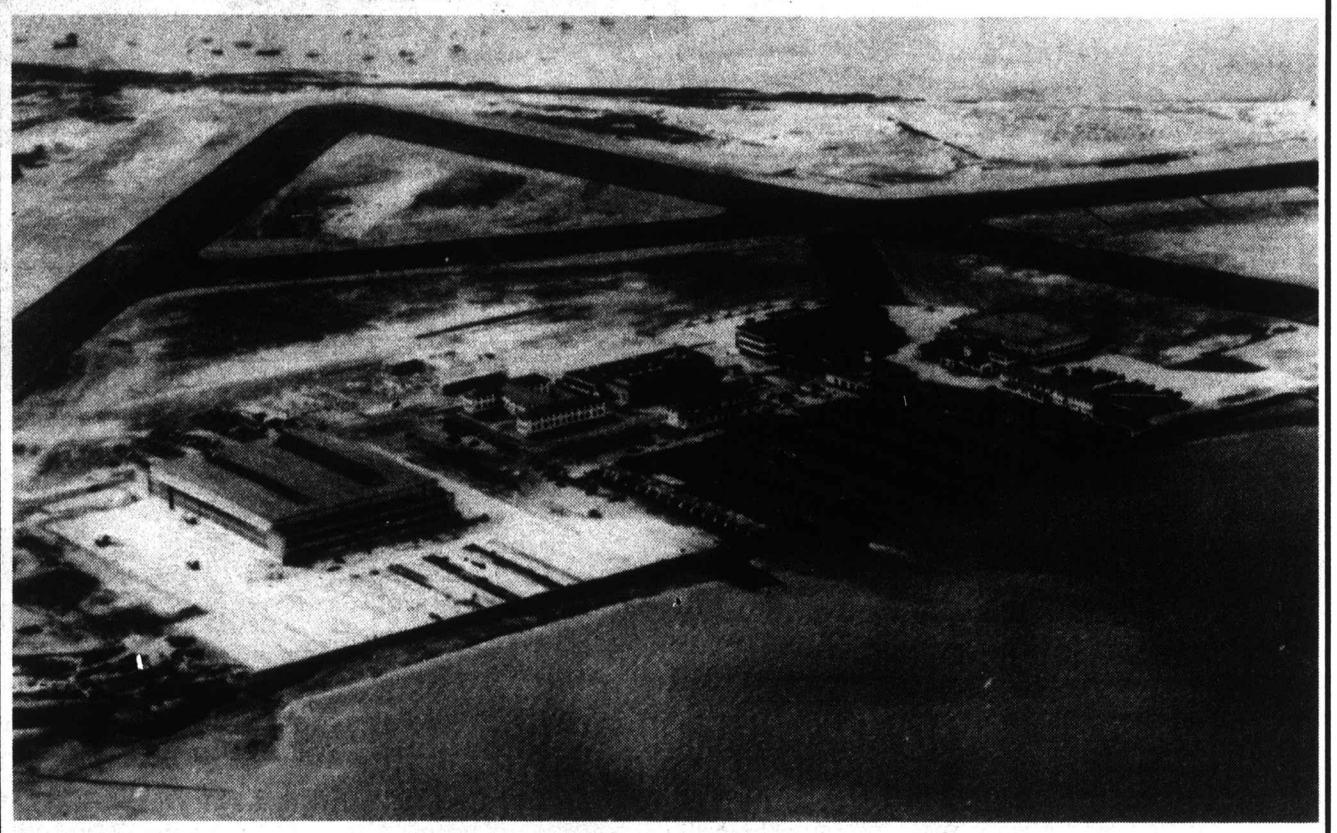

With the cost of college escalating, we believe expanding our Henry Bosworth Memorial Scholarships is a win-win. It helps high school students with their education and also perpetuates Henry's memory in a positive and meaningful way.

Henry, a proud graduate of Quincy High School, was equally fond of both of the city's high schools. He believed in sharing their good deeds and community service in the pages of The Quincy Sun. He also enjoyed visiting students and talking about his career and The Sun's role in the community whenever given the chance.

Awarding more scholarships in Henry's memory is one more way we can help high school students who wish to continue their education at the college level.

We will be working with the high school guidance offices to help facilitate this expanded "Henry W. Bosworth Memorial Scholarship."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1941 postcard view is an aerial photo view of the then newly designated Squantum Naval Air Station. In 1917, the U.S. government had purchased over 600 acres of land here in New Squantum for various war-related activities including the building of ships on this 70-acre section. The Bethlehem Steel Company built what was known as the Victory Plant here and built 35 destroyers during World War I. The plant included a large main building that enclosed 10 shipbuilding slips that were in the right center of this picture. After the plant closed in 1920 the U.S. Navy's first Reserve Aviation Unit was established here using some of the shipbuilding facilities including the main building, to protect seaplanes, until it burned in 1932. Then the large hangar in the lower left was built to house the base's various types of aircraft. During and after World War II thousands of naval cadets and reservists learned to fly or honed their aviation skills here until 1953 when the base was closed and moved to South Weymouth. In 1956 Boston Edison bought the property hoping to build a nuclear power plant here, but that idea wasn't too popular so in 1959 they leased some of the land and facilities to Boston Harbor Marina. For over 25 years the old base buildings were mostly deserted and blighted until the early 1980's when development began on today's upscale Marina Bay neighborhood. Today, everything in this view is gone. The site of the Victory Plant's shipbuilding slips is used by the marina for pleasure boat slips and is surrounded by restaurants and the Marina Bay boardwalk. The DCR's Squantum Point Park is partly visible on the right. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Brownell, Marshall Seek Clean Air Charge Suspension

State Reps. Thomas Brownell and Clifford Marshall have asked the State Department of Public Utilities to suspend the "fuel adjustment charge" to customers along with the low sulfur fuel oil adjustment.

The requirement that utility companies burn low sulfur oil in the interest of clean air was suspended last week by agreement between the Depts. of Public Health and Public Utilities.

GROUT PILE TO BE REMOVED, OTHER DANGERS POSTED

A campaign was underway to eliminate one hazard and spread warnings of other dangers in the West Quincy quarry area where two young people lost their lives in a recent rockslide.

The City Council accepted recommendations contained in a report of a special committee named to investigate the dangers of the site off Willard St. and the Southeast Expressway.

The council directed Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti to implement the recommendations as soon as possible.

A Christmas Wish From The Quincy Fire Department

'Tis the season to be jolly, as the holiday standard goes. In many homes, this means a log on the fire, a trimmed tree or a menorah glowing brightly. All these signs of the season bring feelings of comfort and joy to families.

But what you may not realize is that they also bring an increased risk of fire in the home.

The winter months are the peak times for home heating, candle, decoration and Christmas tree fires, according to the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA).

Statistics show that two of every five home decoration fires are started by candles. Fireplaces or chimneys are involved in almost two out of five home heating fires. Portable or fixed space heaters are involved in four out of five home heating fire deaths.

The Quincy Fire Department's holiday wish is for all Quincy residents to have a merry, bright and SAFE holiday season. By recognizing holiday fire hazards and using a little extra caution, you can help keep your home full of comfort and joy.

When decking the halls, choose decorations that are flame resistant or flame retardant and keep them away from candles or any other heat source. Not all holiday lights are made equal so be sure that you know whether yours are for indoor or outdoor use and be sure to replace any string of lights with worn or broken cords or loose bulb connections. Use clips, not nails, to hang lights so the cords do not get damaged.

Lighting candles, whether for decorating or religious rituals, should always be done with caution. Candles should be in a sturdy holder and placed on an uncluttered surface. Lit candles should not be placed in windows where a blind or curtain could catch fire. Never leave a lit candle unattended. Blow out candles when you leave the room or go to bed. Additionally, candles placed on or near tables, altars, or shrines must be monitored by an adult.

Lastly, roasting anything on an open fire in the fireplace is not a good idea! Make sure that your fireplace has a sturdy screen and keep kids and pets three feet away. Have your chimney cleaned regularly and dispose of ashes in a metal container far away from the home.

We know that the holidays are a hectic time of year for all Quincy residents. Please help Quincy Fire Department keep our community safe from fire this season.

Reale – Auburndale.

More than $215,000 was raised at Interfaith Social Services' 17th annual Feed the Hungry Gala, surpassing last year's previous record setting amount by 64%.

The fundraiser supports Interfaith Social Services, a multiservice center for South Shore families in need. ISS's numerous programs include one of Greater Boston's largest emergency food programs, budget counseling and homelessness prevention services, a mental health counseling center, professional clothing for low-income job seekers and various other assistance programs.

This year's Feed the Hungry Gala was held at Granite Links Golf Club. The Gala was co-chaired by NECN's Ally Donnelly and Greg Wallingford of New England Schooner, with Honorary Chair Governor Deval L. Patrick. Other attendees included Chef Paul Wahlberg, NECN anchor Latoyia Edward's, NECN meteorologist Tim Kelley, Fox 25 Meteorologist Sarah Wroblewski, NECN reporters Alysha Palumbo, Political Reporter Alison King, Reporter Justin Michaels, Miss Massachusetts Polikseni Manxhari and Miss Teen Massachusetts Sophie Baird.

Founded in 1947, Interfaith Social Services is dedicated to improving life for South Shore families and individuals in need. The organization relies heavily on a team of volunteers, donors and community partners to deliver client-centered programs focused on hunger, mental health and emergency assistance. Last year, volunteers at Interfaith Social Services Food Pantry distributed over 750,000 pounds of food to families in need.

"Our annual Feed the Hungry Gala is an integral event for our organization, as it raises awareness for our cause and provides the finances necessary to support our community through the long winter months ahead," said Rick Doane, executive director of Interfaith Social Services. "We were stunned by the amazing generosity that was displayed at this year's Gala. With 16.5 percent of children living in food insecure homes in Massachusetts, every year thousands of families on the South Shore come to us for assistance. We are proud of the continued support we receive from our community which will make it possible for us to put food on the tables of more than 18,000 hunger local residents this year."

During the Gala, an especially moving speech was made by an Interfaith Social Services food pantry client. A single parent of a two-year-old child, and a victim of domestic violence, Ronita was struggling to restart her life when she found Interfaith. Because of the organization, Ronita is now able to keep nutritious food on the table for her growing daughter as she works to find a full time job. She also spoke of the generous holiday programs Interfaith provides, from the Thanksgiving meal package her family received to Christmas gifts for her daughter.

According to a recent study, almost 12 percent of households in Massachusetts are considered food insecure.

TWENTY-FOUR members of Quincy High School's graduating class of 1943 attended a recent luncheon at the Inn at Bay Pointe. Members of the graduating class plan to make the get togethers an annual tradition going forward.

QHS Class Of 1943 Get Together

By SCOTT JACKSON

Two-dozen members of Quincy High School's graduating class of 1943 attended a recent get together luncheon held at the Inn at Bay Pointe.

This year's luncheon was the first planned annual get together of the classmates who graduated that year; 24 attended the event, which was held on Oct. 15 at the restaurant in Quincy Point.

More than 300 graduated from Quincy High School that year, though many were unable to attend graduation as they were pressed into military service during World War II.

"A lot were drafted – they didn't even get to go to graduation," said Lydia (Fertile) Sandonato, who helped organize this year's get together.

"We were a tough bunch."

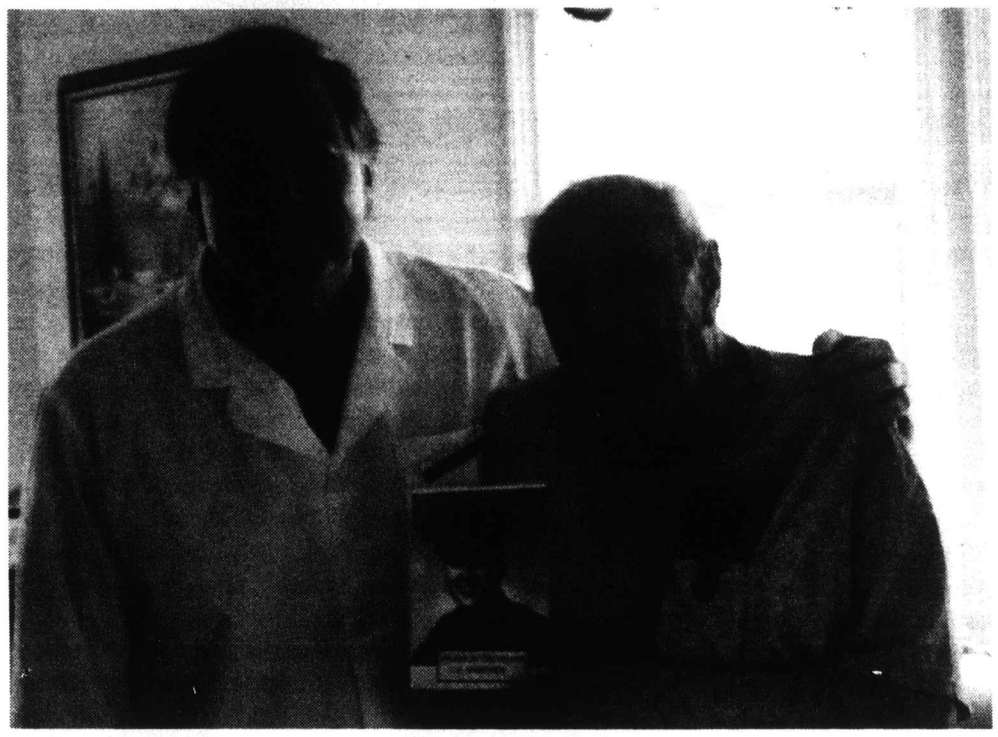

About 30 class members attended the class's 70th reunion last year. More annual get togethers are planned for upcoming years. For more information on future events, contact Sandonato at 617-773-5256; Clair (Boylston) Saulnier at 781-492-8683; or Marion (Forsberg) Bell at 617-698-6451.

Apple Pie Roll (Calzone)

By MARIE

Through the years in my column, I have had so many dessert recipes including apples, which is a favorite of many.

Recently though, I decided to make something out of the blue since I had one apple left and one store bought pie crust. With just that plus a few other things, it came out amazing.

I call it an apple pie calzone because I rolled it and it was so easy. I'll be baking that more than apple pie or turnovers.

I used the same recipe for the filling that is used to make an ordinary apple pie.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees

APPLE PIE CALZONE

1 large apple
1 pie crust
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon flour
1 teaspoon fresh lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1 tablespoon sugar
1 1/2 tablespoons raisins
1 egg for the egg wash

I did not remove the skin from the apple, but if you prefer to do so that's fine.

Cut the apple in very small pieces. Place in a bowl and add the lemon juice. In a small container put the salt, flour, cinnamon, sugar and nutmeg and mix all together until well blended. Add it to the apples.

On a cookie sheet, place the pie crust, and like making a pizza, spread the apple mixture all over the crust. Sprinkle the raisins all around and roll the crust tucking in the sides.

Beat the egg and brush it all over the roll. Make two or three slits on top and bake for 15 minutes at 425 degrees and lower the heat to 350 degrees and bake until top is light brown. When cool, cut in one inch or so slices. Serve with ice cream, whipped cream or just plain. Delicious!

Sweet & Sour Beef, Cabbage Soup

By SUZIE

There is no denying that the warm weather won't be coming back for a while.

Sometimes we get in a rut when it comes to our making soups. Making the same ones over and over again. We also tend to only use the same herbs and spices as well.

This German-inspired soup requires caraway seeds, which you most likely do not always keep in the cupboard. These are essential to this recipe! And totally worth the extra trip to the store. Enjoy this tangy soup, and I hope this will be added to your repertoire of new and exciting foods.

SWEET AND SOUR BEEF AND CABBAGE SOUP

1 tablespoon olive oil
1 pound grass fed ground beef
2 teaspoons caraway seeds
2 teaspoon dried thyme
1 medium onion and 2 stalks celery, chopped
1 red pepper, chopped
1 medium Golden Delicious or other sweet-tart cooking apple, unpeeled, diced
6 cups organic beef broth
1 15-ounce can crushed tomatoes
1 1/2 tablespoons raw honey
1 tablespoon paprika, preferably Hungarian sweet
3 cups coarsely chopped Savoy, or green cabbage
1-2 tablespoons raw apple cider vinegar
About 1/2 teaspoon Sea salt
Freshly ground pepper to taste

Heat oil in a Dutch oven over medium heat. Add beef, caraway seeds and thyme and cook, stirring and breaking up the beef with a spoon, until it is mostly browned, about 4 minutes. Stir in pepper-onion mix, celery and apple; cook, stirring, for 2 to 3 minutes more.

Stir in broth, tomatoes, honey and paprika and adjust the heat so the mixture boils gently. Cook for 8 to 10 minutes to blend the flavors. Stir in cabbage and cook just until barely tender, 5 minutes more. Add vinegar, then to taste, salt and pepper.

Quincy Fire, Credit Union Raise Over $11,500 For Cancer Research

Quincy Fire Department partnered with Quincy Credit Union to raise over $11,500 for Breast Cancer Awareness and Research during Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

Headed by Firefighter John Costa, Quincy Fire Department drummed up support by selling t-shirts at many locations including Roche Brothers, Quincy Credit Union, Mary Lou's Coffee and Quincy's Auto Auction and held a trivia and raffle event at Cagney's. The raised funds from QFD went to sponsor the dedicated team the "C Cups" who participated in the two-day Boston Avon Walk for Breast Cancer organized by the Avon Foundation for Women.

During the month long event, Quincy Credit Union employees sold various items and wore their QCU Pink shirts with pride to support this great cause. QCU Members were also asked to "think pink" when selecting their Debit Card design during the month. Quincy Credit Union offers a custom "Ribbon of Hope" Debit Card Design year-round to promote awareness. During Breast Cancer Awareness month, members who selected the Ribbon of Hope design not only showed their support when using their debit card, their selection resulted in a $5 donation every time the card design was chosen.

All proceeds from both QFD and QCU were donated to the Avon Foundation for Women. The Avon Foundation for Women provides funding to breast cancer programs operating in three areas: scientific research, safety net access-to-care programs for the medically underserved, and outreach programs focused on education and screening.

Expanded Recreation Programs During School Vacation Week

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct an expanded Recreation Program of activities utilizing school gymnasiums for the upcoming school vacation period.

"This Quincy Recreation tradition of free vacation open gym programs will be supervised by members of the Recreation staff who normally supervise our ongoing After School and Saturday Recreational Programs," said Recreation Department Director Barry Welch. "With many working parents we feel that these programs are both practical and necessary while providing positive use of leisure time by the participants."

Average Residential Tax Bill Rising $198; Value Of Average Single-Family Home $334,500

average single-family home is now $334,500, up $19,150 from last year's average of $315,350. The average homeowner will pay $4,884 in property taxes in 2015 compared to 2014 when the average homeowner paid $4,686, a difference of $198 or 4.2 percent.

The increase is the largest since 2009, when property taxes went up by $530 on average compared to the previous year. The average tax bill dropped slightly over the next two years, decreasing by $2 in 2010 and $1 in 2011. Tax bills have gone up each year since – by $97 in 2012, $110 in 2013, and $107 in 2014.

Councillor Doug Gutro called the increase a big hit for homeowners in the city.

"It's a big hit for a household to be at $200. We don't see that a lot," he said. "Stability year in and year out is valued, I think, by the taxpayer, as opposed to fluctuations. That's my sense – that's the feedback that I get...they don't see big swings in their revenue one way or the other."

In response Municipal Finance Director Mark Cavanagh noted other communities have approved similar property tax increases.

"We're not in a vacuum here. The 6 percent residential increase is shared by many other, if not all other communities, some to a greater extent," Cavanagh said. "When Braintree is at $199 and Saugus is at $228, and Salem and so forth, you see a lot of similarities there."

Cavanagh further noted that increases in residential property taxes in the city between 2010 and 2014 fell well below the state average. The tax bill went up by $313 for Quincy homeowners during that span while increasing by $630 statewide, according to figures presented by mayoral spokesman Chris Walker. In neighboring Braintree and Weymouth, residential tax bills increased by an average of $428 and $433, respectively, during that same five-year stretch.

Without the $3 million appropriation from Quincy's state-certified free cash, the average property tax bill would have increased by approximately $304. Cavanagh said the state's Department of Revenue certified $3.8 million in free cash earlier this month and the DOR is expected to certify an additional $5 million in the coming weeks. The city has made similar allocations in recent years to help keep the tax increases down.

The total levy – the amount collected in property taxes – for 2015 is $197.8 million, up 3.8 percent from the 2014 levy of $190.6 million. The budget for the current fiscal year, FY15, increased by 4.1 percent compared to FY14. The increase in the city's budget was used to hire 10 new police officers and provide additional overtime pay for firefighters while also increasing school spending by nearly $3 million, much of which went towards hiring new teachers and other personnel.

Additionally, Quincy is paying nearly $2 million more in debt service in the current fiscal year, in part because the city began making principal payments on a bond used for capital improvement projects. The FY15 budget also included raises for the mayor and City Council as well as department heads and other non-union appointees.

The city's levy limit for 2015, the most it could tax without an override under the provisions of Proposition 2 ½, is $218.2 million, leaving the city with $20.4 million in excess levy capacity. Had the city taxed to the levy limit and not used free cash to reduce tax bills, the average homeowner's tax bill would have gone up by $685 in 2015, according to Walker.

Communities statewide have an average of $1.1 million in excess levy capacity.

While the average residential tax bill increased, the tax rate actually decreased. In 2014, homeowners were taxed $14.86 per $1,000 of assessed value. In 2015, the new rate will be $14.60. The rate for commercial, industrial, and personal property (CIPP) will also be lower in 2015 than in 2014. In 2014, the rate was $31.23; the new rate for 2015 is $30.28.

As it has in recent years, Quincy will continue to use a 175 percent classification, which is intended to shift the property tax burden from homeowners to commercial property owners. Without the classification, the residential tax rate would be $17.30; the 175 percent classification saves the average single-family homeowner $903 in property taxes next year.

This year was revaluation year in which all of the city's properties are re-assessed; municipalities statewide are required to do so every three years. The total value of all assessed property in the city is now $11.433 billion – $9.463 billion in residential property and $1.969 billion in commercial property. That's up from the previous total of $10.7 billion, including $8.732 billion for residential property and $1.947 billion in commercial property.

A public hearing on the mayor's proposed tax rates was held immediately prior to Monday's council meeting. No residents spoke at the hearing.

Baker Attends Quincy GOP Christmas Party

Governor-Elect Charlie Baker attended the Quincy Republican City Committee's Annual Christmas Party at the Best Western Adams Inn Dec. 9th. Despite stormy weather, a room of enthusiastic well-wishers congratulated Baker.

Baker thanked Quincy voters who supported him, and pledged to fulfill campaign promises to move the Commonwealth toward greater prosperity. Kirsten Hughes, Ward 5 Councilor and State Committee Chairwoman, commended Baker on his hard-fought victory.

President Calvin Coolidge, portrayed by historical re-enactor, Quincy's own Jim Cooke also attended. Cooke, in character, engaged Baker, discussing Coolidge's vacation home in Swampscott, Baker's hometown. In 1925, President Coolidge visited Quincy's historical sites, including the Birthplaces of John and John Quincy Adams. According to Cooke, Coolidge was moved by his visit to the "Church of the Presidents", their final resting place.

Manet Relocates Primary Care Team To NQ Site

In anticipation of the closing of Quincy Medical Center (QMC), Manet Community Health Center has relocated its primary care team formerly based at Quincy Medical Center, since 2000, to its newly expanded North Quincy practice site.

In addition, Manet's Prevention Specialists and HIV Medical Case Managers has relocated from QMC to Manet's Snug Harbor location.

"Just like others in the community, we remain saddened to see the closing of QMC, which has been an important and vital point of care and a key health care partner for Manet for a long time," said Manet CEO John J. Holiver. "To that end, we want to let our patients know that we are committed to ensuring that their care will continue, uninterrupted, at the same high level of quality."

Manet recently completed a $5.2 million renovation of its North Quincy practice site at 110 West Squantum St., adding 26 exam rooms for a total of 44, plus a Vision Center with full-time optometrist. Next month, the North Quincy facility will gain a convenient on-site pharmacy. Also planned for 2015 is a Center for Healthy Aging, and the integration of specialty care services and on-site behavioral health.

"We're excited to welcome our patients to this beautiful North Quincy facility," said Lily Yung, MD, Lead Physician of the Manet QMC team. "Our move was completed over the weekend, and we have settled in comfortably on the first floor. We opened on-time, Dec. 15 as assured, to care for our patients, and welcome them to North Quincy."

Inside of North Quincy a complete team of family medicine, internal medicine, pediatric medicine, women's health, and infectious disease physicians, including Dr. Rob Shiner, Medical Director of Quality; nurse practitioners, nurses, prenatal case managers, nutritionist, dietician, wellness, tobacco counselors, navigators and support staff, to care for patients and the community.

The North Quincy facility is located on the MBTA Red Line, at the North Quincy stop. The Manet practice site is just a few short blocks away on West Squantum Street.

Manet is accepting new patients. Call 857-403-0820 or 617-376-3000.

Board OKs Temple Beth El Project

which Hanson said would provide views of Quincy and Boston; a patio area facing Hancock Street that could be used for outdoor events; a fitness center; and common rooms, which may be made available to community groups.

The podium parking structure includes 66 units. The structure has two access points; the lower level will be accessible from Hancock Street and the upper level from Bridge Street. Five parking spaces, for visitors, are planned for the driveway space off Hancock Street.

Under Quincy's zoning code, 80 parking spaces would have been required on site for a project with 53 units, but the Planning Board approved a special permit to waive that requirement. The site is about four-tenths of a mile from the Quincy Center MBTA station; the developer is hoping to attract younger professionals who will utilize public transit. The new building will also feature bike racks and storage space for bikes to accommodate cyclists.

"We anticipate that this is going to attract the same kind of clientele or folks the downtown development will attract – A lot of young professionals who use public transportation and utilize the T," Ed Fleming, the applicant's attorney, explained.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest voiced her support for the project. She said the building – one that will attract younger professionals looking for access to public transit – is an example of the type of growth Quincy is seeking just a few blocks south in the downtown.

"This is what the new Quincy Center really wants to be," Laforest said.

"It's a great modern look and feel building. It is absolutely going to attract young professionals. And the project team has been terrific to work with."

Charles Devarennes, a Bridge Street resident who lives next to Temple Beth El, spoke in favor of the project while expressing concern over current conditions on his street. In particular, he noted the street and sidewalks are in a state of disrepair and a need to improve signage.

"With lots of people coming and going the walkways and the roadways should be improved," Devarennes said. "Signage should also be improved for the safety of vehicles coming and going. I think access to those buildings down there should be maximized."

The developer is still working to finalize plans for stormwater management on site. As a condition of the Planning Board's approval, the city engineer needs to approve the final plans for stormwater management before a building permit is issued.

The project site is in a floodplain, and the city's Conservation Commission already issued an order of conditions for the project. Boston Property Development will need to seek an amended order of conditions to reflect to changes in the stormwater management plan. The applicant also needs Inspectional Services Director Jay Duca to determine if Zoning Board of Appeals approval is needed since it is in a floodplain.

Hanson anticipates the project being completed within 12 to 15 months.

The Temple Beth El project is the largest of three residential developments proposed for a quarter-mile stretch of Hancock Street. Boston Property Development is also planning to convert a commercial building at 10 Merrymount Rd. into 23 townhouse condo units. And Plainville-based Edgewood Development has agreed to purchase the former Central Middle School – located at 1022 Hancock St. – and use the building for 39 condos.

In other business, a hearing on a proposed residential development at the corner of Winter and East Howard Streets in Quincy Point was rescheduled for Jan. 21. David Crocini of Boston has proposed constructing a five-story building on site at 116 East Howard St., with 184 units and 301 parking spaces in a podium garage.

Patricia Dunne Honored For Literacy Magazine Dedication

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Patricia Dunne, an educator within the Quincy public School system for 29 years with 25 years of teaching at Atlantic Middle School, was honored at last Wednesday's meeting of the school committee for her commitment to the school's "Young Writers" literary magazine which just celebrated its 25th anniversary.

The magazine features the poetry, short stories, and artwork of Atlantic Middle School students. Dunne was described as an "unwavering guide and mentor for the student contributors," by Madeline Roy, senior coordinator of middle school curriculum and programs.

"I can't thank you enough for this honor; for recognizing me tonight," said Dunne. "A lot of people are responsible for the success of the magazine," she said.

"The students obviously at Atlantic, the young writers themselves, the students who worked on the magazine, I especially have to thank the teachers because the teachers in the classroom working with their students have provided the magazine with such quality work, writing, and art and I couldn't do the magazine without them."

American Education Week Essay Contest Winners Recognized

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy Public Schools recognized the winners of the 14th annual American Education Week essay contest at last Wednesday's meeting of the school committee.

Each of Quincy's public schools submitted ten essays for consideration said Madeline Roy, senior coordinator of middle school curriculum and programs.

Students were asked to write essays illustrating the importance of teamwork in education.

American Education Week is recognized each third week of November across the country and celebrates public education. This year's theme was "Great Public Schools: A basic Right and Our Responsibility."

Students wrote of the importance of teamwork not only within the academic setting but also within their peer groups, said Roy.

"We enjoyed reading the essays of our older students as they made connections between the importance of teamwork in the classroom and successful collaboration in the workplace or community," she said.

The essays were judged by Quincy teachers and Colleen Roberts, former assistant superintendent of school operations and assessment.

First place winners read their essays aloud.

Each winning student received a certificate of achievement signed by Mayor Thomas Koch and Superintendent of Quincy Public Schools Richard DeCristofaro as well as a gift card from Barnes and Noble.

In the kindergarten and grade one category, first place went to Kate Kidder's grade one class at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School. Second place went to Maureen Lynch's, Erina Carr's, and Megan Therrien's grade one classes at the Snug Harbor Elementary School. Third place went to Kimberly Hogan's kindergarten class at the Atherton Hough Elementary School.

In the grades two and three category, first place went to Victoria Berry, a grade three student at Merrymount Elementary School.

Teamwork, she wrote, helps people in expressing their opinions and can help in pursuing a career in politics or law. "You will learn how to respond to criticism," she said. "I want to be able to express my opinion."

"When you do a project as a team, each person has his or her own role...this will help you to learn and rely and trust other people that are working with you," said Berry.

Second place went to Casey O'Connell, a grade three student at the Wollaston Elementary School. Third place went to Chloe Wu, a grade three student at the F.W. Parker Elementary School.

In the grades four and five category, first place went to Alexander Stankov, a fourth grader at Beechwood Knoll Elementary School.

"Teamwork in school can teach us valuable skills that cannot be learned from text books or taught by teachers," said Stankov. "As a member of a team, you can get to know other kids better and make friends. This is important for kids who have a hard time fitting in or for new kids in school."

"You learn how to take responsibility because if you fail to do your part the project will not get completed on time and somebody else will end up doing your part," he said.

Second place went to Ruari Gorham, a grade four student at Merrymount. Benjamin Dawe, a grade four student at Merrymount and Lianna Zowawi, a grade five student at Point Webster tied for third place.

In the grade six through eight category, first place went to Jessica Au, a grade eight student at Atlantic Middle School. "Some may ask why teamwork is so important," she said. "No student wants to let their team members down by not putting their best foot forward...they will know that there are others depending on them and they are accountable to the other."

Working toward a common goal serves as motivation to complete a project, she said.

Second place went to Elisa Dylja, also a grade eight student at Atlantic Middle School. Third place went to Supriti Karki, a grade six student at Sterling Middle School.

First place in the grades nine and ten category went to Angela Wu, a grade nine student at North Quincy High School. "In education," she said, "teamwork is an essential part of the learning experience."

Through teamwork, one can learn important social skills and efficiency can be achieved to reach a common goal, she said. "When I listen to other people's thoughts I get new ideas in exchange."

Second place went to Amanda Ngo, a grade ten student North Quincy High School. Third place went to Kaylen Kozlowski, a grade ten student at Quincy High School.

"I just wanted to say how incredibly proud we all are of our young people," said Koch. "This is why we do this."

"At the end of the day, this is what gives us great satisfaction," he said.

Suspension For DPW Worker Vacated

By SCOTT JACKSON

The state's Civil Service Commission has overturned the city's three-day suspension of a Department of Public Works employee for voting in last year's municipal election.

Steven Kozlowski, a foreman/special heavy MEO in the Sewer/Water/Drain (SWD) Department, was suspended for three days after he voted in the Nov. 5, 2013, election.

According to the commission's decision, Kozlowski was called to work at 10 a.m. that day, five hours earlier than his scheduled 3 p.m. shift. At 3 p.m. that day, he assumed his regular duty as a shift supervisor. Shortly after that, he and David Parsons, a laborer in the department, went to 29 Hancock Street, where a sewer back up had been repaired earlier. Before arriving, however, they were told the situation was all clear and that they did not need to report to the scene.

After that, Kozlowski and Parsons went on break. The two drove to a bank, where Parsons cashed a check, and then to St. John the Baptist Church, where Kozlowski voted. While, at the church, Parsons was seen by DPW Commissioner Dan Raymondi, who was also at the polling station. Three days later, on Nov. 8, Kozlowski received notice of his suspension from the commissioner; Parsons received a written reprimand.

Kozlowski first sought to file a union grievance, but was told by the city it was a civil service matter. Weeks later, the city changed its position and said it would not consider the grievance a request for a civil service hearing and that it would not be handled as a union grievance, either.

Kozlowski then appealed that decision to the Civil Service Commission, which ordered an appointing authority hearing be held by the city. A hearing took place Feb. 27 of this year. Subsequent to that hearing, on March 6, Mayor Thomas Koch suspended Kozlowski for three days.

Kozlowski appealed that suspension to the Civil Service Commission, which ruled in his favor Oct. 30. It ordered the suspension be vacated with no loss of compensation.

"There was no ongoing activity that required the attention of Mr. Kozlowski or Mr. Parsons when they took their break. This activity did not interfere in any way with the business of the WSD or the DPW. I find no basis to conclude that this activity constitutes 'substantial misconduct, which adversely affects the public interest by impairing the efficiency of public services," Commissioner Paul M. Stein wrote in the decision.

"Although Mr. Kozlowski was not required to seek permission to authorize this activity, I find it wholly implausible, if not inappropriate, that a request to take such a break from work would be deemed unreasonable by any supervisor or would not have been approved. There is simply no just cause to discipline a supervisor, such as Mr. Kozlowski, for stopping to vote during his break."

Chris Walker, spokesman for the mayor, said in a statement the city respected the decision.

"The city appreciates the Civil Service's review of this personnel matter and respects the decision," he said.

City Pressing To Keep Hospital ER Open

something that can be done in a number of days. It is a very complicated undertaking to make sure the citizens who are going to rely on that emergency department get the quality of services they've always gotten at Quincy Medical Center's emergency department."

On Monday, Keenan made an unannounced visit to the urgent care facility on Miller Street and presented the council with a list of ailments treated there, including respiratory infections, sports injuries, urinary tract infections, musculoskeletal complaints, and minor cuts, bruises, and burns.

"Those services are not services that equal services provided by an emergency department. In a city of 93,000 people, they need an emergency department," Keenan explained.

"If Steward thinks they can just close down the emergency department and say 'we'll get to it, we'll transition to it through the urgent care,' I think that would be a grave, grave mistake. It would not serve the people of Quincy as they should be served.

"If they want to put an emergency facility at Whitwell Street, to keep it there, they have to meet certain requirments under the code of Mass. regulations and it is much easier to meet them because it's existing."

Keenan further noted the Department of Public Health has rigorous license requirements for satellite emergency rooms. They must be licensed as part of another hospital, which in Quincy's case would likely be Carney Hospital in Dorchester, the closest Steward hospital. Medical personnel – such as doctors, physician assistants and nurse practitioners – would need to be certified in emergency care and spend at least one-fourth of their time working in a traditional hospital.

Timmins concluded the discussion, saying the city expects a positive outcome.

"I hope you share our confidence after hearing from some of the folks working on it that we're certainly working diligently and will continue to do so. We're expecting some positive outcomes here because the community deserves it," he told the council.

"The state agencies that enforce the regulations that also protects the citizens are working with us. We do expect you'll be hearing something over the next few weeks and we will continue working towards a proper outcome."

Before Monday's meeting, some 25 people held a vigil in McIntyre Mall to protest the pending closure of Quincy Medical Center. About a dozen of them then attended the council meeting to listen in on the 90-minute discussion led by the city's legal team. The organizers of the group have argued closing the hospital and its emergency room could endanger the lives of Quincy residents who need emergency medicine.

Public Hearing Jan. 21 On West Of Chestnut Downtown Project

on their plans for West of Chestnut during the Planning Board's most recent meeting on Dec. 10. Kyle Warwick, a principal at Gate Residential, began by highlighting similar projects the company has undertaken. Those projects included Fort Point in Boston, which is a set for an early 2015 groundbreaking, as well as the already completed Maxwell's Green in Somerville and One North of Boston in Chelsea. The project in Chelsea opened this past June and all 230 units were leased within two months.

"It was a record breaking lease up," Warwick explained. "Our average age that we attracted here is 27 years old; median income around $80,000. This is the type of person we're trying to attract in downtown Quincy."

One of the project's two buildings, with 65 units, will be located on Hancock Street, adjacent to the Granite Trust Building while the other building, featuring 104 units, wraps around the corner of Chestnut Street and Cottage Avenue.

A new, one-way public road would run across the property from Chestnut Street to Hancock Street, separating the Granite Trust Building from the new Chestnut Street/Cottage Avenue building and running through the Hancock Street building. The developers want the new road, known as Chestnut Way, and its adjoining sidewalks to help enliven the block.

"What really makes it work, and what we're really excited about, is this new roadway we've created that goes through the property," Garry Gardner, vice president of Quincy-based Sheskey Architects, said.

"The connection between the two streets is going to bring people from Hancock Street onto Chestnut Street and vice versa."

The project, Gardner noted, has been designed according to standards set out in Quincy's urban revitalization guidelines. The two buildings, for example, are further away from the street to accommodate wider sidewalks.

"We've actually pulled it back a bit on Hancock Street and Chestnut Street to create wider, more comfortable sidewalks for pedestrians and to create the opportunity for sidewalk activity," Gardner said. "For instance, a sidewalk café could occur on the outside."

As a nod to the Granite Trust Building, designs of the new buildings include granite exteriors on their first two floors. A variety of materials will be used on the upper floors.

"We're really looking to enliven these façades with more than one material, more than one color, more than one shade," Gardner said. "They're not just flat elevations. They're buildings that have a projecting base and varying sizes of windows and different materials that add a lot of interest to the façade."

In addition to Chestnut Way, the interior of the project site includes new green spaces. One such area, with trees and benches, will be made open to the public while a large courtyard adjacent to the Chestnut Street/Cottage Avenue building is for tenants and their guests. Among other amenities, the courtyard includes a play lawn, fire pit, and outdoor kitchen.

The developer's proposal includes 92 parking spaces – 75 for tenants in an underground parking structure and 17 above ground open to the public. Plans for the underground parking structure also include bike racks, with enough room for 26 bicycles,

The project site sits in the Quincy Center historic district. Planning Director Dennis Harrington told the Planning Board the city's Historical Commission endorsed the project on Dec. 8. Woodard & Curran is peer reviewing the West of Chestnut plans; the city's department heads are also vetting the proposal.

The West of Chestnut project is the first phase of two developments envisioned by Quincy Mutual and Gate Residential. The second project, East of Chestnut, is intended for the eastern side of Chestnut Street where two parking lots are currently located. There is no timeline for that project, which will include 220 residential units and additional street-level retail.

The two developments have a combined price tag of $100 million.

NORFOLK DISTRICT ATTORNEY Michael Morrissey (second from left) recently hosted more than 200 Norfolk County educators and police at an all-day training on school safety focusing on both preventing and responding to threats. Morrissey Hosts School Safety Forum For Educators, Police

Preventing targeted violence, responding to dangerous behaviors, safely re-integrating students following mental or behavioral health treatment, visitor threat assessment and securing large spaces during a crisis were all explored by local and national experts at Norfolk DA Michael Morrissey's "Assessing and Responding to School Threats" recent training conference.

More than 200 teachers, administrators, school nurses and police officers from across the county attended the all-day seminar held in the auditorium at the Bank of Canton's headquarters. Quincy Police officers Stephen Burgio, Bennett Chin and Gregg Hartnett attended; from the school department, Health Services Coordinator Rita Bailey and Security Director Michael Draicchio were joined by school counselor Lauren Riggs and school psychologist Debra Becky.

"There is significant research and work being done on the best way to keep schools safe, both here and across the county," Morrissey said. "We are fortunate to have been able to bring some impressive experts to Norfolk County to share that information with nurses, teachers and superintendents, patrol officers and police chiefs. There was something here for every level of these organizations."

Three members of the Secret Service addressed research-based strategies for preventing targeted violence in grades Kindergarten through 12: Boston Field Office Assistant Special Agent in Charge Stephen Marks, the National Threat Assessment Center Chief, Dr. Michelle Keeney and NTAC Research Psychologist Lina Alathari. United States Attorney Carmen Ortiz joined DA Morrissey and ASAC Marks opening the program.

Mary Ann Gapinski, director of School Health Services for the state Department of Public Health, presented for an hour on the growing phenomenon of needing to craft safe and successful school re-integrations for students who have been removed for their behavior, undergone treatment or been absent for other causes.

State Police Sgt. John Suyemoto, from the MSP Special Tactical Operations (STOP) team talked about both visitor threat assessment and techniques for securing large spaces in the event of a disturbance. Attorney Matthew MacAvoy from the firm of Nuttall & MacAvoy, P.C., addressed responding to student threats and dangerous behaviors within the state laws and regulations.

Morrissey partnered with the Mass Teachers Association to provide continuing education credits to teachers.

"When there is a traumatic event at a school anywhere, the media is saturated with the details and the story," Morrissey said. "But every day, there is thoughtful work done in school houses and police stations to prevent major events, but also to stop more modest problems before they grow. I commend Quincy's demonstrated dedication to this work."

Medical Marijuana Dispensary Seen Opening End 2015

City Could Receive Up To $500,000 Annually For Hosting • Hiring Preference For Quincy Residents

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Ermont Inc., the company that will operate a medical marijuana dispensary at 216 Ricciuti Dr. in West Quincy, hopes to open their facility by the end of next year according to representing attorney Valerio Romano.

Ermont was granted a permit to open their facility by the Zoning Board of Appeals following a presentation of security measures and building plans and input from the public at a public hearing in October.

In late January, the state Department of Public Health (DPH) awarded a provisional license to the non-profit company out of Provincetown allowing them to cultivate and sell medical marijuana in Quincy.

John "Jack" Hudson, president and CEO of Ermont will be working at the dispensary as executive director.

The roughly 35,000-square-foot warehouse which is zoned Industrial B is next to the Granite Links Golf Club, Quincy Auto Auction, and across the street from the Archstone Quarry Hills Apartment complex and the Quarry Hills athletic fields.

Last year, a zoning ordinance banning marijuana dispensaries from opening within 1,500 feet of a residential district, school, liquor store, child care center, or other marijuana dispensary was approved by the City Council and Mayor Thomas Koch.

This restriction left few places for the dispensary to open.

Patients or their caregivers must provide doctor-written certification and may purchase 10 ounces of marijuana once every 60 days.

A "Compassion Program" will allow low-income patients to obtain one gram of marijuana per week at no cost and offer additional marijuana purchases at 10 to 50 percent off.

Also for sale will be infused beverages, edibles, and oral sprays.

Health insurance will not cover the cost of medical marijuana or any marijuana-infused products.

Marijuana will be grown on-site.

Donna Rheaume, a public relations consultant with Medical Marijuana Public Relations working with Ermont, estimates that marijuana will cost patients $350 dollars per ounce.

"You have to temper wanting to make it super accessible for every patient," said Romano. "There are some people that are less than scrupulous and if they're able to buy medicine for super cheap in a dispensary — especially ten ounces which is a significant amount — they might turn around and sell it on the street to somebody else so you can't make it too cheap because you create an incentive for people to start diverting it for non-medical purposes."

Dispensary staff will need to register with the DPH, be over 21-years-old, and have no felony drug convictions.

Preference will be given to hiring Quincy residents, said Romano.

In the November 2012 election, over 60 percent of Quincy residents voted in support of legalizing medical marijuana for debilitating medical conditions such as cancer, glaucoma, hepatitis C, Parkinson's disease, Multiple Sclerosis, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), Crohn's disease, and HIV and AIDS.

The law took effect Jan. 1, 2013.

Up to 35 dispensaries can now open statewide, however no more than five can open per county.

Fraudulent use of a DPH registration can result in several penalties including up to six months in a house of correction or a fine of up to $500. Fraudulent use of a DPH registration for the sale or distribution of marijuana for non-medical use can result in up to five years in state prison or two and a half years in a house of correction.

Ermont officials have predicted the facility will serve roughly 2,050 patients in its first year of operation.

Romano, who is the founder of Massachusetts Medical Marijuana Compliance and has experience in defending patients using medical marijuana in both state and federal court, anticipates that by year three, Ermont will have up to 50 employees on staff. That number will be lower during the dispensary's first two years of operation.

"We want to work with Quincy on finding local people," said Romano.

Patients will be able to access the facility through the northeast corner of the building. The entire site will be surrounded by an 8-foot-high chain-link fence and vehicles will enter through a sally port, a type of secure and easily observable entrance, and then be directed to a security guard who will check to make sure those in the vehicle have their state issued certification as well as a second form of identification such as a driver's license prior to entrance.

Security cameras will be on-site.

Cameras within the facility as well as outside the facility will provide a direct feed to the Quincy Police Department.

Romano said that having a marijuana dispensary in a neighborhood actually improves public safety as the areas are heavily monitored, deterring criminal activity.

At least one security guard would also be on-site, he said.

Patients will be provided with 11 parking spaces including two handicapped spots. Employees and service people will be provided with 28 spaces.

Clients will not need to make an appointment to enter the building.

Shuttle service will be provided from the Quincy Adams T station — which will run as needed — for those who may have difficulty accessing the site due to physical disabilities.

Rheaume said that she anticipates to roll out the shuttle service two to three years after the dispensary opens for business and will base a schedule on patient needs and requests.

"Things will ramp up obviously from when we open our doors," she said.

The DPH will have their own patient database which will be shared with facilities throughout Massachusetts.

While patients can visit different dispensaries throughout the state, the centralized database will prevent abuse of the system by cataloguing each purchase and where it's made. In the event that a facility loses internet connectivity, all sales will be stopped, said Romano.

Hudson said in October that this will be his only dispensary and he has no plans to expand his operation into other counties. He also said that he has been talking to a doctor and several pharmacists who are interested in working for the facility but stressed that his employees do not have the authority to prescribe marijuana to patients.

Quincy has proposed entering a host agreement with the dispensary, however, the terms of the agreement have yet to be finalized, according to Romano.

The terms call for Ermont to give the city three percent of their annual revenue, up to $500,000 per year.

That money will go to the Mayor's Drug Task Force to be used for substance abuse education, substance abuse awareness campaigns, and drug enforcement by Quincy Police.

Construction has yet to start however Ermont is currently working with the DPH in finalizing the site's architectural plans, said Romano. "They have a process by which they vet your plans for construction so before we do any of that stuff we're going to finish that process," he said.

Alterations will be made to the interior of the building and dividing walls will be torn down. The overall shape and size of the building will remain the same, he said.

Romano said he predicts the DPH will approve the plans in just a few weeks.

A traffic study done showed a negligible impact to the area, he added.

The retail portion of the dispensary will be up to 4,500-square-feet depending on the finalized plan.

"The patients will not have any ability to see or access the cultivation parts of the building," Romano said.

The exterior of the building will be renovated to resemble a medical facility.

"The only reason you're going to know that something is there is because it's going to be the nicest building up there," he said.

All transactions will be cash only, however Romano says that in the future he sees purchases being made through electronic means.

As of now, marijuana is a Schedule I controlled substance, something that makes banks hesitant to offer electronic banking options to dispensaries. Schedule I drugs are categorized as having no health benefits and posing a risk of addiction or abuse.

Romano said that while there is a small chance of marijuana dependence, labeling marijuana as having no medicinal value is incorrect.

"There's certainly no argument that it has no medicinal value," he said. "That's just been disproven."

Holding up to one ounce of marijuana is a civil infraction in Massachusetts. "Its kind of like a speeding ticket; It's not a crime," he said. "It's totally decriminalized under an ounce."

A patient liaison will work with patients individually to recommend different strains of marijuana based on their illness or symptoms. "We'll be very involved with the patient in terms of picking out and choosing the right medicine for them," said Rheaume.

Romano clarified that patients would not be given prescriptions but rather certifications for medical marijuana as a prescription would make the prescribing practitioner complicit in distributing a Schedule I drug under the Controlled Substances Act.

Providing certifications is a First Amendment protection for doctors, said Romano.

Doctors providing certifications must complete at least eight hours of continued medical education on substance abuse and marijuana and must register with the DPH.

"More and more doctors are going to come around," said Romano.

Anybody found to be selling marijuana or marijuana-infused products purchased legally at the dispensary will be banned from returning to the facility.

Attitudes have changed regarding medicinal marijuana, said both Rheaume and Romano.

"Here in Quincy we were delighted and we've developed a great working relationship here in Quincy and we think that obviously people feel one way or another about it, but I feel that people understand the value of medical marijuana," said Rheaume. "I think people's attitudes are starting to change."

Romano called the issue "super polarizing" and said that regardless of what the medical community says, some people will remain staunchly opposed to the use of marijuana in a medical capacity.

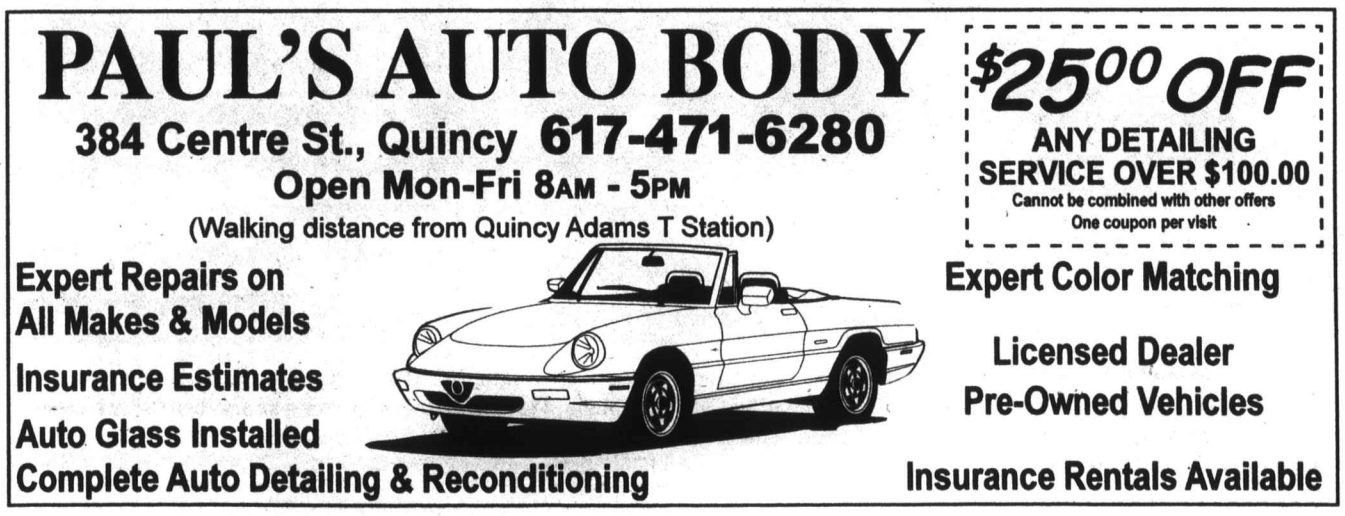

"After these places start to open up, a few months, a year goes by they'll see that there's no impact whatsoever," he said. "They're going to have no idea that there's anything there."

"He's in this business because he's really committed to helping patients," said Rheaume of Hudson.

Coach Nolan NQHS Basketball Court Dedication Friday

Successful Hoop Coach Known For Integrity, Honesty, Sportsmanship

Coach Robert "Knobby" Nolan will have the basketball court at North Quincy High School dedicated to him tomorrow (Friday) night at 6 p.m.

The court naming came at the request of School Committeeman Paul Bregoli, who played on Nolan's first varsity basketball team at North in 1965-66.

Nolan had the highest winning percentage of any basketball coach at North at .684. His team won four league titles and made seven tournament appearances. His 1965-66 team was ranked number one in New England and included Peter Varney of Harvard-Yale fame and who also played professionally in Major League Baseball for the White Sox and Braves. Dave Zink, one of North's all-time leading scorers, played Division I basketball at Wisconsin of the Big Ten, going up against future NBA and ABA players like Pete Maravich and Rick Mount.

Nolan had several of his players drafted by both the NBA and ABA, including Mark Jellison, who was drafted by the Washington Bullets, and Ron Bradley, who was drafted by the ABA's New York Nets.

Born in Winthrop, Nolan was an outstanding football player at Winthrop High School. After serving his country during World War II in the Navy, Nolan went to Cushing Academy and then four years at the University of Massachusetts, where he earned All-New England honors as a defensive tackle his junior and senior years playing for Charlie O'Rourke. The Pittsburgh Steelers and Chicago Bears expressed interest in Nolan upon graduation.

Nolan spent time at Northampton High, Hudson High, Millis and New Bedford before arriving at North. He spent 20 years as a football coach. Nolan was the coach of the 1966 basketball team, which was the first and only undefeated team in school history with Ken McPhee playing for him.

In his 11 seasons as basketball coach at North, Nolan never had a losing season. His 1971-72 team advanced to the South Sectional Finals against Catholic Memorial. That team went undefeated in the Greater Boston League, only the fourth time that happened in league history. To advance to the sectional finals, Nolan's team had to defeat Dedham, another undefeated team. Coaching Dedham was Jim Calhoun, who would go on to win three national champions at the University of Connecticut.

In his last game as head coach at North, the Red Raiders upset undefeated Rindge Tech in North's gym.

Knobby Nolan not only produced successful teams at North Quincy, but he also instilled in each of his players integrity, honesty, and sportsmanship. All of his players felt they could come to Nolan for anything, whether it be for advice, help in securing a job, or enrolling in school. Nolan was a father figure to so many of his athletes, establishing relationships that lasted a lifetime.

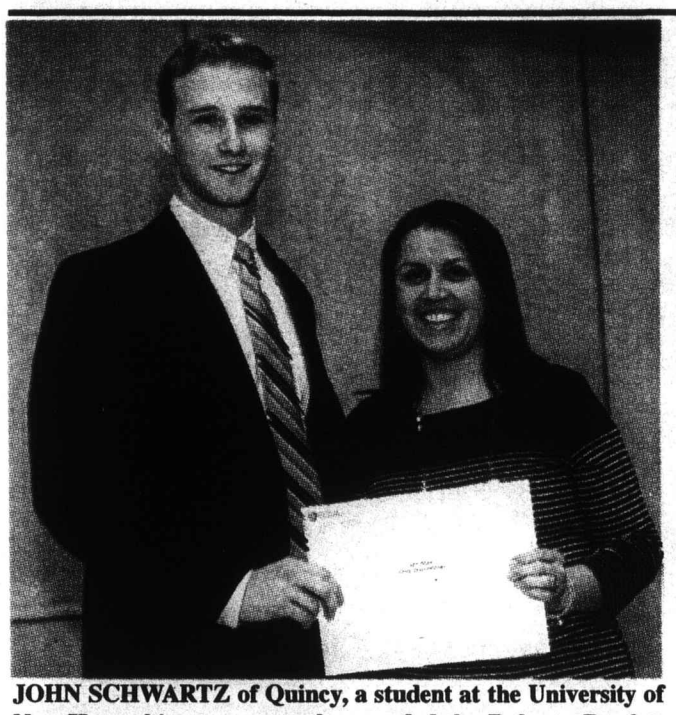

Nolan passed away several years ago, leaving behind his daughters Sheila, Siobhan, Rory, and Erin.

SOPHOMORE REMY AUCOIN scored nine points and grabbed 18 rebounds but North Quincy bowed to Rockland, 56-30 in the Red Raiders' season opener last Friday.

Red Raiders Bow In Season Opener To Rockland

By BILL GRIFFIN

Opening night is always a difficult test for a young team trying to work new players into new positions. Toss in an opponent who features a tough fullcourt press, and the task becomes even more challenging.

Rockland used a productive press to force turnovers and drop North Quincy, 56-30 in the non-league girls basketball opener for both teams at North Quincy High Friday night.

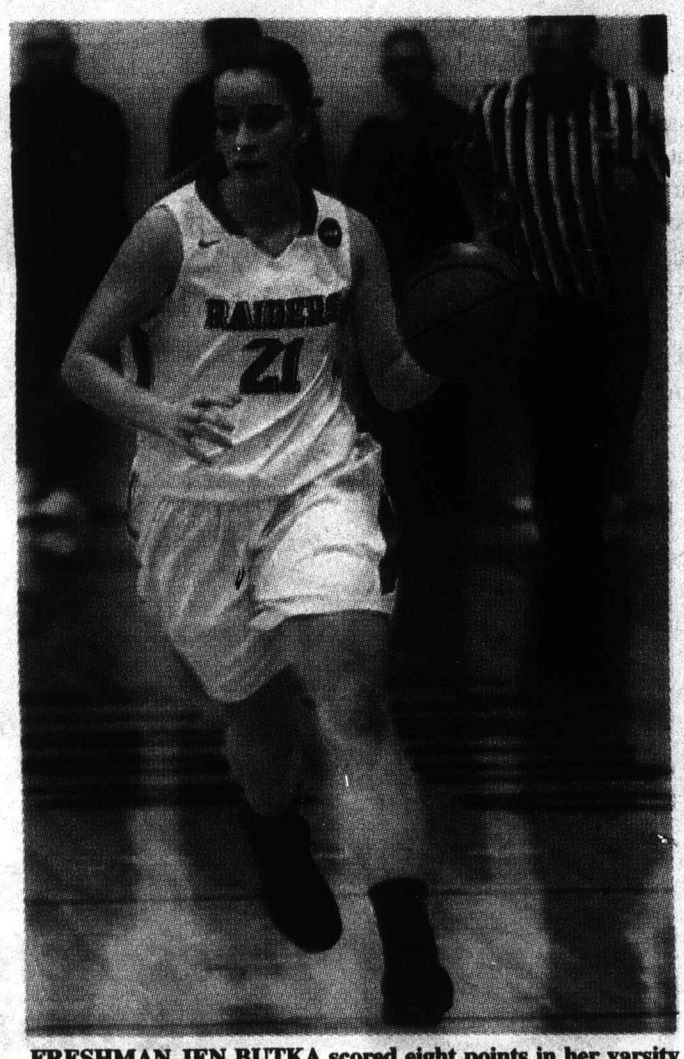

"Rockland has a a veteran team, and they have an excellent press," said North coach Jess Worden. "We had trouble breaking it. We have a young team and a lot of the kids were playing their first varsity game. We didn't have experience against a defense like Rockland's. We'll get better."

The Lady Bulldogs raced to a fast start, scoring the first ten points of the game, but North went to its strength, a trio of young, talented big players to control the boards and stay within 24-13 at the half.

"We were aggressive all night off the boards. Our inside people played very well," said Worden.

North had a 20-10 edge in rebounding for the half thanks to the efforts of sophomore Remy Aucoin who finished with nine points and 18 rebounds. Aucoin played mainly with the JV last year, but she certainly wasn't shy in her varsity debut.

"She is just a good all-around player, but she surprised me with how well she played in her first start," said Worden. "She played good defense and worked hard on the boards all night."

FRESHMAN JEN BUTKA scored eight points in her varsity debut for the Red Raiders.

SENIOR HANNAH DONOVAN defends Rockland's Kara Penney in last Friday's season opener at North Quincy High School.

Freshman Jessie Caldwell also played well inside for North. She had a pair of putback buckets, passed the ball well and consistently worked her way to the foul line.

"Fundamentally, she's a strong player," said Worden. "The best thing she did against Rockland was get herself to the line. She has good inside moves."

Jen Butka added eight for the Red Raiders. Worden has high hopes for the freshman forward who worked well in the post, showed a good shooting touch, and helped North work its way through the Rockland press.

"Jen plays year-round, and it shows in her game," said Worden. "Her fundamentals are solid and she just has a good all-around game. She should develop into a good varsity player."

In the second half, Rockland was able to battle North evenly off the boards and produced a convincing win.

Last year, North shared the Patriot League Fisher Division title with Hanover and advanced to the first round of the tourney. However, the Red Raiders were hit hard by graduation and injuries. They lost the best player in the league in 1000-point scorer Grace Geary. League All Stars Jane Minton and Maya Umoren also graduated.

North also lost Ali Coleman and Sydney Chang, who both projected as starters, to injuries suffered during the soccer season.

"We lost some very good players, and our numbers are a little down. But I like the experienced girls we have back. They should be good leaders for us," said Worden.

Seniors Molly Minton, Hannah Donovan, and junior Marissa McGue are the tri-captains. Minton is probably the best shooter on the team. Donovan is another strong inside player to complement the freshmen and sophomores close to the basket.

McGue is an exceptional three-sport athlete who can rebound, pass, defend and drive to the bucket.

"Molly can swing between guard and forward," said Worden. "Hannah is a good post player and a good shooter. Marissa plays the game at 150 percent all the time. She can really give us a big lift."

Senior Kiera Clifford, sophomore Kerin Coleman, sophomore Karyn McEvoy, sophomore Abbie Koch and freshman Jill Hallisey will provide depth and see action on both the JV and varsity.

"Kiera and Kerin are both aggressive defensive players," said Worden. "Karyn and Abbie have a good outside touch, and Jill handles the ball well."

This is obviously a team which will look much better in February than it does it December. As the younger players get accustomed to varsity speed, they will improve. Worden likes her team's defense and aggressiveness.

"I think the big thing for us is to develop a ballhandler to handle the press. If we do, we'll get our share of victories," she said. "In our division, Hanover will be very tough again. On the other side of the league, Duxbury is very good and Quincy should be strong with Nicole (Jorgensen) back."

Quincy Icemen Defeat Oliver Ames, Fall To Canton

By JOE REARDON

During the offseason, Quincy High hockey coach Ted Walsh made a concerted effort to put together a schedule that would make the Presidents tournament-tough and ready for a playoff run, much like last winter when they qualified for the Div. 2 tournament.

Quincy went one-and-done against a tough Medfield team in its first trip to the postseason in three years, but outshot the Warriors and outplayed them for a good portion of the game. That performance came on the heels of a tough regular-season schedule in the Patriot League and Walsh could easily see how valuable it was going up against non-league hockey iron as well.

"The goal is always to make the tournament, but I think it's every team's dream to win the tournament," said Walsh. "Why else do you play? That's the coaches' mentality too. We all want to win."

Canton was one of the teams that fit the bill as a tough nonleague opponent and the Hockomock League Bulldogs were up to the task. Playing in their season-opener, Canton scored once in each period to defeat the Presidents 3-1 Saturday nigh at the Quincy Youth Arena. The loss put Walsh's crew at 1-1 after Quincy rolled to a 5-1 win over another Hockomock League squad, Oliver Ames, in the season-opener.

"We knew we had a really good test," said Walsh of Canton. "That's why I took this game. I wanted to make sure we played good teams, not cupcakes. They're certainly one of the best and we came up a little short."

Canton took the play to the Presidents from the opening faceoff and was able to penetrate Quincy's defense with its speed. The Bulldogs peppered goaltender Ryan Higgins with 37 shots, compared to the 15 Quincy put on the Bulldogs' Justin Slocum. Canton scored their three goals in the opening minutes of each period in a contest that featured some heavy checking and chippy play in the corners.

Walsh saw similarities between Oliver Ames and Canton, but there was no doubt to him which was the better team. "They're a good team," he said of the Tigers. "They're scrappy and fast. They're not as skilled as Canton, but they're similar in the fact that they're quick. It was a big difference."

Canton took a 1-0 lead just 31 seconds in the game when John Femia put a pass on the stick of Shaun Kirby on the left side of the net and he stuffed it home on a Bulldog break. Quincy's Ryan Harty had a pair of big scoring bids just a minute later, but Slocum was quick covering up the shots.

Pat Freeman and Brian O'Callaghan kept pressuring the Bulldogs in their end. Freeman had a pair of bids, one on a wrist shot with 3:49 to go and seven second later with a backhander in close that Slocum turned away with a pad save.

Higgins deserved a better fate as he thwarted the Bulldogs on several opportunities. He stoned Bobby Mullaney by plucking a wrist shot out of the air with his glove in the closing two minutes of the first and made two more saves before the period ended. O'Callaghan nearly tied it with 7.5 seconds left with a low shot to the left side.

Higgins registered three big saves to start the second period, but Canton was finally able to make it a 2-0 contest 1:38 in when Matt Lazaro buried a backhander on the power play.

Walsh wasn't concerned that all three Canton tallies came so early in each period. "They were defensive coverage breakdowns - stuff that we know," he said. "We just didn't execute tonight. We had a game plan and sometimes a team is good enough where they can make it tough for you to execute your game plan. That's what happened tonight. Give them credit. They're a great team."

Quincy cut the lead to one goal with 7:49 left when Freeman got his stick on a rebound in front of Slocum and snapped a shot past him to make it 2-1. Canton scored early yet again in the third when Kirby got behind the Quincy defense and beat Higgins to the far corner just 37 seconds in for the 3-1 advantage.

Walsh never has to question Quincy's effort. The team plays hard until the final buzzer and will get its share of goals this winter and not panic when it falls behind. "It certainly wasn't for a lack of effort," he said of the loss. "That's always going to be there. It's whether we're going to execute or not. For whatever reason tonight we didn't and they had a lot to do with that. We got one goal back and tried to build on it, but we didn't have enough. I'm not quite sure what our identity is yet. That's something that's ongoing.

"We have some veteran leadership," Walsh said. "We're just trying to develop some young guys. I think once we do that, we'll be ok. We're certainly not panicking."

EARLY WARNING

Degenerative disc disease, characterized by the lower back pain that so many adults experience, may not be solely an age-related problem. As a result of focusing on a single sport and playing competitively, school-age athletes may also experience disc degeneration earlier than previously thought. According to one study, magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) of children's spines showed that nearly ten percent had abnormalities in at least one intervertebral disc. All were located in the lower (lumbar) spine, and none of the affected children reported pain. Disc degeneration may alter the mechanical architecture of the back, predisposing muscles and ligaments to sprains and strains. This finding suggests that disc degeneration is not necessarily associated with back pain and may begin in childhood.

Chiropractic's purpose is to remove interferences to the natural healing power running through the body. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we can help you and your children enjoy life without pain. On Monday, December 8, 2014, at approximately 8:00 a.m., Sergeant Bruce Trieu just completed his midnight shift and was walking out to his personal vehicle in full uniform when he was approached by a male who asked him if he was a Police Officer. When Sergeant Trieu heard this, he was surprised because they were at the Police station and he was in full uniform. The male, said that he needed help, so the Sergeant advised him to go inside and there would be someone there to help him.

The male, now agitated, said, "No, you need to help me now - I want to be arrested." With two closed fists, the male weakly punched Sergeant Trieu in the chest area and stated, "I just assaulted you so arrest me." Sergeant Trieu, surprised by the male's behavior, said, "You've got to be kidding me. Go away, I am not arresting you." The male, upon hearing this, went on the attack again but Sergeant Trieu just stepped away.

The Sergeant again advised the male to go into the station and he would be arrested, so the male walked into the station followed by the Sergeant. Once in the lobby, the male became verbally abusive and threatening. Officers Patrick Folan and Mark Connolly entered the lobby too. After warning the male to cease making threats to harm an Officer, Sergeant Trieu used his mace to spray the male, who was wearing sunglasses. The male was then placed under arrest and did not resist initially, however, once inside the booking area, he attempted to kick Officer Connolly, who blocked the foot with his hands.

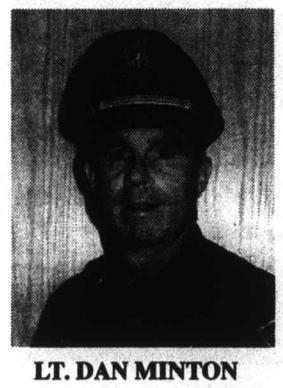

Fallon Ambulance was called to treat the male for mace exposure. The male, a 50 year old Freeport, Maine resident, was charged with "Assault and Battery on a Police Officer and Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon, to wit shod foot." Sergeant Trieu noted in his report that he believed that the male was chemically imbalanced and needed psychological help from the court. Nice Work!

A Job Well Done

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE. . . . . On Thursday, December 11, 2014, at approximately 1:40 p.m., Officer Mike Brandolini was walking the Quincy Square area in full uniform as part of the Anti-Crime Unit. He was making a round through the library when he observed three males seated at an isolated table. As the Officer walked out from between book shelves, the males looked up at him. One of the males was holding a marijuana joint in his hand and attempted to hide it by cupping his hand, but the Officer was able to take it from him. The male (suspect) immediately reached for his backpack on the floor between his feet and pulled it up to his waist area.

LT. DAN MINTON

Not knowing what the suspect wanted to access in the backpack, such as a weapon, Officer Brandolini attempted to pull it away from the suspect, who then tugged it back from the Officer. The suspect then wrestled with the Officer over control of the backpack, which led to both falling to the floor.

The suspect then lodged the backpack into his stomach area and bent over, refusing commands to cease. At this point, Officer Brandolini had the suspect in control but could not get the handcuffs on, so he called Communications for assistance. As a crowd gathered during the commotion, Officer Brandolini kept telling the suspect to "stop resisting."

In moments, Anti-Crime Unit Officer Ryan Donnelly and Community Policing Officer Roger White arrived on scene and handcuffed the suspect. The suspect was placed under arrest for "Disorderly Conduct." Officer Brandolini inspected the backpack to find a glass jar with a plastic sandwich bag inside, that contained approximately a ½ ounce of marijuana. There were also plastic bags commonly used in the sales of marijuana. The suspect, a 16 year old East Bridgewater resident, was additionally charged with, "Possession of Class D Drug with Intent to Distribute." Nice Work!

Leaky Window Sash Is a Simple Fix

By SAMANTHA MAZZOTTA

Q: One of the windows in our bedroom is leaking air underneath the bottom sash. On cold days I can feel air flowing between the sash and the windowsill, and condensation often forms along the bottom of the windowpane. In the summer, this is the window that we put our air-conditioning unit in. I checked underneath the sash to see if there is any damage, but did not see any. How can I stop the leak? -- Drafty in Durham, N.H.

A: The window frame may not be damaged, but some slight warping may have occurred over time as the window braced the air-conditioning unit. If there is no visible damage, you should be able to quickly block the leak using weather stripping.

As far as the condensation: If the condensation is on the outside or inside of the window -- and not forming between double panes -- it probably is a normal occurrence during winter. (If it forms between double panes, it may be time to replace that pane or bottom sash.) However, its location can help you pinpoint where a gap exists between the sash and the sill.

In this case, the condensation is forming along the bottom of the window. On really cold days it may even drip down and puddle along the sill. It signals that warm and cold air are meeting much more frequently along that sash than other parts of the window.

As I mentioned, weather stripping should resolve this problem quickly. Your main concern is what type of weather stripping to use. This Old House has a nice, quick guide to the different types of weather stripping here: www.thisoldhouse.com/toh/photos/0,,20441335,00.html.

Because you need a fix in a hurry, consider either felt stripping or foam tape. You probably will need to replace the felt stripping each year, but it's fairly inexpensive, and easy to install with finishing nails or a staple gun. Foam tape comes in several widths and can be rapidly installed by peeling off the backing and sticking into place along the bottom of the sash.

A pricier, but longer-lasting option is a vinyl-tube type of weather stripping. It's durable and can be purchased in different widths, and typically has the option of either a peel-and-stick backing or screw-in fasteners.

Before installing weather stripping, clean the contact surfaces of the window thoroughly with soap and water and make sure they are completely dry. Measure the width of the bottom sash and cut the stripping with an extra inch on each side. When you install the stripping, use a utility knife to trim away excess at each edge.

HOME TIP: If the windows in your home or a room fog up regularly in winter, try increasing air circulation to reduce humidity: open curtains and crack windows for a few minutes daily, or run a dehumidifier.

'Help For Energy Hogs' Launches In Quincy

The city of Quincy, in collaboration with National Grid and the award-winning nonprofit HEET, has launched the Help for Energy Hogs program to assist nonprofit organizations --such as preschools and community centers-- lower their energy bills and fossil fuel use through upgrading outdated building equipment such as boilers.

"Many of our local nonprofits struggle with aging, inefficient energy systems and high energy bills and Help for Hogs can make a big difference in helping these organizations modernize their energy systems and save money through addressing big ticket items like outdated heating and cooling equipment," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

The partnership will offer local organizations a unique opportunity to get major energy efficiency work completed at no up-front costs. The work will be financed through an energy efficiency developer that recoups their investment through the energy-bill savings. After the investment is paid off, the nonprofit will reap the full reductions on their energy bill.

HEET selected RENEW Energy Partners as the participating energy efficiency developer through a competitive review process. For qualifying projects, RENEW will fund the nonprofit portion of the retrofit costs either through an energy services agreement or efficiency lease, such that the nonprofits can pay for the upgrades out of the savings and see an immediate reduction in operating expenses.

The upgrades, typically at least $35,000 or more of work, could include a new heating system, an oil-to-gas conversion, heating systems controls, combined heat and power systems, building insulation, lighting, variable speed motors and other conservation measures.

To participate, Quincy-based nonprofits need to own and occupy the building. At a minimum, organizations should have an annual energy bill (heating + electricity) totaling over $15,000 and a high energy-use per square foot. Organizations will also need to demonstrate financial stability, be willing to participate in WegoWise (an online energy monitoring site that is free through the program) and provide volunteer support to tell local small businesses – such as convenience stores and laundromats – about rebates and free energy-efficiency services available to them through the state.

"The goal of Help for Hogs is to help the whole community become more environmentally sustainable and economically vibrant," said Audrey Schulman, president of HEET. "Fossil fuel use is reduced; nonprofits save money so they can deliver more community services, and small businesses benefit through lower energy bills."

The holiday season is supposed to the most wonderful time of the year, but for some people it isn't.

Not everyone is eagerly anticipating the Christmas holidays. Dealing with the death or the anticipated death of a loved one, living with an illness that places a question mark over the future, coping with the loss of a loved one, facing life after divorce or separation: These and many other situations make parties and other events painful for many people. For all those who are struggling or dealing with a present or past loss of any kind, Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., will hold a Service of the Longest Night on Monday, Dec. 22, at 7:30 p.m. inside the chapel.

"The service is so named because it is held on the winter solstice, the longest night of the year," said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, the church's pastor. "It is very simple, and consists of music, scripture lessons, prayer, and quiet reflection. The purpose is to provide a safe place for people who are dealing with grief and loss – whether that grief and loss is recent or decades old."

Donations are welcome and will be brought to Father Bill's on Dec. 24. Remember the cosmetics need to be able to fit into a backpack.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The New Year brings challenges that can change many things in your life. You need to be prepared not only to confront them, but also to deal with what happens afterward.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You have what it takes to set your goals quite a bit higher this year. Learn what you need to know and put what you learn into your efforts. A partner offers loving support.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) In true Gemini Twin fashion, you're conflicted about a decision you know you'll have to make in this New Year. Best advice: Get the facts before you make any commitment.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A friend offers you an exciting opportunity for this New Year. Although your positive aspects are strong in most respects, caution is advised. Investigate before you invest.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You can make this New Year a roaring success. Start by readjusting your goals to reflect the changes in the economy. Your den-mate offers both wise and loving support.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The New Year brings new opportunities for change. But you need to be ready to move from the comfortable status quo to the challenging unknown. It's up to you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your most important New Year's resolution should be to work out problems with a family member in order to avoid continuing misunderstandings. Do it soon, for both of your sakes.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The New Year has much to offer the intensely determined Scorpian, who isn't afraid to take on challenges and stay with them until they surrender their rewards.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You'll have many fine opportunities in this New Year. But be warned: Reject offers of "help." You work best when you're free to be your own creative self.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The New Year offers changes that you might feel you're not quite ready for. Best advice: Deal with them one step at a time, until you've built up your self-confidence.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Travel is a dominant aspect of the New Year. This could mean relocating to another city (or even another country) in connection with your education or your career.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) This New Year brings news about a change you've been anticipating. You might have a problem persuading a loved one about your new plans, but he or she will soon go along with them.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for making people feel safe and protected. You would make an excellent youth counselor.

Central Wrapping Party Spreads Holiday Cheer

By KRIS KALABOKAS

On Friday, students at Central Middle School got into the spirit of giving for the holiday season by wrapping almost 400 gifts to be delivered to the Germantown Neighborhood Center for children in need.

Bill Pavao, a grade eight U.S. history teacher at Central Middle School, is excited that the idea he came up with almost ten years ago for his class to hold "wrapping parties" has spread to every single other social studies class in his school.

"During that first year, my students volunteered to purchase gifts for approximately 100 children," he said. "They brought their gifts to school where I hosted a wrapping party for each of my classes. Students delighted in wrapping their gifts with each other's help then loading cars with presents for delivery to the Germantown Neighborhood Center."

Along with toys, students also brought in chips, cupcakes, and candy to munch on as they wrapped and placed ribbons and bows on gifts.

All students were invited to help by not only wrapping and bringing in snacks, but also by donating wrapping paper, tape, and gift tags.

Pavao said that the school's other social studies teachers liked his idea so much that they volunteered to host wrapping parties for their classes as well.

He originally teamed up with the Germantown Neighborhood Center through a simple phone call with an offer to make some kids' holiday a bit brighter, he said.

"I just contacted them out of the blue and said is this something you'd do for the holidays that the kids can get involved in?" said Pavao.

Paul Griffith, Kerry Monaco, Aaron Skowyra, Joanne O'Brien, and James Phelan, the school's other social studies teachers, hosted wrapping parties for their classes as well.

Phelan said that following each class period, he placed the wrapped gifts onto a table in the corridor and took a photo to document how the pile grew throughout the day.

"Students are very excited about participating in this worthwhile community service endeavor," said Pavao. "To see 400 gifts going out of here is going to be huge."

The gifts were loaded into cars to be taken to the Germantown Neighborhood Center at the end of the day. Gifts ordered online that didn't make it in time to be wrapped during the party were picked up and delivered on Monday.

40 Residents Attend Community Meeting

Police: Wollaston Crimes 'Isolated Incidents'

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Concerned residents met with police officials in the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School gymnasium last Tuesday regarding a recent uptick in crime in the area.

Community police officer for ward 5 Sean Glennon, Lt. Dan Minton, Det. A.J. Carthas, and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes took questions from roughly 40 Wollaston-area residents regarding a stabbing that occurred Dec. 2 at 12:45 a.m. near Eastern Nazarene College and an attempted break-in that occurred on Andrews Road in October.

Minton described the stabbing incident to the crowd.

An officer was dispatched to the area of Quincy Shore Drive and Furnace Brook Parkway to respond to a report of a man injured in a vehicle, he said. The victim told officers he had been stabbed by two men described as being between 20 and 30 years old.

The two assailants left with another man in a waiting SUV.

The victim said he had been stabbed in the area of Eastern Nazarene College.

It later came out that the victim and his attackers had arranged to exchange marijuana for cash and chose Quincy as a meeting area.

None of the involved parties had any connection to Quincy, said Minton.

The victim and assailants had met previously at a party in Boston.

"They didn't really know the area. It was just some place that they knew to meet," said Minton.

"The important thing to stress here is that as far as the community goes is that this was not a random act. These were people that knew each other," said Carthas.

He said a possible suspect has been identified and that the incident was in no way gang related.

The victim is from Weymouth. One suspect is believed to be from the North Shore.

Carthas, who grew up in the neighborhood and is working on the case, said the incident is still under investigation.

The home invasion attempt Wollaston was also worrying to residents.

In October Brendan J. Oliverio, 27, of Quincy attempted to enter a home on Andrews Road, police said. A 16-year-old boy who was on the second floor of the single-family home and home sick from school, looked out of the window and saw the man who he didn't recognize. Oliverio attempted to gain entry through two doors and ultimately entered through a bulkhead door, police said.

The man successfully entered the home and made it up to the second floor before the teen accosted him and yelled at him to leave, police said.

Police were called shortly thereafter and Oliverio was apprehended in a nearby clearing by two officers half a mile away from Andrews Road.

Oliverio, who was charged with breaking and entering, had not stolen any property from the home nor was he found to be carrying any weapons.

While in custody, police said he admitted that he had a $200 a day drug habit and needed something to sell to support his habit.

"These are isolated incidents," said Minton.

When asked about creating a neighborhood watch,

JIM HEPBURN, leader of the Quincy Salvation Army Corps Band, plays holiday music with the euphonium outside Quincy City Hall last Friday. A red kettle was set up at the location near McIntyre Mall where passersby had a chance to donate to the Salvation Army's Christmas Kettle Campaign. Hepburn is among 13 musicians that comprise the Salvation Army band. The band plays at Sunday church services, nursing homes and other events. The Braintree resident has been a member of the band for 34 years. The Quincy Salvation Army has seen a 30 percent increase in requests for assistance this Christmas season. It's not too late to help the organization meet the rise in demand. Capt. Tim Ross said the Salvation Army will continue to accept requests up until Christmas Eve on Dec. 24. Donations of new, unwrapped toys and non-perishable food items can be made at the Salvation Army's Quincy headquarters at 6 Baxter St., during business hours. Monetary donations are also accepted. BEGINNING WITH GARNET

Garnet, the traditional birthstone for January, is most often associated with the color red. In fact, the name "garnet" comes from the Latin word "granatus," meaning "seed," because the gems were thought to resemble pomegranate seeds. And some red garnets can show almost as much fire as rubies. However, it must be pointed out that recent finds (particularly in Africa) reveal that garnet also comes in a host of other hues. So if it is green gemstones that captivate you, the brilliant green demantoid is more brilliant than even diamond. Demantoids mined in Namibia lack the bushy "horse-tail inclusions" that are so characteristic of Russian demantoid. Garnets of other colors and names are also available.

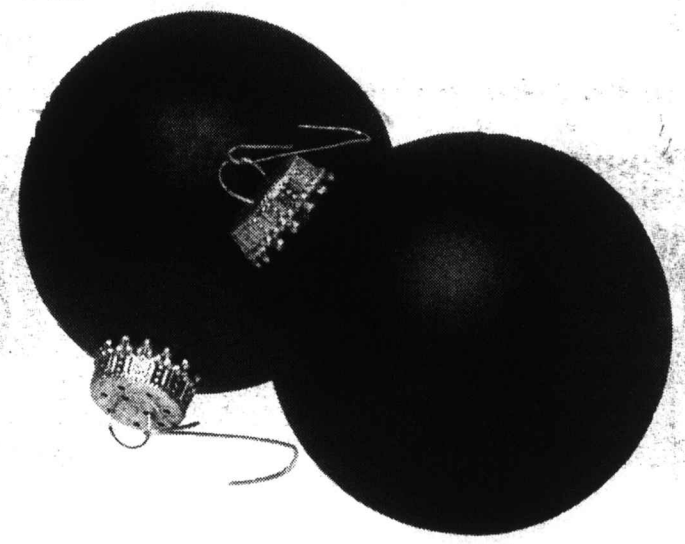

The majority of gems can be divided into precious and semi-precious categories. The term "precious" is reserved for the most rare and expensive of gems. These include diamonds, emeralds, rubies, pearls and sapphires. Most remaining gems - including garnets, peridot, and amethyst - are semi-precious. You will find a lovely selection of birthstone jewelry, diamond engagement rings, pendants, watches and earrings at our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 9, 1768, in London, Englishman Philip Astley stages the first modern circus. Astley, a former cavalry sergeant major, found that if he galloped in a tight circle, centrifugal force allowed him to perform seemingly impossible feats on a horse's back.

• On Jan. 6, 1838, Samuel Morse's telegraph system is demonstrated for the first time in New Jersey. The telegraph, a device that used electric impulses to transmit encoded messages over a wire, would eventually revolutionize long-distance communication.

• On Jan. 11, 1908, U.S. President Theodore Roosevelt declares the massive Grand Canyon in northwestern Arizona a national monument. Congress did not officially outlaw private development in the Grand Canyon until 1919, when President Woodrow Wilson signed the Grand Canyon National Park Act.

• On Jan. 7, 1929, Walter Chrysler, the founder of the Chrysler Corporation, one of America's Big Three automakers, is featured on the cover of Time magazine as its Man of the Year. In 1928, his company had acquired the Dodge Brothers Company, thereby becoming the world's third-largest automaker.

• On Jan. 5, 1933, construction begins on the Golden Gate Bridge, as workers start excavating 3.25 million cubic feet of dirt for the structure's huge anchorages. The Golden Gate Bridge officially opened on May 27, 1937, the longest bridge span in the world at the time.

• On Jan. 8, 1946, Elvis Presley receives his first guitar. Competing versions of the story say that what Presley really wanted for his birthday was a rifle or a bicycle. Instead, his mother took him to the Tupelo Hardware Store and bought a $6.95 guitar.

• On Jan. 10, 1976, "Convoy," by C.W. McCall, is the No. 1 song on the U.S. pop charts. "Convoy" fueled the trucking/CB-radio craze that had millions of Americans creating "handles" for themselves -- Rubber Duck, Pink Lady, Scooter Pie, etc. -- and daydreaming about the glamorous life of the long-haul trucker. Hollywood responded with a parade of related works, including "Smokey and the Bandit" (1977).

A Wish List

Dear Santa:

Here I am again, later than usual. I know I keep promise to write earlier but it seems things just get busy and stay busy.

Soon you'll be off in your sleigh. If you need any last-minute gift suggestions for folks in Quincy, I've put together a little list for you. Some of these suggestions are just for fun but others are serious and I hope you can do your best to make as many as you can come true.

SANTA

So here goes, Santa:

We'll start this list with a wish for all Quincy residents who are concerned about the future of Quincy Medical Center. Santa, we're hoping you can do whatever you can to ensure that a 24-hour, fully staffed and equipped emergency room department remains in Quincy for the foreseeable future after Steward Health Care closes QMC. And how about a commitment from another health care entity that would keep a medical center in Quincy open - period. . .For Mayor Thomas Koch: a stash of gold bricks underneath McIntyre Mall uncovered during the Adams Green project. The mayor could use this money for city projects and other expenses such as fixing all the roads and sidewalks throughout the city. Toss in uninterrupted construction for the West of Chestnut project, the first major piece in the redevelopment of Quincy Center. The project is expected to break ground in the spring. The mayor could probably use a direct phone line to Governor-Elect Charlie Baker, too, once he is inaugurated Jan 8. . . Councillor Doug Gutro and School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney: decisions about their political futures. Each is considering running for mayor next year. . . . City Clerk Joseph Shea – brand new state-of-the-art election machines. Santa, the current ballot counters are showing a little age and getting parts for repairs is becoming more difficult every year. . . While you're in the durable goods aisle, Santa, how about an industrial-size paper shredder for DPW Commissioner Dan Raymondi. . . . For Frank McCauley – a public designation honoring his many years as a Quincy elected official, including eight years as mayor. Santa, with Quincy Medical Center slated to close, the fate of the McCauley building is up in the air. It would be fitting to have the city he served for so many years recognize him by naming something for him. . . Norfolk County Register of Probate Pat McDermott: a record deal (Irish music and holiday songs.) . . . Realtor and auto enthusiast Jim Stamos: the honor of driving the pace car at this year's Indianapolis 500. But Santa, the car he's driving has to be a Ford Mustang. . . Talented Quincy High School student and fashion major Emily Suslowicz – a contract for her first professional clothing line. And acceptance to the Fashion Institute of Design and Merchandising after she begins her senior year next fall. . . To former NQHS basketball standout and Northeastern University-bound freshman Anthony Green – a big debut in his first game for the Huskies against Michigan State next fall. Throw in two pairs of court side seats for his former Red Raider coach, Kevin Barrett, and his proud parents. . . Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti – a guest appearance on the Jimmy Fallon Show. Actually, Quincy's funniest politician could probably sit in as host and get the same ratings. . . State Rep. Bruce Ayers – a commitment from Boston Mayor Marty Walsh for a ferry service connecting Long Island to Quincy. . . State Rep. Tackey Chan: a new passport for future travels. . . Lt. Mike Palaza of the Quincy Fire Department: a walk-on cameo appearance on the TV show "Chicago Fire." Ditto for Quincy Police Lt. Dan Minton on "Criminal Minds" or "CSI Las Vegas." . . Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes: re-election as the Massachusetts Republican State Committee chairwoman. She and Alicia Gardner, chairman of the Quincy Democratic City Committee, could also use droves of new registered voters. . . Quincy School Committee members: shovels to break ground on a new Sterling Middle School. . . Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis – a box of your finest cigars. Santa, perhaps you can get some Cuban stogies since the President is trying to ease tensions with Cuba . . . Quincy Chamber of Commerce Marking and Tourism Director Margaret Laforest – plenty of new ideas to help bring new visitors to the City of Presidents. Perhaps a coordinated effort with some of the tourism buses in Boston that could stop in Quincy for the day and see all the history that Quincy has to offer. . . Paul Moody, commander of the Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 294 and coordinator of Flags for Veterans Island: another hundred flags to fill out the rest of the island. . . And to all the veterans organizations in Quincy: new members to help increase the ranks which in turn will help the organizations serve their fellow veterans and the community. . . A memorial or designation honoring all the men and women who built the hundreds of ships in break-neck speed that helped win World War II. It would be fitting to have some kind of tribute and memorial next year on the 70th anniversary of the end of WWII. . . To all the directors of the city's charities and non-profit organizations including Rick Doane, Interfaith Social Services; Capts. Tim and Nicole Ross of the Quincy Salvation Army; Rev. David Wooster, Quincy Crisis Center; Sue Chandler, DOVE; Beth Ann Strollo, Quincy Community Action Programs; and Kathy Quigley, Germantown Neighborhood Center – ample donations and other financial assistance to meet all their goals in serving the needy and less fortunate here. . . More Quincy postcards for City Historian Tom Galvin's popular "Quincy Yesterdays" feature in The Quincy Sun. . . Police Chief Paul Keenan and Fire Chief Joseph Barron and all the city's first responders and public safety personnel: safe shifts while protecting and serving the community. . . Additional printings of Quincy author James Gay's outstanding book, "Battleship Cove," featuring many ships that were built at the famed Fore River Shipyard. . . For contributing Quincy Sun photographers Lisa Aimola, Larry Carchedi, Ally Graf and Karen Walker – a new lens or accessory for their camera kits. Karen could also use good weather when the osprey platform she's coordinating is put up near her home in Houghs Neck. . . .

Santa, we also hope you'll take a look at the list of gifts that Quincy's fifth graders would like to give this year (special section starts on Page 22.) We have some very creative, thoughtful and inspiring young minds in Quincy and we think you and our readers will enjoy this year's "If I Could Give One Gift It Would Be" holiday wishes.

We also wish to extend the happiest of holidays to all of our faithful readers, loyal advertisers and dedicated news carriers and other good friends for continuing to support The Quincy Sun as their weekly community newspaper.

Merry Christmas, Happy Chanukah and a very Happy and Healthy New Year from all of us at The Quincy Sun.

Scenes From Yesterday

MERRY CHRISTMAS
from QUINCY, MASS.

Largest Christmas Tree in United States.
85 feet high contributed by Retail Merchants.

CONTINUING WITH A Christmas tradition here at The Quincy Sun, this is the 20th year that we have featured this postcard that was published 80 years ago in 1934. This 85-foot fabricated Christmas tree was decorated with 600 lights and two stars on top that blinked alternatively. The Merchants Division of the old Quincy Chamber of Commerce erected the tree in front of what was then the Granite Trust Company's main bank building in Quincy Square. Today, the first floor banking hall is a branch of the Bank of America. Also on the street level, alongside the bank since 1948, is Rogers Jewelry Store. Merry Christmas. Quincy Soldier 'Santa' For Vietnam Orphans

By FRANK McCAULEY

Specialist 4 Raymond D. Crombie hasn't been home for Christmas in three years. He won't be this year either. He won't join his six brothers and four sisters and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Crombie around the Christmas tree at 1276 Sea St., Houghs Neck. Instead, Ray will be playing a starring role in South Vietnam. Because of his knowledge of the Vietnamese language and his love for children, Ray was chosen to visit six orphanages as "Santa Claus" on Christmas Day.

Ray, in his second tour of duty with the Army in Vietnam, is a member of the "Kit Carson Scouts," working with the 25th Infantry Division in Cu Chi. Part of his work is in the villages and hamlets, working directly with the people, finding out what they need and supplying them with materials so they can repair their churches, schools and public buildings.

FIVE FAITHS IN CHRISTMAS EVE PEACE SERVICE AT JEWISH CENTER

An Ecumenical Peace Service, the first of its kind in Quincy, with participants from five faiths, was planned for Christmas Eve at 8 p.m. at the Jewish Community Center, 10 Merrymount Road.

Taking part in the unique Ecumenical Peace Service will be Samuel Hassan from the Islamic Mosque; Rabbi David Jacobs of Temple Beth El; Dr. Bradford E. Gale, minister United First Parish Church; Rev. Frank Fairbairn, curate at Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy and a representative from the Greek Orthodox Church.

The program will focus attention on the tension spots in the world today-Vietnam, Biafra and the Middle East. It is sponsored by the Citizens for Participation Politics, headed by John L. Gillis.

Concert Celebrates Holiday Season In Symphony, Song

'Tis The Season' A Quincy Musical Tradition

By KRIS KALABOKAS

It was a full house for the 14th annual "'Tis the Season...Symphony and Song!" concert held recently in the Lloyd Hill Performing Arts Center at Quincy High School.

The event, organized by the Quincy School - Community Partnership (QSCP) with help from sponsors Granite City Electric Supply, "was the best one ever," said John Fagerlund, coordinator of the QSCP.

"You didn't see an empty seat," he said of the Quincy High School auditorium which can accommodate up to 750 people. "The balcony was absolutely filled."

Tickets went on sale for a month before the event and were $20. For $35, VIP ticket holders were treated to a three course chicken or fish meal prior to the show in the Quincy High School Presidents Cafe cooked by students in the school's culinary arts program.

The audience was filled with students from 13 of Quincy's public schools. Prior to the concert, they were treated to snacks and hot chocolate.

Transportation to the event for the students was provided by Quincy Public Schools, said Fagerlund.

To get everybody in the holiday spirit prior to the concert, Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro called out the name of each school present and asked the students to cheer.

The evening's performances kicked off with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by grade four Clifford Marshall Elementary School student Precious Llaga, a performance Fagerlund called "outstanding."

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra led by music director and conductor Yoichi Udagawa then played holiday songs such as "Winter Wonderland," "Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas," and "Festive Sounds of Hanukkah" along with selections from "The Nutcracker."

The Quincy Public Schools John Adams Orchestra and Quincy Symphony Orchestra joined to play "Carol of the Bells" and the John Williams classic "Somewhere in My Memory."

The evening ended with a Christmas sing-along led by the Combined Quincy High School Horizons Choir and the North Quincy High School Select Choir.

The partnership between Granite City and the QSCP is a natural fit, said Fagerlund.

Phyllis Godwin, Granite City CEO and Chairwoman has a passion for music and music education, he said, and was eager to team up with the QSCP as all proceeds from ticket sales go back directly to Quincy's public schools and their music and arts programs.

Alba Gilabert-Reid Receives National Youth Award

Alba Gilabert-Reid, of Quincy, a violinist and a first grader at Inly School, is one of 44 Project STEP music students who were recently honored with the National Arts and Humanities Youth Program Award. The award is the signature program of the President's Committee on the Arts and the Humanities.

Chosen from a national pool of more than 350 nominations and 50 finalists, Project STEP is one of 12 programs across the country to receive the award, which is the highest honor for such programs in the United States.

Project STEP (String Training and Education Program) was recognized for its rigorous, year-round classical string training program for under-represented minorities that invites them into a world of classical music that might not otherwise be available to them. Germantown Center Helps Hundreds This Holiday Season

The Germantown Neighborhood Center/SSYMCA once again has made holiday dreams come true for hundreds of disadvantaged children, families and seniors in Quincy with their December outreach efforts which are bolstered by corporate and community partners and volunteers. An outpouring of kindness and generosity from throughout the City of Quincy has resulted in holiday assistance for 548 families, 199 adults and 171 seniors.

The Children's Gift Giving Program provides warm coats, hats, gloves and footwear as well as special items close to kids' hearts such as toys and games. Teenagers receive store gift cards so they can choose items they need for school. Another important component is providing Christmas Dinner baskets.

"It's hard for many people to imagine, but 95 percent of the children who attend the Snug Harbor School in Germantown qualify for the free breakfast and free lunch program," said Center Director Kathy Quigley. "And there's high percentages of need in other schools in Quincy, as well. So when the kids are home for school vacation week, we want to make sure they have nutritious food to eat. For families with school age children, our Christmas Dinner baskets actually provide a week's worth of groceries."

Where are these efforts headquartered? Each year, a new "Santa's Workshop" is needed and this year because of the generosity of Dan DeMarco, the Christmas Command Center is located at One Heritage Place in Quincy.

"Dan has the biggest heart! We couldn't do everything we are doing without him. The space he's given us to use is absolutely incredible," Quigley said. DeMarco is on the Executive Board of Directors for the South Shore YMCA.

Quigley thanked all the volunteers who helped make this year's holiday assistance a reality.

"You made so many children feel special. Remember, this goes way beyond gifts. It's that people remembered them," she said.

Pork Roast Stuffing, Scalloped Potatoes

By MARIE

There are many families who are going to sit down for dinner on Christmas day to a turkey or ham dinner.

This year in addition to our traditional pasta dish, we are having a pork roast. I use the shoulder as it seems to be have the flavor and the tenderness. but any kind will do fine.

Today's recipe is for the stuffing. We all know everyone has their favorite way to prepare a stuffing, and I've certainly have tried my share. But today's is our favorite.

STUFFING FOR ROAST PORK SHOULDER

6 ounces sausage meat
1 stalk celery (diced)
1 small onion (chopped)
1 cup stuffing mix (any favorite)
3 slices of bread (soaked and squeezed)
1/4 cup grated Parmesan or Romano cheese
2 tablespoons white wine (optional)
2 teaspoons of Bell's seasoning oil for sautéing

In the hot oil, sauté the celery, onion and the meat for a couple of minutes. Add all the other ingredients and blend well. If the mixture is too dry, add a little water or stock until it looks moist.

Place in a greased baking dish and cook covered in a 350 degree oven for about 30 minutes. Keep warm until ready to serve.

For the pork roast, I find that salt and pepper, a favorite herb is one of the ways to season it, and bake in a 350-degree oven 20 minutes to the pound.

I think that scalloped potatoes go with just about everything and one in which we are having with the roast.

They can be made ahead of time and just baked in the oven when ready. I make them with a cream sauce that keeps then moist and creamy.

SCALLOPED POTATOES

3 pounds of baking potatoes (peeled and thinly sliced)
3 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons butter
2 cups milk
1/2 cup Parmesan cheese

Melt the butter, add the flour to make a roux-then add the milk and the grated cheese. Cook until sauce is thickened. In a lightly greased casserole dish, arrange some of the potatoes on the bottom. Then some of the sauce. Repeat until all the potatoes have been used. Sprinkle the top with a favorite shredded cheese, and bake in a 350 degree oven for 25-30 minutes.

Roasted Whole Cauliflower

By SUZIE

Have you ever roasted an entire cauliflower whole? Neither have I! But I found this spectacular recipe online and a client of mine prepared it and loved it. Let me know what you think.

ROASTED WHOLE CAULIFLOWER

1 tablespoon olive oil
1 head cauliflower
1½ cups plain Greek yogurt
1 lime, zested and juiced
2 tablespoons chile powder
1 tablespoon cumin
1 tablespoon garlic powder
1 teaspoon curry powder
2 teaspoons kosher salt
1 teaspoon black pepper

Directions

1. Preheat the oven to 400° and lightly grease a small baking sheet with vegetable oil. Set aside.

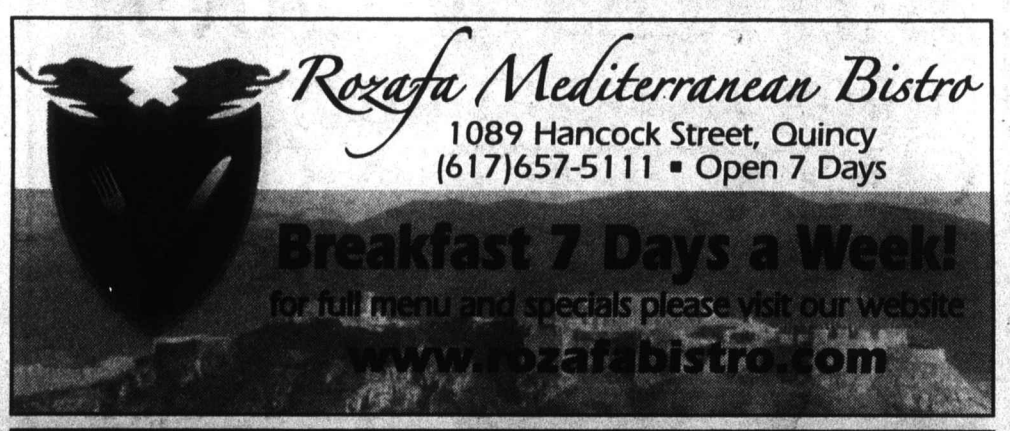

2. Trim the base of the cauliflower to remove any green leaves and the woody stem.

3. In a medium bowl, combine the yogurt with the lime zest and juice, chile powder, cumin, garlic powder, curry powder, salt and pepper.

4. Dunk the cauliflower into the bowl and use a brush or your hands to smear the marinade evenly over its surface. (Excess marinade can be stored in the refrigerator in an airtight container for up to three days and used with meat, fish or other veggies.)

5. Place the cauliflower on the prepared baking sheet and roast until the surface is dry and lightly browned, 30 to 40 minutes. The marinade will make a crust on the surface of the cauliflower.

6. Let the cauliflower cool for 10 minutes before cutting it into wedges and serving alongside a big green salad.

QHA Director Of Facilities Hiring Seen Next Month

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Quincy Housing Authority has begun the process of hiring for their newly created director of facilities position and is aiming to have someone in place this winter according to James Lydon, executive director of the Quincy Housing Authority at a meeting last Wednesday.

The position, he said, which oversees both the maintenance and modernization departments, was listed a week and a half ago and will remain online until Jan. 2. A hiring decision will be made two weeks after that.

Former maintenance manager David Ferris was put on paid administrative leave July 9 and ultimately handed in his resignation on Sept. 12.

It was revealed earlier this year that incompetent maintenance management led to unsafe and unsanitary living conditions for housing authority tenants.

Orders sent to the maintenance department dating back to 2008 were found that were either ignored or flagged as low priority by Ferris according to Lydon.

He also knowingly signed off on work orders that were never completed.

Ferris held the $85,000 per year position for over 10 years and managed roughly 50 maintenance workers.

A report following the inspection of ten percent of Quincy's state-aided public housing units and common areas conducted on March 31, April 1, and April 3 of 2014 by the Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) revealed subpar living conditions in need of immediate repair. Another report issued on April 30 following a reinspection outlined operational issues such as poor communication between the maintenance department and the authority as well as physical condition concerns such as exposed electrical wiring, holes in walls, improperly stored combustibles, mold, and mildew.

Officials from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) stepped in to inspect federally owned housing authority properties and units in July.

"Before we had maintenance and modernization just butting heads with one another with nobody in a superior position to the other and we had inspections and a consultant that was answerable to maintenance and the maintenance department didn't really want to hear about any problems with the units," said Lydon. "When the inspectors didn't find anything their managers were happy that they weren't finding anything."

An in-house inspector will be hired after a director of facilities is chosen.

Inspections were previously handled by Tennessee-based firm McCright & Associates.

Lydon described their operations as "poor" and said they were not communicating to the authority all of the safety and health issues later discovered by DHCD and HUD.

The appointment of the director of operations, who will have a salary of $105,000 per year, must be approved by the board, he said.

Hypertension Screening, Smoking Cessation, Substance Abuse Counseling Included

Housing Authority Launches New Health Initiative

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Residents of Quincy's Housing Authority will benefit from a newly launched, first-in-the-nation health initiative presented at the authority's monthly meeting last Wednesday.

Through the Prevention and Wellness Trust Fund sanctioned by outgoing Gov. Deval Patrick— which awarded $1.7 million to Quincy and Weymouth in January — hypertension screening, smoking cessation, substance abuse counseling particularly in relation to alcoholism, and falls prevention programs will be enacted.

The initiative awarded $42 million to nine communities for the implementation of up to four preventative health initiatives per community and is aimed at cutting long-term healthcare costs.

Quincy and Weymouth were among nine entities awarded grant money for the initiative.

The funds, made possible through non-federal Affordable Care Act dollars, will be given out over the course of four years, said Cynthia Sierra, senior director of public policy, public affairs and program development at Manet Community Health Center.

Manet will be the managing partner and lead agency coordinating the initiative and will work in conjunction with Bay State Community Services, Quincy Medical Center, South Shore Elder Services, South Shore Hospital, the South Shore YMCA, South Shore Workforce Investment Board, the Quincy Health Department, and the town of Weymouth.

"At the end of the day this grant is about a new, deep, and more intrinsic way of connecting physicians with municipalities, with community based organizations so that we're all talking to each other," said Sierra.

Referrals done electronically to organizations such as the YMCA and Meals on Wheels will create a more transparent and easier to navigate health care system, she said.

Once every four to five weeks, residents in each housing authority building will have their blood pressure checked and if found to be dangerously high, will be transported by ambulance to a nearby hospital. Those with moderately elevated blood pressure will be referred to their primary care physician according to Andrew Scheele, health commissioner with the Quincy Health Department.

"We can follow those rates and we can follow those numbers to see if we can reduce the number of people who are on blood pressure medication and to bring these numbers back down," he said.

Cooking classes taught at QHA properties will enable residents to make informed and healthy decisions about their diet.

"We can bring in people that will be able to do healthy cooking for the residents here so that when they go back into their units they'll be able to do it right there," said Scheele.

Balance workshops are planned to be conducted weekly for two hours to benefit those who are frail or prone to falls.

Services will be rendered on-site so that elderly residents won't have to leave their buildings, something Scheele said is particularly important during the cold winter months.

"Residents will not have to leave the building to do any of this," he said.

The city's health department had been visiting public housing frequently, conducting programs on bed bugs and nutritional seminars, however with the newly awarded funding, those programs can be expanded and additional programs can be added.

"We can bring in so much more now that we have these funds that we've been awarded," said Scheele.

He hopes in early January to hold a "health assessment fair" in each housing authority building. All partners would be present with booths introducing the building's population to all of the new programs.

"We really want to encourage people to participate," he said.

19 Girls Scouts Commended By City Council

By SCOTT JACKSON

Nineteen Quincy Girl Scouts – all recipients of the organization's Gold, Silver, and Bronze Awards – received commendations recently from the City Council.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest presented the commendations during the council's Dec. 15 meeting. Among the Girl Scouts she presented a commendation to was Yvonne Fong, a member of Troop 74107.

Fong, a 2014 North Quincy High School graduate, earned the Gold Award, the highest honor in the Girl Scouts program and the equivalent of the Boy Scouts' Eagle Scout Award. For her project, Fung organized an SAT prep class.

"She discovered a problem of high school students not getting into the universities of their choice due to lower SAT scores," Laforest explained. "She developed and held SAT prep classes for eight weeks at the Thomas Crane Library. She presented her idea to the North Quincy [ROTC] and they agreed to help run the program after Yvonne graduated.

"That's quite an accomplishment. I know how expensive SAT prep classes can be."

Fong said she got the idea to organize the SAT prep class while she was a junior at North.

"I was a junior and I was thinking about college already. I knew SAT classes run around $200 and I thought it would be a really good idea to help the community by starting an SAT project where your tutors are people who are seniors who already have taken the SATs and scored high enough, instead of teachers who took it years ago," Fong said.

"So I gathered a lot of friends of mine and we all just started this program."

Fong now attends Brown University where she majors in economics and environmental studies.

Four of the Girl Scouts recognized received Silver Awards, the organization's second-highest honor.

Colleen McDonough, a member of Troop 74120, received the award for her SKI (Safety, Knowledge, and Information) Project. For that project, McDonough taught children how to ski at Loon Mountain in New Hampshire, giving them instruction, re-assurance, and safety lessons.

Katherine Page, of Troop 74165, earned the Silver Award for her Magical Library Project. For that project, she collected books and distributed them to children living in an area motel.

Michaela Pettinelli, a member of Troop 74120, completed her Benefits of Dance Project to earn the Silver Award. For that project, she educated members of the community on the importance of dance in the fight against obesity.

Amy Trillcott, another member of Troop 74120, received the Bronze Award for her STAR (Sit Together and Read) Project. For that project, Trillcott stocked the mobile book cart program for the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center and supplied a new classroom and waiting area with books. She also collected three large boxes of books for DOVE.

Three groups of Girl Scouts received commendations in recognition of their Bronze Award projects.

Six scouts from Troop 85383 – Paola Sofia Arguedas-Mcclay, Carolyn Beato, Marlana Davis, Brianna Joyce, Stephanya Mendes, and Paris Vestal – received Bronze Awards for completing their project on patriotism. They shopped and collected items for care packs they sent to soldiers. In addition, they placed flags at Mount Wollaston Cemetery for Memorial Day. Joyce also sold 2,700 boxes of Girl Scout cookies, more than anyone else in Massachusetts.

Another three Girl Scouts from Troop 85383 – Isabelle Assaf, Kylie Davis, and Alana McDermott – also earned a Bronze Award. For their project, they collected donations to make blankets for homeless veterans.

The final Bronze Award winners recognized were Lillian Burke, Charlotte Hughes, Niamh Mwafulirwa, Sarah Patacchiola, Abby Yanovitch, each of them a member of Troop 74137 who completed the Me and My Guy Dance Project. They hosted a dance and used the proceeds to make "Birthday in a Bag" kits for the Southwest Community Center.

Quincy Medical Center Talks With State, City Officials Ongoing

By SCOTT JACKSON

With one week left to go before Quincy Medical Center closes, negotiations between the hospital's owner and city and state officials remain underway.

Steward Health Care, the for-profit company that purchased the Whitwell Street hospital in 2011, announced plans last month to close the hospital Dec. 31 and replace it with an urgent care clinic and standalone emergency department in the city. Mayor Thomas Koch has since retained the law firm of Eckert Seamans to represent the city in negotiations with Steward and state regulators regarding the closing. Chris Walker, a spokesman for Koch, said Monday the negotiations are continuing.

"Discussions are ongoing," Walker said. "The mayor remains committed to protecting the city's interests.

"All of these issues will be coming to a resolution, we believe, one way or the other prior to the 31st."

The city's main concern so far has been the fate of the emergency department at the hospital. On Dec. 16 Steward announced plans to keep an emergency department in the city for up to one year after the hospital closes. Initially, the emergency department would be located at 114 Whitwell Street inside the existing hospital building.

"From the beginning, Steward has always been committed to maintaining 24/7 access to emergency room services in Quincy," Dr. Mark Girard, president of Steward Hospitals, said in a statement.

"We are working closely with the Massachusetts Department of Public Health and local officials to determine the best way to meet the needs of the Quincy community."

The proposed Steward Satellite Emergency Facility – Quincy will be staffed at all times with emergency room physicians and nurses, the company said. It would operate under the license of Steward's closest hospital – Dorchester's Carney Hospital – and offer patients emergency care 24 hours per day at the satellite location in Quincy. On-site diagnostic radiology (including CT scans and ultrasound) and laboratory services would also be available. If necessary, patients will be transferred to other acute care hospitals for inpatient services or serious emergencies.

"As we wind down operations of the full Quincy Medical Center at the end of this month, we hope to maintain uninterrupted access to Emergency Services," Girard explained.

Beginning this past weekend, Steward stopped accepting inpatient admissions to Quincy Medical Center. Patients who are arriving at the hospital in need of inpatient care are being transferred elsewhere.

Attorney General Martha Coakley's office is continuing its review of the closure. In 2011, Steward and the attorney general reached an agreement allowing the company to acquire Quincy Medical Center out of bankruptcy.

As part of that agreement, Steward agreed to maintain an acute care hospital in Quincy for at least six-and-a-half years after the purchase and provide notice of a closure 18 months in advance. Other provisions in the deal mandated that Steward continue the hospital's community benefit outreach services to Quincy's Asian population, which at the time included an Asian outreach coordinator position, a chest clinic, and the training of medical outreach interpreters.

Christopher Loh, a spokesman for Coakley, said in a statement that closing emergency services on Dec. 31 would be unacceptable. He added that Coakley believes the company should find a new home for the Quincy Community Based Outpatient Clinic located inside the hospital, which is operated by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs.

"The closure of emergency services on December 31 is unacceptable," Loh said Dec. 16, before Steward announced plans to keep the ER open.

"We also believe Steward should ensure VA services continue for those veterans who are being served by QMC and provide many of the community benefits that it now offers. We have made clear to Steward that any resolution with our office will need to include those measures or we will pursue our legal options."

Five Schools To Get New Windows, Doors

By SCOTT JACKSON

Window and door replacement projects for five Quincy schools can commence, after the City Council unanimously authorized two bonds totaling $9.7 million to pay for the projects. The state will reimburse roughly 70 percent of the cost.

The larger of the two bonds – $5.9 million – is for window and door replacement at North Quincy High School and the Merrymount and Wollaston Elementary Schools. The council had previously authorized a $5.3 bond for those projects, based on cost estimates for the work. After those projects went out to bid, the lowest qualifying bid came in at $5.9 million. The original bond was amended during the Dec. 15 council meeting.

The Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) will reimburse 69.74 percent – approximately $4.1 million – of the $5.9 million cost for replacing windows and doors at those three schools. The remaining $1.8 million would be left for the city to pay.

The second bond, worth $3.8 million, is for window and door replacement at the Francis W. Parker Elementary School and Lincoln-Hancock Community School. The MSBA will provide a 71.16 percent reimbursement rate for those projects, covering roughly $2.7 million of the $3.9 total cost. The city would pay the remaining $1.2 million.

Sports, More Parents Night Out Program

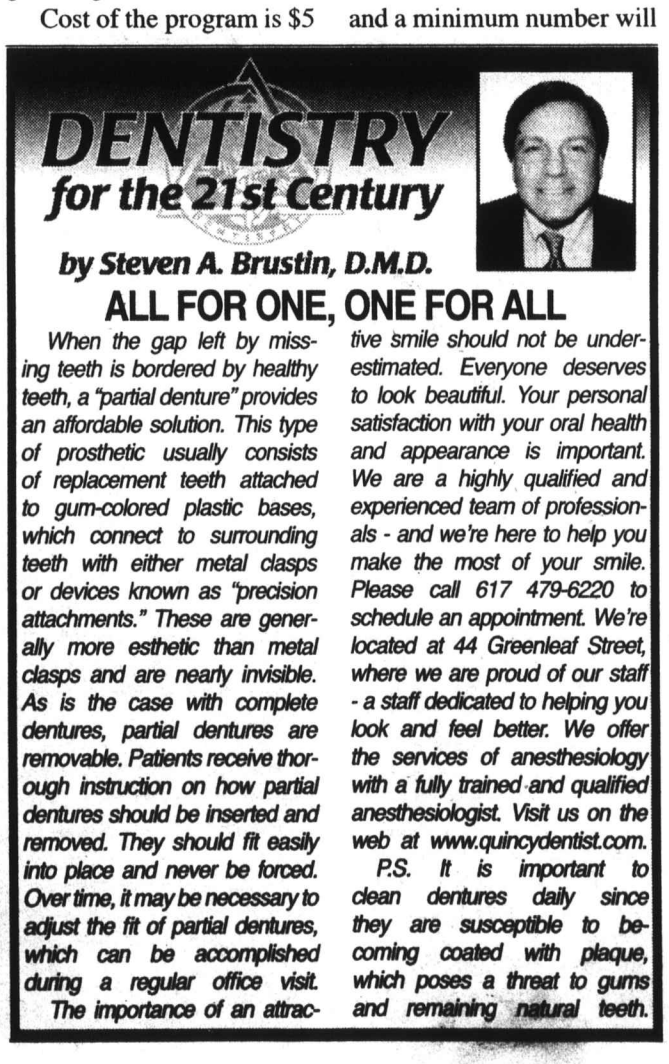

The Quincy Recreation Department will offer a Sports & More - Parents Night Out Program Monday, Dec. 29th and Friday, Jan. 2nd from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Central Middle School gym for boys and girls in grades 3-8.

Cost of the program is $5 per session.

The program offers traditional activities under supervision that will include group games and organized play like dodge ball, "Minute to Win It" contest, arts and crafts, sports and more. Enrollment will be limited, and a minimum number will be needed for proper group activities. Registration is ongoing and can be done online at www.QuincyRec.com or in person at One Merrymount Parkway from 9 a.m to 4 p.m.

For more information, call 617-376-1394 or visit www.QuincyRec.com.

Houses Passes Reauthorization Of The John Adams Memorial Foundation

The House of Representatives has passed the reauthorization of the Adams Memorial Foundation to establish a commemorative work in honor of former President John Adams and his legacy.

Cong. Stephen F. Lynch (MA-08) introduced H.R. 3802, which extends the authorization of the Adams Memorial Foundation for seven years through Dec. 2, 2020. Lynch's bill language was included in the Senate Amendment to H.R. 3979 the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2015.

The reauthorization allows the Adams Memorial Foundation, the National Park Service, the National Capital Memorial Advisory Commission and all stakeholders to continue working toward the goal of siting and building a commemorative memorial honoring John Adams and his family and their role in shaping the nation.

"John Adams has a lasting legacy as a dedicated public servant," Cong. Lynch said. "He was one of our most influential founding fathers, a defender of due process, an experienced diplomat, Vice President, and President of the United States. John Adams and five generations of the Adams family called the City of Quincy home until 1927. I am proud to represent Quincy, nicknamed the 'City of Presidents,' in the House of Representatives.

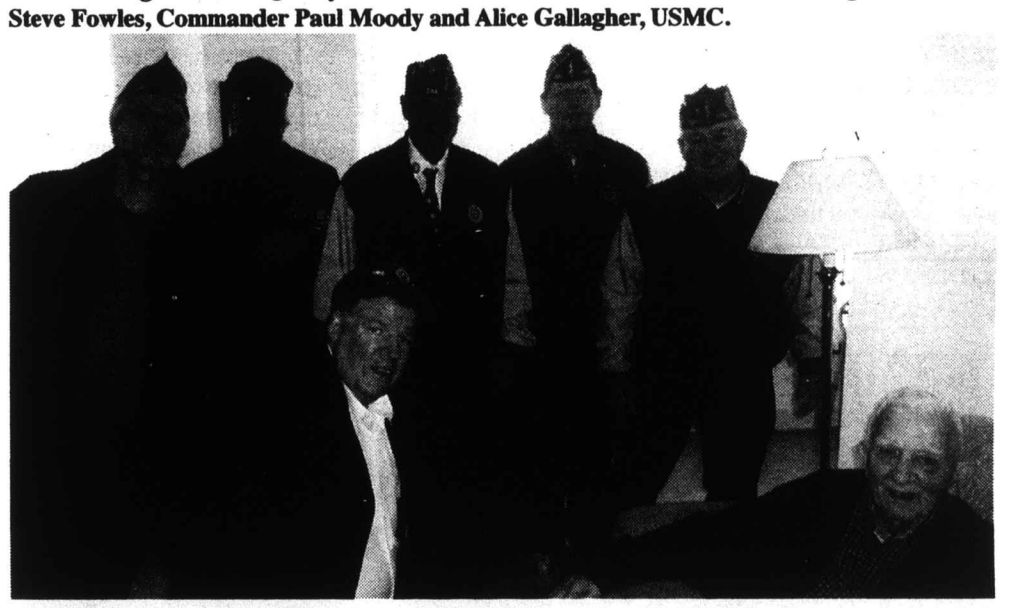

"While the City of Quincy has honored the Adams family with one of our country's most significant national parks, the Adams National Historic Park, our nation's capital lacks a memorial honoring this remarkable leader. The passage of this legislation allows the foundation the time necessary to find a fitting location in Washington, D.C. to honor this admirable man."

"I am pleased that the House and Senate included the reauthorization of the Adams Memorial Foundation in the National Defense Authorization Act. I thank my colleagues in the Massachusetts delegation for their support of this important legislation, particularly Sen. Ed Markey for introducing the companion bill in the Senate," Lynch added.

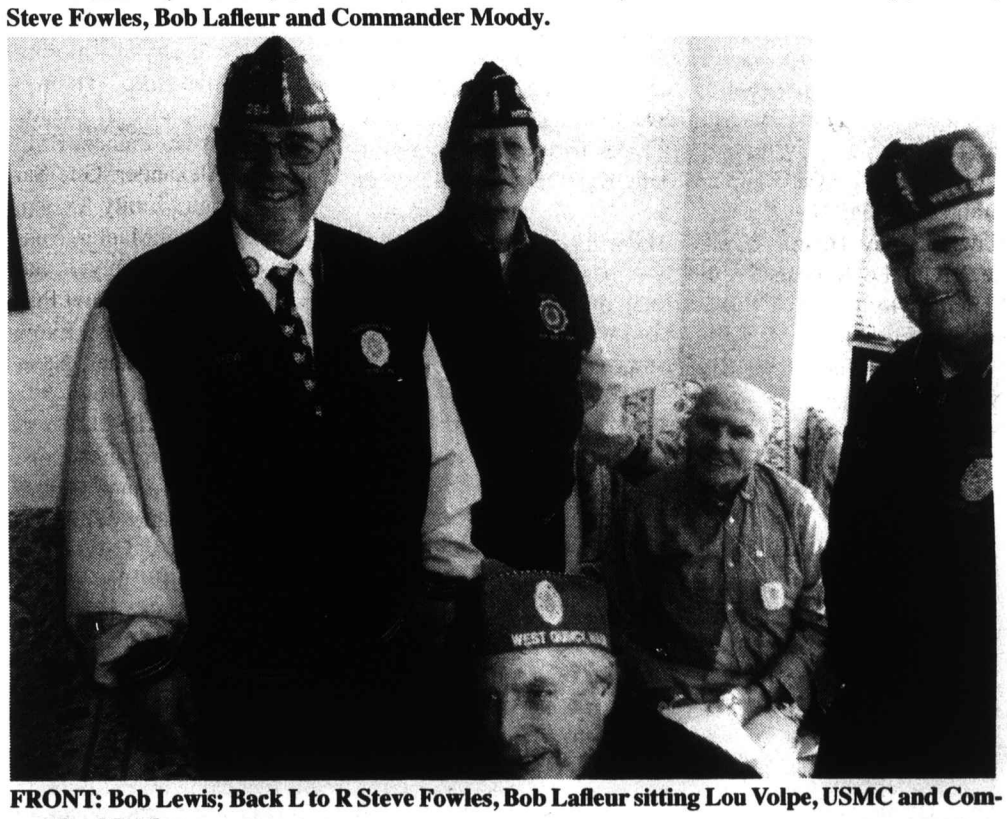

The bill was originally introduced in the House of Representatives by former Congressman William Delahunt. The last authorization extension expired on Dec. 2, 2013. The Adams Memorial Foundation includes members of the Adams family and respected historians in its leadership.

he said the concept was outdated due to the advent of modern cell phones that can take photos, video, and instantly connect to police.

Neighborhood watches are rarely assembled and usually only during a crime spree, he said.

Still, he urged people to call 911 if they notice anything suspicious.

"We ask you to look out your windows," said Minton. "Is there a car that doesn't belong there? Is there somebody sitting in a car? Is there someone who's hanging on the corner?"

"We're never going to charge you for making a false report of a crime," he said. "We're never going to make you be a witness."

Minton said that the police have hired a person to create a Facebook and Twitter account to distribute crime information to the public.

Glennon presented crime statistics for the neighborhood and stressed that numbers were comparatively low and urged residents to not fear for their safety but to remain proactive and report any suspicious activity to police.

"We live in a very, very safe neighborhood," said Glennon who has been the Ward 5 officer for eight months.

According to analysis done between Jan. 1 to Dec. 16, 32 crimes occurred in the Beechwood Knoll neighborhood. The largest percentage of crimes were related to family disturbances. The second most reported crime was larceny. Third was breaking and entering and fourth was assault. The remaining incidents were armed and unarmed robberies followed by larceny of motor vehicles, two reported cases of arson, and one reported case of a home invasion.

Pamela Brennan said that she went to the meeting because she has a teenaged daughter and fears for her safety as she jogs along Wollaston Beach at dusk or while she's walking the neighborhood.

"I had heard about the Andrews break-in with the teenager home and I heard about that shooting over on Willard Street and then I heard about the stabbing recently by ENC and it just made me concerned because I live right in that area," she said. "I'm concerned about crime in the neighborhood."

In October, a shooting on Willow Avenue was linked to gang activity.

Bullets hit a nearby home and car. Nobody was injured.

"I think the statistics were helpful. I think it's nice to know that we have such a large police presence that live in the neighborhood. That always feels good."

A Job Well Done

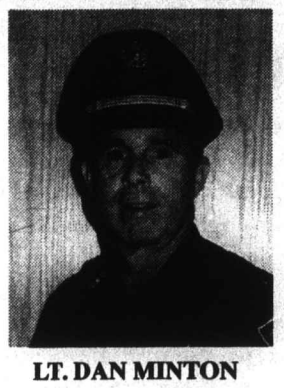

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Tuesday, December 16, 2014, at approximately 8:36 a.m., a BOLO (be on the lookout) for a dark gray 2008 Hyundai Elantra with a Massachusetts license plates, was put out over the airways.

The Massachusetts State Police were looking for this vehicle in regards to a motor vehicle hit and run crash on Route 93 (expressway), where the suspect vehicle struck the rear end of a truck and fled. At approximately 8:57 a.m., Officer James Menz was conducting selective enforcement on Hancock Street and Russell Park (crosswalk violations), when he observed the suspect vehicle fail to stop for a pedestrian (about 5-6 feet away) as it travelled northbound on Hancock Street. The Officer pulled out behind the vehicle, which then turned right onto Whitney Road. After activating his emergency blue lights, the suspect vehicle slowed but continued on into the Santander bank parking lot. At the end of the parking lot, the vehicle stopped and the driver's door opened, so the Officer immediately exited his cruiser and shouted, "Get back in the car." The male operator (and sole occupant) looked right at Officer Menz, then took off running down the alley which leads out to Hancock Street.

The Officer notified Communications that he was in a foot pursuit as he came out to Hancock Street. A witness told the Officer that the suspect fled up Dimmock Street and as the Officer reached this point, another witness told him that the suspect ran into the parking lot behind the commercial building at Hancock and Dimmock Streets. As the Officer reached this location, another witness said that the suspect was running towards the Quincy Center T station. As additional units converged on the area, Officer Menz was advised by yet another witness that the suspect just looped around and ran under a small tunnel which is part of this same building which led back to Dimmock Street.

As Officer Menz rounded the corner, he observed Officer James Parisi shouting out commands for the suspect to stop, but the pursuit continued across Dimmock Street onto the lawn of the Adams Historical Society.

LT. DAN MINTON

The suspect slowed (appeared tired) and faced towards the Officers, who ordered him to get to the ground. The suspect then squared up against the Officers which resulted in Officer Parisi using mace on the suspect's face. The suspect still refused to get down on the ground, forcing the Officers to bring him down and get one handcuff on.

After an additional struggle, the second handcuff was put on. As the Officers waited for Fallon Ambulance to arrive on scene to treat the suspect for mace exposure, the suspect became apologetic and said, "I am sorry - I have a warrant" repeatedly. He said the vehicle owner is his girlfriend (she later came into the QPD lobby and was handed back her Adderall prescription which was in the back seat of the vehicle).

Anti-Crime Officer Mike Brandolini, who stood by the suspect vehicle, reported that in plain view inside the vehicle were 4 small baggies of heroin. These were in very close proximity to where the driver sits. On the front passenger seat was an uncapped needle and caps (appear to be from a small soda bottle). The caps appear to have been used in past drug use (cooking up the heroin). In the center console area, there was also one Gabapentin pill. There was moderate front end damage (near headlights on both sides) to this vehicle, consistent with a crash.

The suspect, a 37 year old Hanover resident, had an outstanding arrest warrant and was additionally charged with, "Possession of Class A Drug, Possession of Class E Drug, Disorderly Conduct, Resisting arrest, Failure to submit to a Police Officer, Operating a Motor Vehicle after License Suspension (suspended 9-8-14 per driver's history), Crosswalk violation and Rejected inspection sticker (safety reasons). Nice Work! (And thanks to all the witnesses who directed the Officers to the suspect)

SCAM: Beware of anyone overpaying you by check for any services you may have provided, especially if you are a business owner. Be sure to question why someone is overpaying you before cashing the check. A scammer's answer may be that they overpaid by mistake and ask that you return the balance to them. They are not asking you to return the check to them. At this point, examine the check, looking at the quality of the paper (or lack of), changes, corrections etc. Even if you don't find any glaring signs, you should be concerned that anytime someone makes overpayment and wants you to send the difference back to you, it is a scam. You'll not only lose your money, you'll also be responsible for the bounced check. Don't deposit the check and don't send any money back to the scammer.

Holiday Safety

We're at the height of the holiday season, and life probably is pretty busy. But as you prepare for get-togethers and dinners, remember to put safety first. Below are a few things to remember that will help you to be prepared for emergencies and keep your household safe:

• Ahead of a family gathering, move toxic cleaning supplies and other chemicals to the garage, up and out of reach of children. Clearly label any unlabeled bottles so that nothing is confused with a food or beverage item.

• Make sure a fire extinguisher is kept in the kitchen, and in any room where a fireplace is lit. It should be visible and not too near the heat source.

• Tape a list of emergency contact numbers near the phone -- not just 911, but the veterinarian, poison control center and family contacts. Put these contacts into your cellphone contacts list as well.

• Keep candles away from combustible items, and place them well out of reach of children.

• Use only non-combustible or flame-retardant decorations on Christmas trees.

• Avoid small decorations that look like candy to children, who could choke on them.

• If using space heaters, follow safety rules closely: don't leave them unattended; don't drape clothes or other items over them; and don't let kids or seniors sit too close.

The National Association of Certified Home Inspectors offers more safety tips at: www.nachi.org/holidaysafety.htm

HOME TIP: Close heating registers in unused rooms and shut the door to keep visitors out. You'll save energy and improve safety during gatherings.

Registry Of Deeds Toy Drive A Success

The Eighth Annual U.S. Marine Corp Reserve Toys for Tots Drive at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds was a great success, said Register Bill O'Donnell.

"Every year people from all walks of life come by the Registry and are so generous. This year we had a great bunch of gifts ranging from stuffed animals to footballs to board games."

O'Donnell said there were a lot of wonderful people dropping by the Registry who wanted to help out by donating presents. The Register said he was especially impressed by two young boys accompanied by their mother who said they were Santa's helpers and wanted to help Santa by donating some wonderful toys.

On hand to deliver the toys with Register O'Donnell were Norfolk County Commissioners John M. Gillis of Quincy and Peter H. Collins of Milton.

O'Donnell expressed his gratitude for the generosity of Registry of Deeds employees, title examiners, attorney's and many Norfolk County residents for contributing to the Toys for Tots Drive.

"I would like to thank everyone for making the event such a wonderful success. Additionally, we are truly honored to partner with the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve in their annual toy drive which helps makes the holiday brighter for millions of children each year," said O'Donnell.

O'Donnell Guest Speaker At Council On Aging

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell was a recent guest speaker at the Quincy Council on Aging.

O'Donnell gave an overview of the Registry, listing the many technological improvements that have allowed the agency to provide quality service to its customers. The improvements include a state of the art computer system, up to date scanning equipment, additional workstations available for public use as well as being able to do on-line Registry research from your home computer.

O'Donnell also spent time discussing with seniors the significant benefits of the Massachusetts Homestead Act, which provides limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000. He warned seniors to be on the lookout for a scam where unethical entities attempt to charge individuals $15 for a Homestead Act form. These Homestead Act forms are available online free of charge on the Registry's website, www.norfolkdeeds.org.

O'Donnell also warned the audience not to fall victim to a national deed scam whereby unscrupulous companies attempt to have homeowners pay an exorbitant fee for a copy of their deed. He noted that the Registry only charges a dollar per page fee and a dollar to mail out the document in contrast to these companies who charge up to $83 for a copy of the deed.

"There's a big difference between charging most consumers $2 to $3 for a copy of their deeds versus $83 especially for those on a fixed income," said O'Donnell.

The register and his staff were able to spend time with attendees providing them with the real-time status of their mortgage discharges and copies of their deed. O'Donnell also noted that all citizens, including seniors, want to know that their government agencies are working for them as intended, and that their tax dollars are being spent wisely. "The technological improvements undertaken by his agency have allowed it to work smarter and more efficiently in performing its core mission of recording and maintaining accurate, safe, secure and accessible land documents," O'Donnell said.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Events could inspire adventurous Lambs looking to make a major career or personal move. But as always, get all the facts before rushing into any sort of deal or commitment.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) What seems to be a great opportunity could cause even usually practical Taureans to ignore their inner caution cues. Best to move carefully to avoid falling into unseen traps.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Need a holiday now that the seasonal festivities are behind you? Good idea. Plan to go someplace wonderful. You'll return refreshed and more than ready for a new challenge.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Progress continues to be made on that pesky workplace problem. Meanwhile, don't assume a personal situation will work itself out. Best to get more involved earlier than later.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Catnaps are definitely recommended for Leos and Leonas who had been going at a hectic pace over the holidays. Adding relaxation time to your schedule helps restore your overdrawn energy reserves.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Sure, some of the new friends you made over the holidays might move out of your life at some point. But at least one might show significant "staying power" with some encouragement.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Encourage family members to join you in supporting a relative who could be facing a difficult emotional challenge in the New Year. Showing your love and concern helps keep his or her hopes up.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) While a long-deferred decision suddenly might take on some urgency after news on a related matter, you still need to weigh all factors carefully before deciding one way or the other.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good time to reassess the earlier plan you made for the New Year. Some elements you felt you could depend on to make it work might no longer carry that assurance.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Forming a renewed connection with a former associate is only the first step toward working out your new plans. Be prepared for problems, and deal with them as soon as they arise.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A romantic situation that was going smoothly not too long ago might take a new turn. Be honest about your feelings before you decide whether to follow it or take another path.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The wise Pisces (that's you, of course) will make sure everyone knows you plan to keep your options open and listen to all sides of the situation before making any decisions.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your honest approach to life and living is always an inspiration for others fortunate enough to know you.

Plymouth South Ices Red Raiders, 4-2

By JOE REARDON

The season is just in its infancy stage, but that didn't make North Quincy's 4-2 loss to Plymouth South Saturday night at the Quincy Youth Arena any less frustrating.

Coming off a tough 2-0 loss against Patriot League opponent Duxbury, the Red Raiders had the lead twice and looked to be on their way to the first win of the season. The Panthers had other ideas, though, and stormed right back as North Quincy had problems all night getting the puck out of its own end. And that's the fly in the ointment that head coach Matt Gibbons will address immediately to his team that has a streak of four consecutive tournament seasons. The season is young, but Gibbons said they're mistakes his veteran club should not be making.

"We were running around a bit in our own end," said Gibbons. "We got nervous and then guys start covering for other guys and that's when it all starts to break down. We've definitely got some issues in our own end that we've got to figure out. We gave up about 12 shots that were point blank.

"We should be better. There's really no excuse for the breakdowns. These guys know what to do. I don't know if it's nerves, I don't know what it is. But it's going to end now."

North Quincy goaltender Kevin Doherty deserved a better fate for the second straight game, turning away 24 Plymouth South shots. Chris Gorman and Tommy Glynn provided the offense for the Raiders with tallies, both of which gave Matt Gibbons' club short-lived leads.

Gibbons knows he has a solid keeper after the graduation of all-star goalie Nolan Green. "He (Doherty) played great," said Gibbons. "Back-to-back games now where he's played great and deserved better. He shouldn't be 0-2."

The Raiders were able to put pressure on the Panthers in the early going and it paid off 2:59 into the first when when Gorman stuffed a backhander behind Panther goaltender Finn McKee for the 1-0 lead.

North Quincy had its chances to extend the lead in the opening 15 minutes, but McKee was solid between the posts. He plucked Mike Finn's wrist shot with his glove from in close with 8:17 left and followed it up with a pad save on a blistering slapshot from just outside of the right faceoff circle by Kevin Mock. Cam White very nearly made it 2-0 with 40.2 seconds left in the period, but McKee managed to get his pad in front of a wrist shot headed for the short side.

The Panthers got on the board 5:41 into the second period when North Quincy let them hang around for too long in the defensive zone. Cian Gulsen went unmarked in front of the Raiders' net and Doherty had no chance when he took a pass from the corner and snapped it home to tie the contest at 1-1. Less than a minute later, however, Glynn grabbed the loose puck in traffic in front of McGee and went top shelf with his shot to take the lead back, 2-1.

The Raiders nearly went up by two tallies with 4:21 remaining, but McKee snatched a wicked wrist short by Andrew Kiley. Plymouth South proceeded to unload a barrage of shots on Doherty, his two best saves coming on consecutive bids by George Thurston and Tyler Glennon.

Plymouth South was able to take advantage of a power play to erase the Raiders' lead once again with 1:05 left in the period as the talented Cullen Gustafson unloaded a low backhander underneath Doherty to knot the score at 2-2.

The third period started with Doherty turning away a pair of Plymouth South shots and McKee robbing Glynn of a second goal when he flashed his glove to pick off a stinging backhander that was heading top shelf.

The Panthers took the lead for good with 2:42 remaining in the second as Ryan Small shoveled a shot underneath Doherty directly in front of the Raiders' net for the 3-2 lead. Matt McDonald had a bid stopped cold by McKee when he gloved a hard wrist shot.

Plymouth South's pressure in the Raiders' end led to its fourth tally with 34.6 seconds left in the period as Gustafson forced a turnover and found the back of the net with a high wrist shot for the 4-2 lead.

"They're a good team," said Gibbons. "We'll see them again because they're in the league now. The guys should put it in the back of their mind. It should burn a bit to lose like that."

North Quincy has a talented roster that also includes Freddy Flynn, Matt McDonald, Matt Hannon, Cam White, Matt Monahan, Joey England, Ryan Moreschi, Austin Lee, Corey Hernandez, Derek Bille, Kevin MacDonald, Sean Farnham and Ethan Herman.

Q/NQ Girls Hockey Bows To WH-Silver Lake

By JOE REARDON

Funning bounces and a seeing-eye puck worked against Quincy/North Quincy in Saturday night's season-opener against a fast-skating Whitman-Hanson/Silver Lake squad at the Quincy Youth Arena.

Q/NQ is looking to put up some numbers in the win column after just two victories last winter. A victory against WH/SL wasn't going to happen though as Q/NQ fell 5-0 to very physical squad.

Q/NQ head coach Stephen Burgio believed the game was much closer than the score would lead one to believe and he saw several quality performances from his players. "Even though the score was 5-0 I don't think it was indicative of the game," Burgio said. "I think they got a couple of strange goals on us and unfortunately we weren't able to put the puck on the net as often as we'd like. I'm not entirely disappointed in the way we played. I do think there's some work that needs to be done."

The good new is that Q/NQ has a great talent between the posts and goaltender Karissa Beal will undoubtedly keep the teams in games this season. Beal was victimized by some bizarre bounces of the puck, but also came up with more than a half dozen saves many high school goalies wouldn't have been able to come up with.

"She made a ton of saves," said Burgio. "They got a couple of weird ones (goals). One had a weird bounce and another one went between her legs. Other than that she played a pretty solid game. If it wasn't for her I don't know what the score would have been."

Riley McLaughlin generated several scoring chances on offense and very nearly gave Q/NQ a 1-0 lead in the first minute, but WH/SL goalie Melissa Crone did a good job getting her blocker to the short side for the save.

WH/SL's first goal came with 8:30 left in the period when Hannah Tracy's soft shot made its way between Beal's pads and in for the 1-0 lead. Tracy made it 2-0 just over a minute later and Q/NQ found itself in an early hole against a team that was getting to the puck quicker and maintaining possession.

Q/NQ showed some pep on offense in the closing minutes of the first. Julia Donovan put on a rush down the left side and put a shot on frame that Crone was able to turn away. Crone also came up with a big stop on Savannah Flynn's slap shot with 3:12 left.

WH/SL did a commendable job backchecking Q/NQ and cutting down on its scoring chances in the second. It was McLaughlin again put together a rush down the ice, only to have Crone snag a blistering wrist shot that was headed for the far side.

Beal continued to turn away WH/SL chances, first turning away a hard wrist shot by Mary Kate Webb with 8:46 left and then making a blocker stop on Colleen Hughes. Beal proceeded to make three consecutive saves on serious scoring d by WH/SL. Julie Whalen very nearly cut the advantage to one with 3:48 left as she made a quick move to cut past a WH/SL defender, but had her wrist shot stopped by Crone.

Q/NQ saw the contest slip away in the third period as WH/SL started the final 15 minutes with 3:22 left on a power play from the second. It took just 1:08 for the advantage stretch to 3-0 as Mel McAleer beat Beal with a hard wrist shot. The score went to 4-0 with 7:45 left on a squib shot by Tracy that took a funny bounce that somehow went over Beal and into the net. Tess Corkery closed out the scoring when her low shot beat Beal to the far side to make it 5-0.

Q/NQ had two of its best scoring chances in the final four minutes. Katy O'Connor wheeled around in front of Crone and snapped a quick shot only to be stopped by a pad save and Donovan was robbed by Crone on a breakaway.

Burgio said that a constant to come out of the Q/NQ camp this winter will be the team's overall agressiveness in every facet of the game. "Part of the plan is to be aggressive and that's something we'll always work on," he said. "We have to be aggressive with the puck and aggressive with the shooting. When you're that aggressive good things tend to happen for you."

"Last year we had a down year, but as the season went on we became more competitive. We were in more games, but the score wasn't always indicative of that. The girls have gottent to become better hockey players. I don't expect this to be a rebuilding season. I expect us to be competitive from the start."

Q/NQ has some definite talent down its lineup that also includes Rebecca Mahan, Emilia Guarente, Kate McGahey, Carly McMorrow, Kelly Donahue, Maura Crump, Madison Hally, Kay O'Connor, Maeve Riordan, Nora McLaughlin, Emily Anglehart, Gretah DiOrio, Alyx Patey, Jordan Curry, Mairead Connolly and Caitlin Dooley.

Quincy/North Quincy Swimming and Diving vs. Scituate Results

Boys Set Two Records In 100-Yard Breaststroke

The Quincy/North Quincy boys (1-1) set two records in the 100-yard breaststroke alone en route to the 82-73 victory over visiting Silver Lake Dec. 18 at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool.

The Silver Lake girls squad defeated Quincy (0-2) and North Quincy (0-2) in two close contests by scores of 58-40 and 50-44, respectively.

QNQ sophomore Thomas Tran (Q) lowered his own record from last year by five seconds swimming 1:06.91in the 100 breaststroke tonight. His teammate and classmate Tommy Zhang (NQ) finished second setting a new North Quincy school standard of 1:07.65, eclipsing the old standard established by James Keyes in 1994. Both swimmers qualified for states. The pair each won an individual event as well with Tran triumphing in the 100 butterfly swimming a personal best 1:01.35, and Zhang taking the 200 individual medley with a 2:14.29 effort.

The 200 freestyle relay contingent of Hou Nam Wong (NQ), Daniel Wong (NQ), Mason Francoeur (Q) and Stiven Kodra (Q) delivered an event-winning time of 1:55.37. Kodra also helped the QNQ cause with a pair of thirds in the 200 IM (2:54.78) and 100 backstroke (1:33.35). Francoeur finished first and second in the 100 freestyle (1:03.91) and 100 backstroke (1:23.14) events, respectively.

Randall Kwong's (NQ) effort of 24.50 in the 50 freestyle earned him first before he placed second in the stroke's longest event, the 500 (6:07.34).

For the girls, Quincy and North Quincy each took its first lead of the meet after the 200 freestyle relay. North Quincy jumped ahead, 35-33, after trailing by as many as 12 points thanks to Linda Phung, Sarah O'Donovan, Brenna Kirby, and Kat Pollastetti who swam 2:11.09 in the 200 relay. The first and third performance by Li Wen Wong (1:19.81) and Sarah O'Donovan (1:22.70) in the 100 breaststroke closed NQ to within two points before they surrendered the meet's final event, 400 freestyle relay, to the visitors. Junior Grace Anderson paced NQ placing second in a pair of events including the 200 IM (3:08.03) and the 100 butterfly (1:20.47).

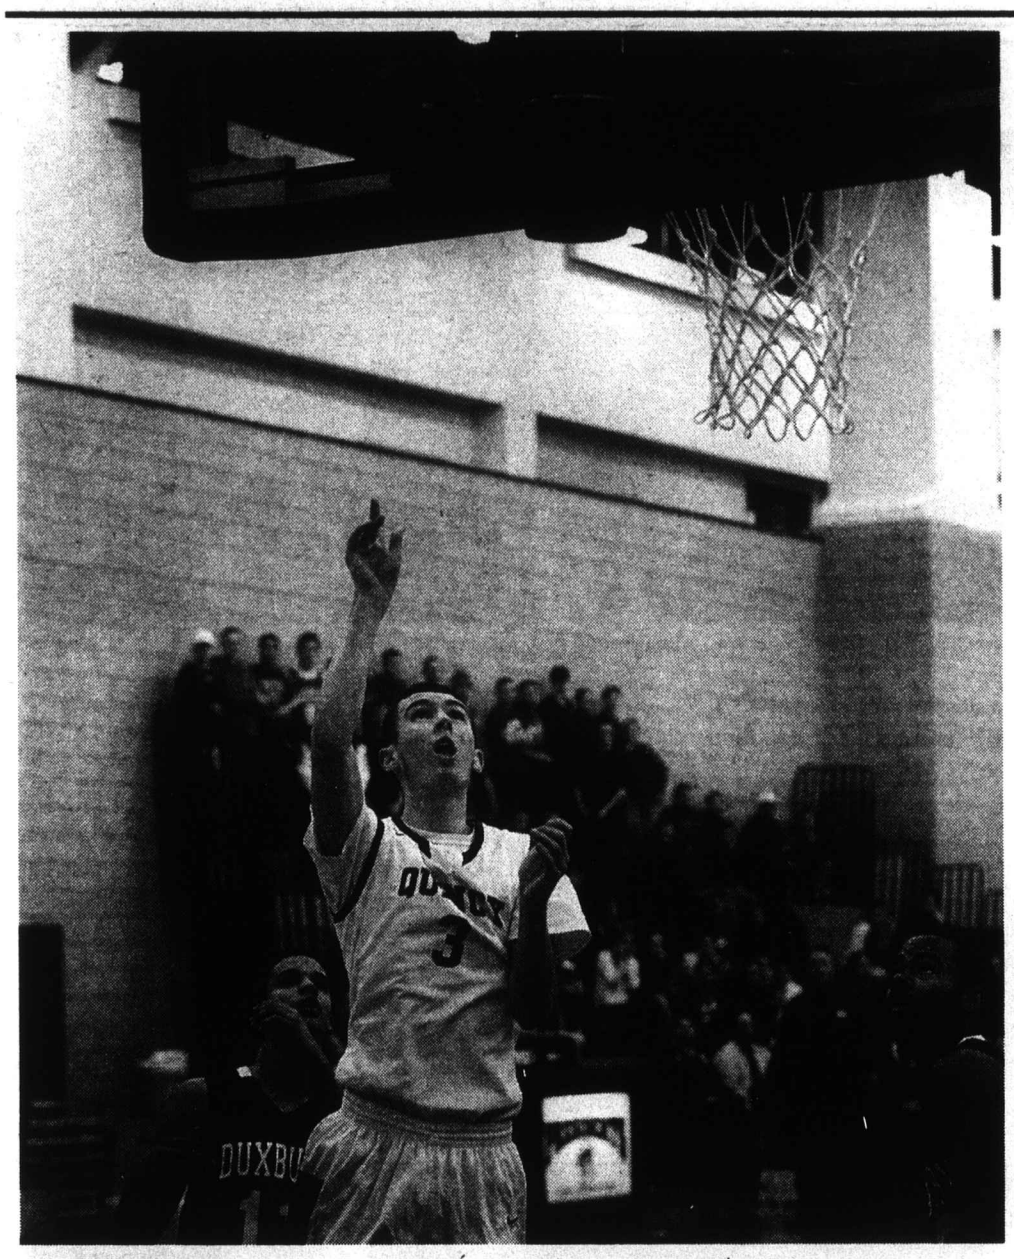

Quincy girls led for the first time all meet, 37-35, on the heels of its event-winning 200 freestyle relay unit comprised of Marina Chafa, Gracie Scuzzarella, Bailee Carey, and Sabrina Rauch. Rauch finished second twice in back-to-back events including the 200 IM (2:33.84) and 50 freestyle (28.85). Carey won the one-meter dive in the second-straight meet and has qualified for States.

"My favorite race was the girls 500 freestyle," said Head Coach Bob McGillicuddy. "That was a momentum changer for both schools and all deserve credit for swimming a little less than one-third of mile. The finishes I saw brought a smile to my face!"

In that race, Danielle O'Driscoll (NQ) finished strong earning the event's low time of 7:26.09. Her teammate Kat Pollastetti (NQ) inched out Quincy competitor Meg Caggiano by six one-hundreths of a second, finishing 7:30.44 and 7:30.50, respectively.

The QNQ teams will host Pembroke Tuesday, Jan. 6 at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool. Meet starts at 4 p.m.

On Thursday, Jan. 8, Quincy and North Quincy girls squads square off in front of a homecoming crowd which all former swimmers and divers are welcome to attend.

SENIOR FORWARD Colin Evans (#3) scores two of his team-high 17 points as the Presidents defeated Duxbury 65-42 in a a Patriot League match-up last Friday night at QHS.

Quincy Smothers Dragons

By BILL GRIFFIN

They will surely play better, but in the first week of their season of great expectations, Quincy showed flashes of offense, defense, and hard-earned varsity experience which will serve the Presidents well in what they hope is a ride that stretches into early March.

Against Duxbury, it was the defense. Quincy put a clamp on the game with a wipeout 22-5 burst in the third period, J.T. Bain jumpstarted the offense in a decisive stretch which opened up the lead, and Colin Evans supplied another night of steady scoring with 17 points as the Presidents ran away with a 65-42 Patriot League win Friday night at the Quincy High gym.

In other action last week against Hanover, it was the offense. Evans poured in 20 and Quincy placed five players in double figures in an 80-72 win. Drew Myers (18), Bain (13), James Lam (12) and Tyler Beach (12) all contributed to the balanced victory over the Indians.

"I don't think we've played a consistent game from start to finish, but we have played well in stretches," said coach Dave Parry. "Tonight against Duxbury, I thought our defense was better in the second half, and we did a better job of finishing our offensive chances."

The Presidents were up 27-20 at the half, and the defense took over the game in the third. The fullcourt trap churned out turnovers and Quincy translated them into breakout points. The halfcourt man-to-man gave few open looks and forced a fistful of missed, contested shots near the hoop. When Quincy could run off the the defense, the Presidents ran. When they couldn't, they set up and ran a good set offense.

The most telling number was easy to find. Duxbury is a good team. Quincy held them to 25 points through three quarters.

"In the third period, we forced misses and made them work for what they got," said Parry. "I liked our effort both on the press and in the halfcourt man-to-man."

Bain was at the center of the 14-2 run over the final 2:40 of the third which produced a 49-25 lead. He hit a hook, sent away Evans for a fast-break layup, got Myers to the line with a beauty of a backdoor pass, set up Evans on another sharp cut to the basket, beat his man cleanly on a drive and hit two free throws after he stole the ball and forced a foul. That's 12 points he scored or set up in less than two minutes. Not bad.

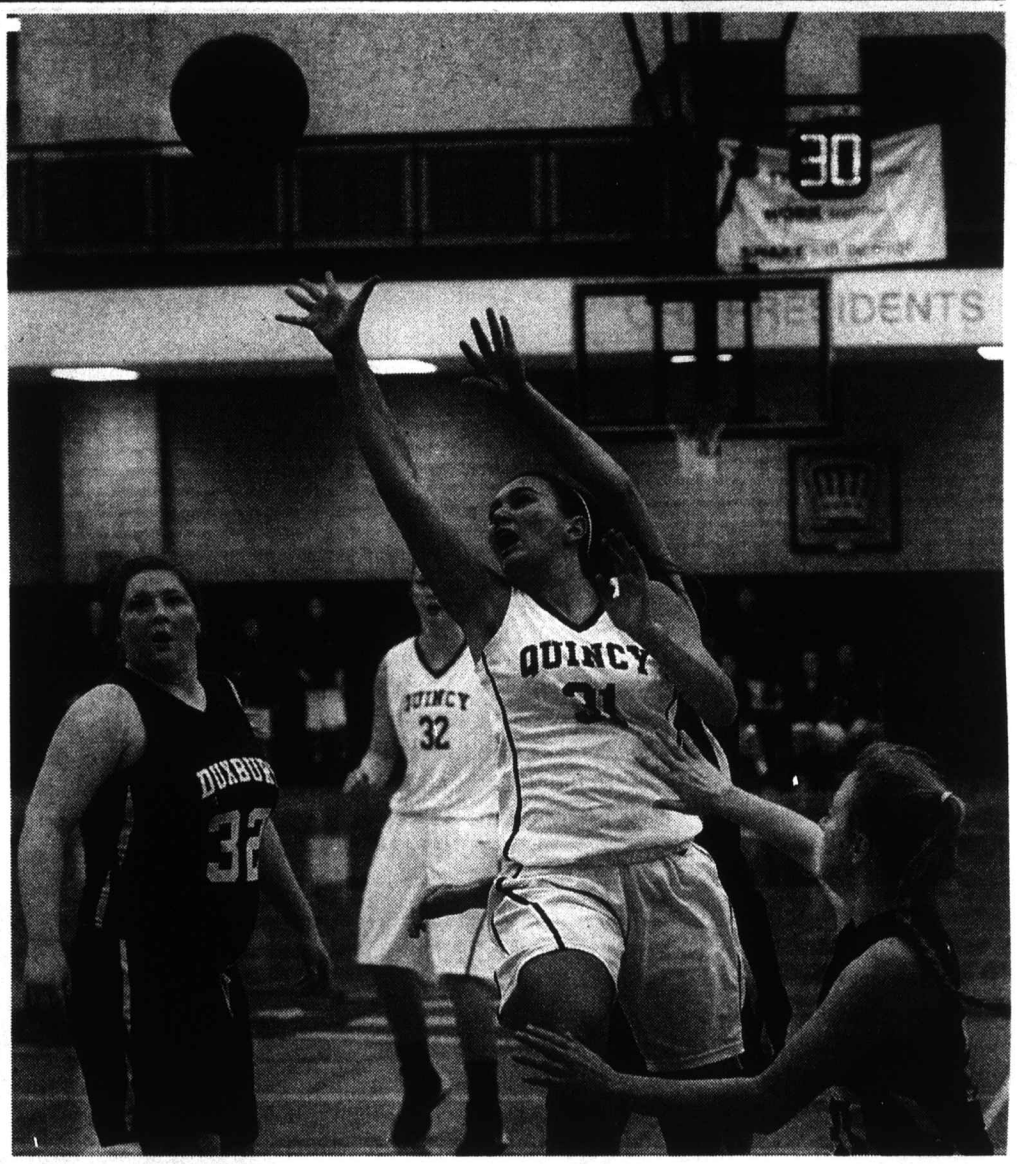

"We told J.T. at the half that we were going to keep running our stuff to him and sooner or later, his shots would fall. We told him to put it off the glass a little more softly, and I think that helped," said Parry.

Evans, who had 37 points in two games, was the measure of consistency. He stroked his jumper, moved well to the basket and seemed to have added a large dose of confidence to his game from last winter. Add him into the offensive mix with Myers' jump shot, Lam's penetration, and Bain's work around the basket, and the result is an offense which will seriously challenge most opponents.

"Colin has been great," said Parry. "He's got his shot back. He worked hard on it over the summer, and he is shooting it with confidence."

It is easy to understand the high hopes which surround this team. Evans, Lam, Bain, and Myers are seniors who have started for three years on varsity. They have seen it all. They have made the tournament the last two years. They have played the biggest of games against North. Toss is another senior at the point in Beach,

JUNIOR GUARD Gabriela Jerahian (#31) tosses in a buzzer-beater at the end of the first half to knot the score at 22-22. Jerahian led the Presidents with 14 points but Quincy bowed to Duxbury, 44-38 last Friday night at QHS.

Presidents Show Promise Against Top League Foes

By BILL GRIFFIN

They played the best and they played them in the first week of the season.

Some teams gently open with a pair of easy touches, but Quincy's girls basketball team began by facing the two defending divisional champions of the Patriot League. It is unlikely to get any more difficult.

Not only did Quincy play and play well, not only did the Presidents post an impressive victory, but they showed signs of promise of what should be a fine winter heading towards a trip to the tournament after a one-year absence.

Friday night, Quincy hosted Duxbury, the defending Keenan Division champion who returns five starters from last year's club which ran 20 straight wins and won the Division 2 South Sectional title in the Garden.

The Presidents were tied at the half and well within range until the closing buzzer thanks to relentless defense, a powerful inside performance from junior Nicole Jorgensen and an excellent all-around floor game from freshman guard Liana Cunningham.

Duxbury survived, 44-38 on the strength of an 11-4 run in the third period. Earlier in the week, Gabby Jerahian scored 19 points and Jorgensen added 15 in a 56-50 win over Hanover who shared the Fisher Division crown with North Quincy and advanced to the sectional quarterfinals last year.

The bottom line? Two quality efforts against two quality teams. Not only did Quincy play the best, Quincy showed it belonged.

"We knew that we would play two of our toughest games in the first week of the season and I'm proud of the way the girls responded and competed. In both games, they came ready to play and we played two very

IMPROVING ATHLETIC PERFORMANCE

When joint dysfunction impedes athletic performance, chiropractic treatment may help overcome the problem(s). This approach is often very useful when athletes experience limited range of motion due to sprains, strains, or overuse. Once the restriction is detected, the chiropractor will exert slight force on various segments of the spine, followed by an adjustment. This latter action involves pressing more forcefully in the direction of the restriction in an effort to gently realign and mobilize the spine, thereby releasing tightness. Aside from seeking out chiropractic help in times of crisis, many athletes practice preventive maintenance to make sure that they are not overusing or reinjuring their bodies or developing new joint restrictions that might compromise mobility.

Chiropractic is a healing art based on the scientific fact that your nervous system controls the function of virtually every cell, tissue, organ, and system of your body. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, our mission is to improve quality of life by facilitating healing in a compassionate, caring and friendly environment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

If I Could Give One Gift This Holiday Season . . .

Fifth grade students in Quincy's public schools and the Quincy Catholic Academy were invited again this year to write the answer to one question for this special issue of The Quincy Sun.

We want to thank Erin Perkins, Curriculum Coordinator for Pre-Kindergarten, Literacy, Title I, and Gifted/Talented Programs for coordinating the public schools' participation and the principals and classroom teachers of those schools.

We also thank Catherine Cameron, principal of the Quincy Catholic Academy, for her assistance, too.

Quirk Customers, Employees Collect Hundreds Of Toys For Tots

By SCOTT JACKSON

Customers and employees of Quirk Auto Dealers' donated hundreds of new children's toys this year to the Toys For Tots Foundation.

Representatives from the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve picked up the new toys from Quirk Ford, located on Southern Artery, on Dec. 19. The new toys – including bicycles, board games, puzzles, footballs, basketballs, stuffed animals, dolls, action figures, and toy cars – were donated by the customers and employees at Quirk's 14 locations on the South Shore and beyond.

This is the sixth year Quirk has collected toys for the Toys For Tots Foundation. More than 3,000 toys had been collected during the previous five years. Mike Quirk, general manager of Quirk Ford, said several hundred toys were collected this year. The toys were enough to fill three bins as well as the bed of a Ford F-150 pickup.

Correction

BID-Milton Awarded $249,000 Health Care Workforce Transformation Grant

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton (BID-Milton) recently was awarded a $249,000 Health Care Workforce Transformation Grant through a partnership with Blue Hills Regional Technical School and the South Shore Workforce Investment Board (SSWIB).

The grant will be used to support several programs that will help train health care providers; enhance patient services, particularly geriatric care; and reduce costs. The programs will also prepare health care workers for the changing health care landscape. The grant is administered by the Commonwealth Corporation under the Executive Office of Labor and Workforce Development.

Initiatives at BID-Milton funded by the grant will include development of a geriatric certified nurse assistant (CNA) and phlebotomy training program in collaboration with Blue Hills Regional Technical School and an associated career ladder for current CNA staff at the hospital. Blue Hills Regional Technical School CNA students will receive on-site education at BID-Milton focused on the care of elders beginning next September. This educational partnership will enhance the school's current Nursing Assistant Curriculum.

Additionally the funds will assist in leadership training for BID-Milton nurse educators to support the hospital in obtaining NICHE (Nurses Improving Care for Health system Elders) certification and enhancing the quality of care provided to the elder population.

Grant monies will also help with the purchase of a new, state-of-the-art patient simulator mannequin for the hospital. Use of a high-quality patient simulator enables hospital staff and nursing students to train and further develop clinical skills in an interactive, experiential manner.

"We are very grateful to the South Shore Workforce Investment Board and Blue Hills Regional Technical School for partnering with the hospital to secure this substantial and needed grant," said Peter Healy, president and CEO of BID-Milton. "This important grant will provide valuable resources for the hospital to remain innovative in how it approaches training healthcare workers and providing care."

BID-Milton's Vice President of Nursing Lynn Cronin, MSN, RN, added: "In addition to enhancing the skills of certified nursing assistants and phlebotomy staff, this grant will enable the hospital to become a NICHE certified hospital for the benefit of our elderly patients."

In addition, the SSWIB, through the Quincy and Plymouth Career Centers, will conduct outreach to displaced and at-risk CNAs and offer the opportunity to receive advanced geriatric skills to bring to future employers. The SSWIB will also provide displaced / at risk CNA's with resume development, cover letter writing skills, career coaching and interviewing skills via mock interviews to allow participants to stand out to potential employers.

The Healthcare Workforce Transformation Fund was created in 2012 as part of Massachusetts cost containment legislation. The grants enable health care providers to assess the skills of their workforce, the quantity and quality of existing training or education programs and their current relevance. These funds also assist providers toward developing a plan to deliver new training and education programs to their current workers. In partnership with the state's educational institutions, this fund allows health care providers to determine the need for improving or creating programs that will attract skilled future workers.

The ongoing commitment to The Healthcare Workforce Transformation Grants reflects the Patrick Administration's effort to encourage economic growth by supporting innovation in the Commonwealth's health care industry. By providing resources to develop new and innovative training and education programs, Massachusetts will continue to solidify its place as a leader in health care modernization and improvement.

BID-Milton is a non-profit, 88-bed acute care community hospital which affiliated with Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in 2012. The hospital has 750 employees and an active medical staff of 350 physicians. In addition to a full-service Emergency Department, the hospital offers a wide array of inpatient, outpatient and ancillary healthcare services. Currently BID-Milton is rated as a "top-tier" hospital for providing high quality care at a low cost.

The South Shore Workforce Investment Board (SSWIB), comprised of private and public sector decision makers, is responsible for oversight of local workforce funding. The Board creates linkages to local employers, educational institutions, and community partners and participates in the development of strategic, market driven, workforce goals of the South Shore region (22 cities and towns).

BID-Milton is an active member of the SSWIB and the SSWIB has enjoyed a long history (nearly a decade) of partnering with BID-Milton for the Summer YouthWorks program. The partnership developed for this proposal provides an opportunity to build on the work that BID-Milton has done with each of these partners and to jointly develop the region's capacity to produce the CNA workforce that will be required to meet the changing needs of patients in an environment requiring cost containment.

Red Raiders Handle Hanover, 66-56

NORTH QUINCY'S Jackie Chen drives to the basket for two of his 18 points in the Red Raiders' 66-56 win over Hanover last Friday night. Chen scored 13 of North Quincy's 30 first quarter points.

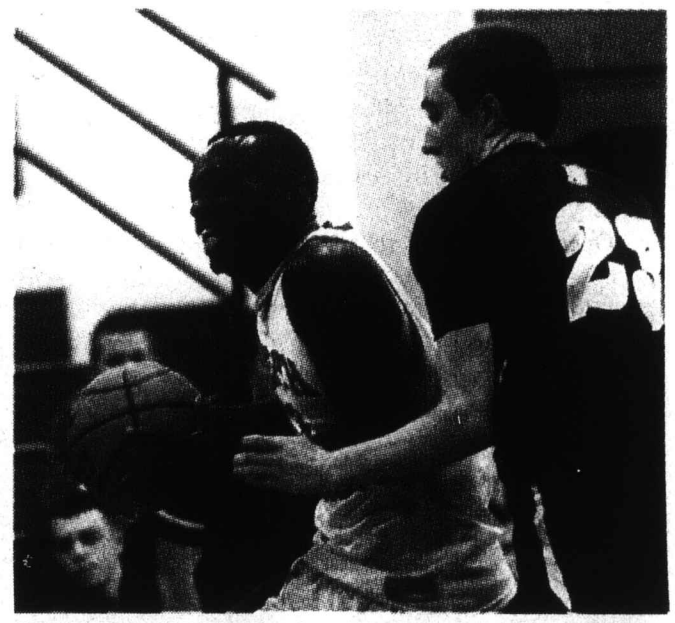

HANOVER INDIANS cut North's 20-plus point lead down to eight points in the second half. With good defense, the Raiders held on for a 66-56 win. Here Hanover's John Carroll is met at the basket by North's Matt Gerakis (21), Will Ortiz (10) and Conor Pound (31).

who played with all four of them through youth leagues, and there is a a fine blend of experience and talent.

"We know about all the expectations around us. That's the media. What we have to do is shut it all out and just concentrate on playing good basketball," said Parry. "We scrimmaged BC High and Catholic Memorial to get the kids ready to play against the best. We think we can be capable of playing with anyone before the season is over."

There is also depth, size and balance here. Quincy used 12 players against Duxbury, 10 before halftime when the score was close. Junior guard Quinlan Evans looked especially good off the bench. The roster lists 12 players at six-feet or above. The last time Quincy had that kind of size was before the invention of the wheel. Just like Hanover, the five starters were bunched together in the scoring column. Bain (11), Lam (10), Beach (9) and Myers (8) all shared good offensive looks.

"We're trying to build depth as we go and we have a good mix of seniors and underclassmen," said Parry. "The size is good. I can't remember when we have that kind of size at Quincy."

Kevin Williams (3), Quinlan Evans (3), Scott Mele (2) and Carl Zapata (2) cracked the scoring column for the Presidents.

good teams," said coach Jeff Bretsch.

Jorgensen (13 points, 11 rebounds, seven blocks) keynoted the defensive effort against Duxbury by protecting the bucket against the Dragons' two talented big players, Molly Quilty and Catherine Harrison. Sarah Gibbons and Julianna Kane helped close the hoop for Quincy, but it was Jorgensen who not only handled two dangerous inside players, but also switched and helped her mates when Duxbury penetrated to the basket.

"I thought our defense played very well," said Bretsch. "Nicole worked well against both of their big players. She protected the lane and she played disciplined basketball. She knew we couldn't afford to have her in foul trouble."

Cunninghan was terrific. She chased around Duxbury's Maddie Foote, who might be the best player in the league, for most of the night. Foote needed picks and double picks to spring her free from Cunningham for her 20 points. Cunningham gave nothing easy. She also ran the offense with poise and confidence. She handled well with both hands and got the ball where it belonged. For a freshman point guard against one of the best teams on the South Shore, it was something special.

"She's going to be a special player," said Bretsch. "It's a big jump jump from eighth grade to the varsity level, but Liana has the skill and confidence. As the season goes on, you'll see her turn some of the penetration she had tonight into baskets. She's a smart player and she gave us energy tonight."

Jerahian had 14 to lead Quincy for the second straight game. She had 33 points in two games. She drained three threes, but she was at her best when she put the ball on the floor and went to the bucket. She banked home an across-the-body drive while moving to her left to tie the score at 22-22 at intermission. She also worked against Jackie Sullivan, who is one the top defenders in the league, and played through a hip injury she suffered in the third period.

"Sullivan is a very good defender. I thought Gabby was at her best tonight when she drove. She has an excellent first step," said Bretsch.

It was Duxbury's defense which decided it. The Dragons are long, tall, and fast, three helpful ingredients for a defense which can take over a game. Duxbury held the Presidents to four points in the third period and built a 33-26 lead which held up until the end.

The game never got away from Quincy, but the Presidents couldn't dent Duxbury for that one big run they needed.

"Duxbury's defense is terrific. They have all the physical skills to play good defense, and they have a lot of experience playing together on varsity as well," said Bretsch.

Ariana Paulo had a big hoop for the Presidents near the end of the first half. Alyssa Camara passed the ball well and played good defense. Jill Mulvaney, who was outstanding in the Hanover win, added a good defensive effort for Quincy.

"I think what pleased me most over the first two games was the composure of our guards," said Bretsch. "We really have four kids with point-guard skills in Liana, Jill, Alyssa and Gabby. I think they'll get us good inside looks this year."

Quincy hosts Hull December 29 and will also host a Holiday Tourney December 30.

Quincy Center, QMC Among Year's Top Stories

2014 The Year In Review

By SCOTT JACKSON

The planned redevelopment of Quincy Center continued to make headlines in 2014, as the city said goodbye to its master downtown developer at the beginning of the year, began an $8 million roadway project in the spring, and welcomed a new developer with plans for one parcel on Hancock Street in the fall.

In February, Mayor Thomas Koch formally put developer Street-Works on notice after the firm failed to meet key benchmarks in its agreement with the city; that agreement was terminated one month later. In April, the $8 million, 18-month Adams Green roadway improvement project began. Over the summer, Koch retained the services of Redgate Real Estate Advisors, a Boston-based company to consult the city on development moving forward. And in November, the Quincy Mutual Group and Gate Residential unveiled plans for a 169-unit, mixed use development in the 1400 block of Hancock Street, with a second, larger phase planned nearby.

Not far from the downtown, one longtime city institution closed its doors. Steward Health Care announced in November plans to close the 124-year-old Quincy Medical Center at year's end, while offering to keep an emergency facility in the city through 2015.

The city completed renovations of the Coddington School building in August, providing a new home for the School, Planning, and IT Departments. Renovations at Old City Hall were delayed, however, after copper thieves sparked a three-alarm fire inside the historic building in September.

With the new Central Middle School open, the city found a buyer for the old building. City and school officials also began plans to replace the aging Sterling Middle School with a new facility sited nearby. Plans to renovate North Quincy's Teel Field were approved by the City Council, and the city began purchasing nearby homes to make way for the project.

Unlike 2012 and 2013, no major tropical storms or nor'easters struck Quincy. Flooding, however, was on the minds of many residents as the federal government unveiled new flood plain maps that directly affected 4,100 property owners.

The city's sports teams continued to excel in 2014. North Quincy High's boys basketball team came within one game of an undefeated regular season; in postseason play, the Red Raiders advanced to the Div. 1 sectional finals before bowing out. Quincy High's football team put together its first eight-win season since 1990, capped off by the school's third straight win on Thanksgiving Day.

Here is a month-by-month retrospect of the major stories that took place in Quincy during 2014.

JANUARY

In his fourth inaugural address, Mayor Thomas Koch eschewed tradition by highlighting the deeds of individuals and community groups within the city instead of focusing on policy initiatives for the next two years.

"A city is more than bricks and mortar, more than infrastructure. A city is made a community by its people, people that care deeply about their neighbors. We come together as a people of different faiths, cultures, economic and social backgrounds, but we come together under God as Americans and all part of the same human family," the mayor said during his 18-minute long speech before a standing-room-only-crowd in Central Middle School's auditorium.

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH was sworn in to a fourth term by City Clerk Joseph Shea at inauguration ceremonies in January at Central Middle School. With Koch as he is administered the oath of office are members of his family (from left) son Cornelius, wife Christine, daughter Abigail and son Tom, Jr. Also sworn in were nine city councillors – all incumbents re-elected last November – and three school committee members: incumbents Barbara Isola and Anne Mahoney and new member Noel DiBona. At the inauguration, Councillor Joseph Finn was elected City Council President and School Committeewoman Kathy Hubley was sworn in as committee Vice Chairwoman.

"I'm going to speak about a number of individuals and organizations that represent the very best of our community and stand as a great testament to that human capital, which gives me such great faith that our best days as a city lie ahead of us."

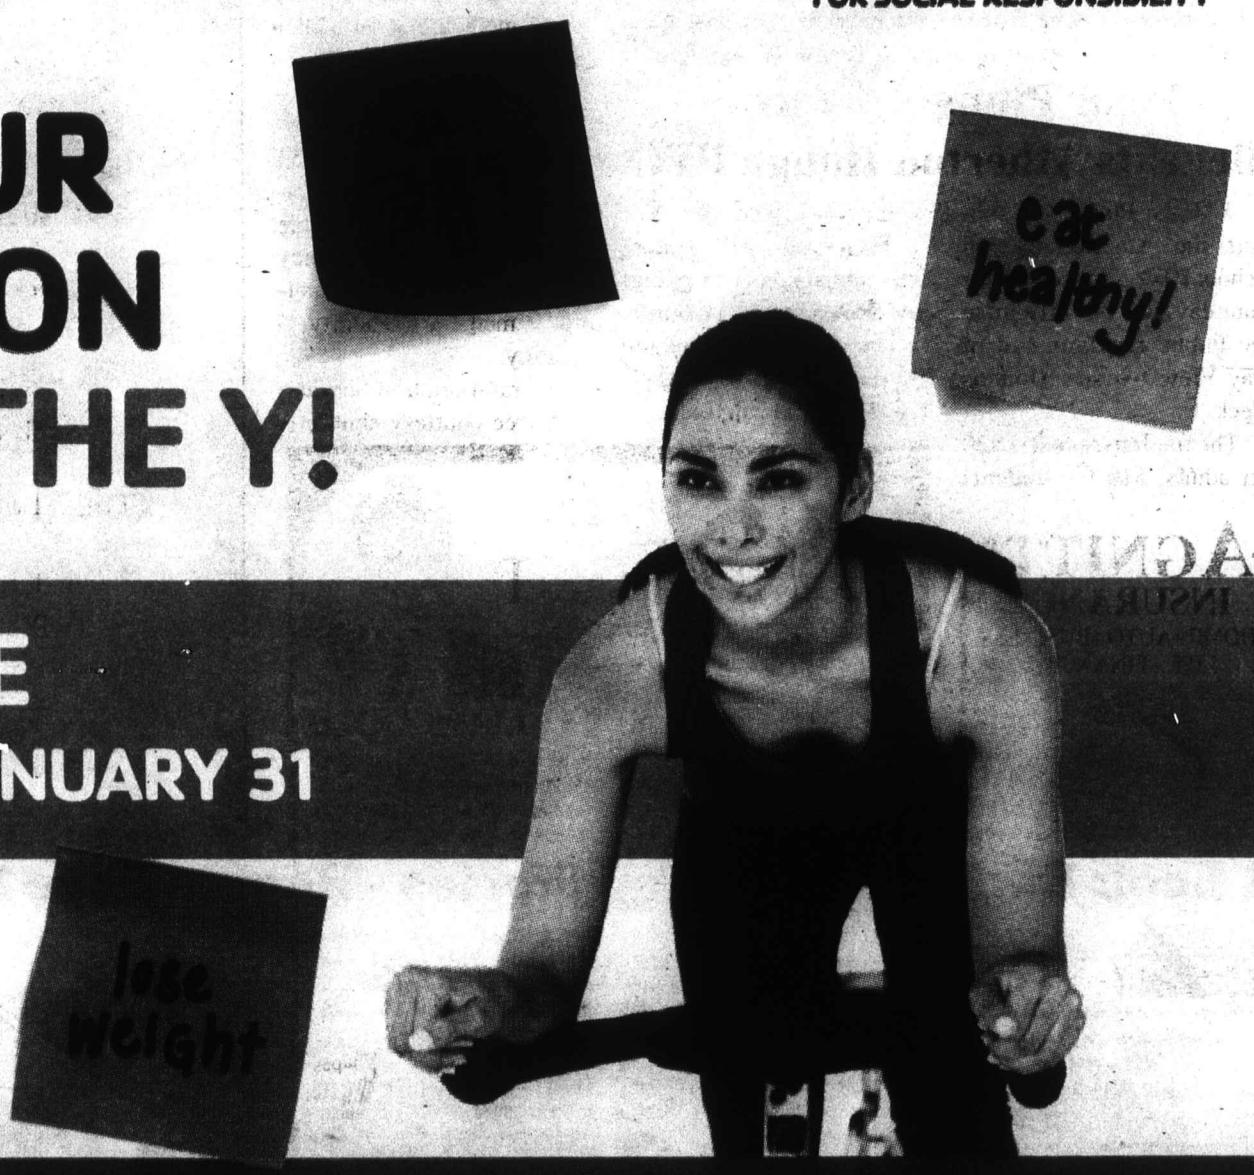

Councillor Joseph Finn was chosen to serve as the City Council president by his colleagues. Finn, who had been elected to his seventh term as an at-large councillor the previous November, vowed to be a persistent advocate for information and resources his colleagues would need to make decisions.

Koch Expects More Downtown Development

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch believes 2015 will be an exciting year for the city, particularly Quincy Center, as he anticipates several redevelopment projects commencing in the new year.

One project, the West of Chestnut Development proposed by Quincy Mutual and Gate Residential, will go before the Planning Board for approval on Jan. 21. The mayor, in a recent interview, said he expects more developers to begin new projects in Quincy Center within the year.

"I think 2015 is going to be an extremely exciting year. In addition to what's going on with Quincy Mutual, there are going to be a number of other projects that are going to be announced and get underway in 2015. We're truly back on track in so many ways with the downtown," Koch said.

"I know that it's complex...but we haven't let up. We've been working it, and working it, and working very hard. And the reality is Hannon Parkway is done. Town Brook is moved. We're doing the traffic projects on this end. We continue to plan the Adams Green. So we're moving the infrastructure forward and by doing that the activity is still here from developers and investors. They want to be here. The market is hot right now for residential in Quincy. We're going to take full advantage of that market over the next 12 to 18 months."

Among the sites developers may be targeting are the city-owned Hancock Lot and Ross Parking Garage. Koch said the city will be looking to find developers for those parcels; a forthcoming report from Redgate Real Estate advisors will outline what the city should do with those lots and how to replace parking spaces lost by selling them.

"We're going to be looking at that. As part of the Redgate report and discussions we've had with them, I do expect there will be disposition of land on both sides of Hancock Street, which will create additional development, recognizing we have to meet our infra-

DIAMONDS SET IN YELLOW GOLD

While platinum certainly remains a favorite precious metal for diamond rings, yellow gold is making a strong comeback. For some time now, brides have been opting for the traditional style of a yellow gold engagement ring, which is part of a greater movement towards yellow gold. Matching yellow gold with diamonds speaks of a softness and touch that harks back to the 19th century, which is remembered as a more romantic era. Yellow gold and diamonds are also a classic pairing that represents tradition and recalls a bygone era of effortless glamour. Platinum and white gold are likely to remain the top choices for engagement rings, but there will always be a place for diamonds set in yellow gold.

Select the perfect jewelry to suit your taste at our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. Our diamond collection contains virtually any shape and size imaginable. We maintain, along with three other jewelers, a permanent presence in the diamond centers of the world. This established relationship affords us the ability to bring you all the qualities, sizes, and shapes at value prices. We also feature a wonderful selection of bracelets, brooches, rings, necklaces, pendants, and watches. Contact us at 617-773-3636 to learn more.

Andrew Cook Promoted To Sea Cadets Chief Petty Officer

By SCOTT JACKSON

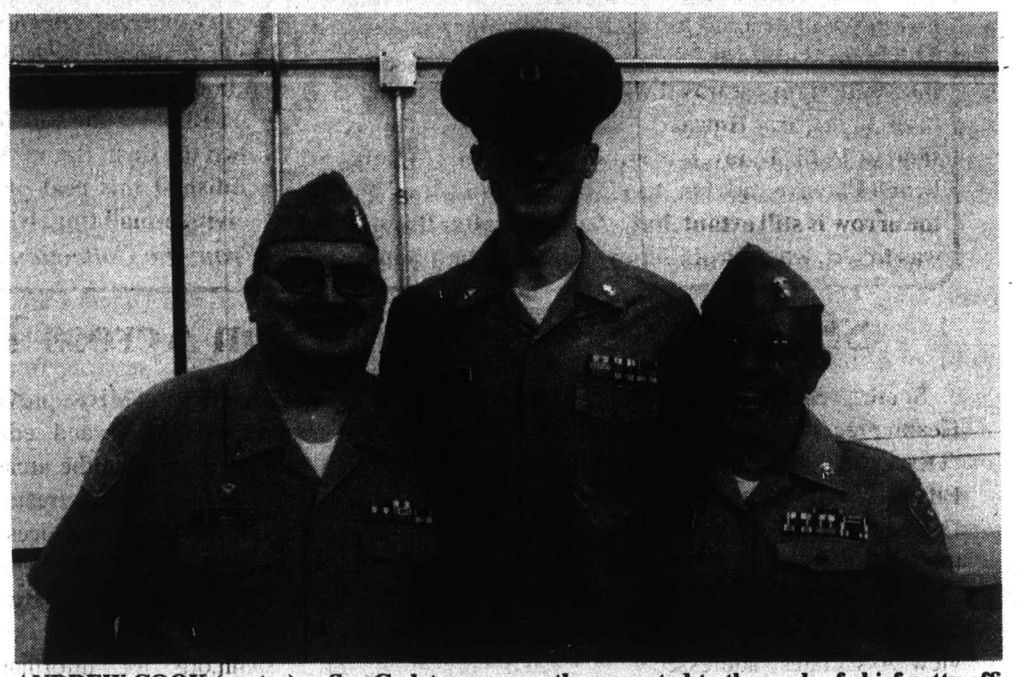

Andrew Cook, a senior at Quincy High School, was recently promoted to the highest rank of the U.S. Naval Sea Cadets.

Cook was formally promoted to the rank of chief petty officer, the highest of the Sea Cadet's seven ranks, during a ceremony on Nov. 15. Cook is a member of Squadron 7-Zulu/TS Wasp, which meets monthly at the Naval Operations Support Center Quincy on Sea Street.

"It's a military based program for kids between the ages of 12 and 18," Cook said of the Sea Cadet program. "It's kind of like a safe haven for kids to express themselves and learn how to work together as a team and how to become leaders in today's world."

Cook, a Wollaston resident, was inspired to join the program after a recruiter visited Boston College High School. Cook, who would transfer to Quincy High sophomore year, fell in love with the program after attending meetings.

"He came down to talk to all the younger kids to tell us about it and see if we were interested," Cook recalled. "Me and my friend were like, 'wow this is awesome.' He showed us pictures of like kids in uniforms with the rifles and everything like that and we were like 'that's awesome, we have to come see it.' So we showed up for the first couple months and we fell in love with it."

ANDREW COOK (center), a Sea Cadet, was recently promoted to the rank of chief petty officer. That position is the highest rank in the Sea Cadet program. Pictured with him are the squadron's commanding officer, LTJG Bill Dockham (right), and executive officer LTJG Ruth Govoni.

Cook's squadron has grown exponentially since he first joined, going from a handful of members to several dozen.

"We've grown a lot since I first joined. We have like 48 or 50 [members]. It's awesome. When I first joined there were like five kids – there were five kids total and that was it. The senior cadet staff, like myself and a couple other kids who have been there for a while, we've been getting on kids about recruiting," Cook said.

"It's sticking with people. That's awesome. I love it."

Cook, along with the rest of the squadron, helps out each year with the annual Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club, which allows disabled veterans the chance to spend a day on the water fishing. The Sea Cadets also take part in many civic activities, such as the annual Memorial Day, Veterans Day, and Christmas parades.

Promotion through the ranks of the Sea Cadets is based on examinations and 'time-in' requirements. Cook said rising through the ranks helped him learn more about leadership.

"As you progress you learn more about how to be a leader and how to effectively lead a group of people to achieve a goal. To become chief petty officer, you not only have to do all these correspondence courses and you have to be in the program a certain amount of time, you have to prove to your commanding officer you have what it takes to be in charge," he explained.

"There is a saying that if you have a question, ask the chief. You have got to know your stuff. You've got to know everything. You have to be able to interact with people really well, because you're it. You're the person making sure everything runs smoothly."

Cook said he was proud to have been able to make it to top rank.

"It was amazing. It's such a great feeling. Something I'd worked for for five, six years. Just constantly saying, 'one day I'm going to be wearing those anchors. I'll be wearing those khakis,'" Cook said, referring to the insignia and uniform worn by chief petty officers.

"I earned it and I worked really hard for it, so I'm proud of myself."

Making the moment even better for Cook, his 12-year-old brother, Will, was the one who pinned him during the ceremony.

"I like to be the perfect big brother," he explained. "I'm always trying to set a good example for him. I want him to have a good role model and to be able to say 'what would my brother do?'"

A member of Quincy High's football team, Cook plans to attend college after graduation; he hopes to join the military after that. Cook has already been accepted into the Citadel in South Carolina and he is also looking to apply to Norwich University in Vermont as well as the Massachusetts Maritime Academy and the Maine Maritime Academy.

MOVA deserves credit for recognizing the complexity and importance of these cases and making this kind of support available."

Services will be provided through the Victim Witness Program of the District Attorney's Office. For more information, call 781-830-4800 or visit www.mass.gov/NofolkDA.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1927 POSTCARD is a view of East Elm Avenue looking south from Quincy Shore Drive in Wollaston. This scene is quite different today. On the left corner with the white signpost was the Beach Lodge Tea Room that became the first Howard Johnson's roadside ice cream shop in 1928. Today, it is home to the DCR's Wollaston Beach Playground. On the right, the second house with the arrow is still extant, but a few years after this picture was taken, when Prohibition ended, the first house was demolished to make room for The Anchor Inn, a lounge and restaurant later known as The Flamingo. Today, that site is home to the DCR's bathhouse and life guard station. The dark stripe down the middle of the unpaved East Elm Avenue was from oil the city sprayed to keep down the dust. Henry A. Fink, a Quincy photographer, published this real photo postcard. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

SSMH Presents 'Depression Across The Lifespan'

South Shore Mental Health recently presented "Depression across the Lifespan" at Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital – Milton.

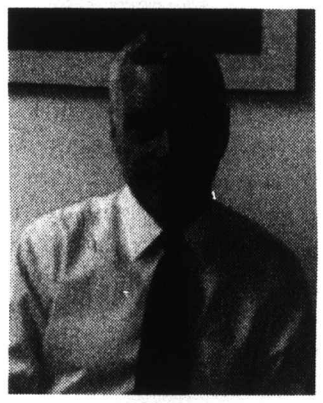

Dr. Philip Quinn, of South Shore Mental Health's Bayview Associates, addressed a group of community members assembled in the Nangeroni Education Center at Beth Israel Deaconess Milton Hospital to learn more about depression.

Sponsored by the hospital as part of its ongoing community education series, Dr. Quinn's presentation focused on recognizing the warning signs and symptoms of depression and knowing when, where, and how to seek treatment for people of all ages.

"Depression is a mental illness that doesn't discriminate," said Harry Shulman, SSMH President and CEO. "It's also an illness that can be treated very effectively. Understanding that depression is not a personal flaw, but rather a mental illness that—like physical illness—requires diagnosis, is an important step toward seeking treatment. The sooner we acknowledge depression and its early warning signs, the better prepared we will be to help ourselves, our families, and those around us."

South Shore Mental Health (SSMH) provides mental health and education services in the areas of early intervention, treatment and recovery services to over 16,000 children, families and adults from Boston to Cape Cod. Visit www.ssmh.org for information or to learn more about Bayview Associates.

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton is committed to improving the health of the community by providing high quality, personalized health care with compassion, dignity and respect for patient rights in a cost effective and safe manner.

It's Only Money

The only place in Quincy property values are going up is Hunt Street in North Quincy. $350,000 homes are being grabbed for around $500,000 by our very generous mayor.

That doesn't include asbestos removal and demolition, around another $25-30,000 a house, a generous estimate. And the price to remove gas, electric, sewer, and water lines. And the beat goes on and on and on. The best guess is around another $100,000 per house.

Don't forget the $40-50,000 in lost taxes every year.

The people of Quincy better wake up and take the bull by the horns. We can no longer afford the people running our city. $600,000 is a steep price per home for a parking lot and ballpark that we need like a hole in our head.

Captain Fishbones Chef Competes On Food Network Game Show

By KRIS KALABOKAS

David Casey, Captain Fishbones executive chef and assistant general manager, will compete along with two of his family members for a chance to win up to $20,000 on an episode of the Food Network game show "Guy's Grocery Games" in January.

His season four episode "Family Style: Food Feud" will air Sunday, Jan. 25 at 8 p.m.

Hosted by restauranteur and television personality Guy Fieri, The show's new season debuts with the first of four episodes which are part of the "Family Style" competition on Jan. 4.

"I keep an eye out," said Casey who has worked at the Marina Bay restaurant for three years. "I look for shows that are casting and it's been my dream to appear on the Food Network."

He decided to try his luck with "Guy's Grocery Games" — also sometimes called "Triple G" — after seeing that contestants were wanted for the show's upcoming season.

After writing a small essay explaining why he wanted to appear on the show and completing a questionnaire, he sent in his application in March not expecting to hear anything back.

He wasn't at work when casting executives called to speak to him, he said, but was given a message to prepare for what he had been waiting for for so many years; an interview with the Food Network.

The call back was a complete shock. "I kind of forgot about it," he said.

In June, via Skype, he had his chance to make the impression of a lifetime. A few months later in October he was on a plane, along with his mother Linda and brother Patrick, headed for the show's studio in California.

When he found out his episode would feature families, he immediately knew he wanted to bring his mother and brother along. The choice was an easy one to make, he said.

"They can hold their own in the kitchen," said David.

The Casey family team will compete against three other family teams in the elimination style cooking challenge show.

Contestants must run through a set made to look like a super market that is fully stocked with fresh vegetables, meats, dairy products, and everything else needed to cook a complete dish, and select what they need for their recipe.

Each dish must be cooked in 20-35 minutes and one team or chef is eliminated following each round.

The catch? Contestants are presented with challenges that are only revealed to them at the time of taping.

The Casey family, said David, was subjected to the "watch your weight" challenge in which contestants have to cook a complete meal using ingredients weighing in at or under five and a half pounds.

In another challenge titled "aisle down" in which an entire store aisle is closed off and off limits, contestants had to whip up their best non-pasta based dish.

For the "meals from the middle" dessert round, they were only allowed to use nonperishables, such as canned and dehydrated goods, from the faux-market's center isles.

Chefs can also expect to be asked questions between challenges for extra perks that will help them gain an advantage during the next round.

Each dish is sampled and critiqued by a panel of judges.

Troy Johnson, Beau MacMillan, and Catherine McCord, all giants in the food world and all familiar to David, were judging the Casey family's cooking skills.

David was especially excited to see MacMillan who he described as a fellow "Boston guy" who also graduated from Johnson and Wales.

The last team standing then gets to go on a "shopping spree" worth up to $20,000. Fieri hands the contestants a list of 10 items scattered throughout the entire market and players have just minutes to maneuver through the aisles and grab as many items as they can, each item earning the chef or chefs $2,000.

Casey's passion for cooking began at a young age, he said. As a child around seven or eight-years-old, he was the youngest boy of four. Before leaving for work his mother would leave all the ingredients necessary to cook something for the kids on the counter with simple preparation instructions for him to follow after he got home from school.

He honed the skills he learned at home at Johnson & Wales University as a student in the College of Culinary Arts in 2000 and has been working in restaurants throughout the South Shore for almost 18 years.

He wasn't nervous competing in front of the crew or Fieri. In fact, he said, everybody was so welcoming that at times he forgot that he was being filmed.

"It was like the cameras were't event there at some point," he said.

"The entire cast and crew involved in this production made us feel totally at ease during the entire experience," said Linda. "The pressure was on but really we were never nervous, maybe more in awe of everything going on."

While David couldn't reveal who had won the competition prior to the air date, he did say that the Caseys were strong contenders and that they put their best foot forward.

"I feel like my mother and brother helped. It was a strong competition," he said.

"This experience was absolutely amazing and what made it even better was being there with my sons," said Linda. "Dave is a phenomenal chef and competing on national TV was his dream and I'm so grateful to be sharing in that dream."

"Guy Fieri is just a love," she said. "So down to earth and always made us feel comfortable."

Friends, family, and customers will all gather to watch the premier during a viewing party at Captain Fishbones, said David.

"Dave, Patrick and I are just so happy to have been a part of a once in a lifetime experience," said Linda. "It is just indescribable."

DAVID CASEY (left), his brother Patrick (center) and mother Linda (right) all competed on the Food Network show "Guy's Grocery Games." Executive chef and assistant general manager at Marina Bay's Captain Fishbones, David said he never expected to be chosen to appear on the elimination style cooking competition show hosted by restauranteur Guy Fieri. "Guy's Grocery Games" has contestants cook meals in 30 minutes or less after being given surprise challenges such as the "watch your weight" challenge in which a chef or team must prepare a dish with ingredients coming in at or under five and a half pounds. The Casey's episode will air Sunday, Jan. 25 at 8 p.m.

Islamic Center Of New England Celebrates 50th Anniversary

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Islamic Center of New England, the region's first and oldest mosque, received a commendation from the City Council recently in recognition of its 50th anniversary.

Located at 470 South St. in Quincy Point, the Islamic Center of New England first opened its doors in 1964. It was founded that year by eight Lebanese families who wanted their own house of worship. The mosque now has thousands of members from a variety of ethnic backgrounds.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall presented the commendation during the council's Nov. 17 meeting.

"It's no mystery that this is a big provider of services, not only to the city but also to the region. I feel that that is exemplified by consistent turnout during prayer service," he said. "These folks have been kind enough to me, as the representative in Ward 2, to invite me into their community of worship in and under different circumstances."

"As New England's oldest mosque," Croall continued, reading from the commendation, "the New England Islamic Center has served as a model for family services, educational excellence, and community service. We honor your contributions to our community and extend our warmest congratulations on this golden anniversary."

Councillor Doug Gutro said the Islamic Center of New England's growth during its time in Quincy has been extraordinary.

"It's extraordinary to think [about] the growth that they've shown and the contributions they've given, educationally, spiritually, and culturally to the city of Quincy, specifically the Quincy Point neighborhood. I'm honored to recognize them," Gutro said.

"I think we need to recognize institutions like this that serve the people of Quincy and do so generation after generation after generation in so many ways that are important and often times out of sight."

Mohi uddin Khan, president of INCE's board of directors, thanked the council for recognixing the anniversary. He reflected on the mosque's growth over the past half-century and its relationship with the community it calls home.

"We sincerely thank you for this memorable occasion and honorable recognition. The Muslim community of ICNE is proud of its own history and also proud of its history of being part of the Quincy community," Khan said.

"Over 50 years we have evolved from a small cube shaped structure and a modest membership to several buildings expansions and a membership numbering in the thousands. We are your neighbors, your friends, your teachers, your storeowners, your doctors, your white-collar workers, your blue-collar workers, and your fellow American citizens.

"Our relationships with interfaith congregations and public officials have taken the course of positive and cooperative growth and success over the years. We welcome the residents and community of Quincy to visit us often and continue with our tradition of mutual understanding and friendship."

As part of its 50th anniversary celebration, the Islamic Center of New England donated copies of the Quran in Arabic and English, as well as 50 other books and a series of DVDs about Islam, to the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Fiesta Bites, Zucchini & Cheese Bisquits

By MARIE

Here are a couple of appetizers that can be used for New Year's Eve and anytime. We were at a birthday party recently and my friend Nancy brought the most delicious different appetizer ever. It was the first time I had ever had this Mexican treat.

It's made with won tons, and they can be made ahead of time and baked when ready to serve. The won tons can be purchased at any supermarket usually placed near all the fresh vegetables.

MEXICAN FIESTA BITES

1 package of won ton wraps
Jar of salsa
2-3 pork sausages (peeled and sauted)
Mexican shredded cheese
Sour cream for topping
Cilantro for topping

You can make as many as you want. They are small and bite-sized.

First place the wraps in mini muffin cups. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 5-6 minutes. When done, fill each one with the sausage meat and the salsa. Top with the cheese and bake just until the cheese melts.

When ready to serve, top them with sour cream and a sprinkle of cilantro. Nancy made 24 of them that day, and they went pretty fast. Enjoy.

Zucchini & Cheese Biscuits

Whenever I think of biscuits, I think of yeast, but today's recipe does not contain yeast, and it is quite easy to prepare. It can also be made ahead and reheated if necessary.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees

ZUCCHINI BISCUITS

3/4 cup shredded zucchini
2 1/2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1//2 cup butter
1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese
1/4 cup mozzarella cheese
1/4 cup Parmesan cheese
3 cherry tomatoes (cut up)
2 teaspoons basil
1 cup 2% milk

Drain the shredded zucchini, and pat it dry. In a bowl, mix the flour, baking powder. Cut in the butter until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Stir in the zucchini, cheeses, tomato and basil. Add the milk and just stir until moistened.

Drop by 1/2 cupfuls into a greased baking pan. Bake for 25 minutes until golden brown. Serve warm.

Artichoke Heart And Pea Risotto

By SUZIE

Risotto makes a wonderful and savory winter meal when paired up with some warm greens, or a piece of fish or chicken. This makes a great company dish because you can make it and cover it while preparing other things, not having to worry about it drying out. Add a little broth if need be when reheating.

I love making this and normally serve it with baked chicken thighs, and nice winter salad made with beets, goat cheese and arugula.

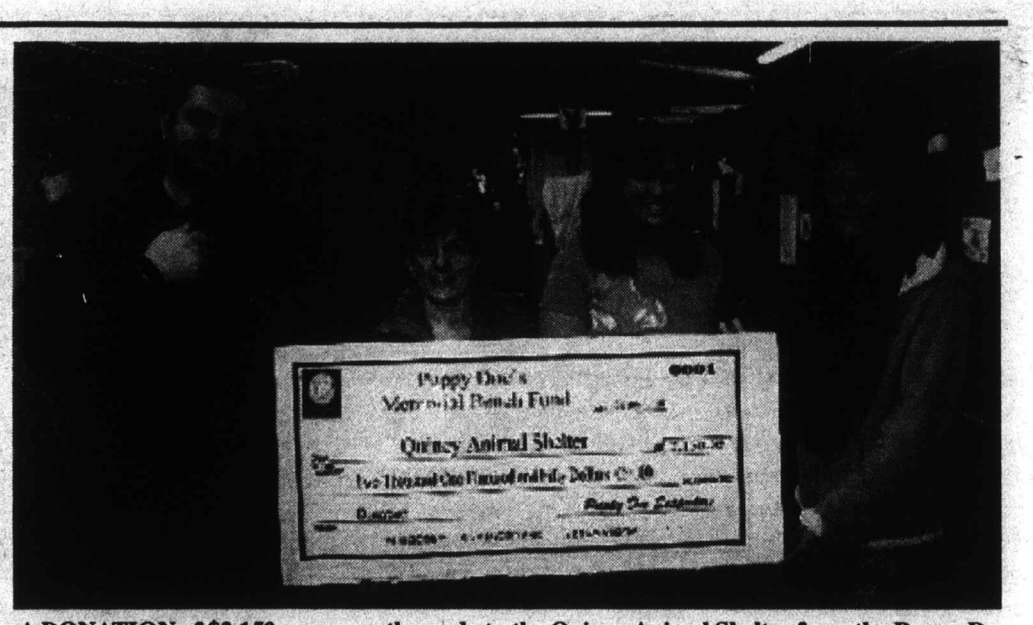

ARTICHOKE HEART AND PEA RISOTTO

1/4 cup extra virgin olive oil
1 , 9 ounce package of frozen artichoke hearts, cut into bite sized wedges
1 tablespoon Irish butter (Kerrygold is my favorite)
2 small shallots, minced
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 cup Arborio rice
1 teaspoon sea salt
1/2 cup unsweetened applejuice, room temperature (in lieu of wine)
4 cups organic chicken broth
1/2 cup frozen peas
1/2 cup grated pecorino romano cheese
1/4 cup chopped fresh parsley
1/4 cup chopped fresh basil
1/4 tsp black pepper juice from 1/2 lemon or so

Heat about 2 tablespoons oil in a medium sauce pan over high heat. Add the artichoke hearts and reduce heat to medium high. Cook about 10 minutes, remove from pan and set aside.

Heat remaining oil and butter in pan and add shallots, cooking about 3 minutes. Add garlic and rice and salt. Stir with wooden spoon until sizzling. Add the apple juice and cook until almost completely absorbed, about 4 minutes or so, stirring. Now begin to add broth, 1 cup at a time, stirring frequently before additions. Continue cup by cup until the rice is cooked "al dente" and you have a creamy risotto, about 25 minutes in all.

If too dry, add a bit more broth. Stir in peas, cheese, seasonings and HERBS at this point. Then gently toss in artichoke hearts and lemon juice. Serve. Enjoy!

Dozens Of Quincy Police Officers Attend Funeral For Slain NYPD Officer

By SCOTT JACKSON

Nearly three-dozen Quincy police officers attended the funeral of a murdered New York City police officer on Saturday, joining thousands of officers from across the country and beyond.

The funeral for Rafael Ramos was held Saturday morning at Christ Tabernacle Church, located in Queens' Glendale neighborhood. Ramos, age 40, and his partner Wenjian Liu, age 32, were shot and killed while in their patrol car one week prior, on Dec. 20, in Brooklyn.

Quincy Police Lt. Richard McCusker was among the 35 Quincy officers who attended the funeral. The officers, along with 20 others from the Hingham and Weymouth departments, boarded a bus at 4 a.m. on Saturday to attend the funeral service in Queens. When they arrived for the funeral, they stood shoulder-to-shoulder with fellow police outside the church and watched the services. Vice President Joseph Biden, New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo, and New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio were among the dignitaries who spoke during the funeral.

McCusker said he felt mixed emotions Saturday: a sense of honor and pride for being there with so many other officers, but also sadness and grief for Ramos' family, including his widow and two sons.

"I felt a great sense of honor and pride, but I also felt a great amount of sadness and grief for the family," McCusker said Monday.

As many as 30,000 officers – including ones from as far away as California and the United Kingdom – and civilians stood outside the church during the funeral.

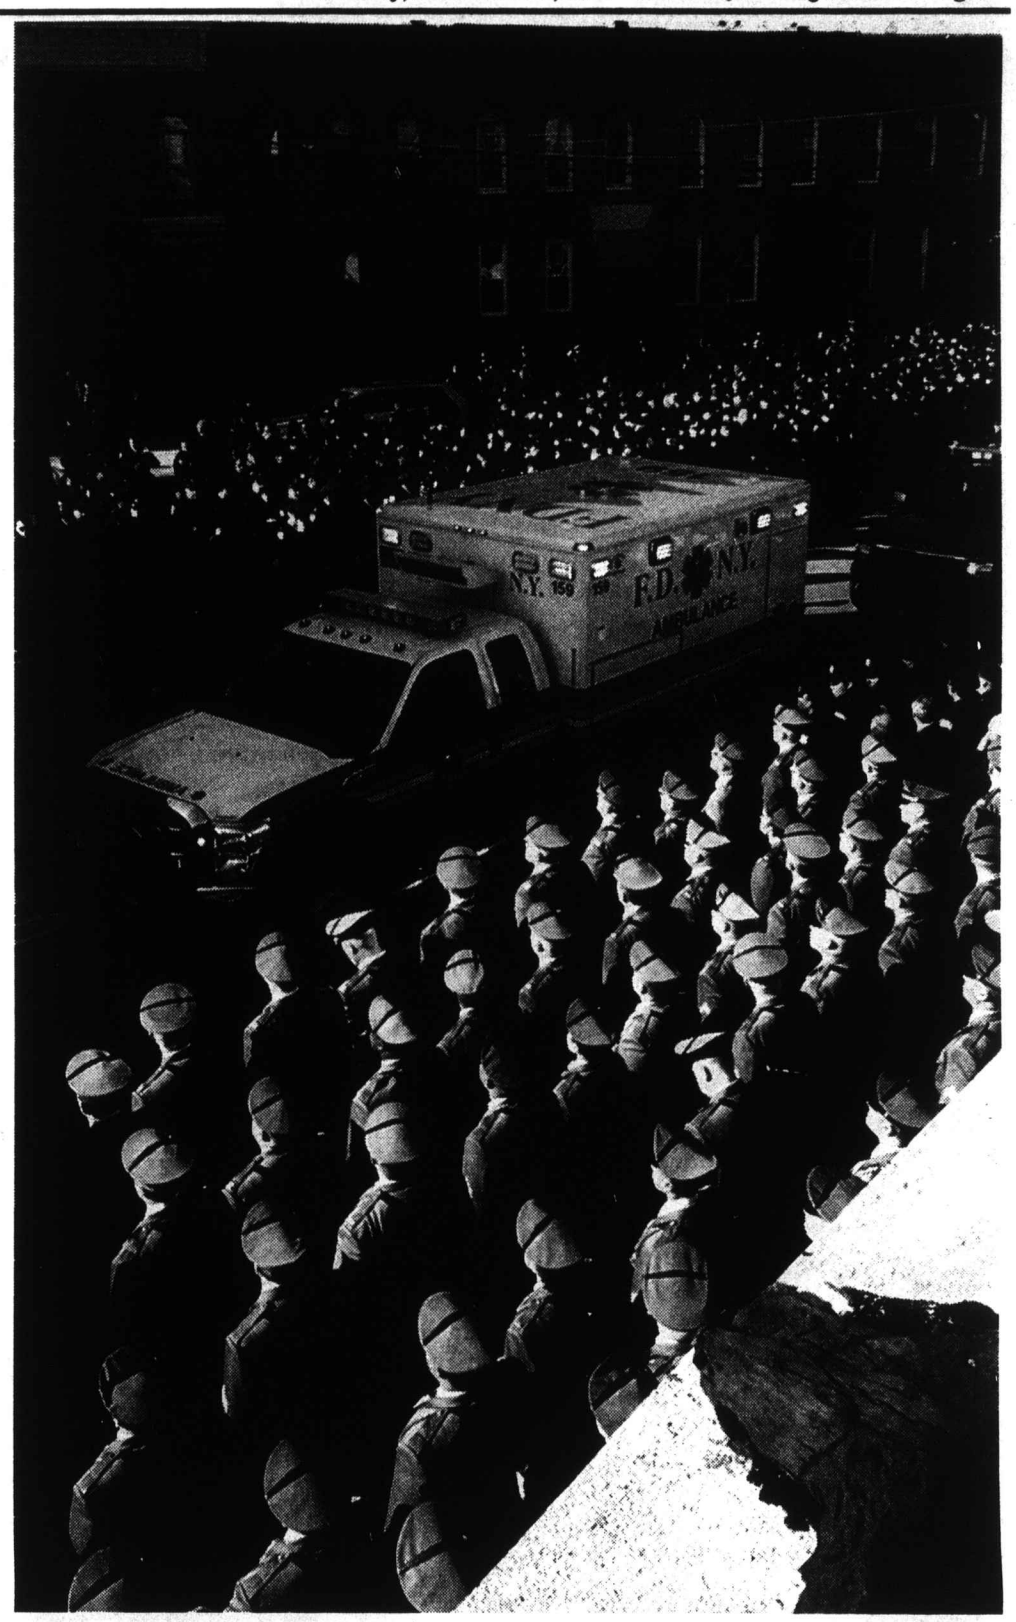

"There were so many people. It was an incredible amount," McCusker said. "You couldn't move. People were wall-to-wall for as far as you could see."

Many New York City officers, McCusker noted, thanked the officers from Quincy and elsewhere for coming from out of state to attend the services. A 26-year veteran of the Police Department, McCusker said he has attended other funerals for fallen officers, some with as many as 10,000 attendees, but nothing on the scale of Saturday's services.

Police Chief Paul Keenan said he was proud of the officers who traveled to New York for the funeral.

"I was very proud the officers went down there in a show of solidarity for the New York officers and their families. Police work is like a brotherhood, and when they're hurting we're hurting," Keenan said. "They took time away from their families during a busy holiday week to be there. It was an outstanding show of support by the officers."

A contingent of Quincy police officers is expected to attend services for Liu, which were announced Monday. Visiting hours are Saturday, Jan. 3 from 1 to 9 p.m. at Aievoli Funeral Home in Brooklyn. A funeral service will take place at the funeral home Sunday, Jan. 4 at 10 a.m.

Wishing Residents A Safe, Happy New Year From Quincy Fire Department

By MICHAEL SLADE
Fire Prevention Officer
Quincy Fire Department

As the New Year approaches us with hopes anew, the Quincy Fire Department wishes for Quincy residents a wonderful year ahead.

Unfortunately, history has proven to us that fire departments respond to many unfortunate emergency calls on New Year's Eve and New Year's Day. These emergency calls include Christmas tree fires, fires started by candles, chimney fires, and serious motor vehicle accidents.

The Quincy Fire Department asks to keep in mind the following life safety points to help avoid preventable emergencies and keep Quincy resident's safe this New Year's Eve, as well as the new year.

MICHAEL SLADE

1. Christmas Tree Fires: We are reminded of the danger of Christmas tree fires by a tragedy that took place in Southwick, MA this past Christmas Eve. The family's entire house was engulfed in flames, and a two year old boy is reportedly recovering from the fire at Shriners Hospital in Boston.

The Massachusetts Fire Marshal's office is investigating the cause of the fire, but the couple's Christmas tree is suspected.

The Quincy Fire Department asks of all Quincy residents to get rid of the tree when it begins dropping needles. Dried-out trees pose a serious fire danger and should not be left in the home or garage, or placed outside against the home.

The City of Quincy provides a service in which Christmas trees will be collected curbside for 2 weeks following Christmas for recycling.

2. Chimney Fires: The National Fire Protection Agency recommends "that a fireplace chimney should be inspected by a qualified technician prior to the heating season. A substance called creosote can build up inside the chimney and cause a fire if not removed. Woodstoves should bear the mark of a recognized testing laboratory and meet local fire codes. Chimney connections and flues should be inspected prior to each heating season."

3. Fires Started by Candles: The top three days for home candle fires were Christmas, New Year's Day, and Christmas Eve. The Quincy Fire Department would like to remind Quincy residents to keep candles at least 12 inches from anything that can burn.

Never leave a burning candle unattended. Blow out candles when you leave a room.

4. Motor Vehicle Accidents: The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety conducted a study which concluded that New Year's Day is the most dangerous day of the year to be afoot on public roadways. The same study concluded that alcohol plays a significant part in why New Year's Day is very dangerous for motor vehicle commuters and pedestrians.

More pedestrians are fatally wounded by vehicles on New Year's Day than any other day of the year.

The Quincy Fire Department advises Quincy residents to either take a taxi, or to utilize public transportation for transport to your New Year's destination(s). If you decide to drive, the Quincy Fire Department advises Quincy residents to set up a designated driver ahead of time.

On behalf of the Quincy Fire Department, we wish all Quincy residents a very safe and happy New Year.

Council Recognizes Faith Lutheran Church 125th Anniversary

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council recently recognized Faith Lutheran Church's 125th anniversary, presenting a commendation to the church's pastor.

Faith Lutheran, at one time known as the Salem Lutheran Church, was originally built to serve Scandinavian immigrants who arrived in Quincy to work in the city's granite quarries; it merged with Trinity Lutheran Church in 1974. Located at 201 Granite St., Faith Lutheran was built from granite harvested from the ground it sits on.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, whose district includes the historic church, presented a commendation to Pastor Heidi Johnston on behalf of the church during the council's Nov. 17 meeting. He cited the church's record of service to the community, from helping out organizations such as Father Bill's and Interfaith Social Services to the establishment of the Dr. Charles Djerf preschool.

"The quality of life in our city has been greatly enhanced by the community of faith whose 125th anniversary we pause to recognize tonight. Its future is bright, in terms of its faithful presiding minister, Pastor Heidi Johnston. She is an effervescent and dynamic, charismatic shepherd," Coughlin said, noting Johnston's husbands has also given back, donating a kidney to a complete stranger.

"The Faith Lutheran community is a wonderful asset to the city of Quincy and it is a small token of recognition to bring them forth tonight and to celebrate with them."

Added Councillor Doug Gutro:

"Everything Councillor Coughlin said about Pastor Heidi is true. She is really going to be someone who touches folks outside the Faith Lutheran Church in the Quincy community and gets active and involved. I'm just delighted to recognize them."

Johnston said Faith Lutheran tried to do more than just pat themselves on the backs in celebration of the 125th anniversary. Instead, the church planned to assemble 125 hygiene kits for refugees around the world, a target the congregation easily exceeded.

"We now look forward to more opportunities to work with you all in the city of Quincy to start learning about what are the real needs," Johnston said.

"To really first listen and hear from you all and from our neighbors in the community who know, who have an ear to the ground about what the real needs are. And then we, as people of faith, can respond."

As part of the church's 125th anniversary celebration, a time capsule placed in the church's cornerstone in 1892 was opened in October. Jack Mayo, co-chairperson of the church's anniversary committee, told the council he was excited by the atmosphere surrounding that event.

"The whole idea of what took place, and the people that were there and the enthusiasm was spectacular. We figured after the cornerstone opening was done, people would quickly exit to their cars and leave. That didn't happen," Mayo said.

"Three, four hours later there were still people hanging around, having coffee. It was just wonderful."

"It matters not whether we are dealing with the challenges and complexity of the decisions we will face with the development of the downtown, whether it is the fiscal challenges presented by the annual budget, or whether it's the simple location of a stop sign, the best deliberations require timely access to data that should underlie our choices and decisions," he said. "For this, I will be a persistent advocate."

The School Committee elected Kathryn Hubley to serve as the board's new vice chairwoman. She emphasized the challenges facing Quincy, its teachers, and its schools in the years ahead.

"Our teachers and administrators have a challenging job rolling in the Common Core standards, balancing the need for accountability and a standards based curriculum without compromising instructional time," she said.

Maralin Ann Manning, a longtime advocate of the city's business community and selfless, dedicated volunteer for many community groups, was named the recipient of the 2013 Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award.

Demolition inside old City Hall, the first phase of an $8.2 million renovation project, was largely complete. Architect Jim Edwards said the project remained on pace for completion in early 2015.

Pipes burst in the Clifford Marshall Elementary School and North Quincy High during an extreme cold snap. Two pipe breaks occurred at Pagnano Towers on Curtis Avenue, causing extensive damage and leaving one elevator shutdown. The first break was caused by a resident leaving a stairway window open overnight.

A dozen gravestone pieces dating to the 18th century were discovered in the basement of the Adams Academy.

The Rev. Louis Palmieri was named the new pastor of a three-parish collaborative consisting of St. Ann's, St. Mary's, and Sacred Heart. He would assume his new post in June.

Councillor Doug Gutro filed a resolution seeking quarterly updates on the $1.6 billion Quincy Center redevelopment project.

The Alumni Café, a Wollaston landmark since it opened in 1960, closed its doors for good. City Clerk Joseph Shea called it the 'end of an era' and recalled heading to the bar and eatery each Wednesday to enjoy the relaxed, no frills pub atmosphere. The building was sold to a new owner who planned to re-open it as the Crystal Jade later in the year.

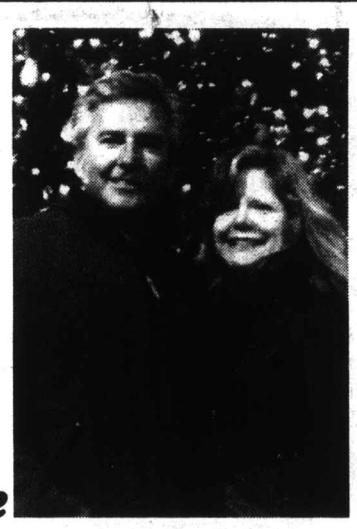

Fifteen new police officers – Michael Reilly, Sean Crowley, Veronica Acevedo, Christopher Fish, William Griffin, Bryan Donovan, Andrew Keenan, Tara Waters, Eugene Smith, Michael Dougan, David Sansevero, Jeffrey Bossart, Sean Fitzgerald, Maura Hayes, and Erin McFarland – were sworn in during a ceremony inside Quincy High's rotunda.

North Quincy High senior basketball star Grace Geary scored her 1,000th career point in a home game against Hingham. Geary, who spent her first three years at Falmouth High before transferring to North, is the granddaughter of legendary Red Raiders coach Bob "Knobby" Nolan.

Deaths during January included:

Kevin B. Jeffers, a Boston firefighter; Jane E. Cashman, 78, a retired medical secretary and office manager at Milton Hospital; Lillian Rendle, 89, an active member of Bethany Congregational Church and the YMCA; Edward R. Gerstel, 88, a U.S. Navy veteran who saw action on D-Day; Linda M. Proto, 65, an active member of the Quincy City Republican Committee; Jamie W. Waldron, 36, a Department of Public Works employee; Peter M. Kenney, 65, the executive secretary to Mayor Francis X. McCauley; Chet Curtis, 74, a longtime broadcaster for WCVB and NECN; John F. "Jack" Chenette, a master plumber and owner of Jack Chenette, Inc.; Robert W. Helfrich, 83, retired program director for the city's Health Department; Mabel J. Hajjar, 90, co-owner of Mae Fare coffee shop; Dr. William M. Hoffman, a Quincy dentist; and Edward L. Trudeau, 77, a member of the Quincy/North Quincy Football Hall of Fame.

Koch Eyes New Squantum School; StreetWorks On Notice

2014 The Year In Review

FEBRUARY

Mayor Thomas Koch initiated the process to replace the 95-year-old Squantum Elementary School, a process that would begin with a formal review of the current building and improvements it needed. Structurally, he noted, the school was the worst in the system after the old Quincy High School, the old Central Middle School, and the soon to be replaced Sterling Middle School.

"I don't know where you would start and stop rehab wise. The additions aren't quality," Koch said, referring to expansions made to the original building since it opened in 1919.

Frustration began to mount amongst officials following the closure of the USS Salem and commuter ferry service at the Fore River Shipyard the previous fall. The MBTA closed the pier that housed both in the fall, citing a dire need for repairs.

"I know from experience and working with the folks down there at the USS Salem that they do a lot of good things and there is an appetite certainly in the Ward 2 section of Quincy to make sure we're doing what we can to keep this ship docked in the city of Quincy," said Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall.

The mayor appointed Shelly Dein as the city's new energy manager. She previously held a similar position in the town of Middleborough.

The School Committee and City Council both backed a request for $5.3 million in window and door replacements at North Quincy High and the Wollaston and Merrymount Elementary Schools. The city planned to seek state reimbursement for the work.

Former Red Sox closer Joel Hanrahan and his wife, Kimberly, donated $15,000 to the Quincy Fire Department.

Construction magnate Jay Cashman donated a historic Coast Guard boathouse to the city. The 80-year-old building was previously on Chatham's Stone Island, where it served as a lifesaving station. The boathouse was to be installed at Mound Street Beach and will be used as a home for the city's rowing programs.

The state's Department of Public Health granted Ermont, Inc. of Provincetown preliminary approval to open a medical marijuana dispensary on Ricciuti Drive in West Quincy.

Chuck Phelan III and Declan McGaffigan each received Eagle Scout Awards.

Maureen Hallsen, Quincy's assistant city clerk, retired after nearly 20 years on the job. Before being promoted to assistant city clerk, she spent 18 years working in vital statistics for the city.

Gutru Faults Koch For Not Appealing Flood Maps Prior To Deadline

2014 The Year In Review

Quincy High senior Alyssa Lydon raised more than $2,500 for the American Cancer Society before her team's game against North Quincy High. The fundraiser was held in honor of Lydon's mother, the father of her teammate Gabriela Jerahian, the father of North's Camille Mullaney, and a family member of North's Sydney Chang – all of whom died from cancer.

Quincy High's boys basketball team ended North Quincy High's perfect season, beating the Red Raiders 51-49. The Presidents' victory also snapped a 13-game losing streak to North.

The mayor gave Street-Works, the firm behind the $1.6 billion Quincy Center project, 30 days to come in compliance with the land disposition agreement between the city and the developer. Koch placed Street-Works on notice after the company missed a November 2013 deadline to file key documents related to planned construction in the vicinity of the Ross Garage. The mayor said downtown redevelopment would move ahead, regardless of Street-Works' involvement in the project.

"I believe we're going to be moving forward with Street-Works or perhaps without Street-Works," Koch said. "We've made tremendous progress and I'd like to underscore that because though there aren't those visible buildings going up quite yet, there is an incredible amount of infrastructure that we've accomplished together that now allows that to happen."

Council President Joseph Finn also said that such changes aren't rare when it comes to projects with size and scope similar to the Quincy Center plan. He noted that plans to revitalize the downtown area have been contemplated numerous times in the past before Street-Works moved forward with the city on its proposal.

"The real thing that is at stake here is the long-term vision of the city," Finn said. "I've heard a lot of misrepresentations about what this means and what this represents. I think it's important to make perfectly clear that, in terms of municipal development, this is more the norm than people would think."

A wreath laying ceremony was held at the United First Parish Church to honor Louisa Catherine Adams on the 239th anniversary of her birth. It was the first such ceremony honoring the late first lady held at the church.

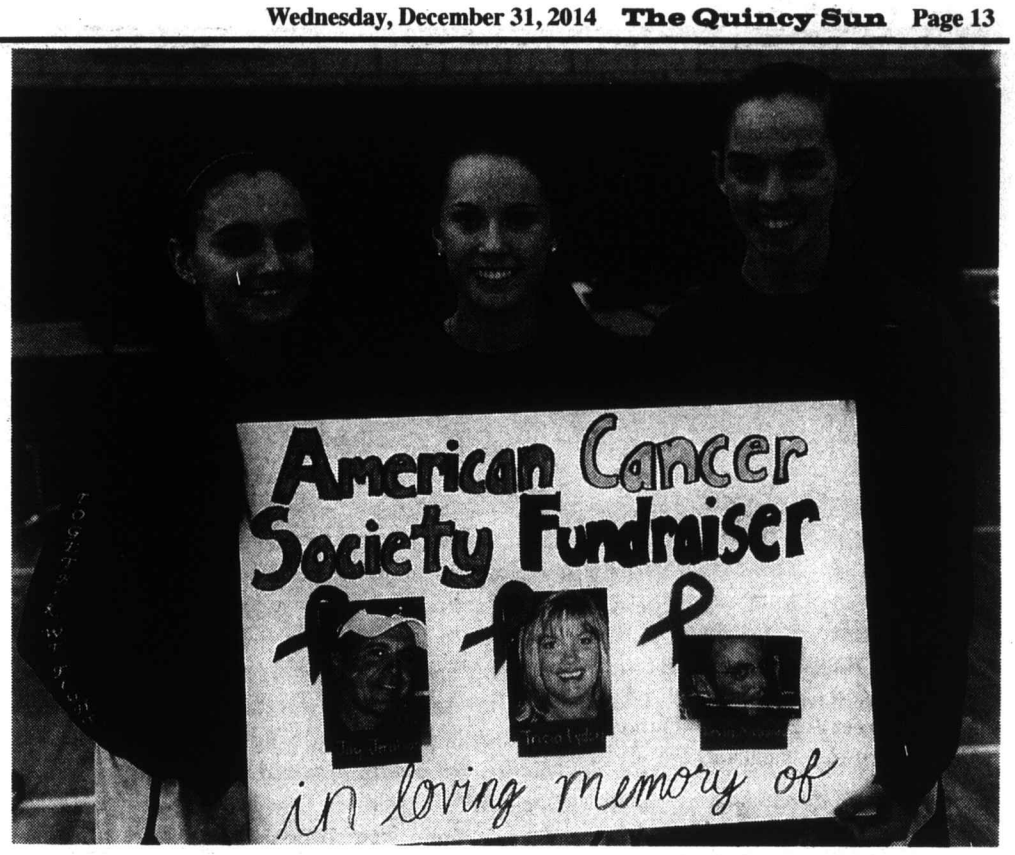

A crowd of 300 attended a community meeting on proposed new flood maps at Central Middle School. The new maps, bound to take effect in June, would add 1,400 properties to flood zones and place another 2,700 already in flood zones into higher risk areas. The mayor told the crowd Quincy would appeal the new maps.

"The city has engaged Woodard & Curran to challenge the maps that FEMA has produced – challenge the maps with science, with due diligence," Koch explained. "The city has committed substantial revenue to that task. We believe if we have to make the case, we have to make the case with good science and good information."

U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch said he was optimistic Congress would be able to pass legislation to rollback major increases in flood insurance premiums impacting homeowners across the country.

Deaths during February included:

Marilyn F. Johnson, 81, a Hanover schoolteacher and substitute for the Quincy school system; Jane E. Clasby, the longtime cafeteria manager at the Squantum Elementary School; Richard F. Foy, 81, co-owner of Foy's Market; Jeffrey C. LaPointe, Esq., 69, a Quincy attorney; James Machado, Jr., the owner of J & J Refrigeration; Terrence M. Carroll, 77, co-owner of Carroll the Mover; Mary B. Chisholm, 95, a Quincy kindergarten teacher; Dr. J. Philip McLaren, 72, an Eastern Nazarene College biology professor; Louise E. Randall, 89, a member of Quincy's Board of Registrars of Voters; John J. DiPietro, 85, retired Quincy Fire Department captain; Frank C. Colletta, 86, owner of Colletta Construction Company; and George F. White, the 2006 recipient of The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Award.

A fundraiser before Quincy-North Quincy basketball games in February raised more than $2,500 for the American Cancer Society. The fundraiser was held in memory of parents of three varsity basketball players. From left Quincy's Gabriela Jerahian (in memory of her dad, Jay), Quincy's Alyssa Lydon (in memory of her mom, Tricia) and North Quincy's Camille Mullaney (in memory of her dad, Kevin). Also remembered was a fourth loved one - a family member of Sydney Chang who is also a North Quincy girls basketball player. The fundraiser featured a silent auction and 50-50 raffle. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

MARCH

Jennifer Fay-Beers announced her departure from Central Middle School after spending 11 years as the school's principal, effective at the end of the school year. She accepted a new position in Braintree, as the town's assistant school superintendent.

"It's not about leaving Central," Fay-Beers said. "It's about moving on and seeing if my talents work in another arena of education."

Quincy Police Lt. Det. Patrick Glynn said he was onboard with Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey's push to make Narcan – a drug used to reverse opiate overdoses – more readily available. Glynn was behind the Police Department's Narcan program, which was credited with reversing more than 225 overdoses since October 2011.

Councillor Doug Gutro faulted Mayor Thomas Koch for not appealing the new FEMA flood maps prior to a June 2013 deadline, noting FEMA delayed implementation of the maps for communities in Plymouth County that appealed the maps before the 2013 deadline. He said the council, and the public, should have been consulted before the mayor made that decision.

proposed during the appeal deadline last year and a case should have been made by the administration," Gutro said. "Instead, the administration unilaterally made that choice for us."

The School Committee approved a new three-year contract worth nearly $700,000 for School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro. DeCristofaro, who was appointed superintendent in 2001, joined the school system in 1974.

"I appreciate the confidence the School Committee has put in me to continue to guide and lead a great school system," the superintendent said.

Les Gosule, a Quincy accountant known for championing the passage of a three strikes law in Massachusetts, announced his candidacy for state senate.

The City Council confirmed the appointment of Nicole Crispo as the new assistant city clerk. She began working for the city's Election Department in 1999 and had been in charge of the department since 2008.

The council presented a commendation to Arthur Keogh, recognizing him for decades of service in the community.

Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi accepted full responsibility after DPW employees were found burning old records. In all, 49 boxes of documents were burned. The Mass. Secretary of State's Office was not notified before the documents were destroyed, but approved of it after the fact.

A Superior Court judge upheld the city's 2012 denial of a liquor license to Waxy's LLC, which planned to open a Tilted Kilt restaurant at the site of a closed Outback Steakhouse.

The City Council unanimously approved spending $1.56 million to renovate O'Neil Field, located behind Atlantic Middle School in North Quincy. Included in the price tag was money for engineering improvements for the North Quincy High campus.

Dependable Cleaners opened its new headquarters on Quincy Avenue, twenty months after a three-alarm fire devastated the company's previous headquarters at the same location.

Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, longtime director of the Quincy Historic Society, was named the city's Irishman of the Year at the annual St. Patrick's Day Luncheon.

Dr. Mark Jaehnig received a City Council commendation in recognition of his 25-year tenure at the helm of Sacred Heart Basketball and 40 years coaching youth sports in the city.

"He's a tireless volunteer and with the exception of Christmas Day can be found on the basketball courts and baseball fields of Quincy, either coaching, refereeing, scoring, planning or scheduling events for the kids of Quincy," Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said.

Maralin Manning, a longtime business advocate and dedicated community, received the Henry W. Bosworth, Jr., Memorial Citizenship Award at a ceremony held inside the Quincy Sons of Italy. Manning said the award was special because "Henry Bosworth was my best buddy and my strongest mentor…I never, ever thought I would be a recipient of this particular award."

After formally terminating the city's land disposition agreement with StreetWorks, the mayor said he anticipated multiple companies taking part in Quincy Center redevelopment – each one responsible for its own block or parcel.

"We are now working internally with our downtown team on the next step," Koch said. "I don't think we'll see one big project. We're looking to break this out into parts."

At a subsequent downtown committee meeting, Planning Director Dennis Harrington said the city would likely ask developers hoping to take part in the Quincy Center redevelopment to open up their books for review.

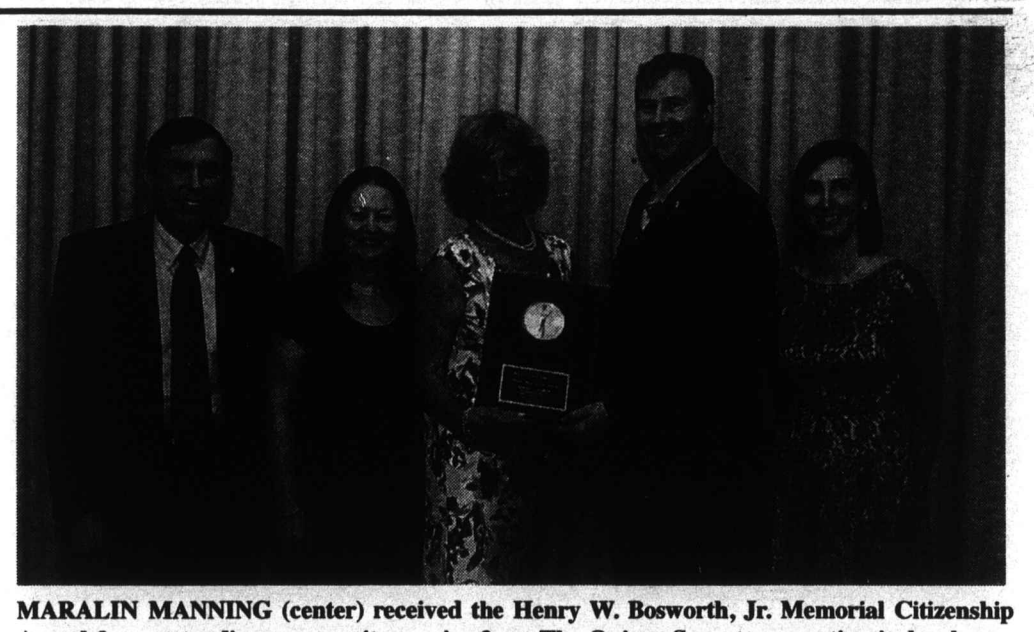

The South Quincy Bocce Club received a commendation in recognition of the club's 80th birthday.

North Quincy High's boys basketball team advanced to the finals of the Div. 1 South Sectional Finals before bowing out to Catholic Memorial. The Red Raiders defeated Newton South, 62-61, in the first round, Quincy High, 64-61, in the quarter finals, and Newton North, 50-46, in the semifinals. Quincy High advanced to the quarterfinals by downing Barnstable, 58-51.

The quarterfinal matchup between the Presidents and Red Raiders was the first time the two teams met in the tournament since 1980. An estimated 1,500 fans packed North's gym to attend the game. Efthim Butka scored 23 points – including five three-pointers – for North and Christian Callahan had 20 points and 12 rebounds for Quincy.

North's girls basketball team also qualified for the postseason tournament. The team bowed out in the opening round, 53-38, to Mansfield. Grace Geary was the team's leading scorer in the contest with 22 points.

Both schools' hockey teams qualified for the postseason. North's team defeated Bishop Feehan, 3-2, in the opening round before bowing out to Plymouth South, 2-1. The Presidents lost in the opening round to Medfield, 6-2.

MARALIN MANNING (center) received the Henry W. APRIL

The City Council authorized the city to solicit bids for the site of the former Central Middle School. In March, the council requested additional appraisals so a minimum price could be set; that vote was rescinded three weeks later after City Assessor Peter Moran assured councillors the open bidding process would ensure Quincy would get a fair price for the building.

Members of Quincy's State House delegation all backed increasing Massachusetts' minimum wage. The Senate and House had passed competing bills to increase the current minimum wage from $8 an hour. The Senate bill would increase it to $11 incrementally and tie future increases to inflation while the House's bill would raise to $10.50 over two years, with no automatic increases after that.

The City Council approved allocating $250,000 in community preservation funds to help renovate Faxon Park. The city also received a $200,000 state grant to help pay the project's cost.

In an interview, Mayor Thomas Koch said the first private redevelopment in the new downtown, aside from Quincy Mutual's Merchants Row project, should take place at the Ross Garage because the structure needs to be torn down.

"Our priority is the Ross Parking Area, no question about it. We believe we'll be able to put that bit together rather quickly," Koch said. "There is tremendous interest – I met with another developer today. They're calling me; I'm not calling them."

Additionally, Koch revealed that the proposed new Sterling Middle School could host students in grades 4-8. The proposal, sent to the state for review, was made as part of an effort to alleviate overcrowding at nearby Lincoln-Hancock and at schools in Quincy Point.

"Lincoln-Hancock is busting at the seems. Clifford Marshall is busting at the seems. Point Webster has taken the fifth grade from Clifford Marshall and Sterling has the fifth grade from Lincoln-Hancock now because of the issues," the mayor said.

"As part of our paperwork the next step with the state we've got to provide enrollment projections, numbers, what configuration we think makes sense. Then we enter the discussion with the state, 'this is what we're thinking about doing.' They weigh in, make determinations."

A $113,000 project to restore 259 gravestones in the historic Hancock Cemetery began. Ta Mara Conde, of Historic Gravestone Services, said the project would entail the removal of growths from the gravestones, the creation of new bases for headstones to stand in, and repairing broken stones using Jahn, a special mortar used for restoration projects.

The Wollaston Elementary School marked its 100th anniversary. Principal James Hennessy called the school the neighborhood's foundation during the anniversary celebration.

"Wollaston School has been the foundation of our neighborhood," he said. "So often we think of our schools as just a building, but it is so much more than that. It is a community."

The $8 million, 18-month long Adams Green roadway improvement project began in Quincy Center. The first phase of the project involved demolition of three traffic islands on Hancock and Washington Streets near the United First Parish Church. Sidewalk and roadwork was to follow throughout Quincy Center along Hancock Street, from its intersection with Adams Street south to its intersection with Granite Street.

The council appropriated $150,000 for the Park Department, enough money to plant up to 300 new trees throughout Quincy.

Three squares were dedicated to Marines killed during the Vietnam War. The square at 33 Ellis St. was dedicated to PFC James P. Hickey; the square at 47 Vassell St. was dedicated to CPL Lawrence E. Sirois; and the square at 222 Billings St. was dedicated to L/CPL Martin R. Keefe.

Ground was broken for a new, 12-unit veterans housing complex on East Howard Street. Council President Joseph Finn, the executive director of the Mass. Housing and Shelter Alliance, praised the city for the project.

"Today what we're doing is consecrating a living monument," he said, "not only to [veterans'] sacrifice but to those who stood willing to make the same sacrifice, often at great cost to themselves."

South Cove Manor dedicated its new facility on Washington Street. The 86,000 square-foot nursing home holds 141 beds, six dining areas, a community center, a rehab center, and activity rooms.

Quincy Fire Department Lt. Shawn Darcy and Firefighters John Banuk and Timothy Lynch assisted in the birth of a healthy baby girl at the intersection of Squantum and Hancock Streets in North Quincy.

Mayor Thomas Koch proposed a $268.54 million municipal budget for FY15 – an increase of $10.7 million, or 4.1 percent, over the FY14 budget. The proposed budget included funds to hire 10 new police officers and increase school spending by nearly $3 million as well as money for added overtime for firefighters.

Also included in the Koch's budget proposal was a $38,000 raise for the mayor, bringing the salary up to $160,000 from $122,000, and a $5,000 raise for city councillors, bringing each councillor's salary to $22,500. The mayor's proposed budget also recommended raises for 57 department heads and other non-union appointees.

Robert Noble and his late wife Gloria received the James R. McIntyre Humanitarian Award during the Quincy District Court's annual Law Day ceremony. Sheila McIntyre, wife of the late mayor and senator, and former Mayor Arthur Tobin presented the award, citing the Nobles for their involvement in the community for more than 60 years.

"Bob and Gloria came to Quincy in 1952 from Dorchester and immediately became involved in worthy community causes in countless ways for over half a century – 60 years to be exact," Tobin said. "Bob and Gloria were soon recognized as a team for their selfless giving. Bob was quoted at the time as saying, 'if you get one of us to volunteer, you get the both of us.' Besides their civic and charitable involvement they were actively involved in their children's PTO and their Boy Scout and Girl Scout activities."

School Committee member Anne Mahoney told her colleagues she did not favor moving fourth graders from Lincoln-Hancock into a new Sterling Middle School.

"I don't think they're ready for middle school in fourth grade," she explained.

Stop & Shop kicked off its 100th anniversary celebration with a ceremony outside its Quincy Center offices. The chain planned to hold a number of events and promotions throughout the summer, leading up to its actual 100th birthday on

After being berthed in the Fore River Shipyard for nearly 20 years, the USS Salem's owner announced plans to move the cruiser to an East Boston marina within the next 12 months.

Six firms – RKG Associates of Dover, N.H.; Boston-based Redgate Real Estate Advisors; Jones Lang LaSalle of New York City; Abraham and Associates of Newton; Philadelphia-based Stantec Consulting Services; and Davenport Companies of Boston – bid to be Quincy's new downtown redevelopment consultant.

United First Parish Church

AMANDA FLORES
Outstanding Career, Technical Education Student Of The Year

United First Parish Church of Quincy, (Unitarian-Universalist) also known as the Church of the Presidents, unanimously voted to call Rev. Rebecca Froom as their settled minister.

Rev. Froom accepted the call and her ministry began in July.

She is the 35th minister to serve and the first female settled minister in its 375 years of existence.

Amanda Flores, a senior at Quincy High School, was recognized as the school system's career and technical education student of the year. She was a participant in the broadcasting program at QHS and planned to study film production at Emerson College in Boston after graduation.

Cinder McNerney, an outside financial advisor for the city, told the City Council Quincy should tap into its excess levy capacity to help pay down unfunded liabilities owed to retirees.

A hearing was held on plans to construct 398 units at a site adjacent to the Highpoint apartment complex. Known as Avalon Quincy, the proposal called for three six-story buildings and two five-story buildings on the site.

City councillors at the hearing questioned the legality of the new proposal. Highpoint's developer was permitted to build 10 buildings on site with a total of 1,040 units; only half of those were ultimately built. As part of settlement with the city and nearby residents, Highpoint's developer needed to have all construction done by 2007; that deadline was later extended to 2012.

Three community leaders received awards at the Salvation Army's Civic Dinner. The mayor received the organization's Others Award; former District Attorney George Burke the Advisory Board's Emeritus Award; and Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth the William Booth Award.

The council authorized the city to seek bids for a portion of the city-owned lot at 20 Furnace Ave. Quincy purchased the 43,480 square foot lot from developer Daniel Flynn in 2012 for $485,000. The council's vote allowed the city to sell 4,250 square feet of the lot, likely to the owner of an adjacent lot. The city expected the land to sell for more than $60,000.

Twenty-one Girl Scouts received commendations from the City Council. Among them was Lindsay Schrier, a recipient of the Gold Award – the highest honored bestowed by the Girl Scouts of the USA.

The School Committee approved a stricter eligibility policy for high school athletes. The new requirments mandate that students earn at least 25 academic credits per semester. Previously, students only needed to earn 20 credits per semester to be eligible to play.

The school department's proposed budget for FY15 was released. The proposed budget would allow for the hiring of 37 new full-time academic and non-academic support members, including 10 kindergarten aides, 10 special education aides, three part-time literacy teachers, two English language learner teachers, and three special education teachers.

Army Major Jason Oberton was the keynote speaker at the city's annual Memorial Day observance. Speaking at the World War II Memorial in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Oberton told the gathered crowd America is free and remains free because of veterans.

"Every moment we live in freedom we owe to them," he said.

Tom Stansbury retired after spending five years as the city's director of veterans services.

In a 6-3 vote, the City Council approved raising the mayor's salary to $150,000. The councillors also approved giving themselves a $5,000 raise by the same margin.

Gutro, Palmucci Seek Audit On Downtown Funds

JUNE

The City Council approved new flood maps for Quincy that added 1,400 properties into flood zones. Councillors expressed concern about the impact the new maps would have on residents, but said they were left with no choice other than accepting them.

"One of the difficulties here is that our vote is necessary so that our constituency can continue to get subsidized insurance through the National Flood Insurance Program. If a no vote is successful tonight they would be disqualified effective June 10," Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said. "If there is a storm that we would need federal assistance [for], we would not be eligible for reimbursement."

Councillors Doug Gutro and Brian Palmucci introduced a resolution seeking a full accounting of all funds the city spent to date on downtown redevelopment. They wanted an audit of all money spent, from the beginning of negotiations with Street-Works until the end of FY14.

Six-hundred eighty students graduated from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools – 407 from Quincy and 273 from North. At Quincy High's graduation, class valedictorian Michelle Lee told her fellow graduates not to be swayed by what other people think.

"No matter what people tell us, our dreams are still our dreams," she said. "If you genuinely want to reach your highest goals, then the best thing you can do is to work relentlessly."

Celeste Dang, North's valedictorian, told her classmates to follow their hearts and pursue their dreams.

"Wherever you find yourself and whatever you're doing, follow your hearts and pursue your dreams," she said. "There is no better compass and not better destination."

Carmen Mariano, the principal at Archbishop Williams High School, retired after a 44-year career in education. Mariano began as a teacher at Sterling Junior High in 1970, rising through the ranks to become deputy superintendent of the Quincy school system. He departed the school department in 2007 to serve as AWHS' first president and later the school's principal. Mariano also racked up an impressive record as Quincy High's wrestling coach, winning four league titles and four sectional titles in 10 years.

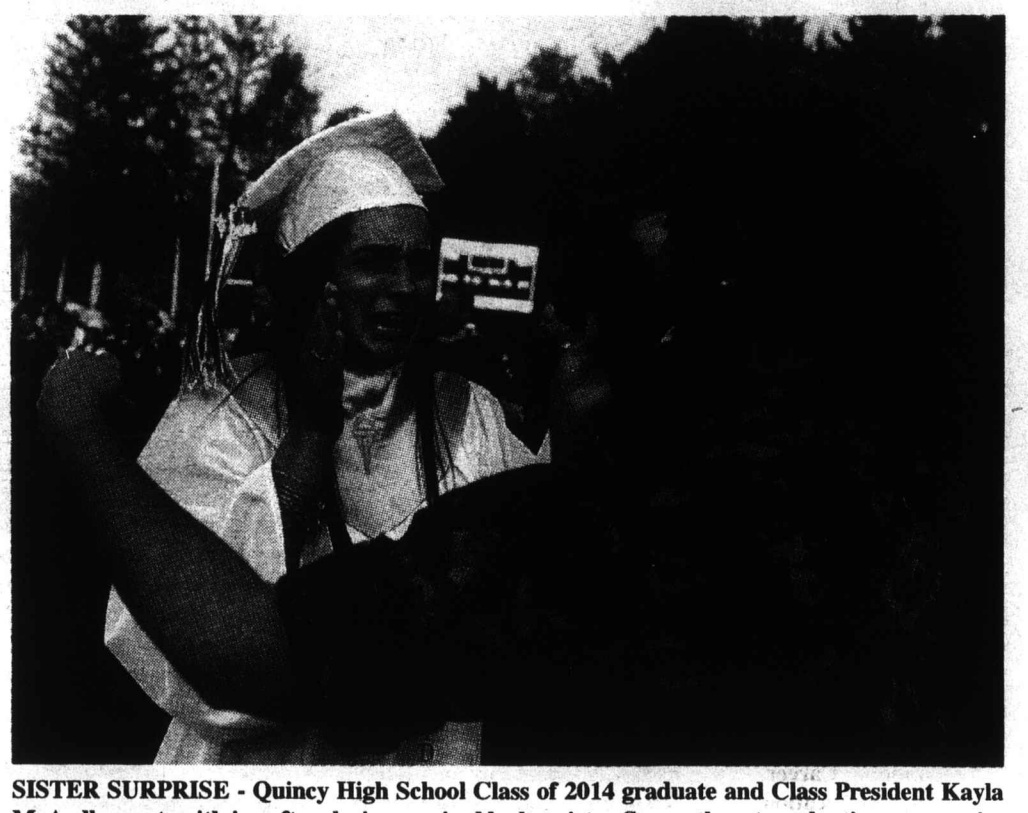

U.S. Marine Corps Gen. Joseph F. Dunford, Jr., was nominated by President Barack Obama to serve as the commandant of the Marine Corps. Dunford moved to Quincy at the age of 12 and attended the former St. Ann School and Boston College High School. His parents continue to reside in Merrymount.

On the 70th anniversary of the Allied invasion of Normandy, Robert Noble, an World War II Army veteran and ex-prisoner of war, recounted his experience as a POW to Quincy High students. He told the students they must persevere no matter how adverse the situation they face.

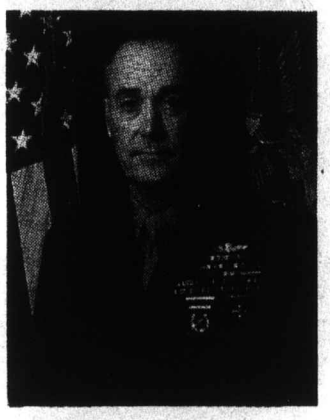

"No matter what happens to you you've got to keep going and things will turn out all right as long as you don't give up," Noble said.

Johnny Depp drew a crowd during the filming of "Black Mass," in which he plays Irish mob boss Whitey Bulger, in Squantum. Bulger and his longtime girlfriend, Catherine Greig, resided in the neighborhood before fleeing amidst a federal investigation. Grieg was portrayed in the film by Sienna

QUINCY'S 63RD ANNUAL Flag Day Celebration was a Star-Spangled sensation as an estimated 10,000 spectators lined the route of the Flag Day Parade and then were entertained by a dazzling fireworks display over Black's Creek at Pageant Field. Here Abbie Koch and Fox TV News Anchor Sorboni Banerjee wave to spectators along the parade route. Banerjee was the parade grand marshal. Abbie's grandfather, the late Richard J. The City Council approved a $268.52 million budget for FY15 in a 7-1 vote; Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee cast the lone dissenting vote. The council also approved the $12 million plan to renovate North Quincy's Teel Field and create a 157-vehicle parking lot to service the field and nearby North Quincy High School.

The School Department's $97.3 million budget for the upcoming school year was approved in a 6-1 vote, with Anne Mahoney voting in opposition.

Jeanne Reardon, the council's clerk of committee for 34 years, announced her retirement. Reardon began working as the clerk of committees in 1980. During her tenure, she worked with 41 different councillors and five mayoral administrations.

Councillor Doug Gutro returned from a 10-day trip to Pakistan, where he was part of a delegation of municipal officials from the Bay State. The delegation met with Pakistani administrators and visited historic sites in Islamabad, the nation's capital, and Lahore, a city of 7 million people.

"The food was spicy. The temperature was hot. The people were warm and the hospitality was endless," Gutro recalled. "It was a life changing trip."

A report by the state's Department of Housing and Community Development found widespread maintenance problems inside properties managed by the Quincy Housing Authority. The agency's inspectors noted concerns such as exposed wiring, holes in walls, improperly stored combustibles, and mold and mildew. In one case, raw sewage was found to be leaking through the floor of unit onto the stove in an apartment below. The state agency planned to begin inspecting more units as a result of its findings.

The Quincy Police and Fire Departments said they were stepping up their efforts to ensure public safety at the annual July 3 bonfire in Houghs Neck. Police Chief Paul Keenan said his department would be searching backpacks and coolers of anyone appearing to be under the age of

The city accepted a $3 million bid for the former Central Middle School. Plainville-based Edgewood Development planned to convert the building into 39 condominium units.

Deaths during June included:

JULY

The Massachusetts School Building Authority approved plans that would keep grades 5-8 in the new proposed new Sterling Middle School; the School Department had proposed moving fourth graders into the school from nearby Lincoln-Hancock in an attempt to alleviate overcrowding. The MSBA's preferred configuration for the new Sterling would hold 430 students, 50 more than the current building holds.

"This design enrollment recommendation will position the district to efficiently meet space capacity needs throughout future enrollment variations," the MSBA wrote in a letter to the city.

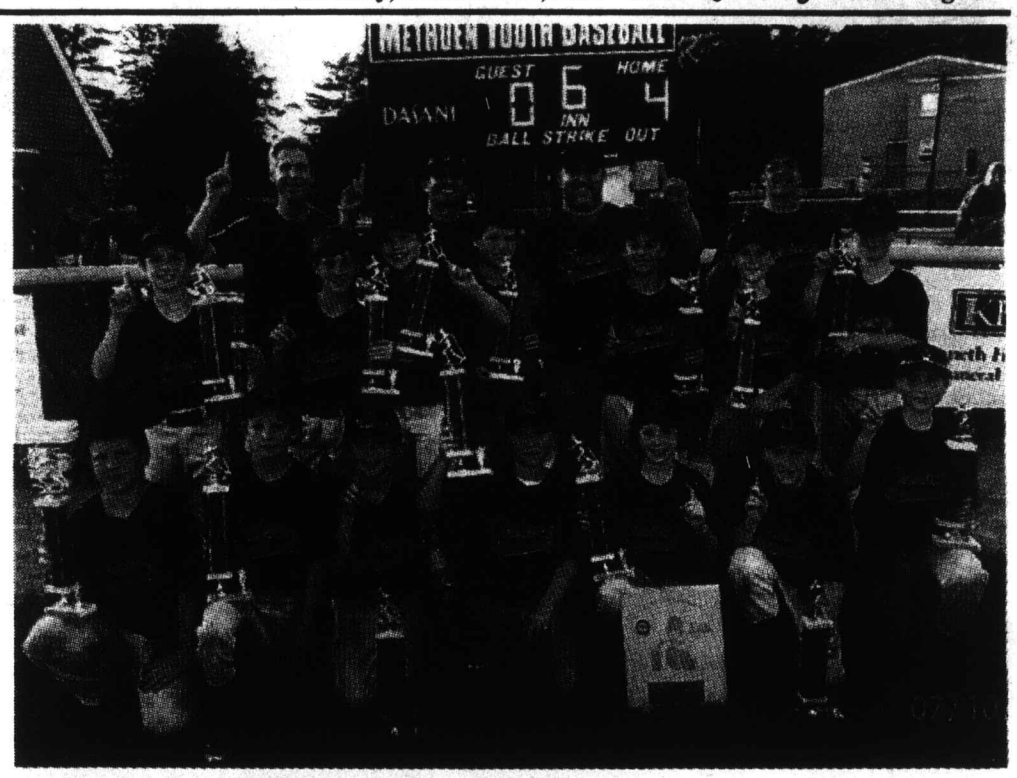

Twenty teams competed in the annual O'Connell-Thomson Memorial Basketball Tournament, the proceeds of which benefit scholarship funds at North Quincy High. Boston Celtics forward Kelly Olynyk made an appearance at the tournament.

The city said it would push ahead with construction of a track at Faxon Park despite Gov. Deval Patrick's vetoing $240,000 that had been earmarked for the project. House Majority Leader Ron Mariano said he would work his colleagues in the state house to ensure the veto was overridden.

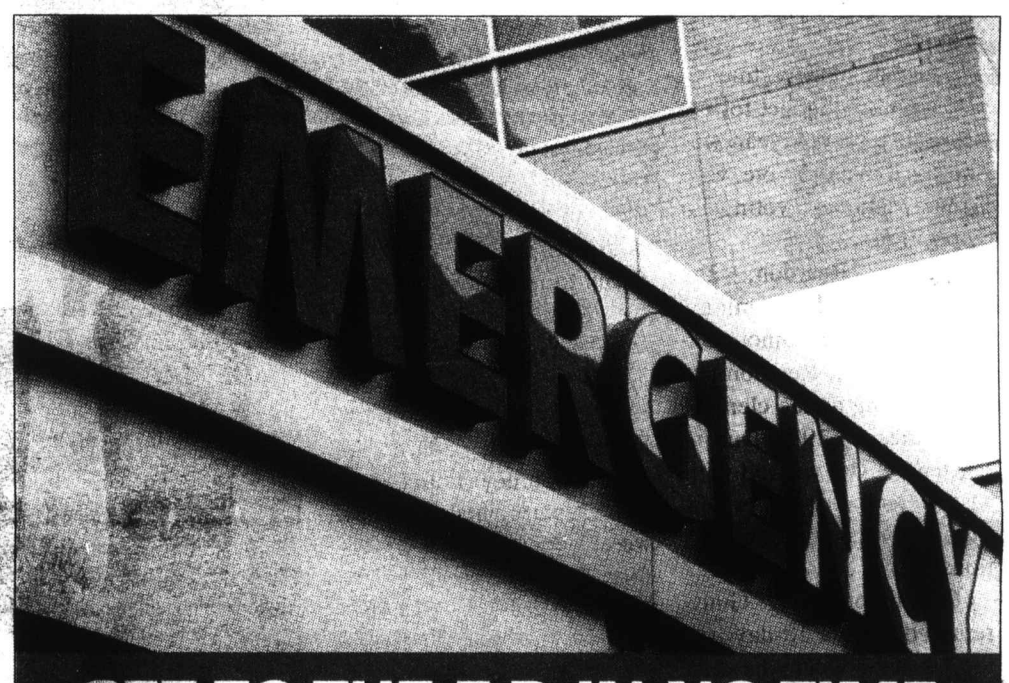

A wreath-laying ceremony was held on the 247th anniversary of John Quincy Adams' birth. Sara Georgini of the Massachusetts Historical Society praised the sixth president for the work he did as a diplomat to bring the War of 1812 to an end 200 years ago.

"He was an exceptional statesman, president, anti-slavery crusader, and an ardent proponent of national arts, science, and literature," she said. "Today I'd like to add another accolade: John Quincy Adams, peacemaker."

Richard DeCristofaro, Jr., the newly appointed principal of Central Middle School, said one of his first priorities would be to improve communication with parents and students to foster an environment that encouraged sharing ideas and information. DeCristofaro, the son of school Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, had been Central's assistant principal since December 2011.

"I think there are more avenues to show what is going on," the new principal said. "I think there are more ways of getting parents the information and that's why they are getting involved. More information is more welcoming and inviting them in to be involved."

A memorial bench was dedicated to fallen firefighter John T. Austin outside the West Quincy firehouse. Austin collapsed inside the station while responding to a call on July 8, 2013. Paul Moody, president IAFF Local 792, said he hoped the bench would be a place to sit and reflect on all the good Austin did in his life.

"Everyone in the department wanted to do something in his memory," Moody said. "It's going to be there a long time. Once we're gone 100 years from now it will still be there."

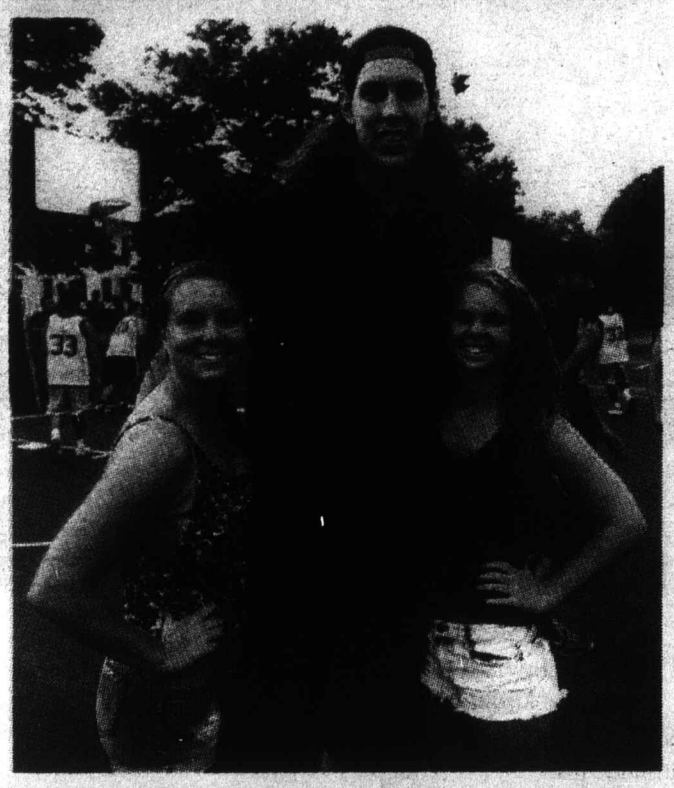

A federal appeals court upheld a lower court's ruling that Quincy cannot require contractors bidding on public construction projects to have an apprentice training program in place. But the city notched a partial victory, with the appeals court reversing the award of attorneys' fees to the plaintiffs, remanding that decision back to a lower court. The decision involved Quincy's 2010 Responsible Employer Ordinance, which a group of non-union contractors challenged when the solicited bids to build the new Central Middle School.

The Department of Public Works began using a porous paving material for tree wells installed on Adams Street. Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi implemented the program after seeing similar material used in Florida.

Mayor Thomas Koch selected Boston-based Redgate Real Estate Advisors to serve as a consultant to the city as Quincy moved forward with downtown redevelopment. Redgate was one of six firms who bid to serve in that capacity. Koch said Redgate's role would be to develop a strategy on how Officials from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) said they would begin inspecting federally funded units managed by the Quincy Housing Authority after state inspectors found numerous problems in state funded units.

AUGUST

Mayor Thomas Koch said city and school officials were weighing the possibility of using the former St. Mary School in West Quincy to alleviate overcrowding at Lincoln-Hancock.

"I'm going to be looking at the old St. Mary School to see what kind of condition that it is in, to see if that plays in anyway. For example, could that be just a kindergarten place? Could that take the pressure off of Lincoln-Hancock and just ease it up a little bit?" Koch said.

"The question is what kind of condition is that building in. You're not only talking about the educational requirements, but the ADA requirements today for public buildings are pretty extensive."

The mayor also said he would likely introduce a new name for the planned park between City Hall and the United First Parish Church. Originally, the park was to be known as Adams Green, but Koch indicated he wanted to honor John Hancock as well. He added that 4,000 engraved bricks removed from McIntyre Mall would be put back there during the park construction.

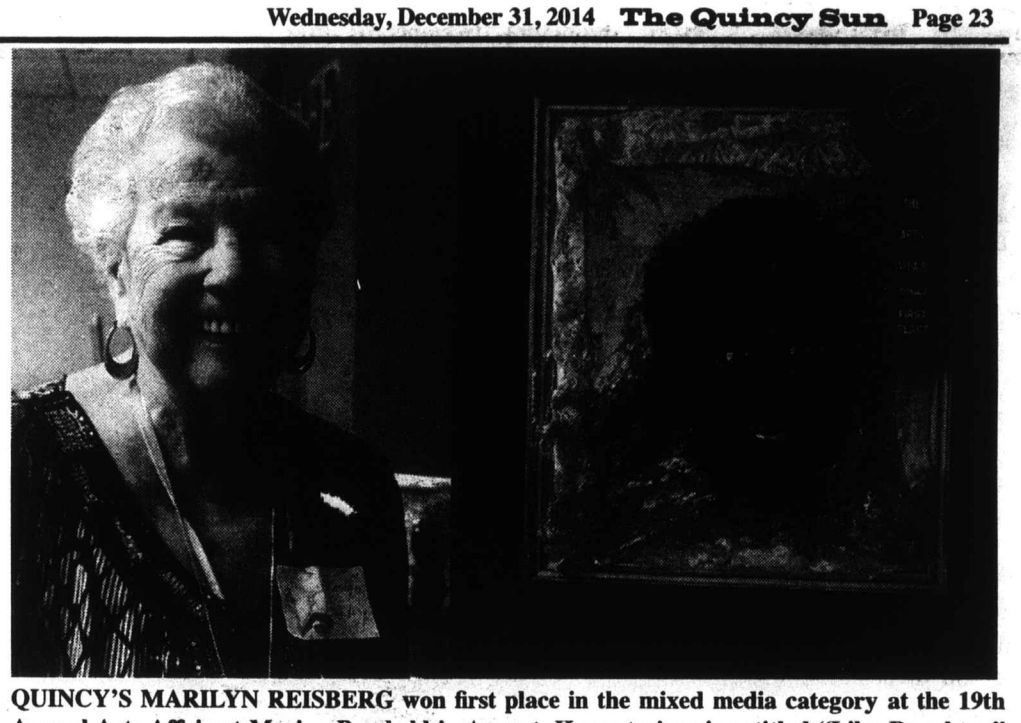

Roof and other exterior repair work was underway at the John Quincy Adams Birthplace on Franklin Street. The roof's western red cedar shingles were replaced by new ones made from the same type of wood at a cost of $64,000. Following that25 of the clapboards will be replaced, along with 10 window frames and a half-dozen or so window sashes. After that, the house will get a fresh coat of paint on the outside. The National Park Service allocated $70,000 for that work.

Vandals smashed windows and threw furniture around inside the Quincy United Methodist Church in Wollaston. The Rev. Dr. Susan Jarek-Glidden, the church's pastor, had one message for the vandals, "you need to get held if this is your idea of fun."

Leo Kelly resigned from his post as a commissioner of the Quincy Housing Authority. Kelly, 82, cited personal health reasons for his resignation.

Councillor Doug Gutro said he would schedule multiple meetings on Quincy Center redevelopment once the council returned from its summer recess. Among the topics he wanted to address were the city's plan to finance construction of Adams Green and how the city

Fire Chief Joseph Barron unveiled his official portrait, taken by Rebecca Liu, a 2014 graduate of North Quincy High School.

Residents gave a mixed response to a proposed condo development at the former Temple Beth El on Hancock Street. Quincy-based Boston Property Development had unveiled plans to raze the temple and construct a 53-unit building on site.

Former Mayor Francis X. McCauley and his wife, Sandra, celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary.

Jared Lyons received the Eagle Scout award for overseeing a renovation project at the M. Alicia Corea Fellowship Hall inside Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

The School Department completed its move into the newly renovated Coddington School Building – a 106-year-old building that underwent a yearlong renovation. The move went off without a hitch, according to Superintendent DeCristofaro.

"Our move went really smoothly. Everything is in place and we didn't miss a beat. The whole move was something that went very, very smoothly," he said, adding that his staff was thrilled to be in the renovated space.

The IT Department also moved to the renovated building. The Planning Department would move in in September.

An estimated 10,000 people attended the 27th annual August Moon festival in Quincy Center.

The Rev. Rebecca Froom was ready to lead her first worship service as the settled minister at the United First Parish Church. Froom, a Philadelphia native, replaced the Rev. Sheldon Bennett as minister at the church. She was the first woman named settled minister in the church's 375-year history.

"I like to think Abigail Adams is very pleased about that one," Froom said.

Gov. Deval Patrick signed into law a new bill that introduced stiffer penalties for convicted animal abusers. The bill was passed by the legislature in the wake of the Puppy Doe case in Quincy. Rep. Bruce Ayers of Quincy drafted the legislation.

Jane Kisielius retired from her position as Quincy Public School's coordinator of health services. She had served in that role since 2003 and joined the School Department in 1993 as a part-time nurse at the Squantum Elementary School. Kisielius' replacement was Rita Bailey, who had served as the nurse at Snug Harbor since 2005.

Quincy's 14-year-old all star baseball team advanced to the regionals in Freehold, N.J. They beat the Freehold team, 11-0, behind a shutout from pitchers Mark Monahan and John McDonald. The Quincy team then lost its next two games against teams from Delaware and Connecticut. Overall, the team finished with a 50-11 record on the season and won its second straight state title and fourth in the last six years.

McNamara, 78, Fire Department master mechanic; and Joseph M. Rudnicki, 75, retired School Department electronic technician.

SEPTEMBER

Councillors Brad Croall and Doug Gutro introduced a resolution seeking an update on the Quincy Housing Authority. The councillors' resolution came on the heels of a state report that identified widespread maintenance issues in the spring and a subsequent federal audit that found $500,000 in reimbursements was missing.

Councillor Margaret Laforest submitted a resolution calling for an update on blighted properties in the city. It was co-sponsored by Gutro, Kevin Coughlin, and Brian Palmucci.

Jennifer Manning was appointed the City Council's new clerk of committees. A lifelong Quincy resident, she spent the previous four years working in the Municipal Finance Department and two years before that with the Council on Aging.

An 18th century chariot once owned by Founding Father John Hancock was put on display at the Dorothy Quincy Homestead. The chariot had been seized from an unnamed British ship headed to the Caribbean in 1777. The Colonial Dames commissioned a $31,400 restoration of the chariot, paid for by community preservation funds.

Democratic Attorney General Martha Coakley and Republican Charlie Baker won their respective party primaries and would face each other in November's general election. Baker carried Quincy easily, 1,399 to 464, over Mark Fisher. Coakley lost in Quincy, garnering 2,885 votes to Treasurer Steve Grossman's 3,764.

Turnout in the primary was 16 percent in Quincy.

Shortly after earning the nomination, Baker earned the endorsement of Mayor Thomas Koch, a Democrat.

"I am very impressed with how he wants to partner with our cities. I'm impressed with his program for local aid and Chapter 90 funding – those things that are important to cities and towns, particularly this city," Koch said. "I think his program on the economic side – creating jobs – makes sense. So I'm thrilled to be endorsing his candidacy and look forward to working with him in the coming weeks to get him elected."

Coakley toured the Rosemary and Archie Early Learning Center in Quincy Point, joined by Gov. Deval Patrick and Rep. Ron Mariano, to tout her early education plans.

Joe Brill threw out the ceremonial first pitch before a Red Sox home game at Fenway Park. Brill had suffered a near fatal heart one year prior while at Fenway.

Copper thieves were blamed for starting an overnight three-alarm fire that ripped through Old City Hall. More than 40 firefighters using all of the city's fire apparatus were able to put out the fire and stopped it from causing major structural damage inside the 170-year-old historic building, which was undergoing $9 million in renovations.

Koch vowed to increase security at the site as a result of the fire, which started when an acetylene torch ignited common combustibles.

"It's hard to secure but obviously we need to do a better job of that," the mayor said. "There will be changes for sure."

OCTOBER

Mayor Thomas Koch said he planned to submit an ordinance to the City Council that would ban smoking outside City Hall and in McIntyre mall. Doing so, he explained, would increase safety in that area, which will be incorporated into Adams Green.

"I think (the ban) is another tool for police to use," the mayor said. "If you have a group of folks loitering out here – perhaps not openly violating the law but you are suspicious about what's going on – and they are all smoking, the police can say 'either put (the cigarette out) or move along' and normally they're going to move along."

Koch also said the city would not force the owner of a Hunt Street home to sell his property to make way for a new parking lot for North Quincy High; instead the project would be built around the property. The city had purchased six of the nine homes needed to make way for the parking lot and renovations to Teel Field.

The city of Boston closed the Long Island Bridge. Rep. Bruce Ayers, who represents the neighborhoods in Quincy affected by vehicles using the bridge, said ferry service should be used to access the island. If a new bridge were built, the public should be able to use the island, he added.

Quincy High head football coach Bill Reardon received the New England Patriots Coach of the Week Award after his team got off to a 5-0 start. Hall of Fame linebacker Andre Tippet presented the award to Reardon during one of the team's practices.

Police Chief Paul Keenan reassured Wollaston residents their neighborhood was safe following a shooting on Willow Avenue linked to two Boston gangs.

Deborah Finnigan was appointed the city's new traffic engineer.

The Zoning Board of Appeals gave its approval to a medical marijuana dispensary proposed for 216 Ricciuti Drive; final approval from state regulators was still required before the dispensary could open for business. Ermont, the company behind the proposal, expected to serve up to 2,050 patients in the first year after it opened the new facility. The company reached an agreement to provide up to $500,000 annually to the city.

"We've secured a more beneficial deal than any other community in the commonwealth when it comes to what we expect them to give back to the community," said Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci.

ward & Curran, said FEMA would likely make its decision on Quincy's appeal of new flood maps sometime in the spring of 2015.

A 122-year-old time capsule was unearthed at Faith Lutheran Church in celebration of the church's 125th anniversary. Inside was a book – likely either a Swedish hymnal or Bible – newspapers, an 1892 Swedish almanac, and Swedish coins from the same year. Water had seeped into the time capsule, leaving many of the items wet and moldy. In addition to the time capsule, workers discovered an incandescent light bulb left behind when the time capsule was placed.

Planning Director Dennis Harrington reported the city earned enough new tax revenue from Quincy Center to pay off $40 million in debt used to pay costs related to building Hannon Parkway. The city had paid $1.48 million in interest-only payments on that debt and generated roughly $1.5 million in new tax revenue from Quincy Center. Harrington said the city would be able to pay principal on that debt beginning in 2017, when Quincy would be required to pay both principal and interest.

A new, $800,000 ladder truck was unveiled. The new ladder truck, known as Ladder 5, was assigned to the North Quincy firehouse where it would replace a 20-year-old ladder. The new ladder included a 109-foot aerial and a 'jaws of life' hydraulic extraction tool.

The Park Department fielded more than 100 calls for downed trees and tree limbs after a nor'easter struck the city for two days, bringing soaking rains and high winds.

More than 300 people attended a wreath laying ceremony at the United First Parish Church in honor of John Adams' 279th birthday.

Deaths during October included:

Downey, personnel director for the Federal Reserve; Francis J. Sullivan, Eucharist minister at St. Ann's; Gerald F. Frazier, 80, retired state and Quincy police officer; Thomas G. Foley, D.M.D., 85; William E. Hickey, 85, attorney; John G. Ganzel, 76, Quincy firefighter; and Kathleen A. Libby, 55, co-owner Baxter Pharmacy.

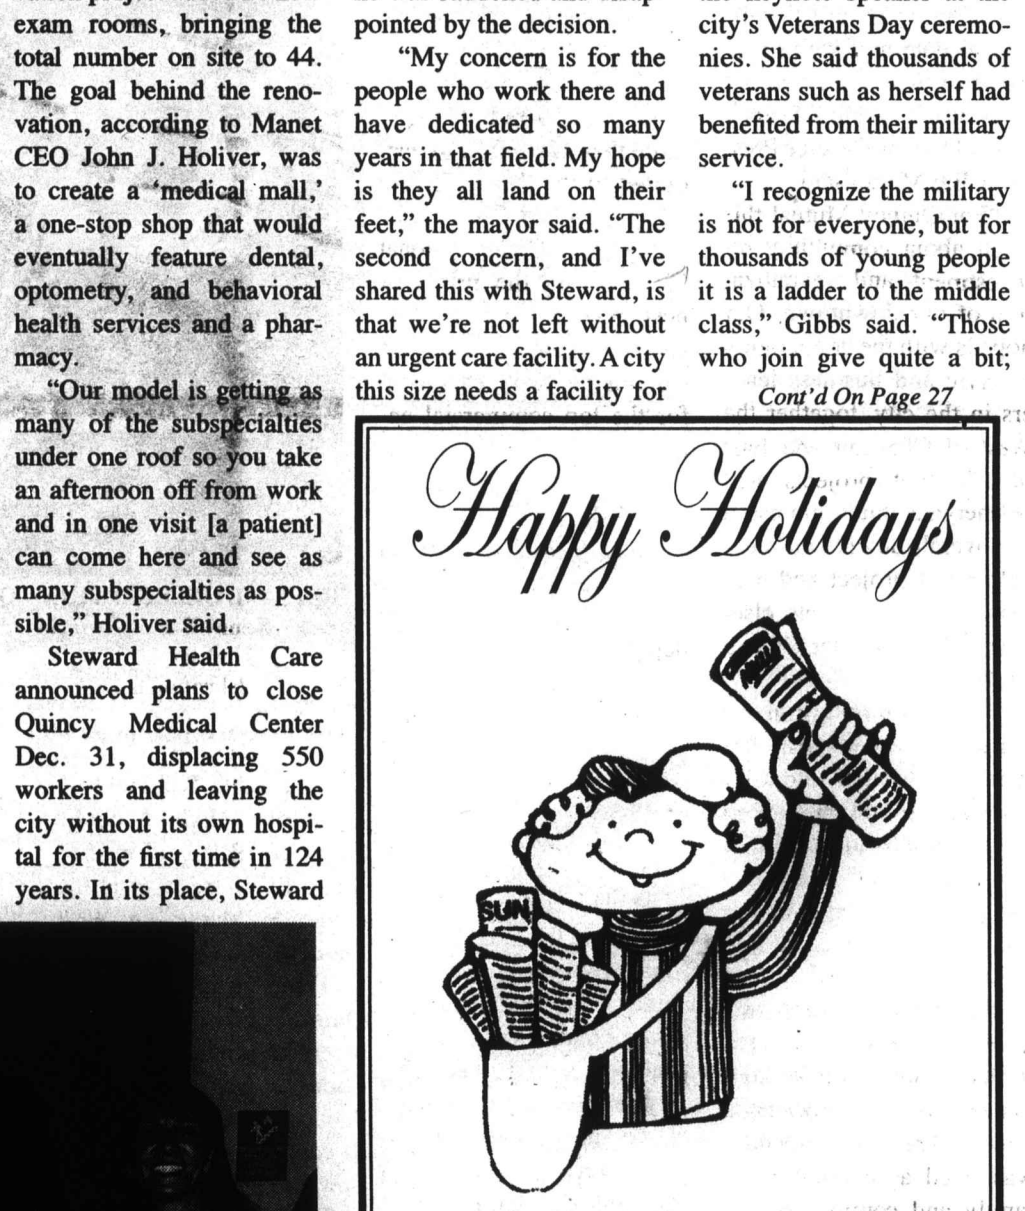

FAITH LUTHERAN CHURCH member Jack Mayo holds an incandescent lightbulb from the early 1890s that was found in a crawlspace behind the church cornerstone that was removed Oct. 18. Inside the cornerstone was a time capsule that was opened as part of the church's 125th anniversary celebration. The capsule - a copper box - was placed in the cornerstone in 1892. Unfortunately, the box was not properly sealed and much of the contents was spoiled by moisture and mold. Some Swedish coins were among the artifacts that were recovered and still in good shape after the capsule was opened.

NOVEMBER

Republican Charlie Baker carried Quincy en route to winning the race to become the Bay State's next governor. Baker received 13,397 votes in Quincy, besting Attorney General Martha Coakley's total of 12,249. Statewide, Baker garnered 48.46 percent of the vote to Coakley's 46.48 percent, winning by about 40,000 votes.

Two Quincy Democrats who faced challengers in the election – Sen. John Keenan and Rep. Ron Mariano – easily defeated their Republican challengers.

STEWARD HEALTH CARE announced Nov. 6 that it would close Quincy Medical Center - a landmark on Whitwell Street for 124 years - by the end of the year. Steward eventually closed the hospital at midnight Dec. 26 but maintained a 24-hour satellite emergency facility staffed by ER physicians and nurses at the location beginning Dec. 27. Steward said it would operate the satellite emergency facility until Dec. 31, 2015. In addition, Steward said a clinic on Miller Street would offer urgent care, radiology and lab services from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday.

Manet Community Health Center opened its renovated North Quincy facility. The $5 million renovation project added 26 new exam rooms, bringing the total number on site to 44. The goal behind the renovation, according to Manet CEO John J. Holiver, was to create a 'medical mall,' a one-stop shop that would eventually feature dental, optometry, and behavioral health services and a pharmacy.

"Our model is getting as many of the subspecialties under one roof so you take an afternoon off from work and in one visit [a patient] can come here and see as many subspecialties as possible," Holiver said.

Steward Health Care announced plans to close Quincy Medical Center Dec. 31, displacing 550 workers and leaving the city without its own hospital for the first time in 124 years. In its place, Steward said it would open a 24-hour satellite emergency facility and an urgent care center at 54 Miller St., West Quincy. Mayor Thomas Koch said he was saddened and disappointed by the decision.

"My concern is for the people who work there and have dedicated so many years in that field. My hope is they all land on their feet," the mayor said. "The second concern, and I've shared this with Steward, is that we're not left without an urgent care facility. A city this size needs a facility for urgent care."

Army Reserve Lt. Col. Diana Gibbs, a veterans employment specialist for the Quincy Career Center, was the keynote speaker at the city's Veterans Day ceremonies. She said thousands of veterans such as herself had benefited from their military service.

"I recognize the military is not for everyone, but for thousands of young people it is a ladder to the middle class," Gibbs said. "Those who join give quite a bit; however, they get a quite a bit in return."

Quincy Mutual and Gate Residential unveiled plans to construct 400 residential units and thousands of square feet of street-level retail space along Chestnut Street in Quincy Center. The first phase of the project, known as West of Chestnut, will include two six-story buildings with 169 total units and 12,000 square feet of retail space. Quincy Mutual aimed to begin construction on West of Chestnut in early 2015; the second phase, East of Chestnut, would be built after that.

"Quincy Mutual has invested more than $23 million to date and we're prepared to invest more to get these projects built," Quincy Mutual Executive Vice President Jim Moran said.

"For Quincy Mutual this is all about community reinvestment and revitalization of our downtown. Our hope is with the cooperation of civic and business leaders in the city, together the West of Chestnut and East of Chestnut projects will re-energize and jumpstart the overall downtown redevelopment project and help inspire other projects elsewhere in the greater Quincy Center area."

Nauset Construction reported the three-alarm fire that tore through Old City Hall in September caused an estimated $1.5 million in damage and would delay completion of ongoing renovations in the building until June 2015.

The School Committee gave Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro high marks during a performance review. The superintendent was rated as exemplary in family and community engagement and proficient in instructional leadership, management and operation skills, and in his ability to create a positive, professional culture.

Quincy High defeated North Quincy High, 33-6, in the 82nd annual city football championship on Thanksgiving Day. The Presidents' aerial attack was nearly flawless, with senior quarterback James Lam going 9-11 for 177 yards and three touchdowns. Lam's three scores gave him 35 on his career, breaking a school record previously held by Chris Noble. Lam also notched his third straight victory over North on Turkey Day.

On the ground, junior running back Jahvae Handsom-Fields had 156 yards and two touchdowns for Quincy. Handsom-Fields eclipsed the 1,000-yard mark on the season during the game as well as the 2,000-mark for his two-year varsity career.

North's senior quarterback, Andrew Kiley, had 12 completions for 126 yards and a touchdown during the game; he added 39 yards rushing on 12 carries, including three for first downs as the Red Raiders tried to pull within one score at the end of the first half. Senior Eric Cohane-Jones had three catches for 48 yards on the game, including a 14-yard score.

Thousands of people attended the 62nd annual Quincy Christmas Parade. This year's parade featured more than 100 units, all decorated to the theme of "An Old Fashioned Christmas." Bethany Congregational Church won the prize for best non-commercial float and the Quincy Chamber of Commerce took the crown for the top commercial entry.

Deaths during November included:

John J. Wall, Jr., 59, an EMT supervisor; Theodore F. Kressler, Jr., 86, retired deputy Quincy fire chief; Dr. Joseph S. Nicastro, 95, a school administrator; Dr. Mary C. Lydon, retired school department director of physical education; Matteo J. Panarelli, longtime Boston Gear Works employee; George P. Roche, 77, retired special investigator for the Norfolk County district attorney; Edward J. Holland, longtime high school ROTC instructor; Dorothy L. Lynch, school department employee; and Sylvia V. Carlson, 105, retired Quincy schoolteacher.

The city's downtown redevelopment consultant said Quincy's proximity to Boston and surrounding suburbs, access to public transportation, and historic sites are among the factors that boosts the city's chances of redeveloping the downtown.

"What's critical for everybody to understand about downtown Quincy is you have many, many opportunities – many more than positives if you will – than challenges in my view and I've been around the block many times and seen places that were not as promising as this," said Pamela McKinney of Byrne McKinney & Associates. McKinney had been hired by Redgate Real Estate Advisors, the city's new consultant, as a subcontractor. She and Redgate officials said they would have further details on the city's next steps in early 2015.

Councillor Doug Gutro faulted Mayor Thomas Koch over the cost of having surveyors complete elevation certificates for the 4,600 Quincy properties in flood plains. Some 1,400 surveys had been completed at a cost of $490,000 to the city; if all eligible homeowners sought a survey it would have cost $1.6 million. Gutro had been critical of the mayor's decision not to appeal the new FEMA flood maps sooner.

"Just as the decision not to appeal in the first place was made unilaterally by the administration," Gutro

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

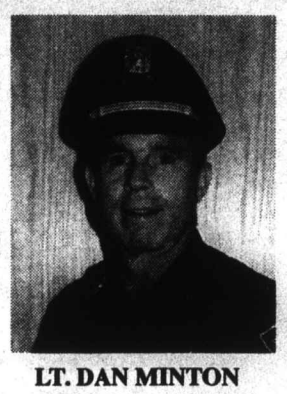

On Saturday, December 20, 2014 at approximately 12:50 a.m., Officer Steve DesRoche was working a private detail at the Cathay Pacific restaurant when he was asked by one of the employees to examine a credit card which was electronically denied. The employee told the Officer that the credit card was the second one denied from the same diner in the group who were seated in the dining room. The Officer examined the Bank of America Visa card and then asked the Waiter who was serving the group how much the bill was for and he said it totaled $184.95.

After the Waiter identified the male suspect attempting to use the cards, Officer DesRoche approached the group and asked the suspect for some form of identification. The suspect provided a New York Learner's Permit which showed the same name on the credit cards. Officer DesRoche took the suspect aside and was about to ask some questions when the suspect said, "No man - it's ok...we'll pay cash".

Four other individuals in the group walked up to the cash register and paid the bill with two (2) hundred dollar bills. The suspect then asked the Officer why he was being detained, then suddenly became loud and argumentative in the presence of other diners. Officer DesRoche advised the suspect to calm down, to lower his voice and sit down. After the suspect sat down, he was asked if the credit cards he tried to pay his bill with were his and he caustically said, "Yeah...that's my name on them." The suspect was advised that both cards were denied and that there was an issue with the numbers on them.

At this time, the suspect started moving his hands around under the table cloth out of the Officer's sight, so he was told to place his hands on top of the table where they could be seen. The suspect again became combative and stood up in front of the Officer.

After being instructed to sit back down, the suspect sat but took out his phone and began texting. The Officer continued questioning the suspect but he just ignored him. When Officer DesRoche asked the suspect if he was going to cooperate, the suspect put his left hand into his pocket.

LT. DAN MINTON

Concerned for his well being, the suspect was told to stand up and once he did this, the Officer attempted to handcuff him and search for weapons. The suspect became aggressive and began flailing his arms to avoid being handcuffed, striking the Officer in the left cheek/jaw area with his left elbow. The suspect was told to stop resisting and that he was now under arrest.

As the struggle ensued and concerned that the suspect's entourage might get involved, the Officer told the Cathay employees to call the station for help. After a few moments, Officer DesRoche was able to pin both arms of the suspect against a partition wall and hold him in a rear wrist lock while reaching for his radio to advise Quincy Communications that he needed assistance. The Officer refrained from using his mace due to the close proximity of diners, however he did threaten the suspect with use of it if he didn't stop resisting. The suspect was then handcuffed and Officer DesRoche radioed responding units to slow down but continue on their way.

The suspect was then searched and a total of 16 credit cards with his name were found on him. The suspect, a 28 year old Brooklyn, New York resident, was placed under arrest and charged with, "Assault on a Police Officer, Resisting Arrest, Disorderly Conduct and Uttering." Sgt. James McNeil and Officer David Levine arrived on scene to assist.

Officer DesRoche now had the time to closely exam the credit cards and the card receipts used at the restaurant. The last four digits on both credit card receipts did not match the last four numbers on the actual card(s) itself. The Officer was aware that the fraudulent activity was known as "Skimming," when someone obtains credit card details, copies them onto a bogus card and then uses it. Skimmers are often people who work in some type of sales and swipe the customer(s) credit card(s) through a pocket-size device with a scanning slot which resembles a pager worn by these individuals on their belt or kept in their pocketbook. The process of swiping the 'good' cards takes only a few seconds and can be done quickly and inconspicuously without the card owner or another employee noticing. Once the information is swiped from the magnetic strip, it is stored into memory which then can be copied to a counterfeit card with complete security features on them. The fact that the suspect had 16 credit cards all with his name on them led the Officer to believe that the suspect was aware of the cards 'status' and was a conscious and active participant in this scam.

After completing the detail, Officer DesRoche filed his report and with this information, additionally charged the suspect with "16 counts of Possession of Fraudulent/Stolen Credit Card(s) and one count each of Possession of 4 or more Fraudulent/Stolen Credit Card(s), Uttering a Forged Instrument, Using False/Fraudulent Credit Card under $250.00 and Identity Fraud. Nice Work!

Home Decorating Tips

By BARBARA GRACEFFA

My New Year's resolution is to downsize (but stay in my current home). What tips do you have on what to keep for furniture and accessories? Betty

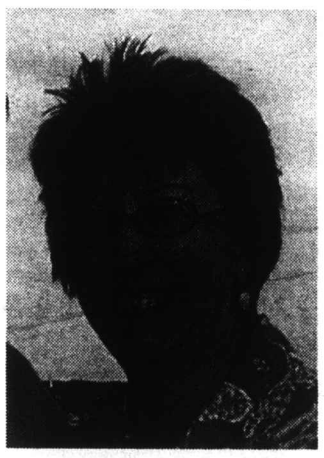

Above all, keep furniture and accents that are both functional and beautiful. Also consider the comfort and condition of the furniture and its scale for the room.

Don't overlook an item's versatility either. Keep smaller chairs and tables that you can easily move from one room to another when you need them. Hang on to double-duty furnishings, too, like a small trunk or storage ottoman than can serve as a coffee table.

Also, keep end tables with drawers, skirted tables, and other pieces that provide extra storage (in case you move to a smaller home in the future).

When it comes to accent pieces, it is often hard to part with sentimental pieces but if you keep them, be sure to place them in a position of honor. If you have a collection of Aunt Mary's china or your grandmother's hope chest and they do not fit in the vision of your new downsized home, find another family member who might want them or donate them to charity. If you decide to sell them on Craig's List or e-bay, use the money to purchase new window treatments, pillows, or a new piece of art for your home.

To achieve a new look, move some items from one room to another, paint the walls a new color, or swap items with a family member or a friend.

Dear Readers,

The biggest challenges to downsizing and de-cluttering are getting started, staying focused, and developing new habits so you do not end up in the same place with all that extra "stuff." On January 7 at 7 p.m., I will be teaching a free evening seminar at the Thomas Crane Library on Downsizing with Style: Tips from an Interior Decorator. Bring your notebook and questions and I'll share some more tips on the subject.

Do you have a question on interior decorating? Send it to barbara@sec-interior.com and it may get printed in a future issue of The Quincy Sun.

Schedule New Year DIY Resolutions

THIS IS A HAMMER

By Samantha Mazzotta

Question: You've mentioned before that certain home-repair tasks should be handled during specific seasons. I can understand not wanting to fix the roof in cold weather, but shouldn't house damage be addressed immediately? -- Cliff in Mobile, Alabama

Answer: While many home-maintenance tasks are better performed at specific times of the year, you're right -- damage should be repaired as soon as possible, particularly to a home's exterior. That certainly means a DIYer may find himself or herself tacking down a replacement shingle in frosty weather, or carefully thawing an ice dam that threatens to destroy a gutter.

But, say that several damaged shingles need to be replaced, or the gutter is in good shape but just needs some cleaning and a patch or two. More extensive maintenance and repairs should take place in warm months, so that patching material and roofing cement can cure properly.

That's why now, at the start of the new year, is a good time to rough out a home maintenance calendar. It doesn't have to be precise -- you don't have to block out exact days (unless you want to) -- but breaking down certain tasks by month, quarter or season can really keep your maintenance on track.

January and February, with cold temperatures, dormant plants and few holiday get-togethers to worry about, are good months to reorganize the workroom or garage, sharpen tools and mower blades, and draw up a budget for maintenance or improvement projects.

March through early May get busier: late pruning of shrubs and trees needs to be done before the last frost. Garden soil needs to be turned, fertilizer put down and lawns' bare spots reseeded. Exterior damage that didn't need immediate attention should be repaired now. Air-conditioning systems need their annual check-up by a professional.

The hot summer months, June through early September, are prime time for both exterior and interior maintenance and repair. Painting and remodeling are easier with the windows thrown open to allow fresh air in. Roofing cement cures properly. Balance all this with regular lawn care, and it's a busy time.

By late September, heating-system inspection and chimney cleaning need to be scheduled or completed -- ahead of the inevitable rush that comes during the first big cold snap. Gardens are harvested and lawns prepared for the cold months. Up north, it's time to put away lawn-care tools and set out marker stakes to keep plow trucks from churning up the lawn edges.

So, while you're making more detailed resolutions to take care of yourself and your family as the year begins, remember to make plans to take care of your home, too. The best New Year to you all.

HOME TIP: Home-improvement stores often offer seasonal maintenance tips, and your computer's office software may include a maintenance calendar template to help you get organized.

One Reporter's Best Sports Moments Of 2014

By BILL GRIFFIN

As the year is about to pass, most who are lucky enough to be paid for watching and writing about games have memories of moments and players who have graced their sporting life for the past 12 months.

I present mine with an admission. This is a personal offering of the best of what I saw, of what I witnessed. It is not intended as a slight to those I was not fortunate enough to watch, athletes and teams from the city who accomplished much over the past year.

The best of the moments:

Quincy vs. North Quincy basketball: A great writer of fiction could not have done better than this. It was the second round of the tournament. The game was at North. The two had split the regular-season series. The two had not met in the tournament in 34 years. It was played just two weeks after Quincy had handed North its only loss of the season after the Red Raiders had rolled off 19 straight.

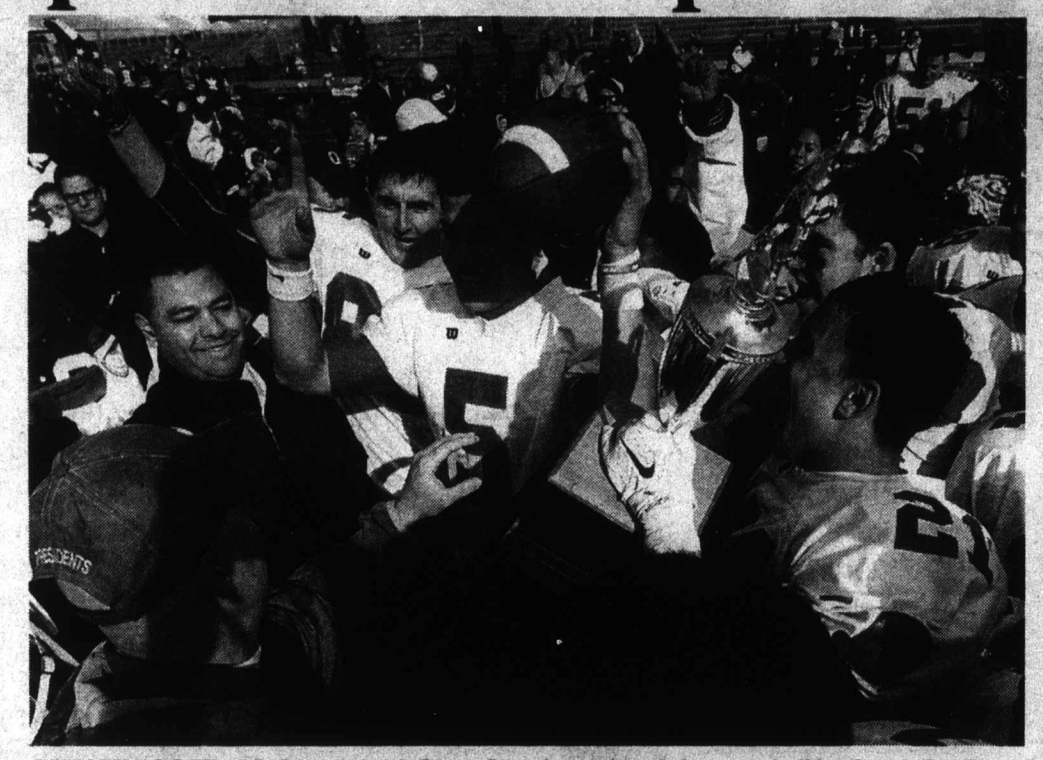

All seats were filled two hours before tap-off. The crowd was shut off at 1,500. This was a game which would be forever forged in the imagination of all who saw and played it. It was Quincy vs. North, it was win-or-go-home in the tournament, it was for the city championship.

North had a slim lead throughout. Solomon Umoren nailed a three-point jumper as the shot clock expired from deep on the left wing to up the lead to eight in the final three minutes and seal it for North.

There were unforgettable images. Chris Callahan crashing the boards and scoring 20 for Quincy. Efthim Butka knocking home jumper after jumper for North. Kyle Richardson controlling a game of high emotion. The mass of red and black spilling onto to the floor after it was over. And one more thing. With all the passion on both sides, there was not one hint of trouble on or off the court. The best of the best.

North Quincy softball: I stood in the North dugout for its final game of the year, a cool, damp day at McCoy against Quincy. It was not an easy year. North did not win a game. Several veteran players decided not to play. Coach Jim Connor had to recruit from his home room to fill his roster. For most games, the Red Raiders had nine or ten players. An injury would mean a forfeit.

But they stayed with it, they grew close as a team, they got better and they had fun. Players like Madison Hally, Lauren Gambon and Sarah Franklin led and taught their mates. Lopsided losses early in the season turned into close games as the spring grew warm and the ground thawed.

QUINCY FOOTBALL Quarterback James Lam is presented the game ball by Coach Bill Reardon after tossing three touchdown passes in the Presidents' 33-6 win over North Quincy in the 82nd annual city football championship Thanksgiving morning. Lam set a new school career touchdown passing mark with 35. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

They trailed, 10-3 entering the final inning against tournament-bound Quincy. They rallied for four runs. They jumped and laughed, and rooted for each other to keep the season alive for one more chance, for one more at-bat. They fell short, 10-7. But did they did not lose. They surely did not lose.

Quincy vs. North football. First, there was the greatness of James Lam and Jahvae Handsom-Fields on the same field on the same team at the same time. Remember it well. It may not soon pass this way again. There was also a sense of completeness for Quincy. This was largely a senior team. They ran off three straight winning seasons and won eight games in a year for the first time in 24 years. They made the playoffs for the first time in more than a decade. They were not a group blessed by good fortune, but they always worked, played hard, and won three straight on Thanksgiving. It ended the way it should have ended.

Grace Geary's 1000th point: This was another one when truth was better than fiction. She scored her 1,000th career point on the same floor at North Quincy where her grandfather Knobby Nolan carved out a legend as a basketball coach. She had 30 against Hingham. She forced nothing. She played her usual brilliant, complete basketball game. She did not know how many points she needed to reach 1,000. She didn't know why fans and teammates flooded the court to congratulate her. There was a basketball game going on. She wanted to get back on defense.

On walks to the bus stop as a little girl, her grandfather told Grace to always follow through when she shot the ball. Coach, don't worry. She followed through.

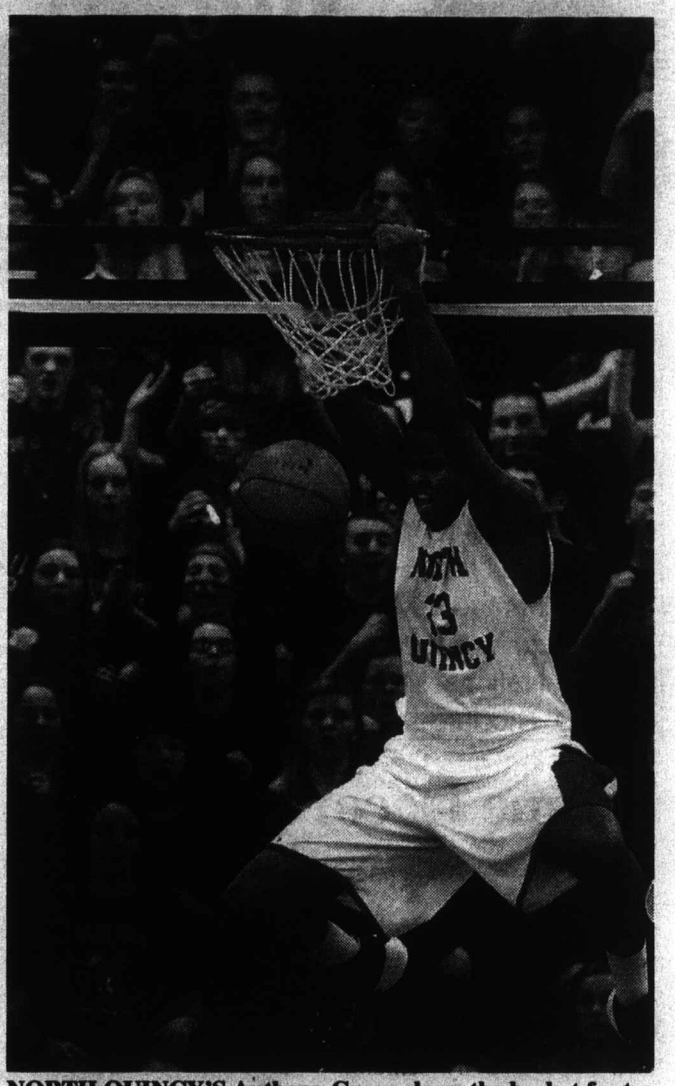

Quincy vs. North Quincy baseball: Quincy leads 9-0 in the last inning. Cody Desmond could easily score the 10th and final run. Coach Pat Bryan holds him at third. Bryan inserts a pinch-runner. His name is Ben Bardon and he is a special needs student. His nickname is Swiper. He loves baseball, he loves the players and they love him. Johnny Marsinelli bloops a single to left, and Bardon races home with the game's final run. The crowd cheers, and his teammates embrace Swiper as if they had all just won the whole world. It is what sports should be all about.

North vs. Newton North basketball: For the second straight year, North stuns heavily-favored Newton in the tourney before a packed gym at UMass-Boston. The Red Raiders never lead until the final seconds when Jackie Chen, all 5'9" of him, grabs an offensive rebound and cashes two free throws. Efthim Butka keeps North close with more big-game shooting and Kyle Richardson takes over another game in the fourth period. It puts North into the sectional finals for the second straight year after a 40-year absence. It is a wonderful two-year ride with great players and great kids.

Saxon Bresnahan's no-hitter: There are some no-hitters that are gifts or flukes. There are some that are so dominant they should be framed on a gold plaque. Bresnahan's was of the dominant type. Against Pembroke, she struck out 18, walked none, permitted one baserunner and only four batted balls out of the infield in seven innings. She could have have pitched until the moon rose and not given a hit.

What made it all so charming was that she was completely unaware of the no-hitter until two reporters approached her in the parking lot. She was sitting on the trunk of a car chatting with her catcher Angelina Avitable. Bresnahan didn't know. Avitable didn't know. Bresnahan said she was glad of it because thoughts of a no-hitter would have made her nervous. It's great to be young.

North girls vs. Rockland – I know it's more basketball, but it was the best game I saw all season. North played without Patriot League All Stars Jane Minton and Maya Umoren. The Red Raiders were down by 13 late in the third. Grace Geary went for 29 points, seven rebounds, five assists, five steals and three three-pointers. She scored nine points in the final 1:50. Two deep threes and a running left-handed hook with 13 seconds left to win the game by two. Tristine Thong and Camille Mullaney cashed clutch buckets near the end. Some games have great drama. Some have great basketball. This had both.

NORTH QUINCY'S Anthony Green slams the basket for two points in the Red Raiders' 65-56 second round win over the Quincy Presidents in last spring's basketball tournament. A capacity crowd of 1,500 fervent fans filled the North Quincy gymansium in the first tournament meeting between the two basketball programs in 34 years.

Quincy - North Quincy Hockey Renew Tradition

Presidents Win Thriller Over Rival Red Raiders

By BILL GRIFFIN

It has become a tradition, a fine part of the city's sporting life.

Each December, Quincy and North Quincy play each other in the first round of the annual Quincy Youth Holiday Tournament. The parking lot is filled more than an hour before the game. Cars and trucks spill over into a church lot along Sea Street.

Every seat is taken. Fans stand and ring the near end of the rink seven and eight deep. Every crack of the building is filled. Balloons flutter in the bleachers. The sections are divided into white-and-blue against black-and-red. The noise starts before the first puck drops and does not stop until the final buzzer.

This year, the two rivals played a game worthy of their supporters. As is often the case in these games, it was decided by seniors. Senior forwards Brian O'Callaghan and Patrick Freeman scored third-period goals and senior goalie Ryan Higgins made every important save to give Quincy a thrilling 3-2 opening-round win over North at the Quincy Youth Arena last Friday night.

The win lifted the Presidents into the championship round against Milton who defeated King Philip, 6-4.

"Give North Quincy all the credit. They gave us all we could handle," said Quincy coach Ted Walsh. "I think the thing that pleased me most was we found a way to win. It may not have been pretty, but we found a way. This was a huge win for us."

"O'Callaghan and Freeman. Freeman and O'Callaghan. That's what we talked about all week in practice. Don't let those two beat you, but that is easier said than done. They are easily the two best players we've seen this year," said North coach Matt Gibbons.

From forward to goalie to defense, there was little to choose between the two.

• North's first line of Timmy Glynn, Mike Finn and Kevin Mock skated evenly with Freeman, O'Callaghan and Ryan Harty. Finn had a beautiful finish for a goal and an even better pass to set up North's second score, both of which came in the third period. In the final period, the two teams combined for 32 shots on net, four goals, and had the crowd howling with excitement.

"I thought we skated well with their top line," said Gibbons. "The difference was they finished one more scoring chance than we did.

"Finn played a fantastic game," said Higgins.

But Quincy was just a touch better. O'Callaghan had a goal, an assist, and buried a loose puck from close range for what proved to be the game-winner at 4:55 of the third. Freeman, always the marksman, put the Presidents ahead to stay when he picked a tiny open patch of net on the short side no bigger than a bullseye on a dart board early in the third.

"You can't give Freeman any space because if you do, he'll hit it," said Gibbons.

• Higgins and North's Kevin Doherty were brilliant in net. Higgins upped his record against North to 4-1-1 and made 21 saves. The biggest came after Finn drew North within 3-2 with 6:09 left in the game. Minutes later, Finn gained control in the slot and had a point-blank chance. Higgins stood up, cut down the angle and smothered the shot in his stomach to preserve the lead.

"It helps to have a senior goalie. No panic. Ryan has been consistent for us all season," said Walsh.

"The big thing was my teammates gave me a clear line of vision to see the puck. They opened a lane for me and I saw the puck well," said Higgins.

Doherty was terrific. He made 33 saves, 15 in the final period when Quincy applied relentless pressure. He stopped breakaways, clean chances from the slot and slap shots through screens. He controlled his rebounds, played solid positional goal, and gave his team a chance to win. Doherty succeeds All Stars Nolan Greene and James Dunn who played excellent goal for the Red Raiders over the past five years. He has shown himself worthy of the challenge.

"Unbelievable," said Walsh. "His improvement over the past year has been amazing. It's a tribute to how hard he's worked. He played a great game against us."

"He had a good start against Duxbury (a 2-0 loss), and I think that helped his confidence," added Gibbons.

• The defense and forechecking of each team was strong. Quincy's White Line of Sean Brennick, James O'Leary, Aidan Pugsley and Pat Quirk skated their lanes and stayed with their checks all night. Defensemen Owen Lynch, Brandon Beal, Steve Ross and John Quirk kept everything clean in front of Higgins and prevented any second chances.

"It was our best defensive game of the season, by far," said Walsh. "Our White Line just ground it out all night. They give us a gritty, physical presence which is something that we're trying to build."

Seniors Chris Gorman and Freddy Flynn were tough up front for North. Gorman was excellent when North was shorthanded, preventing two goals late in the second by staying with a check in front of the net and completely selling out to block a slap shot from the top of the slot.

Mike Monahan, Cam White, Matt McDonald and Kevin McDonald were steady and sure in front of Doherty in the face of Quincy's strong attack.

"Gorman is an example of what a kid can do if he works hard enough. He is so tenacious, he never lets go of a play," said Gibbons. "Our defense played well. Kevin McDonald is actually a forward, but since we moved him back to defense, it's made a big difference.

• There were only two penalties in the cleanly-played game, but they both played a role in the outcome. After the two had battled scoreless for nearly two periods, Quincy scored on the power play. O'Callaghan's forechecking set up the goal. Beal grabbed a clearing pass, settled the puck and fired it stick-side to the far corner for a 1-0 lead with 1:05 left in the second.

North tied it at 1-1 just two minutes into the third on a two-on-one when Finn rushed down the left wing and slipped a perfect feed across to Matt McDonald who found the open side for the goal. Just over a minute later, Freeman picked a sliver on the short side for a 2-1 Quincy lead with assists to Harty and Ross. O'Callaghan rapped home a loose puck on an assist from Harty to put the Presidents up 3-1 with 9:05 left.

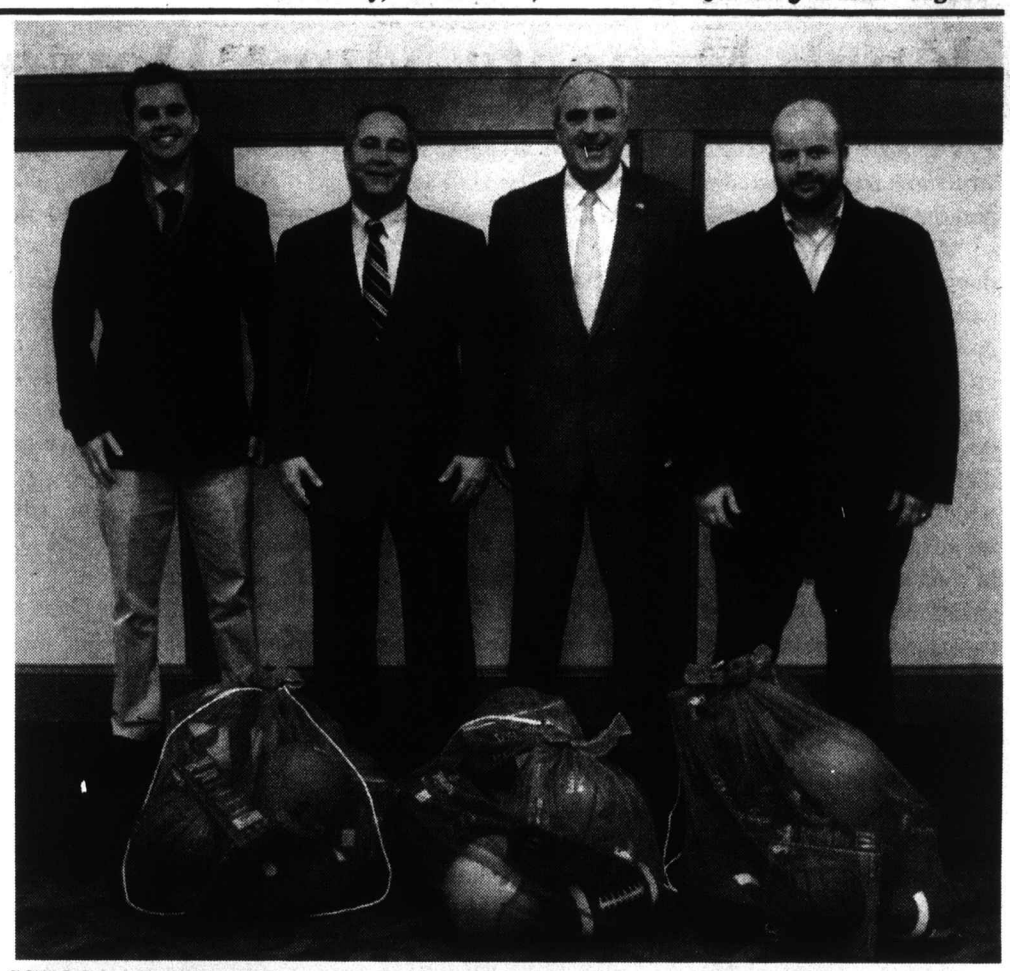

Finn cut it to 3-2 with 6:09 left when he found the top corner with a backhander from close range with assists to Andrew Kiley and Sean Farnham.

The second penalty of the game, an interference call against North with 2:59 left, halted a three-on-two break and forced the Red Raiders to play shorthanded for 1:30 when they were trying to press for the tie.

When it was over, Higgins talked about the night and the victory.

"It's the biggest game of our regular season," he said. "Everyone from school comes to the game and there are people I know from all over the city here. I love the noise. I like to hear the people cheer and heckle me. It adds to the game I like to hear the crowd and it was loud tonight."

One reporter's three stars of the game: 1. O'Callaghan. 2. Doherty. 3. Freeman and Finn (tie).

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was just another night in the Quincy Youth Hockey Holiday Tournament. Just another night.

After 15 goals, 60 shots on net and a near-magical comeback, there were two lessons learned from one wild and crazy night of hockey.

First, Patrick Freeman could score from the middle of Wollaston Beach. Second, if Quincy plays as they did in the third period for the rest of the season, the Presidents will win many games.

Freeman scored four times and added an assist. Quincy skated and swarmed the offensive end for four goals and 20 shots on net in the third period, but fell just shy to Milton, 8-7 in the championship game Sunday night.

It was Milton's fourth title in the five-year history of the tourney. Milton edged Quincy, 5-4 for the crown last year.

In the consolation round, Timmy Glynn scored twice and junior goalie Kevin Doherty made 21 saves to lift North Quincy to a 3-2 decision over King Phillip.

Quincy was down, 7-3 after two. The Presidents trailed, 7-4 with 10:00 left and 7-5 with 8:00 showing. They were behind, 8-5 with 6:00 left, 8-6 with 1:00 showing, and 8-7 with 30 seconds remaining. But they never stopped. They skated and hit and checked and put the puck on net. It almost worked a wonder.

"We said one word to them after the second period. Effort," said coach Ted Walsh. "One thing a player can always give is his full effort. I didn't think we skated hard in the first two periods. We kept waiting for someone else to make the play. In the third period, we stepped up and made them."

Freeman was amazing. He scored three goals in the first period, two on one shift less than a minute apart. He scored Quincy's first four goals. He started the rally in the third period with his fourth goal. He scored on a slap shot , a deflection, a rebound, and a shot from behind the net. No kidding. Behind the net. It's true.

"About the only place he can't score from is when he's on the bench. He's just a natural sniper. He just knows the puck is going in the net," said Walsh.

"He has something you are born with. You can't teach that," said Milton coach Paul Noonan.

Freeman banked one in from behind the net off Milton goalie Bobby Lesenechal with an assist to Owen Lynch to cut the lead to 7-4 less than five minutes into the third. Senior Sean Brennick rapped home a rebound of a Brandon Beal shot. Pat Quirk had an assist and it was 7-5 with just over eight minutes left. Something was happening. There

EFFECTIVE TREATMENT OF BACK-RELATED LEG PAIN

A study recently published in the Annals of Internal Medicine found that spinal manipulative therapy (SMT) may be as effective in treating back-related leg pain as it is in treating uncomplicated low back pain. The study involved patients with back-related leg pain who received SMT combined with home exercise and advice. After 12 weeks, this group reported less leg and lower back pain and disability than the patients who received home exercise and advice alone. While the differences in reported pain dissipated after one year, the group that received spinal manipulative therapy reported feeling more satisfied overall and relied less on medication. SMT is the primary treatment modality employed by chiropractors to relieve pain and improve joint function.

Koch Expects More Downtown Development In 2015

structure needs, including parking," the mayor said.

"All the infrastructure down there has to be taken care of. It's old. It's inadequate. The Ross Garage is on its last legs. All of those improvements, if we had to do them today, would be on the dime of taxpayers citywide. The plan still is going forward that we incur debt in our downtown to deal with infrastructure downtown, but the debt will be paid down by the new value in the new development in the downtown so it's not a drag on the general fund."

The City Council had approved the disposition of those parking areas to previous downtown developer Street-Works. Koch said he would keep the council up to date on plans for those lots moving forward, but he's not sure if a new vote will need to be taken.

"There is a process in place under urban redevelopment. We'll be, at the very minimum, meeting with the council and presenting our plans to them. Whether there are actual votes needed, it's early to say until we get more definitive plans on how it will be broken up. Those decisions will be made at that time," Koch said.

"But certainly as it jells more we're going to keep the council apprised of every step."

Elsewhere in the downtown, work began in 2014 on the Adams Green roadway improvement project. The mayor said designs for the new park, located between City Hall and the United First Parish Church, are at the 90 percent stage. The final design should be finalized and ready to go out to bid for construction in the fall. The portion of Hancock Street between the two buildings will close in April or May of 2015.

"The new traffic configuration has to go in first. We're expecting sometime in the spring, whether it's April or May, this portion of Hancock Street will be closed," Koch said. "We then begin the process of underground utility work, dealing with our drain lines, our water mains, our sewer lines, and utilities – gas, electric, Comcast – all of that has to be dealt with before we can start the park. We'll be looking to tackle those things in calendar year '15."

"I would expect in calendar year 2016, the actual park construction will start," the mayor added, noting construction would likely take 18 months.

Koch will begin the new year by delivering his midterm address on Monday, Jan. 5, at 7 p.m. inside the Richardson Room at the Thomas Crane Public Library on Washington Street. The midterm will be Koch's fourth since taking office in 2008.

At the mid-term City Council meeting, Councillor Joseph Finn is expected to be re-elected city council president. Council presidents are elected to one-year terms and traditionally serve two years before the gavel is passed to another colleague.

Among those taking part in the ceremony will be Quincy Veterans Services Director George F. Nicholson who will lead those present in the Pledge of Allegiance and Rev. John S. Chen, Quincy Catholic Collaborative, will give the invocation.

The next regular City Council meeting will be Tuesday, Jan. 20.

One item Koch plans to focus on during his midterm is the need to repair Quincy's infrastructure – not only roads, seawalls, tide gates and public utilities, but also the city's many municipal buildings. His administration is now drafting a five-year capital improvement plan, which he intends to send to the council for approval in early 2015.

"I'm sure a good part of the theme is going to be infrastructure," the mayor said. "I think that continues to be a major challenge, not only for Quincy but for governments at all levels, whether it's municipal, state or federal. In our case, it's water lines, it's sewer lines, it's drain lines, it's seawalls, it's tide gates, it's roads and sidewalks, it's buildings.

"We've made some great progress the last few years in my view but much remains. What enables us to do some of those things hopefully going forward is the stability we've created financially. We're in a good place. We're building our reserves. Our bond rating has gone up this past year. Those are good things.

"The other reality is right now we have the capacity for bonding. We're at a very low debt ratio as compared to many communities. Every expert economist would suggest, whether you're in private industry or government, there is no better time to borrow money to do infrastructure because the cost of borrowing is very low. The interest rates are very, very favorable. For those reasons it makes sense for us to continue to work on our infrastructure and work on our challenges."

During Koch's tenure as mayor, the city has completed construction of a new Quincy High School and Central Middle; plans for a new Sterling Middle School and Squantum Elementary School are also in the works. Koch believes the time is right to begin looking at other municipal buildings, such as police headquarters and Quincy's eight firehouses, in need of repair.

"We'll continue to chip away at the schools, but we have eight firehouses. We have a police station. We have DPW buildings, Parks buildings, Recreation buildings, and they all need to be addressed," Koch said.

"We have a committee now looking at the firehouses. The police station addition was done in the late '80s under Mayor [Francis] McCauley. But the building is still not in great shape. They're doing major repairs of the roof there. We have all kinds of mechanical issues at that building. It's a tough, challenging building.

"We had to shore up the floors, two years ago now, of the central firehouse because these were built at a time for horse and wagons and the apparatus continue to get heavier and heavier. All these buildings need attention so we're looking at them in detail."

Road repair will also be a focus of the administration in the coming year. Koch said he has spoken to Governor-Elect Charlie Baker, who has promised to release $100 million in Chapter 90 funds to communities statewide for road repair. Quincy, Koch explained, would get $700,000 to $800,000 of that money.

"I'm going to be looking toward finding some additional funding in the regular budget to augment what we get from the Chapter 90, which is not adequate to deal with our needs and challenges," the mayor added.

This winter, the city will move forward with planned renovations to Teel Field in North Quincy. The $12 million project also includes a new parking lot to serve both the field and nearby North Quincy High. Before the project could begin, the city began purchasing nine area homes.

Seven of the nine have been purchased. One of the two remaining properties is in a trust, but Koch said that situation is nearing a resolution. The attorney representing the final property owner has said the family does not wish to sell their house. Koch said City Solicitor Jim Timmins has submitted the final offer for property; eminent domain will not be used to take the house and the city would construct the parking lot around the property.

"I think we're still down to that last home. I think a final offer was sent by the solicitor to their attorney and we have not heard anything back," the mayor stated. "If I have to I will [build around it]. I will not use eminent domain to take a home."

Demolition of the homes will begin soon; Koch hopes to have the project completed in time for the fall sports season.

"Most of the people have moved out. The homes are purchased. We've taken the oil out of the oil tanks and put them in the school oil tanks. We have secured those properties of the people who have moved out in preparation for demolition," the mayor said.

"Hopefully during the wintertime it will be done so that as soon as winter breaks we can jump into actual excavation and construction of the facility.

"The goal is to be ready for fall sports in 2015. That's aggressive, I might admit, so it could be pushed back to spring of 2016. But we still think we'll make at least part of the season of 2015."

In total, Quincy has spent $3.395 million on the seven homes. Koch defended the city's decision not to release appraisals for those already bought until the city has closed on each home it intends to purchase.

"The solicitor's position on that was we're negotiating in good faith on that with individuals," Koch said. "We don't want to be negotiating in the public. That doesn't serve the public in the end."

In August, Koch said the city would consider using the former St. Mary School on Crescent Street to help alleviate overcrowding at Lincoln-Hancock. A final decision on the building hasn't been made, but the mayor was not optimistic about the prospects of the city using it.

"It's an old building and has an awful lot of need. It doesn't meet [Americans with Disabilities Act] requirements. I don't know if it would be worth the effort at this point," Koch said. "We're going to take one more walk through at some point after the first of the year just to see first hand for some of the folks who would be in the decision making area, but I'm not confident the building can be easily re-used."

Koch said the School Department and the School Committee, a board that he chairs, would consider all options to reduce overcrowding within several of the city's schools. One possibility could be to build a larger school to replace Squantum Elementary and shift students to that building.

"I don't think we're in a dire situation by any means. I think we're meeting all of the challenges and goals. Is it a little tight in a couple buildings? Sure. That includes Montclair, which serves West Quincy. It's very tight over at Montclair. But we've been pretty flat in the enrollment numbers. It's not like this huge uptick, which calls for construction of a new building," Koch said.

"Nobody likes to shift lines – the school boundary lines – because there are some interruptions. But not all of our buildings are chalk full so there is some room to do some shifting. All that will be on the table – whether it's moving some streets into other school districts or, in addition to replacing Squantum, whether additional classrooms are considered going forward."

Freeman Scores Four But Quincy Rally Falls Short

was an extra hop, an extra jump in Quincy's step.

"We really skated in the third period and that was a good, well-coached team we were playing," said Walsh. "We put the puck on the net. There's no such thing as a bad shot."

Owen Bligh scored for Milton to build the lead back to three goals, 8-5 with just under seven minutes left, but Quincy was not finished. Beal connected on a Freeman pass from the right circle, and the Presidents were still breathing at 8-6 with 1:07 remaining. Aidan Pugsley stuffed one home out of a goalmouth scramble and Quincy was within a goal with 30 seconds left.

Milton was able to control the faceoff and run off the clock, but not before the Presidents gave a glimpse of what they can do when they skate.

"We outshot them 20-7 in the third period," said Walsh. "We said after the game that it should be a great teaching tool. They can look at one game and see what happens when they play hard and what happens when they don't."

Milton led, 4-3 after the first period which featured seven goals and 26 shots on net. If offense is your preference, this was your night. Freeman had quite a selection. He scored on a low laser off a slap shot on a perfect feed from Brian O'Callaghan. He rapped home a rebound of a Beal shot. He deflected in another terrific pass from O'Callaghan who made a fine steal of the puck to set up the play.

"Faceoff circle, slot, the dirty zone in front, it doesn't matter to him. He can score from anywhere," said Walsh. "Don't forget Patrick plays with two good linemates in Brain (O'Callaghan) and Ryan Harty. They set him up."

Jack Halloran had three goals for Milton. The Wildcats had three unanswered goals in the second to open up a 7-3 lead entering the third which barely survived Quincy's closing kick.

Quincy (2-4) meets Abington January 2 at Rockland at 11:20. The last time Quincy played Abington was in February when the Presidents rallied for four goals in the final 10 minutes for a 6-6 tie which clinched a tournament berth.

In the consolation game, Cam White started the scoring for North Quincy in the first period when he forechecked well and forced a mistake in front of the King Phillip goal which found its way into the net.

Glynn scored twice in the second to give North a 3-0 lead. He slipped home a loose puck from close range with assists to Mike Finn and Matt McDonald. He then picked the top corner from the left faceoff circle with an assist to Finn.

KP scored once late in the second and early in the third, but could not crack Doherty for the equalizer. Doherty was especially sharp in the second period when he turned aside nine shots.

McDonald and White played well on defense while Chris Gorman, Freddy Flynn, and Corey Hernandez checked well throughout the game.

"I was happy with the effort. I thought our defense played well," said coach Matt Gibbons. "I thought we had a little bigger edge than the final score showed. That line of Gorman, Flynn and Hernandez was awesome."

North Quincy (2-3) hosts Brockton today (Wednesday) at 2:30 p.m.

The event will take place at The Beachcomber, 797 Quincy Shore Dr., Quincy. Doors open at 6 p.m. Donation is $20 per person.

Gary Walsh, who lived in Randolph, passed away suddenly Nov. 26 from an apparent massive heart attack. He was 58 years old.

Gary was a longtime friend and helpful hand to many of the local bands and musicians on the South Shore music scene.

Friends say Gary had an incredible knowledge of circuit boards and amplifiers. He was a simple man who loved fixing electronics and computers and was an extremely kind person who dedicated his life to helping others. He was especially dedicated to his younger Brother Stephen who was born with Cerebral Palsy. Gary became his brother's caregiver at a young age since the passing of their parents in the early 1980's

When Gary died, he did not leave behind any form of will, life insurance policy or money. His younger brother Stephen is having a terrible time coping and left to pick up all the pieces of his brother's loss, friends say.

Tickets can be purchased at the door Saturday evening. Organizers are also seeking items for a raffle.

All proceeds will benefit the The Gary Walsh Fund. The fund will be used to pay bills or put to use for the costs of a funeral.

David R. Hussey, 71

A celebration of life for David R. Hussey, 71, a Quincy native, will be held Jan. 3 at 2 p.m. in the Town River Yacht Club, Quincy.

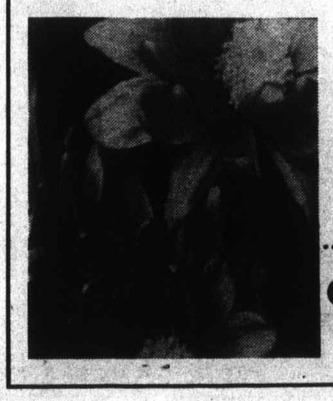

Mr. Hussey died unexpectedly Dec. 6 in Florida.

He attended Quincy schools, played football, and had a passion for all things out of doors, especially the ocean and the weather. Once out of school, he became a carpenter's apprentice, and rose through the ranks as journeyman and full carpenter, proudly receiving his 50-year pin from New England Carpenters Local 33 just last year.

Mr. Hussey lived his entire life on the South Shore (Quincy, Weymouth, Rockland) before retiring to Englewood, Fla. a few years ago. He continued to spend summers up north, remaining actively involved in the Town River Yacht Club. There he served as commodore in 2005, and spent many happy seasons on the water and leading work crews for club improvement projects.

Over the years Mr. Hussey enjoyed everything from hunting and snowmobiling to recreational league hockey and golf in the company of his pals. He'd be first to admit, "I don't break any records, but I always show up." An avid Boston sports fan, he tolerated no expressions of negativity while watching his Patriots. He will be sorely missed and fondly remembered by his large group of friends from Massachusetts to Florida as someone they could always count on.

Diane Purdy-Theriault, 81

A prayer service for Diane (Ganzel) Purdy-Theriault, 81, of West Quincy and formerly Weymouth was held Sunday in McDonald Keohane Funeral Home, North Weymouth.

Mrs. Purdy-Theriault died unexpectedly Dec. 24 surrounded by her loving and adoring family.

Born Sept. 19, 1933, in West Quincy, she was the loving daughter of the late John C. Ganzel and his wife Marion of West Quincy, Helga S. Knuttenun Ganzel Moore and her husband Joe of Hull. She was raised in West Quincy and graduated from Quincy High School in 1951. She attended Emerson College from 1951 to 1954 and returned to her studies at UMass Boston graduating in 1978 with her BA in English and theater arts.

Mrs. Purdy-Theriault was once referred to as an "icon" by the Patriot Ledger's late city editor, Bill Flynn, for her work as the founder and creative director of Diane Purdy's Children's Theatre Workshop, which she first opened in North Weymouth in 1970 and ran for 20 years at the Woodward School in Quincy. In her 40 years at the helm of CTW, she helped mold children with her no nonsense approach of training young thespians in the art of acting for the stage. During her career she produced hundreds of staged performances of her original children's plays. Her 'drama by doing' approach taught children that in order to be an actor, one must act; it was not something you can learn

While attending UMass in the 1970s, Mrs. Purdy-Theriault met casting director, Herb Mandell of the Casting Company of Boston, who began casting she and her students in film and television productions. Mrs. Purdy-Theriault became a member of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists and the Screen Actors Guild and was proud of her union affiliation and work in the New England Film and Television Industry.

Mrs. Purdy-Theriault's true passion was as a writer and she loved to see her characters come alive on the stage and she never stopped writing. Her two most recent accomplishments were the publication of her children's book "The Bedraggled Dragon" based on one of her children's plays and her award-winning play, "I'm Not Sick, I'm Dying," that was inspired by her late aunt, Marie Knuttenun's battle with multiple melanoma and her late student Eric Torvi of Quincy's battle with brain cancer.

She enjoyed traveling with her husband to places like Hawaii, San Francisco and Aruba and especially enjoyed seeing the Grand Canyon. She was an avid reader of fiction and loved watching shows like Criminal Minds and Law & Order.

She was full of life and energy and will always be remembered for her spark and spitfire personality. She loved her late kitty, Pumpkin, and her newest kitty, Jet, with all of her heart. She will be sadly missed by all of her family, friends, students, alumni, colleagues and fans of her work.

Survived by her loving and devoted husband, Russell Theriault, of Quincy, formerly of Weymouth, who she married on Feb. 14, 1982. She is also survived by her loving and adoring children, Michael J. Purdy and his wife, Anne Marie of Duxbury; her daughter, Kim Purdy of Quincy, Laurie Purdy Middendorf and her husband, David of Norwell and FL; Jodi Purdy-Quinlan and her husband, Charles of Weymouth and Rene Theriault of East Bridgewater. She was the devoted and loving grandmother to Taylor Middendorf of FL, Daniel Middendorf of Weymouth, Sarah Purdy of Montreal, John Quinlan and Jake Quinlan of Weymouth. She is survived by her devoted friend and non-biological son, Mike McKay and his wife Sadie of Weymouth and Dorchester. She was the loving Grand Godmother of Christopher Keough and wife Sharon and their son, Desmond of Weymouth.

She is also survived by her devoted and loving sister, Marcia Roussos and her husband Bernard of Norwell and their children, Garry and Michelle Hebert, Christopher Hebert, Peter and Laurie Breen and Jennifer and Dan Duran and their children. She was the sister of the late John "Jack" Ganzel and his wife Kay of NH and their children Ricky and Sandra Ganzel, Robin and Dave Hart, Donald and Pam Ganzel, John Ganzel, Kathy and Kevin Daugherty and Kristi Ganzel and their children and grandchildren. She is the loving sister of Dennis and Judy Theriault of Framingham, the late Maryann Keddy of Quincy, Charles Hudson and the late Jane Hudson of Weymouth, Karen Purdy and the late David Purdy of FL, John and Kay Dino of AZ and Donnie and Renee Dino of VA and the late Bruce and Linda Purdy of MI and all of their children and grandchildren. She was the daughter-in-law of Archie and Kay Theriault of Weymouth. She is also survived by her first husband and friend, Jack Purdy of Weymouth. She is survived by all of her loving CTW alumni and families and her Facebook friends and fans.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Heart Association, 300 Fifth Ave., Suite 6, Waltham, MA 02451.

I don't want any big fuss...

We fully understand! A big fuss usually refers to things presumed, but not quite right for the people involved.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) That lower-than-acceptable performance you're getting from others in your group might be the result of miscommunication. If so, correct it before serious problems arise later on.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An unexpected situation could call for a change of plans. If so, you might feel that this is unfair. But it's best to make the needed adjustments now. There'll be time later for rescheduling.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The new year brings opportunities you might want to look into. Some might be more interesting than others. But take time to look at all of them before you make any decisions.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's a good idea to be careful about expenses until you've worked out that pesky financial problem. You might find it advisable to get some solid advice on how to proceed.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Romance looms large over the Leonine aspect. Single Lions looking for love should find Cupid very cooperative. Paired Cats can expect a renewed closeness in their relationships.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Making contact with a former colleague might not be high on your list of priorities. But it could pay off personally as well as professionally. Avoid bringing up any negatives about the past.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A personal relationship could face added stress because of a situation involving someone close to both of you. Be supportive and, above all, try to avoid playing the blame game.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might well find some lingering uncertainties about a decision. If so, take that as a warning that you might not be ready to make that move yet. More study would be in order.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Music is a dominant theme for Sagittarians right now, and it should remind you to make a greater effort to restore some much-needed harmony in that very special relationship.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Although family matters might demand much of the Sea Goat's attention this week, you'll want to try to make time to handle those all-important workplace situations as well.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A recurring unresolved issue might need to be revisited before you can move forward. Consider asking someone familiar with the situation to act as an impartial counselor.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Ignore pressure to make a decision. Keeping your options open is still the wisest course, at least until you're sure you've learned all you need to know about the matter at hand.
BORN THIS WEEK: You're capable of great loyalty to those around you, which is one reason you can count on devotion from friends and family.

Robert 'Knobby' Nolan Basketball Court Dedicated At NQHS

THE LEGENDARY COACH Robert "Knobby" Nolan had the highest winning percentage of any basketball coach at North Quincy at .684. His teams won four league titles and made seven tournament appearances. The 1965-66 squad was ranked number one in New England and included Peter Varney of Harvard-Yale football fame who went on to play professional baseball with the Chicago White Sox and Braves. The dedication ceremony was attended by former players, family, friends and city officials including Mayor Tom Koch, Quincy Public Schools Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro and School Committeeman Paul Bregoli who proposed dedicating the court in Nolan's honor.

Quincy Medical Center Closes

said, "so too was the decision to put taxpayers on the hook for up to $1.6 million for elevation certificates. In my judgment, it's a staggering sum for any community to shoulder."

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee introduced a resolution asking the Park and Recreation Board and School Committee to find an appropriate way to honor the late Joseph Koch.

The City Council approved the 396-unit Avalon Quincy project, set to be constructed off Quarry Street, in an 8-1 vote. Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who represents the site, voted against the proposal.

Koch retained the law firm of Eckert Seamans to represent the city in negotiations over the pending closure of Quincy Medical Center. Peter Carr, an attorney with the firm, said the city's top priority was keeping the emergency room open.

"It's been there for over 100 years and people know where to find it," Carr said of the hospital. "People drop people off at the emergency room and God forbid it wasn't there and they dropped [someone] off at an empty building."

Steward Health Care, the hospital's owner, later offered to keep an emergency department in the city for one year after Quincy Medical Center closed. The standalone facility would initially be located within the existing hospital building. Negotiations over the closing continued as the year came to an end.

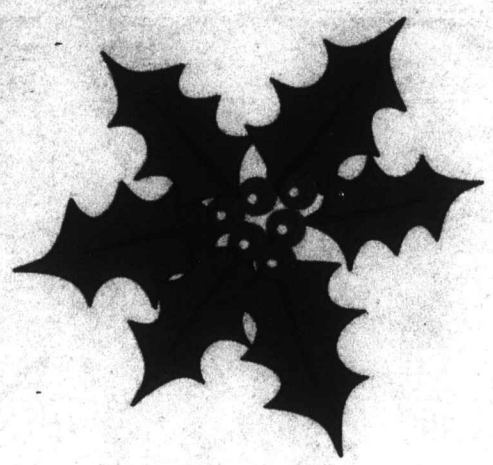

The City Council approved the mayor's recommended property tax proposal for 2015. As a result, the tax bill for the average single-family home in the city would increase by $198, or 4.2 percent, from $4,686 to $4,884. The value of the average single-family home in the city increased by 6 percent to $334,500, up $19,100 from $315,350.

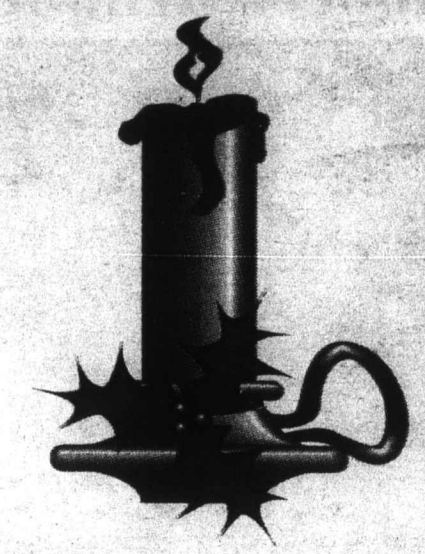

Julie White-Patel, a first grade teacher at the Parker School, appeared on the Ellen DeGeneres Show. While on the show, she received a $25,000 check from Wells Fargo to purchase new technology for the school.

The basketball court in North Quincy High's gym was dedicated to late coach Robert "Knobby" Nolan.

Deaths during December included:

Frances A. Connelly, retired state Department of Education employee; Thomas F. Clasby, Sr., 86, former president of the Holy Name Society; Nicholas Zannis, 80, retired school department employee; Robert D. Parker, 77, past master of the Manet Masonic Lodge of Quincy; and Michael J. Donoghue, 61, Norfolk County Sheriff's Department employee.

Wishing you peace, joy, and a healthy and prosperous

New Year!
